NOTABLE VISITORS

President Receives Rochambeau Party.

Distinguished Representatives of France.

Washington, May 22.—The remaining members of the notable party sent to represent the French government at the ceremony of unveiling the Rochambeau statue arrived here over the Pennsylvania road at 10 o'clock this morning from Annapolis, which point they reached yesterday on the Gaulois. Only a small crowd was at the depot to greet the distinguished visitors. Besides the police escort, Troop G of the Second cavalry, from Fort Myer, was drawn up in front of the station and saluted on the appearance of the visitors. Assistant Secretary Pierce of the state department entered the first open carriage in waiting with the ranking members of the party, and acted as escort. All of the party, including the embassy attaches, wore the uniform of their rank. The carriages, about a dozen in number, wheeled into Pennsylvania avenue and proceeded to the White House, where Count Rochambeau and his party, Ambassador and Madame Cambon and others waited to greet them, and where at 10:30 o'clock President Roosevelt officially received the party in the east room. The carriages were preceded by an escort of mounted and bicycle policemen and the cavalry troop. As the party neared the White House a salute was fired by a detachment of artillery in the grounds south of the White House.

Shortly before 10 o'clock the French ambassador, M. Cambon, accompanied by Mme. Cambon and M. De Margerie and his wife, drove up to the White House portico. The ambassador was in the uniform of his high diplomatic rank. Following the ambassador came the many members of his staff, accompanied by the ladies of the embassy. The ambassador and his party were escorted to the red room to await the arrival of the other guests. Soon after the other guests, including the Count and Countess Rochambeau and the Count de Lafayette, joined the ambassador in the red room.

Meantime the highest officers and officials of the United States government were assembling to do honor to the visitors. In the American party were representatives of the various branches of the government, including the president's cabinet, Lieut. Gen. Miles, of the army, Admiral Dewey, of the navy, Adjt. Gen. Corbin and a group of senators and representatives from the legislative branch. By this time the main party, the highest officers of the French army and navy designated by President Loubet as his personal representative, were entering the White House grounds. A great crowd had assembled outside and a hearty cheer went up as the Frenchmen drove through the gates.

After brief exchanges the entire party proceeded to the east room, where the reception by President Roosevelt was held. The president was accompanied by Miss Alice Roosevelt and Miss Carew, a sister of Mrs. Roosevelt. Grouped about the president were members of the cabinet and other distinguished officials, many accompanied by ladies. As the French ambassador presented each of the official guests, the president gave him a warm grasp of the hand and spoke a few words of welcome. On both sides there were many expressions of good will and of lasting friendship between the two republics. The affair was devoid of formality, however, and no formal addresses were delivered. The reception lasted about half an hour, when the French officials withdrew to make a round of calls on members of the cabinet, the general of the army, the admiral of the navy and on the ambassadors of foreign countries. This afternoon the United States naval yacht Sylph took the party to Mount Vernon, where two interesting ceremonies occurred—the planting of a tree brought from the battlefield of Yorktown, where Rochambeau and Lafayette shared the privations of war with Washington and the laying of a beautiful wreath on the tomb of Washington.

COUNT AND COUNTESS DE ROCHAMBEAU AND THEIR PARTY.

Among the well known French people who have come to America to view the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue are the Count and Countess de Rochambeau, Robert de Billy, French minister of foreign affairs; Alfred Croiset, dean of the faculty of letters in the University of Paris; Jean Guillemin, subchief of the bureau of foreign affairs; Fernand Hamar, the sculptor of the Rochambeau statue; M. Lagrave, a director in the French ministry of commerce, and the Viscount de Chambrun and his sister-in-law, the Countess de Chambrun. In the picture the Count and Countess de Rochambeau are standing together.

The Countess de Chambrun was formerly Miss Longworth of Cincinnati. The Viscount de Chambrun, who stands at the extreme left, is a great-great-grandson of General Lafayette.

MARTINIQUE IS DOOMED

Island Will Be Evacuated By Inhabitants.

Aspect of Mount Pelee Is Most Threatening.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, Wednesday, May 21, 4 p. m.—Streams of frightened refugees have been pouring into Fort de France from all the surrounding country. These people are not destitute, but they are terrified. They want only one thing, and that is to be taken far away from this island, with which they say the gods are angry and which they will destroy by fire before it sinks under the sea.

The consuls here and the officers of the war vessels in the harbor are waylaid by persons crazed with fright and begging to be carried away.

The weather is now calm and beautiful, but the mountain is veiled in volcanic clouds, which often assume a very threatening aspect, and occasional rumblings are heard. Some heavy and very welcome rain fell this morning.

The United States steamer Dixie, Capt. Bery, from New York, arrived today after a quick and safe passage. Her passengers include many world-famous scientists. Professor Robert T. Hill, government geologist; Professor C. E. Borchgrevink, the Antarctic explorer, and George Keenan and many magazine writers and correspondents are among those who arrived on the steamer.

The Dixie began landing her enormous cargo of supplies early and the storehouse on shore became congested, and this is the greatest difficulty of the administration. The United States steamer Potomac went to inspect St. Pierre with the commanders of the war vessels now here. With the greatest difficulty the party succeeded in making a landing. The effects of the outburst of yesterday were tremendous. The huge basilic towers of the cathedral were hurled flat to the earth. The bombardment of volcanic stones is not sufficient to account for this, and all evidences point to the passage of a furious blast of blazing gas, traveling at enormous speed and with incalculable force. The deposit of boulders, ashes and angular stones is enormous. Not a human being saw what happened at St. Pierre yesterday morning. Fort de France is overwhelmed.

This second eruption was many times more violent than that which effaced St. Pierre and swept its people from the earth. Nor has all volcanic activity ceased. Vast columns of smoke and gas still pour from the great crater, and new fissures have opened on the mountain sides and are vomiting yellow whirlwinds, which rush intermittently now from one point and next from another. Boiling mud also is thrown out at times in torrents that reach the sea and produce small tidal waves.

From a sonibre, silent city of death and desolation, St. Pierre has become a hideous amphitheater of fiery, roaring destruction. Utter and unreasoning possesses all souls. Even Fort de France is believed to be unsafe. The presence of the relief ships is helpful to the people, who say: "The American flag makes safety."

The Potomac could not approach close to St. Pierre. The Dixie will sail tomorrow for St. Vincent, but the other vessels will remain.

The scientists who have arrived will examine into the question of the danger of the peaks of Carbet, near Fort de France, becoming active volcanoes. The outburst of yesterday probably means a ruined island, as all confidence is lost.

"We want not food, but only to leave," is the cry of rich and poor.

Paris, May 22.—The minister of the colonies, M. De Crais, has cabled to Governor L'Huerre, at Fort de France, instructing him to make all possible arrangements for the embarkation of the inhabitants of Martinique in the event of circumstances necessitating the evacuation of that island.

The ministry of the colonies has communicated to the Associated Press the following cable message sent to Governor L'Huerre yesterday evening:

"Make known if the situation seems to you to necessitate partial or total evacuation of the island the means at your disposal or those you may need."

No reply has yet been received.

RESULT

Of British-Boer Conference Will Be Known Soon.

London, May 22.—The consensus of opinion here is that all the signs are propitious, but up to 2 o'clock this afternoon the British officials had given no indication of the course which the negotiations between Lord Kitchener and Lord Milner and the Boer delegates at Pretoria were taking. That conferences are occurring regarding the basis upon which peace shall be declared is the sum total of the information which the war office has vouchsafed up to the present, though it is intimated that a definite announcement of the result, peaceful or otherwise, may specdily be expected. The expectation that peace is close at hand has obviously taken a strong hold of operators on the stock exchange. The buying of consols and gilt-edged South African shares continues, it is believed, in behalf of well-informed interests.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

President Mitchell Thinks Mine Owners Will Agree to Eight Hours For Pumpmen, But the Coal Operators Think Differently.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 22.—The executive committee of the three anthracite districts of the United Mine Workers resumed their joint sessions this morning. President Mitchell had no information to impart before he entered the meeting. He confirmed the Associated Press dispatches that the Michigan bituminous district had consented to the call for a national convention. Mr. Mitchell was disinclined to talk on the proposition of calling out the engineers, firemen and pumpmen unless they are given an eight-hour day at the present wages, except to say that he expects the mine owners to comply with the demands of the union.

Inquiries at the offices of the big coal companies here today failed to elicit any definite inforamtion as to how the operators will meet the latest demands of the miners. At the offices of one of the largest companies in the field it was said no definite plan had yet been decided upon because it was not positively known until last night what action the union would take and the company wants more time to think the matter over. The general impression prevails that most of the companies will refuse the demands and there is much speculation as to the next move of the mine owners. Some of the smaller operators have been training their men to be firemen and pumpmen and in some collieries they have already displaced that class of workmen. It is rumored that non-union men will be imported to take the places of the engineers, firemen and pumpmen.

The meeting was in session only a short time. At 10:45 a recess was taken until this afternoon. Nothing was given out. It is evident that the committees are waiting for something important.

Tamaqua, Pa., May 22.—Led by a drummer and a bugler several hundred striking miners marched on the Smith-Meyers washery this morning. A sentry posted in a tree fired his gun as a warning to the men at the washery that the strikers were approaching. Operations were at once discontinued.

When the strikers were within fifty yards of the operation they were met by Charles Meyers, one of the operators. Mr. Meyers appealed to them not to damage any property or to injure any of the men. He said that he would pledge his word that not a pound of coal would be washed until the strike had been settled. The marchers then appointed a committee to meet the employes and the latter promised not to work until an order to do so is issued by the United Mine Workers' officials. After the men had agreed to do this the marchers returned to town.

Hazelton, Pa., May 22.—Mathias Schwabe, a small independent operator, today started up his colliery at South Heberton. All of his miners are to receive the wages demanded by the mine workers. The output will be for home consumption exclusively. It commands $6 a ton at the breaker.

Pittston, Pa., May 22.—A new phase developed here in the mine strike today, when all the washeries in this district controlled by the Erie company shut down. They have been running steadily turning out 6000 tons of coal daily. The shut down was due to orders received from New York last night, a conference of railroad presidents having been held in that city yesterday, when it was decided to cease all washery operations.

VATICAN DISAPPOINTED

Pope May Not Give Official Reception to the Taft Commission As It Is of a Purely Business Character.

Rome, May 22.—Doubt is felt in vatican circles as to whether the pope, after all, will give an official reception to the Taft commission. Official notification of the arrival of the commission here at the end of May now has been received at the United States embassy and has caused disappointment a tthe vatican, as it specifically eliminates all the political aspects sought to be attached to the commission; sets forth that the commission must not in any way be regarded as an American recognition of the vatican's policy towards Italy, and points out that the commission is of a purely business character and in no way connected with politics.

LYNCHING

Is Likely If the Negro Is Identified By His Victim.

Webb City, Mo., May 22.—A mob, intent on lynching Will Jones, a Joplin negro, who is charged with outraging Mrs. John Parmeter, aged 50 years, a white woman, of this city, surrounds the jail here this morning. The mob awaits the arrival of Mrs. Parmeter. If she identifies Jones as her assailant a lynching seems certain. Jones was run down and caught last night by bloodhounds.

NEW LEADERS OF TAMMANY

New York, May 22—The executive committee of Tammany Hall, composed of the assembly district leaders, met today and adopted two resolutions offered by Alderman T. P. Sullivan. The first resolution advised the general committee of Tammany Hall to abolish the finance committee; this was adopted unanimously. The second resolution suggested the appointment of a subcommittee of three, to consist of Charles F. Murphy, Daniel F. McMahon and Louis F. Haffen, to constitute an advisory committee, with power to act and to report from time to time to the executive committee. The resolution was opposed by John F. Carroll, who offered an amendment that thirty-seven district leaders be constituted the leaders of Tammany hall. Mr. Carroll's amendment was defeated by a vote of 8 to 28. The resolution authorizing the advisory committee was then adopted. The district leaders who compose what is known as the "Croker old guard" supported the proposed changes.

The new advisory committee elected Charles F. Murphy chairman and Thomas F. Smith was appointed secretary. Mr. Smith was formerly Richard Croker's secretary. It was announced that one or more members of the advisory committee would be at Tammany Hall every day to transact the business heretofore attended to by the leader of the organization.

COAL IS HIGH.

New York Dealers Put Price Up to High Figures.

New York, May 22.—Convinced that weeks and possibly months may elapse before the miners' strike shall have been settled, retail coal dealers here have advanced the price of anthracite coal to a maximum of $8.50 a ton, and at the same time marked up bituminous coal to $4.50, when purchased in small quantities. To consumers of large quantities of soft coal a rate of $3.85 was quoted. Only once before have these prices for fuel been exceeded. That was in 1871, when the price of anthracite reached a maximum of $11 a ton.

TRAFFIC STILL TIED UP

Effects of Recent Storm Are Still Apparent In Wisconsin Where Trains are Running Very Irregularly.

La Crosse, Wis., May 2.—Railroad traffic in and out of La Crosse is still tied up by the effects of the recent storm. On the Dubuque division of the Milwaukee road there has been no train for three days, and there will be none today. Hundreds of men are busy making repairs. The Northwestern road is still in bad shape, its trains are being run over the Milwaukee tracks from Camp Douglas to La Crosse. There are several big washouts in the vicinity of the tunnels, near Sparta. All of their trains are from one to six hours' late. Yesterday not a train came in on that road. The Burlington road, south of here, is also badly washed out, and trains have been running irregularly. Reports continue to come in of the serious nature of the storm.

PEOPLE PANIC-STRICKEN

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, B. W. I. May 22.—M. Labat, the senior town councillor of Fort de France, who was among the refugees who arrived here yesterday from Martinique on the Norwegian steamer Helga, accompanied by his entire family, was interviewed today by a correspondent of the Associated Press. He said that since the St. Pierre disaster the population of Fort de France had been excited and anxious. This was intensified as the ash showers from Mount Pelee thickened, pumice rained more often and the frequent detonations became louder. Councillor Labat related thrilling stories of escapes from the environs of St. Pierre, which he gathered from refugees.

"On Saturday, at 3 p. m.," he said "an incessant rain of ashes obscured the sky, and at 5 o'clock total darkness prevailed. The population generally was unnerved. Sunday was lighter, but the ash rain continued, with an occasional fall of lava slag and pumice and continued rumblings from the mountain, and the feeling of anxiety continued.

"At 5:30 a. m. Monday a singular phenomenon was witnessed in the northwest sky. Clouds like gigantic white ostrich plumes rose high in the heavens. They had luminous linings, which were mistaken for flames, though they were only caused by the rays of the rising sun, and threw the people into consternation. At noon the sea began to recede with a heavy ground swell that rocked the shipping so severely that vessels broke from their moorings. Then a long, rolling wave spread over the sea front. It did little damage, however, and the sea again receded and left a clear area of the shore permanently uncovered. At the same time the ash rain became twice as violent and pebbles fell. They were accompanied by pieces of heavy rock, some of which weighed from three to twelve pounds each.

"The panic-stricken people rushed out of their houses, some making for the mountains in the interior of the island and others seeking to escape on board the shipping in port.

"The scene was one of the wildest confusion. Whole families assembled on the jetties and along the beach, nearly all of them falling on their knees and screaming forth appeals for boats to take them to the steamers, to which some of the men swam off.

"The steamers at St. Pierre kept a large number of people until evening, when the phenomenon subsided and most of the refugees were put ashore. On Tuesday steamers took away the destitute people who remained on board, also a number of paying passengers. Two hundred refugees were landed here and 1500 were taken to the island of Guadeloupe. The refugees who were landed at this place had, as a rule, nothing with them but the clothes they wore when they left Fort de France, and they are now supported by public funds or private subscriptions.

MEAT DEALER ENDS HIS LIFE

Chicago, May 22.—Anton Gureckl, who, it is said, was forced out of business at a meat dealer when prices took an upward bound a few weeks ago, has hanged himself. Gureckl's business fell off while prices were raised, and rather than suffer further losses he closed his shop. Since then he had been despondent.

STATISTICS ARE STARTLING

New York, May 22.—Startling statistics on criminology have been preesnted at the annual convention of the New York County W. C. T. U. One of the delegates read a statement to the effect that a woman of criminal tendency, whose name was not made public for obvious reasons, died in 1827. "Her descendants have been traced," continued the speaker. "They number 800. Seven hundred were criminals, having been convicted at least once. Seven were murderers and were executed for their crimes. Her family has cost the nation $3,000,000 for trials and executions."

STATUS OF MULETEERS

In Law Is Fixed By Judge Parlange's Decision.

New Orleans, May 22.—In rendering three decisions in admiralty cases, Judge Parlange in the United States court has thoroughly defined the status of the muleteers in law.

He held they were subject to the British laws on the trip going over and were American passengers on the homeward trip.

There was evidence enough to warrant awarding damages to many of the complainants for having to eat poor food and suffer other privations.

EXTENDED ONE YEAR.

Copenhagen, May 22.—The Politiken is authority for the statement that United States Secretary of State Hay has proposed an extension for one year, namely until July 24, 1903, of the time allowed for the ratification of the treaty for the sale to the United States of the Danish West Indies. There is little doubt, add the paper, that King Christian will agree to the proposal.

WARSHIP CALMS HAYTIANS

Port au Prince, Hayti, May 22.—The United States cruiser Topeka arrived here today from Port Royal, S. C., to protect American interests. The presence of the warship in these waters has had an excellent effect. The situation of affairs is improving.

The Northern army, commanded by Gen. Firmin, has halted at Aronahie two days' march from here. Gen. Firmin is said to have formally declared that he does not intend to enter Port au Prince at the head of his troops.

PLANS OF THE KAISER

Is He Paving the Way For a Personal Visit to the United States Is the Question Uppermost at the German Capital.

New York, May 22.—Is the kaiser paving the way for a personal and official visit to the United States? That is the query one hears on all sides, cables the Berlin correspondent of the Herald. It is understood the prospects of a journey to the United States were discussed during the kaiser's recent trip on board the Kron Prinz Welhelm to the North Sea. It has always been one of his earnest wishes expressed in private conversation and to the members of the American embassy here that he might some day be able to visit the United States.

Apart from a promise of a glowing reception, the kaiser wishes to see with his own eyes the colossal enterprises and industrial magnitude of the United States.

The kaiser sincerely believes that Germany and the United States can obtain more advantageous results by working together commercially and politically than by resorting to tariff warfare.

The German government will propose, it is believed, a renewal of the favored nation treaty with the United States to prevent an outbreak of tariff hostilities such as the agrarians are clamoring for.

MAY PARDON ALL AMERICANS

Havana, May 22.—A bill will be introduced in the house providing pardon for all Americans confined in prison or awaiting trial. It is expected that the house will take favorable action in the matter. Cuban sentiment is strongly in favor of the measure.

LAND SOLD BY SQUARE INCH

New York, May 22.—A unique real estate transaction has been recorded in this city. It is the purchase for $200 of forty square inches of ground at Third avenue and One Hundred and Forty-ninth street. The tax is 68 cents a year, but it is expected to bring in $61,000 annually because its ownership carries the stoop line privileges of five feet on both streets, together with vault rights.

LENNOX CONFESSES MURDER

St. Paul, May 22.—A special to the Dispatch from Butte, Mont., says: Charles Lennox, who with James Martin was arrested at Dillon Tuesday afternoon on a charge of murdering John R. Williams, seven miles southeast of Butte Monday, has made a full and complete confession of the crime to County Attorney Breen and laid the actual commission of the crime to his partner, Martin. He acknowledged that they stopped Williams for the purpose of robbing him and that the man resisted.

OUT LIKE A FLASH

Life of Fred Stevens Ends With Startling Suddenness.

Died With a Single Gasp While Eating Breakfast.

Hopes Were of the Brightest Up to That Instant.

G. Fred Stevens is dead.

He passed away very suddenly, about 10 o'clock this morning, at his home, 1507 Jefferson street.

He was, apparently, well on the road to recovery and had been chatting pleasantly with his wife when death came without a moment's warning.

The sudden ending was caused by paralysis of the heart, brought on by uraniic poisoning which weakened kidney's was unable to throw off.

Mr. Stevens had been seriously ill for a week. Within the past few days, however, he was thought to be rapidly recovering from an attack of acute Bright's disease, which followed an attack of quinsy.

On Friday of last week his condition was very critical. The heart almost ceased to beat at one time. Immediately Mr. Stevens' father in Detroit was telegraphed for and he has been with him constantly ever since until within a few minutes of his son's death.

Yesterday and this morning seemed to bring such a great change for the better that the father left the bedside and made arrangements to return to Detroit.

While he was down town Mr. Stevens woke from a refreshing sleep and Mrs. Stevens and the nurse were giving him his breakfast.

The sufferer was particularly cheerful and talkative, so much so that the nurse had to warn him of the danger of over-execution. He asked Mrs. Stevens to get him another piece of toast and she had just stepped into the next room to comply with the request, when he straightened up and said:

"I'm going—"

He was dead before Mrs. Stevens could get back into the sick chamber.

The father, George Stevens, was notified of his son's death down town and could not believe it—he had left him so much improved.

Mr. Stevens was one of the most popular men in Duluth. Every person knew him and knowing him was to be his friend. The expressions of sorrow when the news of his death was received on the downtown streets were certainly sincere tributes to his memory.

Mr. Stevens was 35 years of age, having been born in Kingston, Ontario, in 1867. Although born in Canada, he was not a Canadian as to citizenship, for his parents retained their United States citizenship while living in Kingston, and when G. Fred Stevens was 1 year old they moved back to the United States.

He was raised and educated in Saginaw, Mich., and first went into the lumber business in that city. For the past thirteen years he has been one of the most prominent lumbermen in Duluth.

For some years he was assistant manager of the Cranberry Lumber company, resigning that position six years ago to take charge of the old Gray sawmill, at the foot of Rice's Point.

When the Gray mill burned he went into the lumber inspecting business and continued in it till a little over a year ago, when Governor Van Sant appointed him surveyor general of logs and lumber for the Duluth district.

Eight years ago he married Miss Roxiana Todd, of this city. She survives him.

It has been decided to hold the funeral service next Sunday, but complete arrangements have not yet been announced.

West End Civic Federation.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Kindly permit me a word in reference to an article published in The Herald some days ago relating to the West End Civic Federation.

While an effort is being made to interest the people of Altkin in organizing a local civic federation, nothing more can be done by the West End Civic Federation to stop Sunday professional baseball in that town. Nor is the federation concerned with the amateur ball games "played on nearly every good-sized vacant corner lot," except nearby residents complain, but is pleased to learn that so many hundred people were not "passing their time in saloons for the want of Sunday professional baseball." It will not direct its attention to the weekly shoots of the Central Gun club, whose grounds are at Thirty-fourth avenue east, nor to the conduct of the lawless element in West Duluth. Residents of those localities are capable of looking after their own interests. I will state, however, that the West End Civic Federation is one of many societies organized in this state for the purpose of preserving the American Sunday. There is a close relation between the present Western disregard for the real significance of Sunday and the large percentage of laboring men obliged to work seven days in the week. Sunday will eventually become either a day of worship and wholesome recreation or a day of labor, and the sooner men recognize this fact, the better for themselves and their children. Yours truly,

LOUIS I. BELDEN,
Secretary of West End Civic Federation.
Duluth, May 21.

ACT OF GOD

Is American Occupation of Philippines, Says Thoburn.

Washington, May 22.—Bishop Thoburn, of the M. E. church of India and Asia, was before the senate committee on Philippines today. He said the American occupation of the islands should be continued. In the course of his examination he said that the American occupation was an act of God. This led to quite a long line of questions by Senator Patterson, in which the bishop was asked whether the occupation of Cuba was an act of God, and when he replied in the affirmative, Senator Patterson asked if the withdrawal was also the act of God.

"It is too soon to answer that," he replied. "The United States may have to go back there."

Senator Patterson pursued the questions to some length and the bishop finally pronounced them "metaphysical."

Senator Beveridge objected, saying the questions were unnecessary, and Senator Patterson remarked that whenever the questions were such as to bring out evidence which the majority did not want an excuse was made for objection.

Chairman Lodge sustained the objection. Bishop Thoburn will continue tomorrow.

FURNITURE

Men Form a Trust and Boost Prices at Once.

Chicago, May 22.—Two hundred leading furniture manufacturers of the country, who came to Chicago Tuesday, to attend the annual business meeting of the National Association of Chamber Suit and Case Manufacturers, it is announced today, formed a combination or pool which will control the furniture output of the United States and regulate prices. The capital represented is about $25,000,000. The organization adopted a new schedule of prices, to go into effect at once, which will increase the cost of all classes of the better grade of furniture 10 to 20 per cent to purchasers. The furniture manufacturers held their sessions behind closed doors and maintained the utmost secrecy in regard to their plans.

Among those who took an active part in the conference were: G. R. Humer, Holland, Mich.; W. P. Unham, Marshfield, Wis., and E. M. Amsder, Grand Rapids, Mich. The members deny that the organization is a trust.

EXPERT CUTTER

Becomes Connected With Progressive Duluth Tailoring Establishment.

The Linne Tailoring company, 118 West Fourth street, has been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Otto Anderson, for six years connected with one of the prominent tailoring establishments of Chicago as cutter. Mr. Anderson is a graduate of the Stone Cutting school, one of the best in the country, and will hereafter give his personal attention to all the cutting done by the firm.

The Linne Tailoring Company makes a specialty of men's fine clothing, and is arranging to devote a branch of the business to ladies' fine tailoring in the near future. In the meantime a limited number of orders in this line will be accepted.

HOMEOPATHISTS

Of Wisconsin Elect Officers and Adjourn.

Milwaukee, May 22.—The Homeopathic society of Wisconsin adjourned sine die this afternoon, after listening to the reading of several technical papers and the holding of a business session. Oshkosh was awarded the next convention. Officers were elected as follows: President, Edward E. Everett, Madison; vice president, A. P. Andros, Ashland; secretary, Dr. M. A. Brand, Milwaukee; treasurer, Dr. W. G. Patchem, Manitowoc; censor, F. A. Forsbeck, Milwaukee.

Dr. M. A. Brandt was chosen as delegate to the American Institute of homeopaths, which meets in Cleveland in June.

STRIKE IS BROKEN.

Augusta, Ga., May 22.—The Kings' cotton mill, which was closed several weeks ago when its employes struck for an increase in wages, started in part today, 160 hands out of 500 reporting for work. It is claimed this breaks the backbone of the strike.

MULE HAD THE BLANKET.

Apropos of the Lackawanna road and illustrative of President Truesdale's incisive directness in "doing things," this story seems worth the telling. At the beginning of his administration Mr. Truesdale made a tour of inspection, and while up Scranton way visited the company's barns. He saw there a fine horse comfortably blanketed and further on a shivering mule, says the New York Times. This conversation thereupon took place between Mr. Truesdale and a stable attendant:

"Whose horse is that?"

"Mr. ——'s," said the stable boy, naming a local official of the company.

"Whose mule is this?"

"The company's, sir."

"Whose blanket is on that horse?"

"The company's."

"You take the blanket off that horse and put it on the mule," was the president's order.

The local official "resigned" soon afterward.

TO MEET VISITORS

Committee of Business Men Joins Special Train.

Large Reception Committee and Band to Be at Depot.

Arrives at Five O'clock Friday--Plans For Entertainment.

A committee of about fifteen representative jobbers and business men of Duluth will take tomorrow morning's eastbound South Shore train for Lake Gogebic, where they will meet the special train bearing about 200 copper country business men, which will leave Calumet tomorrow morning for Duluth. The party will be a specially invited one, and especial effort has been made to make it completely representative of the business interests of the copper country. The party will be the guests on the trip of Vice President Fitch of the South Shore road. Mr. Fitch, for this occasion, will contribute a special train, composed of the handsome new equipment that is to be placed in service on his night trains the 1st of the month. The train will leave the copper country in the morning and arrive at Duluth at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Arrangements for the reception of the members of the party by the business men of Duluth are rapidly drawing to a close. The plans are taking a broader scope, and will be carried out more thoroughly than was thought possible when the matter was first brought to the attention of the jobbers on behalf of Mr. Fitch. This has been possible largely through the organization afforded by the Commercial club, which itself, however, was hardly fairly on its feet when the preparations for the visit began.

The details of the entertainment have not been finally decided upon, particularly with reference to the banquet. However, it is now known that this committee of the local business men will go down the road tomorrow morning to meet the visitors, and that they will be accommodated by General Freight Agent Walker and General Agent Adson of the South Shore.

The party on arriving in Duluth will find awaiting it at the Union depot a large delegation of business men, headed by Flaaten's Third Regiment band. A line will be formed and the visitors will be escorted to the Board of Trade exchange room, where the guests will be formally welcomed to the city by Mayor Hugo. The assemblage will then disperse, the intention being to allow the visitors to look over the city or visit friends at their pleasure that evening and the following forenoon. It is expected that many of them will wish to call on wholesalers and others with whom they do business in this market.

At 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon coaches will be provided at the Spalding hotel for a drive over the Boulevard. This will occupy the most of the afternoon remaining. At 8:30 that evening a banquet will be given the visitors at the Spalding hotel. This will be the most elaborate entertainment that has yet been afforded any party of commercial visitors who have come to Duluth. Flaaten's orchestra will give a specially selected program of music, interspersed with songs by a double quartet of fine male voices, and P. Doran, who is always a welcome entertainer, will contribute a tenor solo. A. Hoelscher has been engaged as a flute soloist, and R. H. Cox will give some of his most diverting character impersonations.

The list of speakers is not yet complete, but it will include J. Adam Bede and E. L. Millar. The visitors will, of course, respond to the toasts, and it is expected that Vice President Fitch, among others, will be assigned one pertinent to his position.

The executive committee in charge of the reception and entertainment is composed of E. A. Move, of the Marshall-Wells Hardware company; W. R. Peyton, of the Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company, and H. B. Knudsen, of the Knudsen-Fergusen company.

Secretary Preston is sending out letters today advising the members of the reception committee as given below to be on hand at the Union depot tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock to receive the visitors:

F. A. Patrick, chairman; Albert L. Preston, secretary; Mayor T. W. Hugo, George E. Welles, M. M. Gasser, H. P. Thomas, W. Mendenhall, E. W. Matter, W. G. Starkey, E. A. Tessman, J. A. Sutton, B. H. DESIRES DELAY.

Andrews Wants Trial as Distant As Possible.

Detroit, May 22.—Concluding arguments in the police court examination of Frank C. and Henry R. Andrews, former officers of the wrecked City Savings bank, were begun today. When these arguments have been finished a strong effort will be made to secure a reduction of F. C. Andrews' bail, and then it is expected a fight will follow over the time of trial in the recorder's court, for it is conceded that the two men will be bound over. The prosecution is anxious for a speedy and immediate trial, while the defense, it is understood, wants the trial set for as distant a date as possible.

ROCK ISLAND

Proposes to Build Passenger Station at St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 22.—R. R. Cable, chairman of the executive board of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad, arrived in St. Louis today, accompanied by General Manager Goodnow and other officials of the road. After a trip to the World's fair site, W. S. McChesney, general manager of the Terminal association, took the party on a special train to inspect the terminal facilities on both sides of the river.

Mr. Cable would not discuss his mission in St. Louis other than to say that the Rock Island wanted to get its trains in here, and was doing everything to bring about this result. He hoped to make satisfactory arrangements with the Terminal association as quickly as possible.

From other sources comes the statement that the Rock Island would build a new passenger depot, to be entirely distinct from the Union station, and that a deal was now being considered with the Burlington road for the purchase of an option which the latter company holds on the property at Nineteenth and Washington avenues.

This is the only logical conclusion to be drawn, railroad men say, from the purchase by the Rock Island of the extensive Wiggins Ferry properties and the Colorado road.

Queenan got Hawkins into a neutral corner, feinted with his left and shot his right to the mark. Hawkins dropped as if shot. He got gamely to his feet, but Queenan brought him down again and when his head hit the floor the second time he stayed there.

REVISION OF CREED

Report of Special Committee Adopted By Presbyterians.

Action Was Practically Unanimous With But Little Debate.

Changes Now Go to Various Presbyteries For Ratification.

New York, May 22.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church today adopted the report of the committee on creed revision making changes in the confession of faith. This action which was practically unanimous was taken with little or no debate. The changes proposed will now go to the various presbyteries for ratification. When the report was presented last Friday a motion for its adoption was made at once, but the vote was deferred until today. As was to be expected the prospect of an interesting debate on creed revision attracted a crowd which filled the galleries solidly and when the doors of the ground floor were opened, all the seats not reserved for commissioners were occupied at once. The moderator, Henry Van Dyke, the moderator, before the hour set for consideration spoke for a moment. "I do not believe that my task as moderator is to be a difficult one," he said, " but it is a delicate one. In this chair where you have put me, I want to say that I am not a member of any organization or any committee. I am a plain Presbyterian and your moderator—your servant. I want to plead that this discussion be carried on in the spirit of good fellowship. Have nothing either rushed through or delayed. The matter before us is a simple proposition. The assembly of 1901 appointed a committee to do a particular thing. What you have to pass on is not whether that certain thing should be done, but whether the committee has done it to your satisfaction."

On motion the privilege of the floor was extended to the members of the committee, who were not commissioners. On motion of the Rev. Dr. David J. Wylie, speeches on the report were limited to ten minutes, except that of the committee chairman.

The Rev. Dr. James J. Moffatt then moved the adoption of the eleven overtures to be sent to the presbyteries.

The Rev. Dr. Henry C. Minton, chairman of the revision committee, spoke for the report. He would not, he said, argue the merits of the whole report, but would speak of the especial considerations which influenced the committee. They were guided in the first place by the work of the committee of 1892. The presumption, of courses, was always in favor of the explicit orders of last year's assembly. There were two elements on the committee, he explained, those who preferred to make all amendments by verbal modifications, and those who wished to make the changes by separate declaratory statements. Obviously there had to be some yielding and it was not all on one side. "The misapprehensions as to the confession," continued Dr. Minton, "have come from two causes; first, the unguarded statements in the confession itself, and second, unwarranted inferences from the confession. In the first cases verbal changes would be the remedy. In the second, declamatory statements were necessary."

Dr. Minton then took up the various points on which the committee had been asked to pass. "Regarding the pope of Rome," he said, "the confession distinctly says the pope is the anti-christ and the son of perdition. Now if that was true and if we want to say it—let it stand. If not true, or if true and we do not wish to say it, take it out.

"I may believe that the pope is anti-christ on general principles. I am quite willing to declare in the face of the vatican or the whole world, for that matter, that the pope using the crown rights of Jesus Christ, is anti-christ and the son of perdition."

Mr. Minton resented the accusation brought that the Presbyterian church believed in infant damnation. "The critics and enemies of the Presbyterian church have rolled it under their tongues as a sweet morsel that we believe in infant damnation. We resent the accusation that this chapter contemplates any such interpretation."

Dr. Minton was loudly applauded when he closed.

The Rev. Dr. Moffat urged the assembly, in a brief address, to decide the question quickly by a vote to adopt. The Rev. Dr. R. Russell Booth, of this city, who has been known as a strong anti-revisionist, asked the assembly to adopt unanimously and at once the report. As he closed his short remarks there came loud cries of "question," "question," from all over the assembly.

MR. HOAR SPEAKS

In Opposition to Present Policy In the Philippines.

Great Interest In Remarks of the Venerable Senator.

Says Administration Has Repealed Declaration Of Independence.

Washington, May 22.—Soon after the senate convened today, a resolution offered by Mr. Hale (Me.) was passed, directing the secretary of the navy to furnish the senate with detailed items under the head of "The pay of the navy." It was adopted.

Another resolution, offered by Mr. Hale and adopted, called on secretary of the navy for full information concerning the depth of water at the Mare Island navy yard, and whether a first-class battleship ever had gone to the yard; and also as to the depth of water at the Puget sound navy yard. Consideration of the Philippine government bill was then resumed, Mr. Hoar addressing the senate in opposition to the present policy of the government in the islands. Great interest was manifested in the utterance of the Massachusetts senator, both on the floor and in the galleries.

Mr. Hoar spoke deliberately and confined himself closely to his manuscript.

Mr. Hoar maintained that this country is not at war. "You are fighting for sovereignty," he said, "you are fighting for the principle of eternal dominion over that people, and that is the only question in issue in the conflict.

"When it had been determined to resort to force in the Philippines," he said, "the government took upon itself the natural consequences of that decision. The result of the conflict of arms of such a character inevitably was that there would be cruelty on one side and retaliation by cruelty on the other, and the responsibility rested upon those who made the policy."

Mr. Hoar said he was to discuss and denounce what seemed to him one of the most foolish chapters in history; he was compelled to admit, he said, that the men who were responsible for it were neither wicked nor foolish.

Mr. Hoar maintained that his conscience would not permit him to follow these men and his conscience was the only authority he felt bound to obey in this matter. He said that the share which it was proposed to give the Filipinos in the proposed scheme of government was an admission that many of them were fit for self government. The United States was fighting to secure a dependency, not a republic; a government of our making and not a government of the Filipinos making.

Discussing the testimony taken by the Philippine committee, Mr. Hoar said it had outlined some great admissions. What vindicates that which has been done so far is the saving of the islands from anarchy and the material benefit conferred upon the Philippine people.

What the fathers of the republic said and our century of glorious history were appealed to in vain. "Their lessons fell upon the ears of men dazzled by military glory and delirious with the lust of conquest." He compared the situation in Cuba with that in the Philippines and demanded to know which was the better.

Mr. Hoar recited a chapter of the history of this country which, he said, showed that the present policy of the government was in contradiction to the Monroe doctrine as it was a contradiction of the Declaration of Independence. He said that if the present war was followed the Declaration of Independence would be repealed and nothing would be left of the Monroe doctrine except the principle of brutal selfishness.

This government had erected a republic in Cuba and a despotism in the Philippines. Six hundred millions of treasure and 10,000 American lives had been sacrificed in that endeavor. In the Philippines the American flag had been made the emblem of sacrilege and the burning of homes and of the horror of the water torture. He believed that our officers in general were humane. "But in some cases they have carried on your warfare with a mixture of American ingenuity and Castilian cruelty."

"What have your ideals cost you?" inquired Mr. Hoar. "For the Philippine islands, you have had to repeal the Declaration of Independence. For Cuba you have had to reaffirm and give it new lustre. For the Philippine islands you have had to convert the Monroe doctrine into a doctrine of mere selfishness. For Cuba you have acted on it and vindicated it. In Cuba you have the eternal gratitude of a free people. In the Philippine islands you have the hatred and sullen submission of a subjugated people. From Cuba you have brought home nothing but glory. From the Philippines you have brought home nothing of glory."

Referring to the cruelties committed in the Philippines Mr. Hoar said he believed the American soldiers were as brave and humane as ever lived. They had done simply what always would be done in like conditions. The chief guilt was upon the heads of those who created the conditions.

After reviewing briefly the capture of Aguinaldo by Gen. Funston, the methods of whom he sharply criticised, Mr. Hoar expressed the belief that the senate did not know what it was doing when it consented to Gen Funston's promotion and intimated that the result might have been different if the senate had been fully cognizant of all the facts. Adverting again to the "horrors" which have occurred in the Philippines, Mr. Hoar said:

"I hope and believe they were unknown to the war department. I know they were unknown to President Roosevelt, and I know they were unknown to President McKinley." He did not believe, however, that the statement that the war had been conducted with unexampled humanity on our part would be accepted by the people. He denounced the order alleged to have been given by Gen. Smith and laid particular stress upon the horrors of the reconcentration camps which he likened to the dreadful scenes in Andersonville prison during the civil war.

He demanded that these things cease and that the administration declare on what eternal principle it would act in the Philippines. He believed that it would be impossible absolutely to pacify the Philippines.

In conclusion, Mr. Hoar believed that better counsel yet would prevail than now seemed to exist. The irrevocable step had not yet been taken. "Let us at least have this to say: We too have kept the faith of the fathers. We took Cuba by the hand. We delivered her from age-long bondage. We welcomed her to the family of nations. We set mankind an example never beheld before in modern history. We led hesitating and halting Europe to the deliverance of their beleaguered ambassadors in China. We marched through a hostile country—a country cruel and barbarous—without anger or revenge. We returned benefit for injury and pity for cruelty. We made the name of America beloved in the east and in the west. We kept faith with the Philippine people. We kept faith with our own history. We kept our national honor unsullied. The flag which we received without a rent we handed down without a stain."

THE PRICE OF COAL

Local Sales Agents Expect No Advance Until June 1.

Do Not Say What They Look For the Rise To Be.

Only Selling Steam Coal For Delivery In May.

There will be no advance in the price of coal until June 1.

That seems to be the expectation of the local sales agents, reinforced by a report from Chicago that the Lake Erie Coal Shippers' association has taken formal action along this line. A new schedule of prices is expected to be announced, effective the first of the month. It is said that the parties in control of the situation, after considering the matter at some length, decided that it would be best to make any early advance all at one time. It has been known for some time that there would be a rise in the price of anthracite coal of at least 10 cents on June 1. This is in pursuance of the policy adopted at the beginning of the season to advance the price monthly pro rata, as the insurance or storage charge accumulated, instead of waiting until Sept. 1, as has been customary heretofore.

"In view of the fact that an advance would be made the first of the month, anyway," said one agent this morning, "it has been decided to defer action on the soft coal price until that time also. The situation as affected by the anthracite strike will be more clear by that time, and we will adapt ourselves to conditions as we find them."

One sales agent in discussing this said that he had received instructions to sell coal for no later than May delivery. He seemed to think that this action of the Lake Erie people, and the instructions regarding selling only for nearby delivery, were due to the same cause, an intention to put up the price.

Another agent in discussing instructions as to selling for future delivery, said that these orders were not a new matter with his company. He added that he had received instructions at the beginning of the season to contract only for the current month's delivery. He thought, therefore, that this was not influenced by recent occurrences in the mining world.

"We are not making contracts to deliver soft coal on large contracts covering a considerable period ahead, as we formerly did," said he. "If a logging road, the mines or one of the regular commercial roads wants us to sell them coal for the summer or the year, we take the matter up with the principal office, and if the amount required is not too great we simply say that we will do our best to take care of the customer. We don't enter into any written contract, however. As a matter of fact, there is little difference in actuality between this sort of an obligation and that imposed by the form of contracts we used. The contracts always hedged us about with safeguards in case of strikes or other common troubles."

IS CLOSED.

May Session of Federal Court In Duluth Is Over.

The business of the United States district and circuit courts for the May term was finished last evening and the courts were adjourned.

Two verdicts were returned by the jury yesterday afternoon. In the damage case of the government against Warren Potter and Patrick Casey, of Aitkin, Minn., who were sued for appropriating to their use timber alleged to have been cut on government land, the jury returned a verdict for the government of $3105. Of this amount $2300 was the principal and $805 was for interest.

The damage case of the government against the Union Towing and Wrecking company was disposed of very quickly. The jury was instructed by the court to return a verdict for the defendant company.

Judge O. P. Shiras left last evening for home in Iowa, and United States District Attorney Purdy returned to St. Paul. Assistant United States District Attorney F. N. Dickinson left for St. Paul this morning and United States Marshal W. M. Grimshaw will return to his home in Minneapolis this evening.

This morning the witnesses were paid off and discharged. There was but one case to be tried in district court during the May term, that of the government against E. Bouchard, of Cass Lake, for the alleged sale of liquor to Indians. The case has been continued.

BALL GAMES.

High School Team Has Interesting Series In Prospect.

The high school baseball team has ahead of it a lively series of games on which much depends. Saturday the Brainerd high school game, which has not yet been defeated, will meet the Duluth team on the West End grounds in Duluth, and as the Duluth team has a clean record the game will be watched with much interest. On the following Saturday the team that loses this week will have a chance for revenge, for the same teams will meet again at Brainerd.

On the next Saturday, June 7, a game for the state championship will be played in Duluth, when the Duluth high school team will meet the St. Paul Central high school team. The latter club has defeated the Minneapolis Central high school club, and the Duluth team beat the Minneapolis aggregation by a score of 9 to 0 given by the umpire.

WILL BE LIND.

Bert Fesler Says That Conviction Seems to Be General.

John Lind will be the Democratic candidate for governor against Governor Van Sant.

That is the report of the sentiment of the Democratic state central committeemen and politicians that gathered at the capital for the meeting which is brought up from St. Paul by Bert Fesler, who attended the meeting as the member from St. Louis county.

"I don't suppose anybody is entitled to speak by the card regarding the intentions or wishes of Governor Lind in this connection," said Mr. Fesler this noon. "But the conviction seemed to be general that he would be the nominee of the party for governor this fall. It is the understanding, or at least the belief, that when the time comes Governor Lind will be induced to accept the nomination. Nobody talks of anybody else. Indeed, it seems to be a Lind year and a Lind opportunity. I heard no suggestion that anybody but Van Sant would be the Republican nominee, and this indicates the nomination of Lind."

Duluth Republicans express some surprise over the early date for which the Democratic state convention has been called. They venture the belief that the Democrats intend to force the fight of the campaign.

IS ACTIVE.

Joseph Sheehy Hot After Violators of Sunday Laws.

The Bowery Civic Federation (limited)—which consists of Joe Sheehy—is today more feared by violators of Sabbath keeping statutes than even the West End federation.

Mr. Sheehy has numerous saloon keepers on the anxious seat and if his present activity continues next Sunday may be quite Sahara-like.

This Bowery Civic federation has four blank warrants in his possession and the saloonkeepers are suffering agonies in anguish to learn whose names he intends inserting in the blank spaces.

The new federation will not enlighten the anxious ones as to his intentions.

Yesterday Mr. Sheehy called at the office of the associate city attorney to swear out a number of warrants, but was informed that he had better wait till after the hearing of Moses Cook, before making any further complaint.

The Bowery federation said he would not wait, and secured a number of blank complaints which he can fill out and have served by putting up $5 statutory costs.

Moses Cook, the saloonkeeper originally accused by Sheehy of keeping open Sundays, appeared in court this morning and withdrew his plea of not guilty. Then he entered a demurer and the case was continued till May 29.

Graduating Class Expected to Number Sixty-six---The Exercises.

The public schools will close Friday, June 6, two weeks from tomorrow, and on every hand in the schools of the city there are preparations for the end of the school year.

There is a long vacation ahead, and the children are planning for that, but their pleasant anticipations are somewhat disturbed by the knowledge that there is an awful week of examinations ahead. The grade examinations will be held during the first four days of the last week of school.

The high school will graduate about sixty-six members of the senior class, though, of course, this number cannot be exactly determined until the standings of the pupils are all complete. Last year the class that was graduated numbered seventy-one, but sixty-six is a large number compared with former years.

The commencement exercises of the high school will begin Sunday evening, June 1, when the baccalaureate sermon will be preached in the high school Assembly hall by Rev. Alexander Milne, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church. The service is open to the public, of course. The practice of having the baccalaureate sermon preached in the Assembly hall is a comparatively new one, having been started last year, but it has been found much more satisfactory, the assembly hall accommodating much larger crowds than any of the churches. Several of the churches will have no evening services, but will join in the service at the high school.

The class day exercises will be held Wednesday, June 4, and elaborate programs are being prepared for this and the commencement exercises, which will be held Friday evening, June 6. The usual features of the class day exercises will be given. Class President Edward Congdon will give the president's address. Miss Ethel Forsyth will give the class prophecy, Miss Charlotte Monschine will relate the class history, and Miss Leora Fenton will read the last will and testament of the class. Louis Zaik will give the class oration.

The musical features of the class day and commencement exercises will be very attractive. Among other things the "Floradora" sextet will be repeated. A. F. M. Custance, as usual, will have charge of the music.

The feature of the commencement exercises will be the papers by the five honor pupils, those who come outtt of the school year with the best records. These are Sumner Smith, Esther Searle, Grace Duncan, Leta Phelps and Clara Laughton.

On Thursday evening the graduating exercises of the eighth grade, the highest class of the grade schools, will take place. In all 290 pupils will be graduated from the grammar schools, to take their places next year in the freshman class of the high school. Last year the class numbered 275. The total may be affected to some extent by the closing examinations, if any of the pupils fail in them. If none fail, the number from each of the various schools will be as follows: Adams, 5; Bryant, 12; Emerson, 16; Endion, 25; Fairmount, 8; Fond du Lac, 3; Glen Avon, 9; Irving, 24; Jackson, 24; Jefferson, 17; Lakeside, 12; Lester Park, 7; Longfellow, 17; Lincoln, 29; Lowell, 3; Madison, 10; Stowe, 3; Washington, 55.

MAKES A STIR.

Catherine Mueller Wants Judge, Jury and the Police Arrested.

Catherine Mueller, who claims to be the widow of John Mueller, whose property is now involved in a sensational suit in district court, created considerable stir about the court house and police headquarters this morning.

She has got it into her head in some way that she is being abused, and she has been at the court house several times lately making demands that nobody could understand owing to her excited mixture of the English and German languages. She has talked a good deal about getting damages out of somebody, and about the only thing that is clear is that she wants nearly everybody connected with the case arrested.

At the court house this morning she attacked John Jenswold, Jr., one of the attorneys in the Mueller case, and he had to retreat into the register's office. Then she sailed into the probate court and the clerk's office and after storming about for a while she started for the police station. As she left the court house she was shouting wildly, and she stopped every few feet to shake her fist at the court house and hurl imprecations upon the head of everybody in sight.

At the police station she wanted Chief Troyer to arrest one of the judges in the district court, which one the attendants could not make out. She also wanted her attorney, R. R. Briggs, and John Jenswold arrested, and when Chief Troyer refused to obey her commands she left looking for somebody to arrest Chief Troyer.

TO VACATE PROPERTY.

Petition For Benefit of Northern Pacific Railroad.

A petition to vacate a large portion of the west side of Rice's Point was filed in district court this morning. The property vacated is to be used for the docks and warehouses of the Northern Pacific railroad. The petitioners are George C. Howe, the Great Eastern Elevator company, the Peavey Duluth Terminal, the Pioneer Steel Elevator company, Alice M. Smith, Alger, Smith & Co., Giles Gilbert and the Duluth Transfer Railroad company.

The petition states that nearly all of the property is vacant, and that most of the streets and alleys sought to be vacated are submerged.

J. L. Washburn and W. D. Bailey are the attorneys.

DISMISSED.

Damage Suit of Isaacson Against Iron Range Dropped.

The celerity with which a $16,000 personal injury case disappeared from the boards in district court this morning caused the heads of the observers to swim.

The case of John Isaacson against the Duluth & Iron Range railroad to recover $16,000 damages for the loss of a leg came on for trial this morning, John Jenswold appearing for the plaintiff and Joseph B. Cotton for the defendant.

About an hour and a half was spent in drawing the jury, and when that work was completed and the trial appeared ready to go forward, Mr. Jenswold created some astonishment by moving to dismiss the case. He gave no reason. Mr. Cotton had no objection and the case was dismissed. It is understood that it will be begun again later.

Isaacson had one of his legs cut off below the knee Aug. 28, 1899, while he was crossing the Iron Range tricks on a pathway leading from Ely to one of the mines.

In the case of Mary E. McComber against the city of Duluth, the plaintiff rested this morning, and City Attorney Mitchell moved to dismiss on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to make out a case. The argument took up a good part of the forenoon, and was still in progress at noon.

The case of the estate of John Erickson against the Commodore Mining company was given to the jury this morning, and the jury still had it at a late hour this afternoon.

C. M. Forest and Alphone LeTourneau pleaded guilty yesterday afternoon to a charge of having an indecent picture machine in their possession. They will be sentenced Saturday morning.

Julius Hagen, indicted for grand larceny in the second degree on two counts for stealing clothing, pleaded guilty yesterday afternoon to one of the indictments, and the other will be dismissed.

The jury in the case of Charles H. Rupp, charged with forgery in the second degree, acquitted him yesterday afternoon. The defense was that Rupp was drunk and that if he forged the check he did not know it, and therefore had no criminal intent.

George Bishop Has Clear Case of Self Defence.

From the evidence submitted the county attorney saw that Bishop had shot Kildee in self defense and moved a dismissal of the case. Later Kildee appeared in court to answer to a charge of disorderly conduct and was fined.

BURNED AT STAKE

The Awful Punishment Of a Negro Ravisher In Texas.

Had Assaulted Wife Of Section Foreman at Lansing.

Thousands of People Witness Death of the Fiend.

Dallas, Tex., May 22.—At 1:15 p. m. the negro, Dudley Morgan, who assaulted Mrs. McKay, wife of Section Foreman McKay, at Lansing, Tex., was burned at the stake at Lansing.

According to a telegram from Hallville, the nearest telegraph station, he was captured this morning and taken before Mrs. McKay for identification. His last statement just before the fire was applied was: "Tell my wife goodbye, and tell her how I went. Tell her I was guilty of the charge, and it all occurred on account of Whaley Hurd. He persuaded me to do it, and said he would do the same. We planned it at the section house before daylight Saturday."

Morgan, it is alleged, assaulted Mrs. McKay at Lansing switch last Saturday morning. He was captured near Mount Pleasant by a mixed posse of men from this place, under Marshal Hall, who had followed from the first, through almost unsurmountable difficulties, on account of the negro's many relatives and thousands of other negroes to help him all along the route. Bloodhounds were used from Mineola, Sulphur Springs, and the penitentiary.

At Marshall, when the train pulled in, there was a great mob there to meet the negro, and all the available coaches in the yard were attached to the train to carry the people wishing to go to Lansing.

When the train reached Hallville there was no room in either of the coaches. At Lansing the train was met by a big crowd, and the mob which went from here numbered 3000 or 4000 people. Preparations had been made to burn the negro, and a sort of trial was planned by the mob, and the time for the execution was placed at between 1 and 2 p. m. Arriving at Lansing the miserable negro moved in a mechanical way wherever he was pushed, and seemed to be dazed by his awful surroundings. The train crew who witnessed the burning say the sight was indescribable. It seemed like everybody had a weapon and that a great slaughter might be precipitated by the slightest adverse movement. The negro acknowledged the crime and implicated Whaley Hurd, a negro who was hanged at the beginning of the chase, and who exchanged clothes with Morgan.

MISSIONARIES

Address Women's Missionary Society of the West.

St. Paul, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Before the regular morning session of the Baptist American Missionary union today several returned missionaries addressed the Women's Missionary society of the West. The speakers were Dr. Josephine M. Bixby, from China; Mrs. A. A. Bennett, of Yokohama, Japan; Mrs. Clough, of India, and Dr. Naomi Garton, of Burmah. Similar addresses occupied much of the time. One speaker was Dr. John E. Clough, who has been in this country for about a year, recovering from an accident in which he broke his leg and suffered severely on account of the lack of competent medical attention in Ongole, India, where he was located. The principal address of the day was delivered by Rev. Dr. Hahn, of Springfield, Mass., who delivered a scholarly and thoughtful oration on the development of the far East. A message of welcome and love was sent to Dr. Boardman, former president of the union, who is in feeble health. Other speakers were Rev. W. F. Armstrong, missionary at Rangoon, Burmah, and Rev. Joseph Clark, of the Congo mission in Africa.

Appellate Court Affirms Injunction Against Machinists.

Chicago, May 22. The appellate court has affirmed the injunction granted by Judge Chetlain in January, restraining the members of the International Association of Machinists, in any manner "unlawfully hindering, obstructing or interfering with the business," of a machinery manufacturer. The decision of Judge Chetlain was the outcome of litigation involving the strike at the plant of Allis-Chalmers company.

The appellate court says: "Workmen may use the streets and highways in a manner not inconsistent with public travel for the purpose of entreaty, inducement and peaceable persuasion in good faith and a patrol picket may not necessarily imply seriously threats of bodily harm, but to accomplish their purpose they must not overstep the bounds and use threats, abusive epithets or intimidation or congregate in such numbers or in such manner or with such a show of force as is calculated to intimidate a reasonably prudent man, and no harm can result in granting an injunction to restrain such unlawful conduct."

ONE FIFTY PER HEAD

The Tax On Immigrants Causes Discussion In the House.

Amendment Passed To Exempt People Of Cuba.

Animated Debate Followed Under Five Minute Rule.

Washington, May 22.—At the opening of the house today, Rev. D. Couden, the chaplain, made reference to the birth of the new republic of Cuba.

Some routine business was transacted before the house resumed consideration of the immigration bill. The senate amendments to the bill providing for improvement of Governor's island, Boston harbor, were concurred in.

The house then resumed consideration of the immigration bill under the five-minute rule. The provision in the bill for a tax of $1.50 on each passenger not a citizen of the United States or the Dominion of Canada or Mexico, gave rise to some discussion.

Mr. Powers (Me.) offered an amendment, which was agreed to, exempting citizens of the republic of Cuba, as in the case of Canada and Mexico, from the payment of the tax.

An amendment by Mr. Shattuc was agreed to, which includes within the tax provision prisoners coming to the United States by railroad or other mode of transportation, from foreign contiguous territory to the United States."

Another amendment was adopted extending the exclusion provision to those aliens who have been within one year from the date of the application for admission to the United States deported as being under offers, promises or agreements to perform labor or service of some kind therein.

An amendment by Mr. Rucker (Mo.), was accepted providing that the provisions of law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, ministers of any religious denomination, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession or persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants.

Mr. Shattuc made a point or order against an amendment by Mr. Underwood (Ala.), embodying an educational test for immigrants, which the chair overruled.

JENKINS.

Douglas County, Wis., Delegate Instructed For Present Congressman.

The Douglas county Republican convention for the election of delegates to the Sixth congressional district of Wisconsin, was held in West Superior this afternoon and all of the delegates, twenty-two in number were instructed for Congressman J. J. Jenkins. The congressional convention is to be held in Chippewa Falls, Wis., May 29. The addition of the Douglas county delegation to the Jenkins forces are, it is said, to insure beyond any possible doubt Mr. Jenkins' renomination.

Judge D. E. Roberts, of Superior, worked hard to secure the Douglas county delegation, but as it was claimed that he could not expect any support from any of the other counties in the district, the vote for his delegations to the county convention was very light.

SUSTAINED ACTIVITY

Is Condition of Every Department of Iron Trade.

Statistical Position of Blast Furnaces Is Remarkable.

Labor Troubles Are Likely to Have a Bad Effect.

Cleveland, May 2.—The Iron Trade Review this week has this to say concerning market conditions: "Sustained activity is still the condition in every department of the iron trade. That the high level of prices has been reached and that the succeeding months of the year will bring increasing supplies of material, is the belief of many in the trade; but nothing has appeared as yet indicating any relief in the near future from the stress everywhere felt. Foundries are still seeking iron over and above that coming to them on their contracts, and the pressure for pig iron from rolling mills and steel works is even more urgent. The statistical position of the blast furnaces is remarkable—an output at the highest rate in their history (352,046 tons a week, May 1, as against 298,460 tons a week, Jan. 1), representing a production of 1,500,000 tons for the month of April, accompanied by a virtual wiping out of stocks.

"The 60,000 tons of coke iron on hand at merchant furnaces represents scarcely more than a day's consumption, and is the smallest amount thus carried in many years. The story of iron and steel consumption told by these figures is marvelous, and yet at the moment the possibility of interrupting this splendid record by disastrous labor disturbances is so apparent that it cannot be ignored. That the decision of the anthracite miners to continue their strike was not by a decisive vote is held to augur an early settlement, but as it stands the strike is not a favorable influence on the iron trade.

"As a partial offset to its effects has come the puddlers' strike in Central Pennsylvania, with its daily curtailment of pig iron consumption. Should the soft coal miners become involved in the anthracite struggle, the whole industrial situation would be seriously clouded. As to the later months of the year, crop prospects will have an important bearing on the iron trade.

"With the iron trade, commitments for 1903 are increasing, both in pig iron and finished materials. Buying of structural material for 1903 continues among other contracts, Chicago reporting one for 5000 tons for delivery after Jan. 1. It appears that considerable structural business for 1902 will fall of delivery this year, and this overflow, with orders already booked for the new year, represents three months' rolling. Rail mills have been able to take on additional tonnage, Pittsburg reporting a sale of 30,000 tons to the Cotton Belt railroad for November and December delivery."

THE DAKOTAS.

Bank Robbers Operate In True Bandit Style.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—Wild pioneer days are revived in Charles Mix and Hutchinson counties by a band of bank robbers who have been operating for the last few weeks. Banks at Scotland, Ethan and several other places were blown open and robbed in quick succession. At Ethan the gang operated in true bandit style; mounting a guard outside the door while they were busy within, the inhabitants, attracted by the noise of the explosion being kept at a safe distance. On Monday night the bank of Harrison was robbed. In making their escape from there, the men stole a team, and becoming bolder, drove along the country road in broad daylight, frequently stopping farmers who had a better looking pair of animals than themselves, and forcing an exchange. They dumped the farmers wives and daughters unceremoniously from their wagons and appropriated the teams for their own use. They drove through Wagner during the day, and though they were known to be bandits, they were unmolested. The whole regions is terror stricken at their depredations and no farmer will trust himself away from home unarmed. A posse left Avon in chase of the men, and the pursuit is now becoming general.

Barney O'Connor, a well digger at Wakonda, was killed in a well fifty feet deep. While going down into it to make some adjustment of the machinery, he was overcome with gas at the depth of twenty feet and fell to the bottom, being killed instantly. His assistants had great difficulty in getting his remains to the surface.

Deadwood—A loaded ore car got away at Pluma station on the Burlington, and running down through Deadwood, would have caused a serious accident and probably loss of life but for the prompt action of J. C. Birdsell, assistant division superintendent. Word was telegraphed to Deadwood to look out for the car. Mr. Birdsell was on the station platform when the train dispatcher shouted. He ran to the switch back of the electric light plant and threw it just in time to turn the car. Two passenger coaches stood at the station with about 100 persons waiting to go to Lead, and had the car struck them it would have killed someone, as it was going fifty miles an hour. It crashed into a loaded fruit car on the siding, reducing one end of it to ruins.

Huron—One of the largest real estate sales consummated in the state for several years was closed Wednesday by the Morris Land company for the Fred M. Wilcox ranch, situated about twenty miles northeast of this city, in Milford township. Six thousand acres are embraced in the ranch and upon it are dwellings, barns cattle sheds, corrals, four artesian wells, and a lake covering twelve acres well stocked with fish. Mr. Wilcox will give possession of the premises Oct. 1, but reserves his herd of fine blooded cattle and his horses. The price paid was $80,000; the purchasers are John Z. Kleinhuffer, Mathias Kleinhuffer, Paul Stahl and Josua Stahl, all of Bridgewater, S. D.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Rev. J. B. Baldwin, who was probably the oldest Presbyterian minister in North Dakota, died at Cooperstown, at the home of his son. He was 82 years of age, and had lived in North Dakota more than twenty years. He left two sons and a daughter.

The Red River Valley Millers' club held its annual meeting here Tuesday afternoon and night. The election of officers resulted in the choice of Asa Sargeant, Caledonia, president; James Sorenson, Sheldon, vice president; H. R. Lyon, Mandon, treasurer; E. Van Hook, Moorhead, secretary. The last named attended the meeting of the national association last March, and reported in favor of the club affiliating with the national. The plan was indorsed and preliminary action taken. The meeting closed with a banquet, at which there was a large attendance.

BROADER

Policy By Doctors Toward Newspapers Is Urged.

Quincy, Ill., May 22.—Dr. J. W. Pettitt, of Ottawa, made a strong plea in favor of more liberal ideas regarding newspapers and advertising before the Illinois Medical society, which is in session here, with about 500 delegates in attendance.

The first paper of the day was by Dr. Pettitt, under the title of "What Should be the Attitude of the Profession Towards the Secular Press."

Dr. Pettitt said in part: "No agency is more potent for good or evil than the newspaper, which each day reaches fully 90 per cent of reading public. By far the larger part of the public, especially busy people, get about all their general information from the newspaper. The newspaper is the only printed source of information, for fully one-half of the reading public. It is the purveyor as well as the conveyor of information and the average editor is actuated by as praiseworthy motives in his field of activity as we are in ours.

"If the average newspaper medical item is frequently ludicrous, is it the fault of the editor who does the best he can to get this information, or of the physician, who through the wrong application of a correct principle in regarding all newspaper mention of imself or his profession as advertising, refuse to co-operate with the editor in giving the people what they want, and what they have a right to demand, through the only practical agency made available to them.

"Is is not wrong application of a correct principle when we make it unethical for a physician to discuss medical topics in the secular press, or cast suspicion upon him because his name happens to appear in a newspaper column? This unreasonable criticism and censorshi has been carried to an absurd extent.

"We deprecate the ignorance and duplicity of the public in being deceed by quacks, dosing themselves with useless and injurious patent nostrums, and rallying to the support of irrational medical fads. We complain of the secular press for inserting patent medicine and quack advertisements, for giving publicity to medical fads, for which they receive pay, and then refuse to avail ourselves of this same agency for the dissemination of the truth, without money and without price, because of an unreasonable prejudice. There is nothing more useful and necessary than to remove ignorance and misapprehension than authentic information.

"Why should not we, who are the repositories of medical information, avail ourselves of the only channel through which the public can be reached? If the public is left to secure such information as it may from quack and patent medicine advertisements or fadists it is inconsistent for us to complain if that information is misleading. Neither should we refuse to give it to it through the only agency by which it will reach it—namely, the press."

WANT TO HANDLE IT

Northwestern Grain Interests Anxious to Get Canadian Wheat.

Commissioner Staples Discusses Sentiment of Grain Men.

Regard It as Dangerous Competition to American Wheat.

"The grain interests of Minneapolis and Duluth are becoming more and more desirous of taking some steps whereby Canadian wheat can be handled in those markets," said State Railway and Warehouse Commissioner C. F. Staples, who came up from St. Paul this morning. "The consolidated sentiment of the trade seems to be that the Canadian wheat is a competitor with American wheat under present conditions to a worse degree than it would be under a reciprocal arrangement or a working milling-in-bond arrangement.

"The difficulty is that the price of wheat is determined by the figure at which the surplus production of the world can be sold in the Liverpool market. That surplus is contributed to by the Canadian wheat, which the tariff prevents American grain men from dealing in or American millers from grinding, just the same as it is contributed to by North Dakota or Minnesota wheat sold from Duluth. The position of the trade is that the maintenance of this tariff line prevents this country from selling, shipping, grinding or absorbing any of this Canadian wheat. In other words, while the Canadian wheat is an even more dangerous competitor of Northwestern wheat under present conditions than it would be if allowed to enter this country freely in competition with Northwestern wheat, it is held that this country is allowed to get no advantage whatever from its traffic.

"The chief obstacle to milling-in-bond is that it places the miller that attempts it under the obligation of shipping out of the country every speck of product from the imported wheat. This system makes it so cumbersome that it is practically impossible to engage in milling-in-bond as a business. Then at present it is said that the offal can be sold to decidedly better advantage in this country than it can be disposed of abroad.

"Of course, you understand that I am taking no position in this matter, but am simply stating the position that seems to have developed in the trade."

Referring to official matters, Mr. Staples said that the commission is now engaged in collecting evidence bearing on the question of the proposition to reduce all passenger rate charges in this state to 2 cents a mile.

"We shall have a hearing on the subject on June 24," said Mr. Staples. "It is hoped that at this hearing anybody that has tangible information bearing on the subject will present the same. We want the fullest possible light, so that we can act fairly.

"No action has been taken in the matter of the deputy grain inspector here against whom charges of improperly taking money were preferred. The evidence has not been written up or submitted to us, and there seems to be no particular haste, in view of the fact that the official is now out of the service.

"The charges preferred by the Standard Scale company that officials in our service had been guilty of collusion with the Fairbanks Scale company to bring about the substitution of Fairbanks for Standard scales at the Great Northern steel elevator have been withdrawn, but not in a manner to satisfy us. We feel that after the charges made by the Standard company, judging from what informal inquiry we have made into the matter the Standard company should, if it withdraws its charges, withdraw them in a manner that frees the officials from the onus of the charges.

"When the charges were preferred by the offended scale company we looked into the matter quite thoroughly, and came to the conclusion that the employes of the Standard company had been at fault in the matter. There is no question in our mind but that the Standard scales, which were first installed at the Great Northern elevators, were either defective or installed in a defective way. At any rate, it is fair to believe that as set up the scales were incapable of weighing fairly and accurately.

"Our impression is that the matter has been misrepresented to the Standard company by its employes. The company itself may be sincere in its protestations, but if it is such facts as we have been able to become conversant with indicate that its position is based on an imperfect comprehension of the matter."

HIGH WATER

Several women and children were rescued from trees and house roofs. One family was saved by cutting through the roof. G. W. Cooper, a hotel proprietor, at the risk of his life, swam to a tree and rescued two women and a baby. George Noy, a cook rescued the wife of a hotel proprietor from a house in midstream. One bridge was washed away and others are in bad shape. On the east side of the square and on East street the water ran into stores, damaging stocks.

WILL YOU ALLOW

A Relative or Friend to Pass Into the Dark Valley Simply Because the Doctor Desires to Cling to Medical Etiquette?

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Is Daily Saving Precious Lives After Pronounced Failures of Physicians.

The months just passed of the present year have brought bereavement and dark clouds of sorrow to many homes in our land. Fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers have been forever removed by the grim reaper, death. The large majority of such could have been saved had their friends given them Paine's Celery Compound, instead of the worthless medicines the sick ones were forced to swallow.

In many families a too lavish obedience to medical dictation kept the true life saver from the sick and dying ones. Past records of marvelous cures and victories wrought by Paine's Celery Compound were ignored by medical men; in a word, it was unprofessional in their estimation to introduce the life giving Compound.

Ah! Remorse is now doing its quiet but effective work, and those most closely interested are suffering for their neglect.

Will you, dear reader, allow some dear relative or friend to pass from life without making an effort to save the perishing one by Paine's Celery Compound? The virtues and powers of Dr. Phelps' prescription are wondrously far reaching and mighty. Even though your friends have suffered long, and have come to that point where the physician is helpless to save, even then, there is a blessed hope if Paine's Celery Compound is used.

The desperate cases cured in the past and the number of precious lives saved, is the bright, the living proof, that Paine's Celery Compound makes sick people well.

AT WEST DULUTH

The annual banquet of the Irving school alumni, of West Duluth, will be held at the school building tomorrow evening, beginning at 8 o'clock. This is an event that the former members of the school look forward to with great pleasure every year, and it is promised that the affair this season will be no less entertaining than those formerly held. The alumni has already held about seven annual banquets.

There are about 150 members in the alumni, and the committee in charge of the banquet expects that a large percentage will be present tomorrow evening. Regrets will be sent by the out-of-town alumni.

George Gilbert, president of the Alumni association, will act as toastmaster. There has been a number of toasts assigned, among them the following:

"The Irving School," by Mrs. Ely, former principal of the school; "The Alumni," by Mrs. Mallory; "The Graduating Class," by Miss Dwyer, one of the Irving school teachers.

MRS. COCHRANE DEAD.

Mrs. Mabel Cochrane, aged 35 years, wife of former Alderman Robert Cochrane, died at her home, 229 Fifty-ninth avenue west, at 3 o'clock this morning, after a lingering illness. The decedent's maiden name was Mabel Seaton, and she was born in Patosi, Wis., where her father is now living. She was united in marriage to Robert Cochrane, in her home town, and they came to West Duluth to reside about twelve years ago.

Mrs. Cochrane was a member of the Presbyterian church in West Duluth, and while in good health was one of its most earnest workers. She was a lovable woman and had a wide circle of friends, not only in this part of the city, but in Duluth, who will sincerely mourn her loss, and who extend their deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

Besides a husband, she leaves three daughters, whose ages range from 2 to 11 years. News of Mrs. Cochrane's demise was wired to her father in Patosi this morning and, pending word from him, no funeral arrangements have yet been made.

ILLNESS WAS BRIEF.

Miss Vennie Dass, the 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dass, who resides at the foot of Sixty-third avenue west, died at an early hour this morning of pneumonia. Her death comes as a shock to her many friends, as she attended church Sunday evening and was apparently in good health. She was sick but three days, the disease rapidly developing into a fatal type in spite of the efforts of the physicians. The funeral arrangements will not be completed until this evening.

WAY TO USE IT.

A West Duluth man, who declares that he has considerable experience in the telephone business, has formulated the following directions for using a 'phone, which he will have printed and distributed among his friends:

"Take a chair, take down the receiver, then read a novel, essay or a newspaper; ask for Central; wait, wait, wait, wait; wait again; have patience, don't lose your temper; go out on the corner, catch the next car, go to the other man's office and close your conversation."

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Members of the Dynamite club claim that the question raised regarding the club rooms as a place of safety was forever settled yesterday afternoon, when two West Duluth ladies made haste to seek the rooms for protection during a mix-up that occurred on the walk in front of the building, where two men were settling some personal differences.

Mrs. George Nitterauer is very low. Grave fears were expressed this morning whether she would live through the day.

J. W. Fowler, representing the Brewer-Knapp Lumber company, of Ashland, Wis., was a business caller here today.

Mrs. G. W. Smith, of 108 Sixty-first avenue west, is quite sick.

West Duluth real estate agents claim that the starting of the repair work on the blast furnace has already had a beneficial effect in stimulating the demand for property in this portion of the city. Parties are said to be negotiating at the present time for sites in the vicinity of the blast furnace on which to erect boarding houses.

LOUBET

Royally Received By the Russians at St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, May 22.—President Loubet arrived here this morning from Tsarskoe-Selo and was accorded an enthusiastic and popular reception. The city was largely decorated and men, women and children thronged the street, waving tri-colored flags and wearing Franco-Russian alliance souvenirs of all descriptions. The French president was met at the station by the mayor of St. Petersburg, who offered him the customary bread and salt and heartily bade him welcome. M. Loubet, in reply, said he entertained no doubt of the cordiality of his reception in any part of Russia, as he knew the hearts of Russia and France beat in unison. Deputations of ladies presented M. Loubet with baskets of flowers for transmission to Mme. Loubet. After inspecting the guard of honor, M. Loubet proceeded to the cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul. He was acclaimed along the route and followed by enormous crowds.

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

THESE ARE YOUR SYMPTOMS:

On account of its frightful hideousness, Syphilitic Blood Poison is commonly called the king of venereal diseases. It may be hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it, the disease may manifest itself in the form of scrofula, eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, eruptions or copper-colored spots on face or body, little ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, swollen tonsils, falling out of the hair or eyebrows, and finally a leprous like decay of the flesh and bones.

OUR ELECTRO-MEDICAL TREATMENT

improves the patient from the beginning. Our special treatment for Blood Poison is practically the result of my life work, and is endorsed by the best physicians of America and Europe. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicines of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity. Soon every sign and symptom disappears completely and forever. The blood, the tissue, the flesh, the bones, and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health, and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life.

We do not treat all diseases, but we cure all we treat; we treat men only and cure them to stay cured. We cure to stay cured Varicocele, Stricture, Lost Manhood, Atrophied or Shrunken Organs, Syphilitic Blood Poison, Nervo Sexual Debility, Rupture, Kidney, Urinary Diseases, and all associate diseases and weaknesses of men. We charge nothing for private counsel and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men, and to which countless tongues gladly testify? IS SHORT OF RAILS

Stevens Mine Development Is Delayed From That Cause.

Operations at the Pioneer --Relative Shipments of Ore.

Stevenson Mines Output Will Be About 1,500,000 Tons.

Development work on the Stevens mine of the Minnesota Iron company group on the Mesaba range is delayed by inability to get rails for the tracks on the property and steam shovels. Both are expected very soon, and it is the intention to push the work of removing the surface as rapidly as possible. The mine location has been cleared of timber, and the Duluth & Iron Range has built a spur into the mine. This is the big property leased during the hard times on a 15-cent royalty. It is said that early estimates of the amount of ore were quite inadequate, and it is claimed by some that the Stevens will prove to be the largest mine on the Mesaba range. Estimates in some instances of the deposit go well above 50,000,000 tons. The development work is under the direction of Superintendent M. S. Hawkins of the Mountain Iron district, and in direct charge of Capt. Wasson.

Superintendent Trezona of the Pioneer mine is in the city on business connected with repairs to the hoisting machinery at the Pioneer. The drum of the hoisting engine in the one shaft in operation broke, causing a cessation of hoisting operations for a few days. The Pioneer is considered one of the best mines the Steel corporation operates. Its holdings cover 160 acres, against eighty at the Chandler, and the property is said by some to represent $10,000,000 worth of ore in the ground at present prices. There is only one shaft in working condition at present. Some progress has been made on a second shaft, but not enough to hoist from it. The Pioneer is operated under a 500,000-ton minimum lease, and it is said to be the program of the Steel corporation to ship 650,000 tons from it this year. The accident is a small matter and will not interfere materially with the volume of ore that will be sent out. Shipments will continue from the stockpile while the shaft is idle.

There is said to be nothing new in the plans of the Steel corporation regarding relative shipments over the Duluth & Iron Range road and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern since they were outlined in a general way before the opening of the season. It will be remembered that because it was apparent that the Iron Range would have more traffic to handle than the Missabe the latter leased some of its cars to the Iron Range last year, and that the same conditions existing this year the same policy was pursued. These conditions are said to be due first of all to the fact that the Iron Range has a traffic of 2,000,000 tons from the Vermilion range, which the Missabe does not share at all. Then it has the Fayal mine, with 1,500,000 tons shipments. Then there are the Pickands-Mather properties, which all forward their ore over the Iron Range. Some of the Sellwood properties, including the Hale and Kanawaka, also ship over the Iron Range. The aggregate result is that the Iron Range draws a great deal of traffic on the Mesaba range from the independent shippers, while the Missabe has very few. As far as the volume of shipments for the period covered by the tug strike are concerned, it is said that the Missabe has been doing better considering its season's plans than the Iron Range has. This is due to a better supply of boats, which would indicate that the Steel corporation, far from seeking to divert its traffic via Two Harbors in order to help out the tug company, is trying to give the best supply of tonnage to the Duluth docks.

All sorts of estimates of the probable production of the Stevenson mine have been heard this spring. One guess of the output of this big property of Corrigan, McKinney & Co. was as high as 1,800,000 tons. It is learned on good authority, however, that much of the talk on this subject has been guesswork. It is likely that the season's record at the Stevenson will not exceed 1,500,000 tons, and this is considered a good piece of work, considering the lie of the ore deposit and the difficulty of pushing steam shovel operations on it. Much work was done last winter with the idea of improving the form of the pit with regard to the ore bed, including the widening of the opening to the pit, so that more track could be laid into it from the railroad outside, but the benefits of these improved facilities have not yet been entirely realized upon.

The Oliver-Snyder mine is nearly ready to begin shipping. Superintendent James Trezona has had considerable trouble with water in the first shaft sunk, and as a result it is being used solely for the pumps, while No. 2 shaft will be used for hoisting the ore. Sand was struck instead of ore in the first shaft at a depth of 115 feet, and the water seeped through the sand. In the second shaft no sand was encountered, and the shaft bottomed in ore at 97 feet. The hoisting plant is already in place. The ore from this property will be used by the Oliver-Snyder steel works at Sharpsville, Pa., and other Eastern points. It will ship over the Missabe road.

The development of the Croxton, one of the seven new mines Joseph Sellwood is opening, near Buhl, has begun under the direction of Superintendent Harry Thomas. The Morrow mine, belonging to the same group, is being stripped by Halverson, Richards & Co. Drifting from the shaft at the Penrose has begun and it is expected it will ship by the first of the month.

Superintendent N. Trewhella, formerly of the Stevenson, has taken charge of the Agnew, one of the new mines acquired by the Deering people. Railway facilities are close at hand.

GOLF CLUB.

Two Handsome Trophies Presented--Improvements at Grounds.

C. H. Bagley of F. D. Day & Co. has presented to the Duluth Golf club two trophy cups to be contested for by the members of the club during the summer series of tournaments. The cups are miniature loving cups and are of solid silver. They are very pretty, and will be known as the Bagley cups. Proper inscriptions will be engraved on them.

Considerable interest is expected to be developed this season over the team contests of the club. A team of ten members is formd through competition for membership. This competition is continued after the formation of the team in a sort of progressive manner for places on the team in order of the shown skill of the player.

The Superior club also has a team, and contests for the championship will probably be played between the two during the season.

The new dining room that has been built on the club grounds this spring will be thrown open for the first time next Saturday afternoon, when the usual Saturday tea will be enlarged into the proportions of a reception in honor of the event.

A new tennis court has been arranged on the club grounds also, and it will now be possible for club members to divert themselves with either tennis or golf. As the former, through the popularity of ping pong the past winter, promises to become much more of a popular sport this summer than it has been for some years back, it is quite likely that the tennis court will be quite largely patronized.

The membership of the club has now reached about 150. The grounds cover an area of eighty acres. The course, which has been spoken of as one of the finest in the county embraces the standard nine holes. Fifteen men are now employed in improving the course and grounds.

One of the recent acquisitions is a golf clock.

HOPING FOR IT.

Cass County Anxious For the Passage of Morris Bill.

E. L. Warren, of Walker, was in the city yesterday on his return from Washington, where he has been one of the little band of Cass county hustlers that have been advocating the Morris bill for the opening of the Chippewa Indian reservation lands to settlement.

The outlook for the bill is very good," said Mr. Warren last night at the St. Louis. "It is now up to the house, and we have every hope that it will receive favorable action there before very long. We are just waiting for the bill to get through to see our Cass county towns blossom out with booms all around. The opening of the Chippewa lands to settlement, containing as they do thousands of acres of valuable agricultural lands, will be of immense importance to the entire Northwest, and as every foot of the territory is directly tributary to Duluth this city will profit by it very largely."

A. G. Bernard is still in Washington, keeping up the propaganda in behalf of the Morris bill.

There Is Help at Hand.

In another column we present the glad news that our home druggists, Max Wirth, 13 West Superior street; Lyceum pharmacy, 431 West Superior street; Fred Scott & Co., 7 West Superior street; William A. Abbett, 201 West Superior street; Emile Peterson, 1923 and 2231 West Superior street, and S. J. Nygren, 2222 North Fifty-fifth avenue west, have placed on sale a positive and sure cure, to stay cured, for catarrh of the head, nose, throat, lungs or stomach; all poisons of the blood; rheumatism—acute and chronic; eczema, the itch-king of the blood. This remedy is Mederine, the only treatment that cures these diseases of the blood in America today. All the other "cures" are simply "recommended." A course of the Mederine treatment is guaranteed to cure or money refunded. Drop into druggist's and talk the matter over. It will not cost anything to find out.

KICKING.

Considerable Developes Over Order to Clear Sidewalks.

The notification from the department of public works to have Superior street merchants clear the sidewalks of advertising obstructions is causing a great deal of comment and considerable kicking.

Some of the merchants claim that the city officers are interfering with their private business.

The officials, however, say that such is not their intention. They claim that the merchants in many instances have abused the privilege of having neatly lettered signs in front of their places of business.

One instance of this came up yesterday. A man that has paid taxes in Duluth for the past twenty-five years walked into the office of the board of public works and registered the first complaint that he had ever made during his long residence here.

It was about a grocery store that occupied over three feet of the sidewalk space with a display of vegetables. Such complaints are not infrequent.

The greatest complaints against the order of the board of public works comes from the smaller clothing stores—the stores that have second hand goods on exhibition on the sidewalk.

These smaller merchants say that the sidewalk exhibit is to them what a window display is to the larger merchants.

The police as well as others, however, are anxious to see all second hand goods removed from the walks as the exhibits are recognized as great petty larceny promoters. Just about half the petty larceny cases with which the police have to deal can be traced directly to these exhibits.

The board of public works also aims to remove barber signs that have been boxed around telegraph poles. It is claimed these signs take up entirely too much space.

LACK COW SENSE.

People Get Wilful.

A cow or horse or even a dog will refuse to eat or drink what the animal knows to be harmful, but mankind wilfully persist in pouring in coffee even after having been fully assured that it is steadily killing him. Once in a while they wake up and do the sensible thing.

A lady says: "Why will people wait as long as I did when it is so easy to save oneself the suffering caused by coffee drinking? After using coffee several years I discovered that I was breaking down nervously. I consulted several doctors, but in spite of everything, steadily grew worse.

One physician advised me to quit coffee and I tried quitting by the use of will power, but every time it was a miserable failure.

My stomach was in dreadful shape and I was unable to sleep at night, nervous prostration set in and I became barely able to drag about.

"One day while visiting a minister's wife, a motherly old lady, she proposed to give me a cup of coffee, the kind she had been using three times a day for three years. So she brought out a cup of the most fragrant, delicious beverage. It was coffee and it was not coffee. I tried it and was eager to know how it was made.

"She said: 'Five years ago I was affected much as you are, but I quit drinking coffee, and began using Postum Food Coffee, and that produced the result you see and restored me to health.'

"She said a lot more and when I went home I got a box of Postum and began using it. Such a soothing effect took place and I began sleeping nights and felt a relief from my awful nervous tension. Gradually and surely I got well and now I feel as strong and healthy as a woman should at my age, with all my old-time energy restored.

"I earnestly entreat all coffee drinkers to change to Postum. What is the use of suffering day and night because of some paltry coffee when one has but to leave it off and use Postum to be well, and I think anyone will agree with me that health is worth everything else; money, property or fame." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

A HEAVY DECREASE

Discouraging Reports on the Red River Valley Wheat Acreage.

Van Dusen-Harrington Reports From Number of Counties.

May Mean a Decrease of 35,000,000 Bushels In the Yield.

Crop conditions in the Red River valley continue to be of much concern to grain men and the conviction is now general that the reduction in area of wheat sown is very large. The Van Dusen-Harrington company has just issued a report of conditions based on reports received from wet districts and it confirms the previous predictions that not half the usual area would be sown to wheat this year.

The different counties reported from and the predictions are as follows:

Argyle, Marshall county, Minn.: Wheat area 25 per cent of last year's; flax, two and a half times larger, and barley one and a half times larger.

Warren, Marshall county, Minn.: Wheat area, 70 to 75 per cent of last year; flax, increase, 25 per cent; corn, increase, 100 per cent; barley, increase, 50 per cent.

Angus, Polk county, Minn.: Wheat area, decrease of 50 per cent; flax, corn and barley, increase 100 per cent.

Crookston, Clay county, Minn.; Wheat 75 per cent of last year's area.

Grafton, Walsh county, N. D.: Wheat area 25 per cent of last year's. Not more than 50 per cent of cultivated area will be sown crop.

Hillsboro, Trail county, N. D.: Wheat area, decrease 50 per cent; flax and oats, increase 25 per cent, barley, increase, 300 per cent.

Grandin, Cass county, N. D.: Wheat area not more than 20 per cent of last year.

Fargo estimates that 35 per cent of last year's average is sown in the valley.

The Daily Commercial Record in discussing this report says:

"In view of these reports and others of like terror, it is interesting to figure out about what they mean.

"The counties affected in North Dakota have a normal wheat area of 2,200,000 acres and those in Minnesota 1,300,000 acres, but not over one-half of the total is in the valley proper. Say 2,000,000 acres affected, or to be liberal, 2,500,000 acres; and the concensus of opinion seems to be that not over 40 to 50 per cent of this normal wheat area will be seeded to wheat. At 40 per cent it means a decreased area in the valley of 1,500,000 acres. It is generally assumed that the Northwest, aside from that section, has seeded about 10 per cent less wheat than last year.

"This would make another 1,500,000 acres decrease, but it is probable that due allowance is not made for increased area under cultivation, and if the total decrease outside of the valley be figured at 1,000,000 acres, it is probably outside the limit.

"The average for the Northwest last year was around fourteen bushels, indicating a possible decrease of 35,000,000 bushels."

The crop report for North Dakota for the week ending Monday last, was as follows:

"The fore part of last week was very favorable for seeding, which was in progress in all sections, but was again stopped by heavy rains the latter part of the week.

"On high land wheat seeding is finished in nearly all portions of the state, but on low lands, especially in the valleys of the Red, Sheyenne and James rivers, and their tributaries, much of the ground is now too wet to wet to work will be sown to flax later, if weather permits.

"Oats, barley and other small grain, except flax, are being sown in all sections, and land prepared for corn.

Warmer weather the past week caused a very rapid germination of all grain that had been sown, and much of it is now up, and without exception, looks very fine. Grass has also made rapid progress.

"It will require about three days of warm dry weather before most of the low land will be in condition to work, although some of the low land will be in condition to work, although some of it is covered with water and cannot be reached for a much longer period."

The South Dakota report is as follows:

"The temperature during the week averaged slightly above the normal. It was comparatively cool the fore part of the week, but warm the latter part, and there was much cloudiness. There were fair to generous and well distributed rains. The soil is amply moist generally, and some lowland fields are too wet to work in a number of scattered localities.

"Seeding operations, except of flax and millet, are practically completed.

"The weather conditions were, on the whole, very favorable for the healthy development and growth of oats, barley, spelts, winter and spring rye, and especially for wheat. These crops are reported in very thrifty and satisfactory condition generally. The stand of wheat is very even, the plant is well rooted, and the general prospect is very encouraging. In the Southeastern counties wheat, oats, and barley are beginning to stool out nicely, and winter rye is jointing. All vegetation made rapid growth under the influence of the warm weather that prevailed the latter part of the week.

"Corn planting is general and has made fairly good progress, but on low and flat lands was somewhat retarded by too wet soil. This work is nearing completion in some Southeastern localities, and the early planted corn is coming up in the Middle and Southern counties east of the Missouri river.

Flax growing progressed fairly well and the seed has germinated promptly and evenly. They early sown is well up and in thrifty condition. Millet sowing is now in progress.

VALUABLE

Interchange of Courtesies Between Commercial Clubs Being Arranged.

Secretary Preston is preparing to arrange exchange courtesies for members of the Commercial club with other similar organizations throughout the country, but chiefly in the Northwest, where Duluth business men would have the most occasion to make use of these privileges.

By virtue of an arrangement of this kind the Duluth club will extend the privileges of membership, as far as the club rooms are concerned, to all members of other organizations with which such an arrangement is entered into. A resident membership card in the Duluth club, on the other hand, will afford entree to the clubs in other cities receiving this privilege the same as if the Duluthian were a member of the other club.

The effect is to make the Duluth club member practically a non-resident member of organizations in other cities that are parties to the agreement. The arrangement will be of particular importance and convenience when Duluth club members have occasion to run down to St. Paul or Minneapolis, or even more distant points.

For instance, a St. Paul Commercial club membership card is acceptable to the following organizations the same as if it were issued by the club whose accommodations are sought: Cincinnati Young Men's club, Philadelphia Manufacturer's club, San Francisco Merchants' club, and the following commercial clubs: Louisville, Indianapolis, St. Joe, Portland, Kansas City, Red Wing, Muscatine, Denver, Mobile, Omaha, Lincoln, Mankato, Dallas, Springfield, Ohio; Rochester, Minn.; Owatonna, Sioux City, New Ulm, Moline, Ill.; Fort Smith, Ark.; Washington, D. C.; Pierre, S. D.; Billings, Mont.; St. Cloud, Winona, Grand Forks, Crookston, La Crosse, Appleton, Wis., and Montgomery, Ala.

The Minneapolis club has an even longer list of cities on its exchange courtesies' list.

IN MICHIGAN.

Painter Trying to Save Time Fell Sixty Feet.

Hancock—To fall sixty feet and yet live was the thrilling experience of William Hughes, a painter employed on the new Masonic block here. In adjusting the scaffold, Hughes started to slide down the rope in order to raise the platform, but as he slipped over the roof the hook supporting the rope gave way and the painter dropped to the ground. In his flight Hughes turned half way around, struck on a shed, bounded five feet into the air, and then landed on the ground in almost a standing position, only sustaining a fracture of the leg below the knee. He explains that he started to come down the rope in order to save time.

The experiment of tramming by electricity has proved such a success that the Quincy Copper Mining company has placed an order for two additional electric locomotives, which will soon be in operation with others over half a mile underground. The locomotives are operated on the same principle as the trolley car, and, running at the rate of six miles an hour, can draw six cars loaded with copper rock with ease. With the two engines installed, making four in all, the mine will be able to handle a third more rock underground daily.

L'Anse—As she was seated under a tree enjoying a smoke, the clothing of Mrs. Mary Mongoose, an aged Indian woman, living at the mission at Assinins, near here, took fire, and before the flames were quenched she sustained burns from which she died. She had lighted her pipe and threw the burning match into the grass. The grass caught fire, and, as she was almost blind, the flames crept upon her and ignited her dress without being noticed. Neighbors responded to her screams, but too late to save her life.

Menominee—John Ferguson, a small boy, was struck in the face by a swift ball thrown by the first baseman and missed by the catcher. The blow knocked him senseless. His nose was split, his upper and lower lips cut and several teeth knocked out.

The shingle manufacturers of the Menominee river met to consider the demands made by the shingle weavers for a raise in wages. A committee of three was appointed to confer with the weavers. This committee decided to grant most of the demands. The strike of the lumber pilers in Marinette for a raise in wages from $1.75 to $2 a day has not affected the sawmill companies in this city, as no demand has been made here.

Sault Ste. Marie—Much local interest has been aroused by a mineral discovery announced by Louis Caulsey, who has been prospecting on the Michipicoten range. He says he has discovered three valuable properties, one gold, another graphite and the third cinnabar, the latter the source of mercury, about 100 miles north of the Canadian Soo. Causley recently made known his find to reputable people here who made an investigation and returned Wednesday. They say it is a good thing and will turn out right. They brought back with them splendid specimens of the three minerals. A company is being formed to work the property.

FATAL SLEEP ON TRACK.

MISS HOLMAN TO WED.

Was Once Engaged to Marry Signor Marconi.

London, May 22.—Miss Josephine Holman, formerly of Indianapolis, Ind., who at one time was engaged to marry Signor Marconi, of wireless telegraphy fame, and Eugene Noross, of Budapest, Hungary, were married at 12:30 p. m. today at St. Mary Abbot's church, Kensington, this city. The ceremony was performed in the presence of half a dozen friends and the bride's mother.

PASTOR'S WIFE

Will Preach During Her Husband's Vacation.

Muncie, Ind., May 22.—Mrs. George H. Sisson, wife of the pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, has been chosen by the congregation to supply the pulpit made vacant by a six weeks' vacation of her husband, and she has accepted. Mrs. Sisson, a little woman of 34, does not think she is doing anything unusual in supplying her husband's pulpit and does not relish too much publicity in connection with it. "It is merely something that all ministers' wives should do if they are capable of doing it," she said, "but many ministers' wives can do even more effective work in other ways."

Documents In the Beef Trust Case.

The temporary injunction asked by the government against the beef trust having been granted, the case will be tried on its merits at an early date. One of the sections of the complaint charges that in violation of the law to "protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies" the packers have engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to fix and maintain uniform prices. It also charges that meetings are held from time to time for the re-adjustment of these prices and that they restrain and curtail the shipment of meats in order to keep to these price agreements. It has been supposed that the government would find it difficult to prove the charges, but the Chicago Tribune has furnished some evidence that seems to supply the needed proof. On Sunday the Tribune printed a series of letters written by Armour & Co. from their Chicago headquarters which prove a series of definite trade agreements covering different scales of prices in different districts the territory being parceled out by explicit understanding. In short, the letters demonstrate in the most conclusive manner that the packers are in a trust, as that term is defined by the Sherman act of 1890. All of these letters, consisting of some thirty in number, were written since the beginning of the present year—nearly all of them being dated during the months of January and February when the country felt most the merciless grip of the packers' combine. How the Chicago paper secured the letters is not known, but it deserves credit for aiding the government's case.

Future of the Lesser Antilles.

The future of the islands of the Caribbean sea does not present a bright prospect from any point of view. As a matter of fact they seem to be doomed to extinction sooner or later. If they are not destroyed by volcanoes or hurricanes, their political condition is such that by reason of taxation and hostile tariff, which cut off the profits of the chief productions of the islands, that their commercial destruction is practically assured. According to Professor Hill of the United States geographical survery gloom overshadows the entire Lesser Antilles. "The Danish islands," says Professor Hill, "are allied to the Great Antilles and are not volcanic, and the only obstacle to their development, if they become annexed to the United States, will be hurrinaces. For many years the white people have been migrating from the islands of the Lesser Antilles, and those who remain are in the most pitiable condition of financial embarrassment. The blacks are utterly degenerate. I have shown the deplorable condition of these people in a book I wrote recently, called 'Cuba and Porto Rico, with Other Islands of the West Indies.'" The islands for which Professor Hill predicts such a gloomy future are all south of the Danish group, and are as follows, the governments that own the islands being given also, Saba, Dutch; St. Eustatius, Dutch; St. Christopher, British; Nevis, British; Montserrat, British, Guadeloupe, French; Dominica, British; Martinique, French; St. Lucia, British; St. Vincent, British; Grenadines, British; Grenada, British. In his publication, above referred to, Professor Hill quotes Hearn as saying of the inhabitants of Martinique: "People are born and buried in the same valley without ever seeing towns but a few hours' journey beyond their native hills, and distinct racial types are forming within three leagues of each other." Professor Hill writes: "Where the Latin predominates civilization is lacking, at least in methods of modern sanitation. In the countries in which the French habit has been implanted, Hayti, Martinique and Guadeloupe, there has resulted a more complete elimination of the Caucasian type than in either the English or the Spanish islands. The condition of the native whites, with some exceptions, is most unfortunate, and yet at the close of the last century no finer race existed than the whites of the West Indies, of whom were Hamilton, Dumas and the Empress Josephine. With the industrial ruin these people have rapidly decreased and their children are sent to more progressive parts of the world."

THE COAL STRIKE.

The prospects of an early settlement of the anthracite coal strike are not very bright. It is said the operators have determined never to yield to the miners' demands and will fight it out until the miners are starved into submission. All overtures of the officials of the National Civic Federation to employ their good offices towards securing peace have been rejected, and the operators flatly refuse to submit the points in dispute to arbitration.

There are now 114,000 miners out of employment, together with 31,000 other workers whose duties are dependent upon the coal product. There are 357 collieries involved, all of which are idle and the pay roll of $3,000,000 a month is suspended. The monthly output of anthracite is 5,000,000 tons and only 4,000,000 tons are on hand, or not more than a four weeks' supply. This shortage encourages the strikers to hope for a speedy surrender by the operators, and they may be right on this point, although the apparently determined attitude of the operators does not encourage such a hope.

The demands of the workers seem reasonable. They are that the working day shall be eight hours, instead of ten, that the miners shall receive an advance of 5 per cent, that coal shall be weighed, that 2240 pounds shall constitute a ton and that the men shall have a representative at the weighing. There is nothing exorbitant in these demands, and the men have so far been patient and temperate in conduct. The operators, on the contrary, have been arbitrary and arrogant, refusing to make the slightest concession. Of course, it is not possible, without all the facts in the case, to reach an absolutely impartial judgment, but it should be remembered that the men asked for arbitration and Senator Hanna toiled for weeks to induce the mine owners to refer the question to the Civic Federation board of arbitration.

It is a deplorable strike, not only as respects those directly conected with the coal mining business, but because of the depressing effect upon related industries. While the strike is now confined to the anthracite region, there is grave danger that, if prolonged it will cause a sympathetic strike by the bituminous coal workers.

THE ELKINS BILL.

As the present session of congress draws gradually to a close the probabilites of legislation to strengthen the hands of the interstate commerce commission grow beautifully less. The Elkins bill which is before congress would make a substantial difference in the status of the interstate commerce commisson; it now has authority only in a case where specific complaint is made, that complaint served on the carrier, and after a hearing on notice, full opportunity to disclose the facts. The proposed bill would give the commission authority to make an order respecting rates only after such an investigation, but while now the commission can only say, at its close, that the thing complained of is wrong, and that the carrier must desist. It would, under the Elkins bill, have authority to say what the carrier should do in the future—what rate he should substitute for the rate complained of, if that is found to be unlawful. The first question, then, involved is what order the commission shall have authority to make, while the other concerns the effect of its order, and how it shall be enforced and reviewed.

Under the present law an order of desistance which the commission may make is not obligatory upon the railroads; they need do nothing more than wait till a suit is brought for its enforcement. Under the Elkins bill, it is proposed to impose penalties for not complying with an order, leaving the carriers to file a bill to stay it. Now, they can wait till the suit is brought, and then defend it; under the proposed plan they would have to begin the suit themselves. And still the difference is not so radical as might be supposed, because under the present law, when a bill is filed to enforce an order of the commission, its findings of fact are assumed to be prima facie correct, the commission thus goes into court with a prima facie case against the carrier, and the burden of proof is on him, just as it would remain under the proposed plan.

This legislation would relieve the commission of the rather awkward and inconsistent attitude of passing upon the oringinal question in a judicial way and then turning around as a prosecutor to enforce its own determination. Moreover, if a carrier is put in a position where he must comply with an order, or himself go to the court to get rid of it, his desire to have the question settled would greatly expedite the litigation and lead to an earlier final decison. Without doubt a change should be made in the present laws, for in many cases the interstate commerce commission is practically a nonentity and its investigations are a mere waste of time. Give it some power to enforce its findings and it might prove of some use to the people.

OUR TRADE WITH CANADA.

In spite of the unfavorable tariff and the numerous threats made by our neighbors across our northern border, that unless more favor was shown them they would curtail their purchases in this country, Canada has continued to steadily increase her purchases from the United States. During the nine months of the present fiscal year, for which details are available, British North America showed a larger increase in its purchases from the United States than any other political division of America, as compared with those of the corresponding periods of 1900 and 1901. Our total exports to British North America increased from $69,763,595 in the nine months of 1900 and $77,894,004 in the corresponding months of the current year. To Mexico the increase during the same period compared with that of last year was but $2,000,000, and to the West Indies $1,000,000, while the Central American states showed a decrease of about $4,000,900 in their purchases from the United States during the nine months of the present fiscal year as compared with the same period of the preceding year.

The continued growth in our commerce with Canada is the more remarkable when it is remembered that ever since April, 1897, the United Kingdom has enjoyed tariff advantages in the Canadian market, the discrimination in her favor having ranged from 12½ per cent in that year to 33 1-3 per cent from and after July 1, 1900. Yet the exports from the United States to British North America have increased year by year, and our total exports to that market in the nine months under review are $11,235,409, or 16 per cent in excess of those for the same period of 1900, and $3,104,866, or 4 per cent in excess of those of the corresponding months of last year. A comparison of our exports to Canada in the first nine months of the present fiscal year with those of the corresponding months immediately preceding the reduction in the Canadian tariff in favor of Great Britain shows that our exports to Canada meantime have increased about 75 per cent, being for the earlier period $46,752,958 and for the nine months during with March, 1902, $80,999,004.

There is a simple explanation of the existing conditions. Canada finds American goods superior to those of Great Britain, and in addition to that she secures immediate delivery. Canada is a natural customer of the United States and will always be so, and our trade relations with that country would be greatly increased by a liberal measure of reciprocity.

A great disaster is foreseen if the president attempts to realize the ambition credited to him by the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald in this paragraph: "President Roosevelt has an ambition. It is to become a clever and successful extemporaneous speaker. He delivered his pretty little address at Columbia college on the occasion of the installation of Dr. Butler without any preparation at all, and is highly delighted with the success which he achieved at that time. The president realizes that during the next few years he will be compelled to do a great deal of talking, and he hopes to cultivate the art of thinking on his feet, thus avoiding the irksome labor of preparing everything in advance." The president should remember, however, that a man's feet are a long distance from his head. Speaking without preparation is dangerous, especially for a president seeking a second term.

Following an example set a few years ago in Cleveland, a botanical club at St. Louis has adopted a system of city ornamentation which promises to have striking results. Flower seeds are to be distributed free to children, and a diploma given at the end of the year to those who have been most successful in their use. The mayor is to sign the diplomas, which will indicate that the holders are worthy of reward for aiding in beautifying their city. Last year in Cleveland free seeds went into 30,000 homes, and, including those planted about schools, 170,000 packages of seeds were used. Such a movement could be profitably started in almost any municipality, not excepting Duluth.

It is announced that no charges will be made for space in the World's fair exhibit buildings at St. Louis to those who wish to install exhibits. Power will be supplied without cost and transportation will be undertaken by the management, including carloads of freight, from one point of the grounds to another. Exhibitors will also have the free use of derricks and hoisting machines. The most favorable freight tariff possible will be made with transportation lines The St. Louis World's fair will be the easiest ever known for exhibitors.

Bishop Leonard, of the Protestant Episcopal church, Salt Lake City, expresses the more or less valuable opinion that the Mormon church is a good institution, and ought not to be blamed because it is "more industrious than other churches." Moreover, he avers that polygamy is not now flourishing under the protection of the Mormon church. He indeed says: "The church has given its word that it is not fostering polygamy, and I think it should be taken at its word."

While being shown the sights of Chicago by the mayor of that city, M. Cambon, the French ambassador, expressed his thanks for the mayor's kindness. "But," he added, "I am sorry so to cockroach on your time. "Oh," answered the mayor, "don't think of that. But you don't mean cockroach, M. Cambon; it's encroach, you mean." "Oh, is it? I see—a difference in gender."

MAY EVENING.

The breath of springtime at this twilight hour
Comes through the gathering glooms,
And bears the stolen sweets of many a flower
Into my silent rooms.

Where hast thou wandered, gentle gale, to find
The perfumes thou dost bring?
By brooks, that through the wakening meadows wind,
Or brink of rushy spring?

Or woodside, where, in little companies,
The early wild flowers rise,
Or sheltered lawn, where, 'mid encircling trees,
May's warmest sunshine lies?

Now sleeps the humming bird, that, in the sun,
Wandered from bloom to bloom;
Now, too, the weary bee, his day's work done,
Rests in his waxen room.

Now every hovering insect to his place
Beneath the leaves hath flown;
And, through the long night hours, the flowery race

O'er the pale blossoms of the sassafras
And o'er the spice bush spray,
Among the opening buds, thy breathings pass,
And come embalmed away.

Yet there is sadness in thy soft caress,
Wind of the blooming year!
The gentle presence, that was wont to bless
Thy coming, is not here.

Go, then; and yet I bid thee not repair,
Thy gathering sheets to shed,
Where pine and willow, in the evening air,
Sigh o'er the buried dead.

Pass on to homes where cheerful voices sound,
And cheerful looks are cast,
And where thou wakest, in thine airy round,
No sorrow of the past.

Refresh the languid student pausing o'er
The learned page apart,
And, he shall turn to con his task once more
With an encouraged heart.

Bear thou a promise, from the fragrant sward,
To him who tills the land,
Of springing harvests that shall yet reward
The labors of his hand.

And whisper, everywhere, that Earth renews
Her beautiful array,
Amid the darkness and the gathering mews,
For the return of day.

A Powerful Trust.

New York Press: A powerful and uncompromising trust is the combination of manufacturers of photographic materials. On the ground that amateur photography is a luxury, this organization operates in restrain of trade to an extent hardly dreamed of by other industrial combinations. Its tendency is to monopolize. Its word is law to 95 per cent of the retail dealers, cowardly little fellows that sell you a dozen sheets of paper, three ounces of ready-made developer, half a pound of hypo, a roll of films or vial of toning solution. Let one dare to handle a new paper not made by the trust! It is notified to him immediately that if he does not drop it he will be put out of business. He drops it.

Must Keep Off the Grass.

Aunt Dinah

Tells About the Great Texas Storm.

By Martha S. Gielow.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

"Ef people wou' pay 'tention to dey dreams," Aunt Dinah remarked, in answer to a question about the great storm, "dey wou' be saved et lot uv trouble. I saw all dat water an' all dat storm in er vision er week befo' it cum, an' I wuz warned ter leave de city an' go er way. But, lak de woman in de Bible what tarried ter hun' honey, I got washed er way an' kilt. I told Miss Lizzie what I done dreamed, an' de mornin' uv de flood she say ter me, 'Aun' Dina,' she say, 'hit luks lak yo dream gwine cum true.' Dey is er mighty big storm comin' up,' she say, but dar ain' no danger uv us washing er way,' she say, 'lak you dreamed.'

"'I don' know 'bout dat, Miss Lizzie,' I say. 'I ben tole ter leave Galveston, an' I ain' mindin' de warnin', an' I don' know whut gwine happen—de Lawn don' sen' dreams for nothin'.'

"Well, honey, I wuz tryin' ter ten ter my wuck, but all de time I hyar somen sey ter me, 'Dina, Dina, take keer uv d storm.' I looked out de window at de clouds risin' an' bimeby de rain drops 'gun ter splash ergins' de windu glasses, an' de win' 'gun ter blow harder an' harder, twell de shutter blin's slam so hard dey broke de pains in de winders at ter pieces. Still Miss Lizzie didn't seem skeered, an' when Marse Sam comed home fer lunch dey bofe walked out tuger, way down ter de bay to watch de water rise.

"'Aun' hit wuz er sight, too. I tuck li'l Willie an' de baby an' went down ter de beach an' looked at it, too, an' den we all comed along back ter de house. As we comed back we met some of de neighbors an' dey stop Marse Sam an' say ter 'im, 'Doctor, it's er mighty good thing dat yo' house is so fer from de beach an' so high up.' 'Yes,' say Marse Sam, 'we is putty safe, an' we'll be glad ter have you come in, Mr. Williams, ef you wou' like.' Well, honey, Mr. Williams an' all 'is family comed right in wid us, an' dey all went in de parlor, an' pres'nly some mo' neighbors comed in, an' we had er house full in no time. By dat time Miss Lizzie' gun ter feel uneasy an' wuddin let Marse Sam go back ter de office, so dey all set dar talkin' and spectin' it wuz jes er bad storm. But I kep' er shakin' my haid ter myse'f an' er prayin', fer I felt dat er jedgmint uv some kin' wuz upon us.

"'I tuck de two chillen up ter de nusry on de top flo', but I couldn' tell 'um er tale ter save my life, an' somehow dey didn't seem to want me to. De baby set right still in my lap an' li'l Willie stood by me lookin' out de winder at de storm. Hit 'gun to get darker an' darker, an' I hyard or great roarin' noise like de ocean don' turnt lose. Byme by hit seem black as midnight, an' it nee'd to me dat de darkness mus' be lak de darkness what fell on de yearth at de crucifixion. I 'gun tu feel myse'f get sick wid 'erryfyin' feelin' lak my mammy tole me she felt dat time when des tars fell.

"'Pres'nly I hyard Miss Lizzie an' Marse Sam and de company comin' up stairs. Marse Sam comed all de way up ter de nusry an' say, 'Mammy Dina,' he say, 'de water is done reached de parlor flo',' he say, 'but I think we is safe up here,' he say. I never sed nuffin' kase I couldn't speak. I helt de baby close an' loked out de winder an' tho' de darkness an' de terrible win' an' rain we cud hyar de crashin' uv timber an' see de beautiful houses swirl roun' an' go ter pieces lak straws.

"'Our house 'gun to trimble an' shake, an' 'fo long Marse Sam comed er gin ter de nusry an' Miss Lizzie wid 'im an' all dey frien's—about twenty peoples. Miss Lizzie luked whiter den def. 'De water done reached de secon' flo',' she whispered ter me. Dar wuz three li'l boys whut helt ter dec har whar I set hol'in' de baby—dey wuz cryin' an' I 'members how pitiful hit sounded. Pres'nly er terrible crash comed, honey, an' tor' de roof right offen de top uv de house. Den de cold win' an' rain rushed down on us lak de fury of God sho' nuff. Miss Lizzie runned ter me an' tuck de baby, sayin' 'We shell die to'ger—we shall die to'ger.'

"'We all wuz clingin' tog'er by dat time. Marse Sam he kneit down an' sed 'Let us pray.' We all jined in de Lord's Prayer, but it didn't seem es ef de Lawd gwine hyar us dat time. De house 'gun ter shake an' trimble wuss den ever, an' pres'nly, honey, de water wuz riz ter third flo' an' we wuz floatin' along out tu sea lak er boat.

"'De roof gone, de stohm po'in in on us, an' de water risin' roun' us ev'y minit. Hit git so high dat Marse Sam tuck li'l Willie on his back, we wuz all up on de chais, an' ev'thing we could git on, but de house wuz turnin' fus' dis way, den dat way, an' sinkin' lower in de water all de time. Hit wuz so dark I cod'n see well, an' than' God I didn' see 'um die, but I hyard dey las' cry as de water riz over Miss Lizzie an' de baby, an' I hyard li'l Willie sey, 'Papa, is we goin' ter drown?' —de water wuz right up ter Marse Sam's mouf' he wuz holin de chile 'bove his haid, an' I hyard him sey, 'Dy will be done,' an' den I didn't hyar no mo'.

"'But I know'd dar wuz er room full uv dead chillen an' dead grown folks in de water techin' me ev'y now an' den wid dey col' han's. Hit seem mighty long—almos' er week, I don' recollic—I git weaker an' fainter, an' pres'nly I didn' know no mo' an' I coul'n see my dead chillen, ner hyar'um callin' tu me no mo'.

"'I don' recollic when de storm ceased, honey, an' I don' 'member when dey tuck me out uv de wreck. I don' 'member nuffin' twell I hyar somebody sey, 'Why, dis is Mammy Dina, what nuss fer MrMs. Parker.' An' den I hyar somebody say, 'How you feel now, mammy?'

"'I sey, 'Whar is I, honey?' an' dey sey, 'You is in de convent, Ann' Dina, wid de good sisters. You wuz washed in de third story winder,' dey say.

"'Whar is my chillen,' I say—whar is Miss Lizzie an' whar is Marse Sam?' Den dey never say nuffin', honey, an' I knowed dey wuz wid God, an' I knowed dat I wuz too big er sinner fer tu die. De Marster done let' me fer one mo' chance. But I'd er gone ef I could er save 'um, an' I'd er gone wid 'um ef He wou'l' er tuck me. Oh! My chillen! My chillen!"

Mammy Dina still lives to hold and comfort the motherless babies left by the storm in her faithful arms, but her mind has never recovered from the shock of the great storm, and she forever grieves for her Miss Lizzie and Mrse Sam, an' li'l Willie and the baby—all washed to sea—one of the families entirely annihilated by the flood, not even a plank nor a splinter of their beautiful home being left to mark the spot upon which it once stood.

Straw Hats Next.

Straw hat season's Here again,
Bringing comfort,
For the men;
Frowns are giving
Way to smiles
O'er the lightness
Of the tiles.

Through the seams the Breezes now
Percolate and
Cool the brow.
With less frequence
Cheeks are mopped
When the head with
Straw is topped.

Bright and dainty
Are these hats,
Whether oval
Crowns or flats.
They're so neat that Women sigh
When they see them
Passing by.

Every wearer
Walks with pride,
Knowing that he's Closely eyed;
For all wanting
Now straw tiles
Seek for pointers
On the styles.

Into windows
Now and then
Slyly glance some Straw hat men;
For like women
Some are keen
To see selves as
They are seen.

Neat and natty,
Spick and span,
Proudly struts the Straw hat man;
But observe his Wild dismay
When his tile is Blown away.

Learn to Talk Spanish.

Hartford Courant: We again urge every bright and ambitious boy of these parts to begin the study of Spanish as soon as he can, and to keep it up until he is able not only to read Spanish, but to write Spanish with a degree of fluency. This advice is especially for boys who expect to go into business or to follow the profession of engineering. It is not in Mexico alone that a good working knowledge of Spanish may open gates of opportunity and fortune to them. Beyond Mexico are Central America and vast, undeveloped South America. Then here, right off our Eastern coast, are Cuba and Porto Rico; and there will be fine openings for well-equipped young American clerks and worth while work for young American engineers in the Philippines, before those romote islands are many years older.

Bunching His Hits.

Chicago Chronicle: Ever and anon Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan yawns languidly and then reaches out and acquires a fresh batch of steamship lines or a new bunch of railroads. Some of these days, however, he will be persuaded to back a burlesque show and then he will know what the pangs of poverty are.

BALL BEARING HEADLIGHT.

Invention of Iowa Men Will Illuminate Curves.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 22.—A headlight for locomotives that will light the track around a curve instead of shooting the flash out into the cornfield is the invention of Herman Reich and O. M. Coate, of this city, who have been notified a patent will be allowed.

The device is an automatic moveable headlight that can be used on any of the present style of locomotives. The idea is that the light will follow the track around curves, showing the rails the customary 400 feet ahead.

A portion of the mechanism is two plates operating on ball and roller bearings, on which the headlight proper is placed. The mechanical attachment is such that a rod extends down through the smoke arch of the boiler to a point where other connections are made with the truck beam. The device has been successfully tried and railroad men say it will be a great improvement over fixed headlights.

LOVES ANOTHER MAN.

Would Die Because She Cannot Have Him.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, May 22.—Because her infatuation for a married man had been discovered, Mrs. Mary Jandl threw herself in front of a switch engine Tuesday night, and the timely assistance of a brakeman alone saved her. She was taken to the police station and declares she will yet kill herself if she cannot have the man.

Alvin Jones rode five miles on a bicycle Tuesday afternoon and then went swimming in the Cedar river. The water was deep and the current swift after the recent floods and he had no sooner entered than he was stricken with cramps and swept away by the current.

PERCHED ON A CLIFF.

Becker Was Compelled to Stay All Night.

Tacoma, Wash., May 22.—John Becker, a merchant of Aberdeen, spent all of one night and part of the next day perched on a narrow ledge of a cliff overhanging the Pacific ocean, unable to move for fear of falling into the waves, which were running high below him.

Becker was one of several men who had been up to the Queets country and, returning, they took the route along the beach down through the Quantault reservation, above North Beach. Just to the north of the cliffs is a long tunnel worn under the rocks and this short cut is usually taken.

When Becker reached the entrance to the tunnel he noticed that the tide was coming in, and before he reached the exit the water was up to his waist. When he came out on the beach the surf was breaking heavily along the foot of the cliffs.

To go back again was impossible and Becker started to climb the face of the cliff. With his pocket knife he dug holes for his hands and feet, and finally succeeded in getting out of the reach of the waves. He found a cleft in the rock large enough for him to stand upon.

Night came on and his companions, who had gone on ahead, started back to find some trace of him. It was then almost dark, but the men procured ropes and ascended to the top of the cliffs. Every effort was made to get a rope to him, but none of sufficient length could be secured, and the men were compelled to abandon the attempt.

With the rising of the sun the tide commenced to ebb, and Becker started down. It was even harder to descend than it had been to climb the wall the night before, but he finally reached the bottom, so exhausted that he fell helpless on the shore.

BIG FREIGHTERS.

J. J. Hill Buys Two More For Oriental Service.

St. Paul, May 22.—James J. Hill is extending his plans for steamships for the handling of oriental traffic. He has announced the purchase of two 14,000-ton freighters which are now on their way to Seattle to engage in the Pacific carrying trade. He is also contemplating ordering three more 20,000-ton ships, similar to the two big 20,000-ton freighters now building at New London, Conn.

Mr. Hill firmly believes that oriental traffic will increase faster than American transportation companies can supply facilities for handling it.

CASS LAKE PETITION.

Concession Asked By Section Sixteen Squatters.

Washington, May 22.—Judge Frank Ives, of Cass Lake, arrived here yesterday with a long petition of the squatters on section 16 of that town. The settlers want some arrangement whereby they can be allowed to remain.

Judge Ives represents that the settlers will be satisfied if they can be given section 16 under the townsite law, which is claimed to be applicable.

It is doubtful, however, if anything can be done for the relief of Judge Ives and the interests he represents.

TRUMVIRATE

Will Manage the Affairs Of Tammany Hall.

New York, May 22.—The executive members of Tammany hall last night voted in favor of naming a triumvirate to manage the affairs of the organization in place of a single-headed leader. The triumpirate selected was the same as expected:

Charles F. Murphy, leader of the Eighteenth district, chairman; Daniel F. MacMahon, leader of the Seventeenth district, and Louis F. Haffen, president of the Bronx and leader of the Thirty-fifth district. The chairman of this triumvirate becomes practically the leader of the organization in the place of Lewis Nixon, who has just resigned. Last night's meeting was a caucus attended by twenty-seven of the thirty-six members of the executive committee.

Commercial Club Declares For Reciprocity With Canada.

Able Arguments Presented By Members of Club.

Comprehensive Discussion of the Interstate Commerce Law.

The regular monthly meeting of the Commercial club was held last evening, and the members listened to able and comprehensive papers on the subjects of "Reciprocity With Canada," and "The Nelson-Corliss Bill." Proposing Amendments to the Interstate Commerce Law."

After the papers had been read it was unanimously voted that a petition be circulated among the business houses of the city urging reciprocity with Canada, and that the petition be forwarded to Duluth's representative in congress. President F. A. Patrick will appoint a committee to circulate the petition.

With reference to the Nelson-Corliss amendment, the following resolutions were adopted by a unanimous vote of the club:

"Resolved, that the Duluth Commercial club, of Duluth, Minn., hereby approves of the bill introduced in congress, known as the Nelson-Corliss bill, and requests the representatives of the state of Minnesota, in the senate and house of representatives, to give said bill their active support, and exert their influence in every proper way to secure its enactment.

"Resolved, further, that a copy of this resolution be sent by the secretary of the club to the representatives of the state of Minnesota in the senate and the house of representatives."

The resolution was drawn up by Bert Fesler, H. J. Grannis and S. L. Fraser, the members appointed on the committee to present the subject to the club.

It was a notable meeting from the fact that it was the first that the club has held since its organization for the purpose of considering topics of interest to the city of Duluth, and outside of the regular routine business of the club. The attendance was very good and the interest displayed in the reading of the papers showed the appreciation that the club even had it not passed a vote of thanks to the committees for the careful preparation of their subjects.

In the absence of President F. A. Patrick, First Vice President Bassett presided. Mr. Bassett announced briefly that the club has already secured quarters in the new building now under the process of construction for Frerker brothers, adjoining the Spalding hotel block, at a rental of $2500 per year. The building and its furnishings will be new throughout and as the club will have very liberal landlords it is to be congratulated for securing such excellent quarters.

Owing to the absence from the city of Mayor T. W. Hugo, the committee appointed to prepare a discussion of the question of reserving Park Point for government park, did not make a report. Mayor Hugo has gathered a large amount of material in connection with the matter both in facts and maps, and the club decided that the topic could be disposed of at another meeting.

Ward Ames was chairman of the committee to prepare a discussion of the topic "Reciprocity With Canada." Mr. Ames said that one of the committee, H. D. Final, has had business engagements that have prevented him from giving the attention to the subject that he desired, so the rest of the committee prepared a short paper for him and Mr. Ames read it. The paper consisted mainly of the late President William McKinley's last speech at the Buffalo exposition, with special reference to his utterances for reciprocity with foreign nations.

A paper was read by A. Fitger, who said, in part:

"The very words 'reciprocity with a foreign country' has an agreeable sound to the ears of most American citizens at present, and especially so since reciprocity with foreign countries was one of the aims to which our beloved martyred President McKinley was striving.

"Tonight we are to discuss the reciprocity question with special reference to our Northern neighbor, Canada, and we are certainly all of one mind to count Canada among the first peoples with whom we are, and ought to be, friends; a people who are our third largest customer, having bought of us in 1901 to the amount of $110,000,000.

"If you will look on the map, you will find that Duluth is situated at the very base of a funnel, the southern half of which is broad enough to give us our share of its trade, but the northern half of the funnel ought to be our special and undisputed province. Here no natural barrier could prevent us from reaping the benefit of our location.

"Instead of a natural barrier we find an artificial one, a boundary line, and neither the people of Canada nor we can afford to let it stand there, without gateways, a menace to trade and greatness.

"The city of Duluth should rise to the occasion and be the source of agitation and education. Education has wrought great changes in the views of the people in all these years. The climate of Germany, which was one hold in horror, has brought forth the Germany of today, and Duluth, the once ridiculed city of the frozen North, has become the granary of half an empire. But why not make Duluth the granary of a whole empire? Why shall not the wheat and the produce of the northern half of the aforesaid funnel be drained through some unnatural channel? Because of the artificial barrier called the boundary line?

"Gentlemen, let us break down this barrier, let us at least break passeways through it, so that the trade of both countries can go its own way, unfettered and unbridled, and millions of people will be made happy in peace and plenty.

"The vastness and the fertility of the region northwest of us is an almost unknown quantity. Permit me to call your attention to the immense grazing lands of Alberta, which are superior to those of Montana, and where the Chinook winds have a greater and more beneficent influence on account of the easy slope of the Rocky mountains. The soil of these blooming prairies has hardly been touched by the plowshare, but the days are at hand when all this will be cultivated and settled.

"The people who are and will be the settlers of this territory will not be Chinamen or Hotentots, whose notions and customs have to be studied by us. They will be of our own race, of our own kin, who half feel themselves American now.

"I hope that this question of reciprocity with Canada will not be permitted to go to sleep again. We must not fail in our duty of making this movement so strong that it will redound to the credit of Duluth and to the credit of our new Commercial club."

The next paper on the same subject of reciprocity with Canada was read by Ward Ames, chairman, of the committee and was as follows:

The subject of reciprocity with our neighbor is one of greatest importance to the country at large, particularly to our state, and still more emphatically to our city.

To the country at large our exports to Canada are immensely more than our imports from Canada. The Canadians want our machinery and other manufactured products.

To our state, because of the closer business relations possible—the benefitting of farmers and mechanics—the natural increase of trade relations where barriers are removed.

To our city, because we want their grain to flow through its natural channel.

MANITOBA CROP.

Year.	Acreage.	Yield bus.
1899	1,530,000	28,000,000
1900	1,800,000	22,000,000
1901	2,000,000	50,000,000

ASSINIBOIA.

Showing total crop of wheat for 1901 as 65,000,000 bushels, but this is a conservative estimate. Of this Duluth received about 8,000,000 bushels.

Our trade with Canada shows a heavy increase in exports during the past ten years while our imports remain practically at the same point.

	1891.	1895.	1900.
Exports	39,444,000	53,982,000	97,337,000

The whole world exports in 1895 were $800,000,000. In 1901 $1,500,000,000. This favorable showing might be used as an argument for letting "well enough alone" but we cannot hope to continue our present position with the commerce of the nations. Favorable outlets must be found and continued if we are to maintain our level of wages for our mechanics. Unless we show a disposition to "give and take" with other commercial nations we are liable to be confronted with prohibitive duties from them. The average duty on Canadian products into this country is 50 per cent, while the average duty on our products into Canada is 25 per cent. Our industries are now adjusted to a volume of export trade equal to $1,500,000,000 a year. We must keep our trade up to this level (or increase it) if our industrial prosperity is to continue. If our volume of trade should be reduced to the level of 1895—$800,000,000—the effect would be almost disastrous. Does not this show that we are more and more dependent upon foreign patronage for the well being of our industries? Of all foreign patrons Canada is comparatively our best customer.

Our farmers are beginning to feel the influence of competitive crops and so far this season have been compelled to look on and see their foreign markets snatched from them. We are convinced if Canadian wheat could be handled through this state without duty, it would not only be without injury to our own farmers but would inure to their benefit. Duluth is the natural outlet for Manitoba grain. We have all the commercial machinery for handling it and with the duty removed, a large proportion of this grain would come through Duluth. There was a time when our infant industries required protection, but that period of infancy has passed and our manufacturing industries have grown and developed into colossal manhood. Conditions are constantly changing and we believe it good policy to keep up with the procession. We want to adapt ourselves to the twentieth century requirements. The trend of sentiment is now along the lines of broad commercial relations with all countries as expressed by our late president at Buffalo. His wise statesmanship entitles him to our confidence in him as a leader. This is distinctly a commercial era and if we keep our ear close to the ground we will discover a strong sentiment in this direction from business men in all parts of the country.

We suggest the appointment of a committee to circulate a petition to congress requesting the passage of proper laws looking to our closer business relations with Canada, believing it will show the greatest good to the greatest number.

Respectfully submitted by the committee.

WARD AMES,
Chairman.

The report of the committee on the proposed amendments to the interstate commerce law, was read by H. J. Grannis. It was an exhaustive article and showed an immense amount of research. Mr. Grannis was accorded a hearty applause when he finished.

He said that in order to discuss intelligently the proposed amendments it would be proper to note the interstate commerce law as it now stands, its purposes, provisions and limitations and the powers permitted to be exercised by the commission. He then told of the passage of the interstate commerce law by congress in 1887, the object of which was to secure and maintain reasonable rates on interstate traffic, to prevent discriminations and preference in rates and privileges between shippers and localities and to prohibit pooling arrangements between interstate carriers. The weakness of the law was in the methods provided for carrying it into effect. The main points covered by the law and which reflect clearly the purposes of its enactment are the following, he said:

"1. The requirement that all charges for transportation of persons and property shall be reasonable.

"2. The prohibition of preferences between shippers and classes of freight, under substantially similar conditions.

"3. The prevention of unreasonable preferences and advantages to particular localities.

"4. The requirement that no greater compensation shall be charged or received for a shorter than for a longer haul, under substantially similar conditions.

"5. The prohibition of pooling of freight and division of earnings by and between interstate carriers.

"6. The publication of rates.

"The remaining portions of the act have to do with the methods devised for carrying the above provisions into effect and the ascertainment and punishment of violations thereof.

"The provisions of the act for carrying into effect the orders of the commission," said Mr. Grannis, "were always recognized as cumbersome and inefficient, and have been rendered more so by decisions of the United States supreme court. The powers of the commission are so circumscribed as to leave it little more than an investigating and protecting body.

"In spite of the cumbersome methods of procedure, the commission during the first years of its existence was quite successful in securing compliance by the railroad companies with its orders."

Mr. Grannis referred to the cases that reached the United States supreme court in 1896, when that body decided that congress had not conferred power to the commission to establish maximum reasonable rates for future observance. Decisions like these were fatal to the efficiency of the commission and that body, appreciating its position, has appealed to congress to pass laws that will cover the defect in the first interstate commerce law, but thus far appeals have been in vain. Mr. Grannis said that the amendments contemplated in the Nelson-Corliss bill, stated briefly, cover the following points:

"1. The commission is authorized, in order to secure reasonable rates, to require, after investigation, that certain rates shall be observed in the future, thus counteracting the decisions of the supreme court above referred to.

"2. Such order establishing a future rate shall be operative for two years and may thereafter be continued in force upon certain conditions.

"3. An order establishing a rate shall specify the time when it shall go into effect and the defendant within twenty days after the service of such order, may file a bill in equity in the United States circuit court to review the order of the commission, and the filing of this bill shall suspend the order for thirty days. The order shall thereupon go into effect (subject to certain exceptions), notwithstanding the pendency of proceedings in the circuit court or an appeal in the United States supreme court. The hearing in the circuit court shall be confined to the record of the case before the commission, subject to the right of the court to require further testimony before the commission, under certain circumstances.

"4. All penalties by way of imprisonment are abolished and punishment by fine substituted."

"These amendments," said Mr. Grannis, "are in line with recommendations heretofore made by the commission. They are not radical or revolutionary. They are consistent with the scope and design of the interstate commerce law, and if the same or something similar are adopted, we are of the opinion that a great step will be taken in the direction of securing for the interstate commerce commission authority to effectively carry out the provisions of the law. That portion of the amendments which proposed to give the commission authority to prescribe a rate for the future, after investigation, is very far reaching. If the commission is to be of substantial service as a rate regulating body, it must have this power.

"That congress may lawfully confer this power upon the commission, fixing rates, is by this amendment given to the carrier, but it will be observed that the burden of the action in the courts is upon the carrier. This is the reverse of present conditions.

"Another very important, and as we think, very proper provision of the proposed amendments, is that the hearing in the courts, so far as rate orders are concerned, is required to be upon the record of the case as made before the commission. This would avoid the necessity of taking new testimony and very much facilitate the disposition of the case.

"The proposed amendments are perhaps not as comprehensive as some would wish and certain provisions thereof may be open to criticism, but taken as a whole we believe them to be not only proper but highly important and we recommend that the amendments as drafted be supported in order that the endorsement of commercial bodies may not be weakened by conflicting suggestions of changes."

The Doctor Writes of Counterfeiters.

CHAS. H. FLETCHER, New York City. Hyannis, Mass., May 12, 1900.

Dear Mr. Fletcher:—I wish to congratulate you on your numerous victories over counterfeiters and imitators of Castoria, and trust the time is not far distant when these inferior and dangerous mixtures will be entirely suppressed.

You are right when you say in your advertisements that it is "Experience against Experiment."

I feel it to be an outrage, and an imposition upon the parents of little children that my name should be associated with imitations of Castoria, dangerous to the health and life of these little ones who too often fight their battles for life in vain.

Let me again commend you for the high standard you have maintained in the preparation of my prescription, and I confidently believe it is due to this scrupulous integrity you are indebted for the wonderful sale of Castoria to-day, and the steady growth it has had since I gave you the details of its manufacture in my laboratory thirty-three years ago.

CLOQUET.

Cloquet, Minn., May 22.—Special to The Herald.)—If the weather man does not speedily let up on things, Cloquet will either be washed or blown away, shortly. The occasion of wind and electric storms the past few days have done considerable timber damage. Tuesday night, sidewalks were washed away on Third street, and other streets badly washed out. During Monday's storm the wind played havoc with John Dorosier's house and demolished a frame building in process of erection in Shapect's addition. The river is steadily rising and threatens a flood.

Cloquet is to have a new banking establishment. It will be located in the Elm block on Broadway avenue and Duluth parties are backing the enterprise.

BEAR NEAR SANDSTONE.

Famous Hunting Grounds Still Offers Good Sport.

Sandstone, Minn., May 22.—The territory east of town, out towards the Wisconsin line, in Pine county, has long been known as a famous hunting ground, and, despite the opening of roads and the advent of many settlers, it is still the favorite rendezvous of Indians, who visit it during the regular season. Many predicted that the opening up of the country by the great Hinckley fire would drive all game into the dense woods north of the burned-over region. This is partly true, but the timber land east of town, just bordering the burned district, is one of the best hunting grounds in Minnesota. Bear is abundant, no fewer than five having been shot there this spring. A young son of the settlers has alone succeeded in killing three, having successfully dispatched his last one day before yesterday. All the animals killed so far have been males, and two of them were exceedingly large. They were all very fat, and, of course, their fur was very prime. Many have been seen during this spring by land-seekers, and it is probable a few more will fall before the settlers' ever-handy rifle.

Last fall, in this same territory, along Crooked creek, a pure white buck deer one year old was shot, and an Iowa hunter bought the hide here and took it home with him. It is needless to say that deer are very plentiful, and would be more so did not the Mille Lacs Indians visit this territory nearly every fall, a month or two prior to the opening of the season, and ruthlessly slaughter everything in sight.

TOO POOR TO MARRY.

Tried to Wreck Train to Procure Funds.

Guthrie, Okla., May 22.—In order that he might have money enough to marry, Willard T. Lillibridge attempted to wreck the Santa Fe train on the Eastern Oklahoma line, near Perkins, Okla. He is now in the federal jail here.

He wrote to the Santa Fe company after setting fire to two bridges over the Cimarron river that if $1000 was dropped from a handcar on a certain day between the Santa Fe rails, no further disaster would result to the road from him.

He was engaged to marry Miss Ella Clary, of Bartlesville, I. T., he admitted in his confession, but he postponed the wedding until he had money for housekeeping purposes.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM.

Seventy-Seven Runs Away With Seventy-Five.

Lebanon, Ind., May 22.—A love affair begun nearly sixty years ago culminated in this city Tuesday in the elopement and marriage of Rev. Abraham C. Abbett, of Chicago, aged 77, and Mrs. Eliza J. Mitchell, of Amity, Ind., aged 75.

When the bride was 17 her parents objected to her marriage on account of her tender years. Mr. Abbett had been twice married since then, both wives having died. The bride of Tuesday had been for twenty-four years the widow of Jefferson Mitchell, a wealthy farmer. Two months ago Mr. Abbet wrote Mrs. Mitchell requesting another opportunity to win her hand. The letter fell into the hands of her daughter and a storm of opposition arose.

The old people then quietly arranged for the wedding, which took place at the home of Mrs. Julia Shirley, the bride's neice.

Mr. Abbett is a retired Methodist minister. They will take a short wedding tour before returning to her farm at Amity.

STRICT RULES

For Employes of Passenger Department of Northwestern.

Chicago, May 22.—Officials of the Chicago & Northwestern road have begun a campaign against the use of tobacco in any form by employes of the passenger department while on duty. In the new book of operating rules which has just gone into effect over the entire Northwestern system are several general rules of conduct. Among the latter is the following:

"The use of tobacco by employes when on duty in or about passenger stations or on passenger cars is prohibited.

The management also has taboood loose pecuniary practices. Rule M says: "An assignment of wages by an employe is prohibited, and will be cause for dismissal."

This is followed by Rule N, which provides that "It will be cause for dismissal of that employe who has twice subjected this company to the service of a garnishment order on his pay."

Rules of the most stringent kind are also incorporated against the use of intoxicants or the frequenting of places where they are sold. An employe who does either is liable to immediate dismissal.

SAYS LAW IS VOID.

Probate Judge of Ramsey County Gives Decision.

St. Paul, May 22.—Judge Bazille of the probate court of Ramsey county held yesterday that the inheritance tax law passed by the legislature last winter in extra session is unconstitutional and void.

The judge, of his own motion, raised the point when the will of the late Emerson W. Peet was offered for probate, and admitted.

The law provides that appraisers shall be appointed by the probate court to appraise estates for purposes of taxation, and Judge Bazille declined to appoint them. This law of 1902 provides, generally, that near relatives, inheriting from the estate, shall pay one-half of 1 per cent on inheritances above $10,000, and that more distant relatives, legatees and devisees shall pay a tax of 10 per cent above $10,000.

The judge finds that the constitution provides (amendment of November, 1894) that such tax above such exempted sums may be uniform, or may be graded or progressive, but shall not exceed a maximum of 5 per cent; that therefore the law of 1902 imposing a tax of 10 per cent is unconstitutional and void.

WILL BE DELAYED

Little Activity In Local Politics Expected Before July.

State Fights Will Be Settled Before County Troubles Begin.

Not a Whisper As Yet From the Democratic Side.

It seems to be pretty generally understood that there will not be much doing in local politics until after the state conventions are out of the way.

This will explain the seeming apathy that exists in the local field, and the lack of candidates for county and legislative positions. There are only two declarations on file for legislative positions, and none whatever for county offices. Local politicians, by tacit agreement, are keeping out of the field until the state fights are over, and then a small rush of candidates may be expected.

This will make the campaign before the primary election rather a short one, and this will be entirely agreeable to nearly every candiate for office. The Republican state convention will be held July 1, and the primary elections will take place Sept. 16. This will make the campaign for nominations two months and a half long, and that will be plenty long enough for every purpose. By postponing the opening until after July 1 at least a month is cut off the campaign, for in other places, where the candidates did not wait for the state conventions, the fight is on already.

So far as is known now every county officer will be a candidate for re-election. In the fight probably the easiest minds will be those of J. P. Johnson, clerk of the district court, and W. G. Bonham, judge of probate. The common custom has been to allow every Republican office-holder a couple of terms unmolested, and this unwritten law will operate in favor of these two office-holders. Mr. Johnson has only had half of one term, as his place is a 4-year proposition, and politicians will probably concede him a renomination. Judge Bonham has had but one term, and he will probably be yielded the same courtesy. Under the convention system there would be no question about this, and it will still have much weight under the primary election system, though those who are not technically familiar with the game of politics cannot be barred from handing the county auditor $10 and a certificate of candidacy and becoming candidates at the primaries. The unwritten law is not so strong as that.

The other occupants of the court house have not this unwritten law behind them, as most of them have had more than one term, and they will have to do the best they can without it.

The Democratic side of the fence is preternaturally quiet. Not a whisper has been heard to indicate that there will be Democratic candidates for county offices, but, of course, there will be a full set of them. The Democrats have not yet quite figured out whether there is a better chance than ever for the election of some county officers, or whether there is no show at all. They are figuring a little on a relaxation of the steel trust, and if their expectations in this respect are realized they hope to be able to capture some, at least, of the county positions. The Democrats have their eyes on the legislative districts, too, in a quiet way.

TIME WAR.

Chicago and St. Paul Lines May Provoke One--Might Affect Duluth.

The Chicago-Omaha and the Chicago-St. Paul lines have begun their usual occasional warfare over faster time. The Rock Island, which has a short line to Omaha, but a long route as yet to St. Paul, has reduced the Chicago-Omaha limited time from 13½ hours to 12, bringing down upon it the maledictions of the other roads which had formed an agreement to continue a 12½-hour service. The distance is 14 miles longer than the distance from Chicago to Duluth, so that the time has in the past been about the same as that of the Duluth Fast Mail, or not quite so fast.

The other lines to Omaha are now cutting their schedules to the 12-hour basis. As at least two of them—the Northwestern and Milwaukee—have short lines to St. Paul, they propose to retaliate upon the Rock Island by cutting the time of their fast mail trains to 10 hours. The present time is 13½ hours; the same as that scheduled by the limited trains. Last fall the Northwestern and Milwaukee wanted to reduce the running time of their fast mail trains, but the longer roads made it plain that if they cut the time, others would cut the rates. The result was that instead of reducing the time of their mail trains, the Milwaukee and Northwestern lengthened it about a couple of hours. The Northwestern lengthened out its time between St. Paul and Altoona, where the St. Paul train is consolidated with the Duluth train. In this way the time and rate agreement between St. Paul and Chicago was kept intact.

The two short lines, however, have never been satisfied to run their light trains on the heavier-equipped schedule. When fast time is talked about, they palpably chafe over their resolution not to do a few stunts in that direction. That is what lends spice to the situation caused by the Rock Island's action between Chicago and Omaha.

If the war extends to the Chicago-St. Paul route, it is quite likely that the running time of the Duluth Fast Mail will be shortened somewhat, though probably not over an hour to two hours. The first cut in the running time between St. Paul and Chicago would be made between St. Paul and Altoona, which would not affect the Duluth schedule. The gain from here would have to be made from Altoona to Chicago. It is likely, therefore, that about a 12-hour service is the best time that could be gotten for Duluth, if the 40-mile average that is proposed for St. Paul were maintained all the way to Duluth.

Lighting on Heights.

The Commercial Light and Power company has a force of men working on Duluth Heights stringing wires for street lighting purposes. Within the next few weeks that suburb will have bunches of small lights on every street corner of importance. This is practically the same service that has been given Woodland and Lakeside during the past year.

PUNISHMENT.

Social progress has done away with a great many forms of punishment once administered under the laws of enlightened people. But nature never changes or modifies her penalties. She still has the same punishment for the man who neglects or abuses his stomach as she had in the far off days "when Adam delved and Eve span."

The physical discomfort, dullness, sluggishness, irritability, nervousness and sleeplessness which are visited upon the man who eats carelessly or irregularly have been from the beginning the evidences of disease of the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the diseased stomach and enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, so that the sluggishness, irritability, nervousness and sleeplessness which result from innutrition are cured also.

"I was taken sick nine years ago with fever," writes Mr. M. M. Wardwell, of Linwood, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. "Had the doctor and he broke up the fever all right, but I took diarrhœa right away; he couldn't cure it and it became chronic, and then he gave up the case. I got so weak with it and had piles so badly I couldn't lie down, nor hardly sit up. Was that way two or three months; thought I would 'never be well again,' but picked up one of Dr. Pierce's Memorandum books one day and saw your description of catarrh of the stomach. I thought it hit my case. We had a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the house that was got for mother. You recommend it for catarrh of the stomach, so I went to taking it. The one bottle nearly cured me. I got two bottles next time and took one and one-half and was well. I haven't been bothered with diarrhœa since."

REMARKABLE ACT.

Performance of Seals In the Norris & Rowes Show.

With the Norris & Rowe big trained animal shows, which are to appear here soon, is a remarkable little animal act, which is so entirely out of the ordinary that the press throughout the country has been more than lavish in its praise. The great act, which is the cause of so much comment, is the congress of educated seals and sea lions, which they are presenting this season. It is almost beyond the power of reason to believe that seals and sea lions, which have never been accredited with any more sense than to be able to lazily pull themselves upon a rock, or to dine upon a fish dinner, can be made to perform maneuvers and exceedingly intricate tricks at the beck and call of a human being. These animals of the briny deep range in size and weight from 300 to 800 pounds; some of the males often reach the monstrous weight of 1500 to 1600 pounds.

They have been taught to skip ropes and to balance and juggle all sorts and sizes of articles, such as light torches, hoops and balls, and they even play upon musical instruments. They also have a clown among them, who enters into the humor of his actions with as much zest as a human being. This is positively one of the most novel acts given by any tented exhibition. There is only one act of a similar nature in the world, and that is at present touring Europe.

These performing amphibians will be seen in the grand street parade which will be given at 11 o'clock on the morning of the exhibition.

The show will be presented at the corner of Thirteenth avenue east and London road.

AMUSEMENTS.

"WHEN REUBEN COMES TO TOWN."

Tomorrow and Saturday evenings the musical comedy, "When Reuben Comes to Town," will be at the Lyceum. It is by Herman Perlet, who has produced a number of operatic successes but never before essayed anything in this line. It is claimed that he has proved as happy in this field as in the other. The company contains a number of people well known to Duluthians, notably Douglas Flint, who has been here on several occasions.

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE

Mrs. Eckis Stevenson of Salt Lake City Tells How Operations For Ovarian Troubles May Be Avoided.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with inflammation of the ovaries and womb for over six years, enduring aches and pains which none can dream of but those who have had the same experience. Hundreds of dollars went to the doctor and the druggist. I was simply a walking medicine chest and a physical wreck. My sister residing in Ohio wrote me that she had been cured of womb trouble by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and advised me to try it. I then discontinued all other medicines and gave your Vegetable Compound a thorough trial. Within four weeks nearly all pain had left me; I rarely had headaches, and my nerves were in a much better condition, and I was cured in three months, and this avoided a terrible surgical operation."—MRS. ECKIS STEVENSON, 250 So. State St., Salt Lake City, Utah.—$5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

A MANIAC ENGINEER

"Billy" Brown Went Crazy at the Throttle In Michigan.

Not One Stop Was Made In Fifty-Eight Miles.

Has Been Crazed By Smoking a Pipe Too Much.

Flint, Mich., May 22.—Through a raging storm, with a maniac engineer at the throttle of the locomotive, sped the Grand Trunk international limited express train one night last week with hundreds of passengers aboard.

No stops were made. The train whirled by stations so fast that to the terrorized passengers they seemed but blurs of light. On, on flashed the long line of swaying coaches, dragged by the demoniac locomotive that left a cloud of black smoke and twinkling sparks in its wake. For fifty-eight miles, from Goodelus to Flint, the wild train sped without a stop.

The throttle was wide open, the rate of speed was sometimes fully seventy miles an hour, and the stalwart man who stood over it was ghastly pale, wild-eyed and determined. The fireman tried to circumvent him by planning for the steam to get low, but with the cunning of the insane, the engineer divined his purpose and forced him to feed the coal into the firebox.

Astounded station agents, almost swept from their feet as they stood on their platforms and saw the train sweep by in its mad flight, wired the train dispatcher that something was wrong with the limited; that she was making no stops and was going at a terrific speed, and that her engineer was either dead or crazy.

Hastily the track ahead was cleared. Freight and passenger trains were shunted onto sidings, and the flying streak of coaches was given right-of-way. There was no possibility of stopping the train. All that could be done was to keep the track clear and trust to fortune something would bring the runaway to a stop.

The fireman lived a lifetime every moment, it seemed, as he waited for the end. Of course it would be madness to jump, but he fancied that would be his only chance for life.

He crouched, shaking as if with the chill of death, whiter than the crazed engineer, who now and then glared at him threateningly.

At intervals, in obedience to a commanding gesture of the maniac, the fireman threw open the door of the coalbox and tossed shovelfuls of coal into the roaring furnace.

At one time the fireman conceived the desperate scheme of pushing the engineer from the cab—to—should for a moment leave his post at the throttle.

The chance never came. The engineer stood like a figure of steel at his post. He spoke not a word, and the only time he moved was when he gestured for more coal.

Everything on board was all right when the train drew away from Port Huron. "Billy" Brown, of Battle Creek, one of the old standby engineers of the road, was at the throttle. It was just after the train passed through the tunnel under the St. Clair river, only a few miles out from Port Huron, that the crew and passengers began to notice the peculiar conduct of the engineer as shown by the eccentric movements of the train.

First came a burst of speed. Then the brakes were applied with a suddenness that sent passengers tumbling over seat backs. Those who left their seats in excitement were hurled headlong to the floor. As the miles were passed the speed increased, the rain beat upon the car windows and great flashes of lightning made the sky lurid with their recurrent glow. Helpless and pale, the passengers sat clinging to their seats, believing that they must soon meet with some terrible accident. It seemed impossible for the train to remain on the rails, and the passengers were tossed from side to side as the curves were rounded. A sullen roar could be heard as a freight train on a siding was passed; a flash would tell that a station had been left in the wake of the flying train.

From Capac, where the first stop was scheduled, but past which the train whirled without so much as a warning whistle, messages were sent on ahead to Imlay City, Lapeer, Davidson and Flint to clear the tracks. Freights were sidetracked and passenger trains were held up.

Imlay City was passed at hurricane speed. Members of the crew tried to climb over the tender to the engine cab, but the train rocked so fast that they were forced to give up the attempt.

The city of Lapeer flashed by, a long stream of twinkling lights. Davidson appeared and vanished.

The word had gone out that No. 5 was being driven by a crazy engineer, and though the hour—11:07 p. m.—was late, the depot platform was crowded with spectators to see the wildcat train, and the limited went by at seventy miles an hour.

Without the sound of a bell the old engine came round the curve and into the Flint yards, nearly a mile away from the station. Slowly, oh so slowly, to the anxious watchers the headlight drew nearer as the train crept in under brakes. Men belonging to other engines stood ready to board the locomotive if she did not stop at the station; but slower and slower, as the airbrakes were set and the throttle was closed, the heavy train, with its load of frightened passengers, came to a dead stop.

On board the train it had at first been supposed that the locomotive had suffered an accident. The truth was disclosed when the conductor and brakeman went forward.

There they saw Brown at his post, erect and looking ahead. The fireman was throwing in coal. No one could understand what was the matter. The conductor cried out at Brown, but he paid no heed.

The fireman looked up to explain matters, Brown grasped him by the neck and threw him back violently.

Then those who watched gained the first hint that Brown had gone insane.

The distance between the baggage car and the tender was several feet. One of the men attempted to reach the ender.

He would have fallen and been ground into bits had his companions not caught him. Other attempts were equally fruitless.

It finally became evident that no one would be able to cross, and the men simply stood there, watching engineer and fireman as the glare from the open firebox lighted up the interior of the cab, waiting for the end.

No one knows what wild plans were formed in Brown's crazy mind. Perhaps he thought that some great heroic endeavor was demanded by him, and knew he was facing death just as well as his fireman knew it.

Equally mysterious is the motive which finally induced him to bring the train to a standstill.

His condition when relieved indicated plainly that he had been under a heart-breaking strain, one that in itself might have wrecked a healthy mind.

The passengers, crying aloud in their excitement, poured out of the coaches as though afraid the mad engineer would open the throttle and whirl them away again.

"Our engineer is crazy!" was the cry from dozens of throats, while others were so overcome by excitement that they could not speak. Some were found, however, who could give the story of their thrilling ride at seventy miles an hour.

Engineer Brown was ill when taken from the cab by the railroad men and carried into the station. His face was ghastly, his eyes staring in vacancy. His fireman, William Hodgson, weak and trembling, sat on the opposite side of the cab, so unstrung that it was some minutes before he could tell his story.

"We were just out of Goodells," he finally said, "when Brown began to act queer. I never saw anything like it and it frightened me, for I had heard of engineers going insane and driving their engines like mad, with open throttle and a full head of steam on.

"When I began to let the steam go down in the hope that the train would slow down enough for someone to board us, Brown insisted upon my firing up. As he is so much larger and more powerful than I, the matter of tackling him and trying to overpower him did not appeal to me.

"Brown kept me at the firebox throwing in the coal for all I was worth, and sending the train at a rate of speed I never traveled at before and do not wish to travel at again.

"If ever I lifted my voice in prayer it was when I saw the train slacken speed as it came into the Flint yard, almost hoping against hope that a stop would be made, and when the brakes were put on I almost shouted with joy."

The hundreds of excited passengers stood around the train, and it required some coaxing to get them into the coaches again. Engineer George Cassidy of this city, driver of the yard engine, was placed on the passenger locomotive and took the train through to Battle Creek, the end of the division.

Brown was carried on the train and taken to his home in Battle Creek. A commission of physicians has decided that the engineer was made temporarily insane from smoking a pipe too much, and that he will recover his mind. It is learned that he suffered from a similar attack while off duty and at home three weeks ago. He will probably never again be allowed to touch a throttle.

AT LAST.

Jeffries and Fitzsimmons Reach An Agreement to Fight.

San Francisco, May 22.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight of the world, and Robert Fitzsimmons, former heavyweight champion, met yesterday afternoon and came to an agreement to fight for the world's championship. Fitzsimmons insisted that he would not fight unless permitted to wear surgical bandages for the protection of his hands, and after some parley on this point Jeffries receded from the position he had assumed recently in objection to the use of bandages. The articles of agreement will, to all practical purposes, be identical with the articles signed in New York some months ago. After the two men had announced their satisfaction with the articles it was mutually agreed that the documents would be signed on Friday afternoon. Seven clubs submitted bids for the fight and after a brief discussion Fitzsimmons told Jeffries that he would leave the matter of selection of a club to him, with the result that Jeffries, after some deliberation, expressed the opinion that the bid of the San Francisco club, offering 70 per cent of the gross receipts, was the best. Fitzsimmons accepted the suggestion and it was agreed that the contest should be held under the auspices of the club mentioned. The date of the contest will be decided upon later, but it is generally believed that July 4 will be the day determined upon. Eddie Greany, a local man, will be asked to referee the contest. Jeffries will train at Harbin Springs and Fitzsimmons at Skaggs Springs.

THE PRIZE NERVE.

Peculiar Help Asked From a Kentucky Postmaster.

Louisville, Ky., May 22.—Postmaster Baker thinks he has discovered the man with the prize nerve. He is Frank Reed, of Moreland, Lincoln county. He wrote to the postmaster telling him he was raising funds to build himself a home, and requesting him to make a canvass of his personal friends and raise all he can. Out of the amount secured he will permit Dr. Baker to hold what he considers reasonable.

HAND OF FATE.

Evil Genius Seems to Follow Women's Relatives.

Newark, Ohio, May 22.—A strange fatality seems to have overshadowed the family of Joseph Dininger's widow, who was Miss Florence Durant.

Joseph Dininger was killed on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, east of Newark, a few days ago. His father some years ago lost his arm in an accident in the B. & O. shops here, and his brother was later maimed for life.

Dininger's widow was a member of a family of three sisters—Grace, Jennie and Florence—each of whom married a railroad man, and in each case the husband met with a fatal accident.

Several other members of the Durant family were also killed by accidents. Mrs. Dininger's uncle, named Durant, was found dead in a corn field with a shotgun near him, his head having literally been blown off. Another uncle of the girl's was burned to death in a hotel fire.

BEAUTY

Found Dead In Box Car and Later Disappeared.

Montgomery, W. Va., May 22.—The most baffling murder mystery to engage the officers of this section is now placed before them by a C. & O. brakeman and a tramp named Frank Parsons, who charge that Fay E. Smith, another tramp, murdered an unknown woman of comely form and features and rode with her corpse in an empty box car for a long distance.

Parsons says that he boarded a freight at an early hour Monday morning and found Smith and the woman in the end of the car, and the unnatural position of the woman, who seemed to be sleeping, aroused the curiosity of Parsons. As the conversation progressed, at the time Parsons watching the face of the reclining woman intently, she did not stir. Then Parsons managed to touch her face, and knew that she was dead.

Smith admitted that she was dead, and stated, it is claimed, that he had murdered her. Parsons hurried back over the tops of the cars to the caboose and told the train crew, who returned with Parsons and found that only Smith was there. There were blood spots on the floor and the supposition is that she was thrown from the train by Smith near Hawk's Nest. A party is searching for the body. Smith and Parsons are both in jail here, and Smith is in a deep sleep, apparently from the effects of some drug.

STONE COFFIN

Of Enormous Size Dug On Indiana Farm.

Frankfort, Ind., May 2.—On Monday some excavators at work on the farm of Alba Ghere, near this city, discovered a large stone object which gave forth a hollow sound when struck. After being fully uncovered it was found to be shaped generally like a coffin, only considerably larger. What appears to have been a groove runs horizontally entirely around the stone or coffin, giving the appearance that it had been sealed when used. A number of stone battle axes of various sizes were found in the earth near the point of discovery.

BY A GLACIER

Diamonds Carried Into Indiana During Ice Age.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 22.—R. L. Royse, of Morgan county, exhibited a diamond to the state geologist weighing but one carat, but pronounced of the highest quality because of its steely blue color. A diamond weighing four and three-quarters carat was also exhibited, the latter yellowish in color and with a small carbon in the center, depreciating its value. These diamonds were found in Gold creek, Morgan county, and it is said that fifty or more have been picked up within the past two years in that neighborhood.

The state geologist said that the diamonds were brought in from the Hudson Bay region by the first glacier invading Indiana. He added with a grin that if a man wanted to make a strike he should find the mother lode, which is located somewhere between Hudson bay and Morgan county.

BIENNIAL REVIEW

Of Great Tent of Michigan of the Maccabees.

Visitors Will Double the Number of Marquette's Inhabitants.

The Crisis of a Great Fight Will Be Reached.

Marquette, Mich., May 22.—The greatest gathering in the history of Northern Michigan will be that to be held in Marquette from June 10 to 14. It will be the biennial review of the great camp of the Knights of the Maccabees and of the great hive of the Ladies of the Maccabees, and an attendance of not less than 10,000 visitors is expected to be present on the opening day.

Half of the strangers, it is figured, will remain until the close of the conventions.

Of the visitors, 3000—delegates, alternates and friends—will come from Lower Michigan, and the remainder from all portions of the upper peninsula, special trains being run for their accommodation. It will cost the great camp $45,000 to hold its review here—$20,000 more than any similar convention in the past—but Marquette was selected as a recognition to the upper peninsula, which is fast becoming a stronghold of Maccabeeism, and it is considered that the money will be well spent. The fund will go to the delegates for mileage and per diem.

These delegates number 946, one for every tent in the state, while at the great hive meeting 825 lodges will be represented.

As far as the ladies are concerned, however, they themselves or their hives will settle their own expenses, the convention costing the great hive nothing.

To accommodate a throng about double her population, Marquette has had a hard problem to solve, but the accommodations arranged for are ample and 100 sub-committees will cater to the wants of the city's guests.

About 500 of the Lower Michigan delegates will probably make the trip by boat and will live on board while here, arrangements with the D. & C. line having practically been concluded at Detroit.

The opening day of the conventions will be observed as a gala day by the upper peninsula section of the order.

With the issues at stake, it is conceded that the Marquette convention of the K. O. T. M. will be the most memorable in the history of the order.

The burning question is that popularly styled as "expansion"—whether or not the great tent of Michigan shall extend its operations to other states, to foreign territory now the field exclusively of the supreme tent of the order.

The supreme tent and the great tent though each uses the same ritual and is representative of the same order, are two different and distinct organizations, and neither works in common.

"To invade the supreme tent territory is the slogan of one faction of the state camp, under the leadership of Great Commander Boynton, and the other element, led by Great Record Keeper Watson, is as vigorously opposed to it on the ground that expansion outside the state would bring no benefit to the great camp and would adversely react on it.

In the contest the remarkable spectacle is presented of the great commander opposing all the other official machinery of the order, and, while rival claims of victory are being made the indications point to an exceedingly close fight, with the prospects favoring expansion and the election of the Boynton slate, which provides a new official for every important great camp post.

Should the expansion faction win, as seems indicated, the great camp's policy will for at least the next two years be absolutely at the dictation of Maj. Poynton, the founder of the order, since the executive committee will be with him; but, on the other hand, should the anti-expansionists control they will again give Boynton the leading office, but will so shear him of power that he will be a mere figurehead. The great commander now has the appointment of the auditors and deputies, but this his opponents would deprive him of by giving the executive committee the appointing powers, and during the past two years the committee, with the major as a member, has stood four to one against the great commander. The election of the executive committee, it will be seen, is as important as even the question of expansion itself, and on these two features the opposing elements will not yield until the last vote is counted.

FATAL JOKE.

Soldier Causes Death of His Wife By Fire.

Junction City, Kan., May 22.—Mrs. W. G. Snoke, wife of Corporal Snoke, of the Ninth Artillery band, stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., died at her home here yesterday of burns received as the result of a joke perpetrated by her husband. Mrs. Snoke had hidden in an outbuilding and in a spirit of fun locked her husband out. Snoke poured some gasoline on the stone steps and lit it, intending to frighten her. The flames were drawn in under the door and enveloped Mrs. Snoke, who died several hours later in terrible agony. She was conscious to the last and exonerated her husband, insisting that his act was intended as a joke.

HAD THEIR FUN.

And Deposited Thirty Dollars To Pay For It.

Findlay, Ohio, May 22.—Dennis Nyhan and Charles Mallen, two prominent Findlay business men, by the way of a joke, concealed themselves in Nyhan's store, and phoned to the police false alarms of burglaries and other reports for official attention. So frequent were the groundless reports that the police became suspicious, and finally spotted the pair in the store. A vigil was kept until they emerged, and their arrest followed. The prisoners deposited $15 each for their appearance today, but forfeited them. On account of their standing the cases will not be pushed.

LOAF OF BREAD

Filled With Mercury Used to Locate Body.

New York, May 22.—Little Julius Cohen was drowned twelve days ago in Coney Island creek, and the body has been recovered in a most unusual manner. After the father had the creek dragged day after day, unsuccessfully, a sailor said:

'Get a loaf of bread and cut the center out. Then fill the hole with quicksilver and put the bread in the water near where the boy was drowned. It will float until directly over the spot where the body lies and then sink."

The loaf was prepared and placed on the water. It floated for half an hour, then settled in the water and suddenly shot under. The child's body was found directly beneath the spot where the loaf sank.

SPREADING RAILS

Caused Serious Accident to Lehigh Valley Express.

Mishawaka, Ind., May 22.—As the Lehigh Valley express, the fast passenger train on the Grand Trunk Western road, passed through here last night the mail car left the track, followed by the baggage car and five passenger coaches. The engine dashed on for fifteen rods, then buried itself partially in the earth. A number of passengers were cut and bruised, those more seriously being: Professor Joseph Roach, Chicago, arm fractured, head bruised, right hand cut. T. N. Minnier, Kansas City, leg bruised. H. E. Clifford, Rutland, Vt., back seriously sprained. G. M. Urey, South Bend, mail clerk, head injured. C. J. Clark, postal clerk, arm and side bruised. G. M. McDonald, Montreal, leg fractured. Mrs. H. Woods, Sioux City, internally injured.

Spreading rails, it is believed, caused the accident.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Proclamation On Observance Issued By Governor.

St. Paul, May 22.—Governor Van Sant has issued a proclamation calling upon the people of the state to observe Memorial day, May 30, by the suspension of all business and participating in the exercises in honor of the dead soldiers. He especially urges that the soldiers who died in the Spanish war be remembered. The proclamation starts:

"Gratitude and patriotism are great virtues; they should be fostered both in the individual and in the nation. The stability of a government depends upon the number of loyal men and women who are ready to sacrifice themselves at any moment to maintain it. It should be our aim to teach the lessons of patriotism and gratitude, so that our nation's defenders would exclaim, as did Gen. Warren at Bunker Hill, "It is sweet to die for one's country." For this purpose we set apart a day in the beautiful springtime as a memorial to the brave men who offered up their lives for our republic. No heroes are more worthy of honor, and our gratitude; their motives were lofty and the result of their service beneficial to all mankind. No greater deeds of valor are recorded in all history. These men fought and died not only to give liberty new birth, but to so dignify labor that it might enjoy the fruits of its toil."

OPEN DOOR TO CHINA

Is Discussed By the Late Commissioner, W. W. Rockhill.

Fourth Annual Meeting of American Asiatic Association.

An Address By Senator McLaurin of South Carolina.

New York, May 2.—Members of the American Asiatic association gave their fourth annual dinner last night at Delmonico's. The guest of honor was William W. Rockhill, late commissioner of the United States to China, who responded to the toast, "The Open Door to Commerce in China." About 200 were present, nearly all of whom are interested directly or indirectly in Asiatic commerce. Senator John L. McLaurin of South Carolina and Senator J. F. Pritchard of North Carolina were among the guests.

Senator Pritchard responded to the toast, "The President of the United States."

Mr. Rockhill began his address by a statement of the purpose of the American Asiatic association, which he said was primarily the furtherance of trade interests. Vitally connected with this, he said, was the fostering of administrative reform in China. The experience of the last eighteen months, Mr. Rockhill said, has shown that whatever may have been the defects of the Chinese plan of government, it is the best suited to that peculiar people.

Senator McLaurin followed Mr. Rockhill. He said in part: Most of the members of this association are Northern men, interested in enterprises of Northern origin, and therefore naturally looking at things from the Northern point of view. But I cannot too emphatically assure you that the business interests of the North are inextricably interwoven with the business interests of the South.

In matters affecting our national honor, progress and prosperity, there should be no North and South, but with a general and invincible union of hearts and hands we should make the United States the commercial mistress of the world.

Now, gentlemen, we see all things in a clearer light. We all see that all our Southern industries have a national and international importance. So that while Massachusetts and South Carolina used to do nothing but sit and glare at each other and fulminate at each other in the speeches of Webster and Calhoun, and finally on the field of battle, they now hobnob together most amicably, attend each other's banquet and hold blocks of stock in the same concerns.

The United States has learned of late years that it needs an ever-widening and expanding market for its products, and it has found an important foreign outlet among the teeming millions of the Orient. The Asiatic market has come into the field as one of the most prominent factors in the modern commercial problem, and I feel quite sure it has come to stay.

After giving his opinion that the passage of the Chinese exclusion act in its extreme form would have been a calamity, the speaked continued: The conservation of our Chinese trade appears to me to be of the utmost importance. We are rapidly becoming the greatest cotton manufacturing country in the world, and the story of the recent development of this industry in the South reads like a dream. In 1890 we had 34 cotton mills in South Carolina; in 1900 we had 80. The product increased in value from $10,000,000 to $30,000,000, and almost all, or at least the bulk of the products of these mills go directly to China.

The other speakers were M. Zumoto and the Rev. W. R. Widderspoon. Letters of regret were read from President Roosevelt, Wu Ting Fang, Kogoro Takahira, Japanese minister, and a number of senators and representatives.

Robbed of His Purse.

How often we see this startling headline in our daily papers, and how much we sympathize with the unfortunate victim, be he rich or poor, but there are hundreds of other cases, of people who have been robbed of a far greater treasure than wealth that we never hear of. We refer to those who have been robbed of their good health by a rebellious stomach. There is one medicine, however, that will conquer a rebellious somach and make it perform its duties properly, and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It is a specific remedy for the stomach and will cure belching, flatulency, sick headache, indigestion, constipation and biliousness. Try it and see. Good Old Grandma's Advice

The children are sick—send for grandma! Who is there like her for wisdom and gentleness, and sympathy, since the first baby came? What would we have done without her?

"Cascarets are splendid, my old mother praises them very highly, and says she would never be without them."—Howard W. Wellman, 129 Tremont Street, Fairmount, Ohio.

"I suffered seven years with tape-worm but didn't know I had one. Two months ago I was taken with inflamation of the bowels, sour stomach, sick headache. I tried Cascarets and had not taken them a week before I was relieved of a tape-worm 15 feet long. I am very much better."—Mrs. John Stone, Put-In-Bay Island, Ohio.

"After taking Cascarets for a few nights before writing, I was able to pass a tape-worm 24 feet in length. Cascarets have our praise, and I will willingly furnish a testimonial to anyone who desires it."—Mrs. Harry Wood, Kenneth, Ind.

"I was troubled for a long time with liver complaint and was in such misery that I had to give up work. I took but 4 doses of Cascarets before I was able to go to work again."—Mrs. Jos. Kresling, 1321 Congress St., St. Louis.

The wisdom of years of experience with her own health, and grandpa's and the children's, and children's children has taught grandma what is good for her and the several generations of family she has looked after. Grandma of today knows and advises that Cascarets Candy Cathartic are the only perfect family medicine for all bowel troubles, children's diseases, diseases of the stomach and liver, sick headaches, biliousness and bad blood.

Cash prices were unchanged. July price for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2, and 3c under for No. 3. Sales were but a few cars.

Flax trading was rather active and the fall futures very strong. September sold 2c up to $1.50, and then lost 1c of the gain, closing 1c up. October was up 1c all the time, but finally unchanged. Cash seed advanced 1¾c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Dropped on Cables and Crop Conditions.

Chicago, May 22.—Lower cables and favorable crop weather started July wheat, 3c to 1/4c lower, at 74⅛c to 74c. There were copious rains in the Southwest and clearer weather in the Northwest. Statistical journals reported the week's growth as promising and conditions generally good; wheat was fairly good, but heading slow in some instances. Trade was not heavy, but there seemed to be little support and at 74c for July a number of stop loss orders came out which took the price of that option down to 73⅝c. Local receipts were small at 15 cars; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 108, making a total for the three points of 123 cars, against 126 last week, and 236 a year ago.

Wheat hung lily late in the session, rallying slightly on covering, but closing weak, July 1/4c lower at 74c.

Good crop prospects, the wheat decline and indifference in foreign markets to conditions here caused corn to dip a little at the opening. Receipts were small at 51 cars and had a sustaining effect upon the market. July opened 1/4@1/2c to a shade lower at 62c to 62¼c, and dipped to 61⅝c but later steadied at 62c.

Late trade in corn was dull and was affected somewhat by the wheat weakness. July closed easy 1/4c down at 62 @1/2c.

Oats were again something of a guessing speculation. Prices were a little lower at the opening in sympathy with other grains and the trade was light and unimportant. Reduced receipts had a sustaining effect at the decline as did the discrepancy in prices between July options and cash stuff. July new opened a shade lower at 37¼c and sold down to 36⅞c. Receipts, 118 cars.

Provisions showed momentary strength at the opening in spite of a weak hog market and the easier feeling in all grains. Some pork was wanted and offerings were light. Trade soon turned dull and declines were registered in all products. July pork opened 2½c higher, at $17.10, and sold down to $17.02½; July ribs a shade higher, at $9.50, and eased to $9.47½, and July lard, 2½c lower to unchanged at $10.12½ to $10.15, and hung near the lower figure.

Close: Wheat—May, 73⅞c; July, 74c; September, 73c; December, 74¼c. Corn—May, 61¼@⅜c; July, 62@⅛c; September, 60⅜c; December, 46⅜@⅝c; May (1903), 45⅜c. Oats—May, 42½c; July, 34¼@⅜c; new, 37⅜c; September, 29¼c; new, 30⅞c; December, 29¼c; new, 31⅜c. Pork—May, $17.02½; July, $17.12½@17.15; September, $17.25; January, $16.40. Lard—May, $10.17½@10.20; July, $10.17½@10.20; September, $10.20. Ribs—May, $9.67½@9.70; July, $9.42½@9.45; September, $9.65. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.76; Southwestern, $1.75; May, $1.58; September, $1.49; October, $1.45. Rye—May, 55c; July, 57c; September, 56c. Barley—Cash, 55@71c. Timothy—September, $4.00. Clover—Cash, $8.35. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, 80@82c; No. 3 red, 78@81c; No. 2 hard winter, 76@77c; No. 3 hard winter, 75@75c; No. 1 northern, spring, 76@77c; No. northern spring, 75@76c; No. 3 spring, 72@74c. Corn—No. 3, 62@⅜c. Oats—No. 2, 42@⅜c; No. 3, 41¾@42c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was considerable selling pressure early on continued favorable weather and the weak Liverpool cables. Later the market rallied partially on reported export business at the seaboard, and closed weak. The market on the whole is dull and uninteresting. Broomhall says weakness in Liverpool is due to more favorable weather and selling of cargoes by the continent. The general speculative interest is small. The government will issue a crop report tomorrow afternoon, the details of which are indefinite. We imagine, however, that it is the final estimate on the last crop.

Price Current of Cincinnati: The week has been a little less uniformly favorable for vegetation than the preceding week, but conditions of all crops are maintained. Wheat is fairly good, but heading low in some instances.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, May 22.—There was a fairly large trade in wheat today, but mostly all of it local professional character. The market during the greater part of the session ruled weak on favorable weather in this country and abroad and discouraging cables from Liverpool. What market closed ½@¾ lower for the day. Continental market were also lower. There was more or less covering by shorts on the break, which caused a slight rally toward the end of the session. The market closed quiet ¼c to ⅜c lower than last night. There was a moderate cash demand for cash wheat here and the seaboard reported a fair business done there for export on the break. The final figures on the last crop will be issued by the government tomorrow afternoon and they are expected to revise the acreage on the last crop. If they do, their figures will in all probability comec ose to the estimates of private statisticians. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 20 cars.

Trade in corn was light today and there was no special feature to the market which ruled easy during the early part of the session owing to favorable weather and somewhat larger offerings by the country, also small cash demand, but toward the end of the session the market rallied on covering by shorts and closed unchanged to ⅛c lower than yesterday. Foreign markets quiet, Liverpool closed unchanged for the day. The final figures on the last crop will be given by the government tomorrow and should have an important bearing on the market, but the large confirmed holdings of July make it a dangerous proposition to sell short. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 80 cars.

There was a fairly large trade in oats today and the market ruled very strong owing to light country offerings and excellent cash demand. No. 3 white oats on track sold at 2 to 2¼c premium over May, and the present prices for No. 2 mixed and white oats certainly make the July option look very cheap. There has been good investment buying for several days and we think the July option will sell higher. There was some covering of shorts in the May option today which advanced that option to 43½c where it closed. July and September closed ⅛@¼c higher than yesterday. The weather generally is favorable for the crop. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 170 cars.

Provisions opened firm for a moment but soon gave way under selling by holders and had a sharp break, rallying later but closing easy with small gains for the day. Receipts of hogs did not come quite up to expectations but aside from this there was no change in the situation. We believe we will see thorough liquidation before long. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 20,000 hogs.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul.—Harrett & Zimmerman report that the feature of the market was decidedly that which applies to the midsummer's quietness. TOO HOT OR TOO COOL.

Senator Stewart, who has been in Washington for many years, has an old negro retainer who comes around twice a week for his money, says the New York World. He made his regular Wednesday call today. The senator gave him a dollar and said.

"Jim, I'm getting tired of this sort of business. You are an able-bodied man. Why don't you go to work instead of living on my charity?"

"'Deed, hoss," said Jim, reproachfully, "you ain't the kind o' man to be askin' me to go to wuk now, is you? Why, boss, it's too hot to wuk."

"Well," snorted Senator Stewart, "I haven't seen you work in the winter, any either."

"In de wintah, boss?" in great astonishment. "Why, boss, you mus' be crazy! It's fah too col, to wuk in de wintah."

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Before Mr. Keene's departure for Europe this morning he told some friends on the steamer that the market was all straight and that no serious decline in prices need be expected for an infinite period, the Standard Oil factions are bearish, but these people never say to buy stocks until a bull wave is nearly half over, nor do they say to sell until the decline is half over. If the market continues strong I would advise taking profits on scale up or on bulges. Prices were hardly high enough yesterday to justify much profit-taking. I think scale trading on the bull side is best play for this market. It is safe and catches most of the fluctuations. It can be applied to T. C. I., Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Baltimore & Ohio, the Pacifics, etc. If the coal strike should be settled we ought to get an improvement all around, but as terms of settlement cannot be arranged without several days of discussion I think it in order to take profits on the rallies and buy only on a scale down.

Harris, Gates & Co. to B. E. Baker.—The street hears that an official statement of plans for the development of Brooklyn Rapid Transit has been prepared and is soon to be issued. Also that the issuance of the statement is to be the signal for an active bull movement in the stock. Messrs. Ryan and Brady are mentioned in the gossip as having charge of the pool, with the Pennsylvania in the back-ground and exerting a dominating influence. Ninety per cent of the outstanding shares of the capital of Brooklyn Rapid Transit is said to be in the control of a pool.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: We get it from a good source that Canadian Pacific is endeavoring to secure control of Wisconsin Central and that the Great Northern-Northern Pacific crowd are seeking control of the former property. We are also told that the Illinois Central interests have been quietly absorbing Wisconsin Central. We are told this stock will sell materially higher.

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: Although commission houses express considerable disappointment over the small volume of business, speculative feeling tonight continues optimistic, the most successful operators look for a good trading market in which stocks will be a purchase on moderate recessions. Money rather tends downward, influenced by receipts from the interior, the reasonable certainty of peace in South Africa and a large gold movement from the Rand mills, as the latter should start about the same time that shipments commence from the Klondike. The increased supply of gold is likely to prove a bull factor in speculation.

Another development, which, in the judgment of eminent bankers, is adding a great deal of strength to the situation, is the improvement in conditions governing the copper industries. This has been so marked as to lift the prices both of the metal and stock in spite of the fact in the case of the shares that the latter have been handicapped by "Get rich quick" advertisements printed in many papers. Western speculators have gone into this stock on a pretty extensive scale, and, while insiders discourage purchases, there is suspicion that the City bank crowd hold a large amount of stock bought in the sixties, and there is a plan on foot for the settlement of all the long-standing and costly suits in Montana through the absorption of Heinzes' United Copper company. Of course this is merely gossip, given for what it is worth, but some very well informed people believe that before the year is out the copper industry of this country will be practically under a single management. They were bearish on Canadian Pacific a long time, but turned to the bull side when the copper situation changed for the better.

S. B. Dickinson to W. H. Laidley & Co.—It is believed that Standard Oil people who have been steadily accumulating stocks on all declines are ready now to advance the market, taking St. Paul and Amalgamated Copper in hand for a starter.

• • •

J. F. Harris to B. E. Baker—Looks very much as if the Alton and Kansas Southern would be put together. If they are, both will sell much higher, the common and also the preferred issues of both roads. I am inclined to advise our friends to buy these stocks.

• • •

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.—You cannot do better than stay short for a few days as noted in my letter of yesterday, the prices therein may be exceeded but it will be only fractionally and there is no need to be alarmed at any small bulge above these prices. I expect the market to decline until Friday afternoon or Saturday morning and advise covering by shorts on the next decline either on days named or around previous low prices. It may be that prices may not decline much below the recent low level, at any rate no advance of importance is likely at present. Trade as suggested, selling short on this bulge and do not buy anything until a reaction to about the previous low prices of last Monday. There is likely to be some bad crop news in the near future which will infuse a more bullish sentiment, but I do not expect more than temporary rallies until after June 1. However, don't sell sugar or copper. Copper is a good purchase on any good decline. Sugar, Copper, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Tennessee Coal and Iron and Union Pacific are purchases on all reactions.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The price of copper advanced about 5c today, owing to the large demand from consumers and an unsatisfied demand from speculative operators. Lake is now held at 12¾c, some holders asking as high as 12¾@12⅞c is quite freely bid. Electrolytic is 12⅜c to 12½c. Castings, 12¼c to 12⅝c.

• • •

Houghton to Paine, Webber & Co.: The management of Baltic is encountering some very heavy mass copper at the second level of No. 2 shaft.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Copper Range is a good buy at 58c. The coppers are looking better and buying is going on in Amalgamated. Think they are all in for a good advance.

• • •

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: A leading copper manufacturing house, with headquarters in New York has notified its salesmen to not accept new contracts for delivery without first notifying them, as the price of copper metal was advancing, and was hard to get under 13c.

• • •

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Copper shares are higher all around and the talk regarding the metal situation is more bullish than for some time. There is an advance in the prices of metal and 14-cent copper is predicted. Mohawk and United States Mining are continually being absorbed and taken out of the market. Insiders are talking very bullish on Copper Range and easily mark up the price. Too much manipulation in Mass. Old Dominion is very scarce now so closely held there is very little around brokers' offices. United Copper is in good demand.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 22.—Cotton opened steady with prices 1 to 5 points higher, on bullish Liverpool cables and light receipts. July started at 9.05 and August at 8.75. From this there was a reaction of 3 to 4 points under selling by room longs. But Wall street bought July and August at the lower prices and the whole list hardened, July reaching 9.06. Liverpool eased off 2 points, July and August fell back to last night's final bids with trading less active. Fine crop and weather news, the knowledge that Liverpool will be closed tomorrow and Saturday, checked investment support from the public.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 1-16c lower. Middling uplands, 9¼c; middling gulf, 9⅜c; sales, 118 bales. Cotton futures steady. May, 9.15; June, 9.08; July, 8.90; August, 8.59; September, 8.07; October, 7.56; November, 7.38; December, 7.36; January, 7.37; February, 7.38.

THE DOLLY VARDEN HAS COME AGAIN

The Old Time Gowns of Dainty Freshness and Charming Color Combinations to Delight Us Once More.

New York, May 17.—The molders of feminine fashions, casting about for a striking effect in summer costumes, have reverted this year to a century-old model and produced, with necessary variations of shape and colors, the beautiful Dolly Varden gowns. Nothing offered by the modiste in many a season has become so instantly popular as the Dolly Varden dress goods, and nothing quite so bewitching has tempted the taste and purse of the well-dressed woman. Indeed, in New York and other large cities there is quite a Dolly Varden craze, and it has not stopped at dress materials, but is evidenced in shoes, hats, hosiery and parasols.

There is also a Dolly Varden "walk," which is affected by the smart New York girl. This half-hoydenish stride has taken the place of the kangaroo "lope," which for almost two seasons has been the vogue. The Dolly Varden walk is totally different from the kangaroo motion, and has none of the latter's jerky, ungraceful character. It is the embodiment of saucy independence, and metropolitan fashion has seized upon it as a new and pleasing fad.

There is a two-fold reason for the popularity of the Dolly Varden walk—first, because it is a novelty; and, secondly, because it displays inevitably the feet incased in the most charming of high-heeled, low-cut Dolly Varden shoes. Maids and matrons who love pretty footgear will revel in this dainty shoe. It resembles somewhat the colonial shoe, and yet it is lighter and somewhat more graceful in shape. The heel is very high, but straight, growing very narrow and tapering where it taps the ground. There is a world of coquetry in its heel, and its character is augmented by the high instep surmounted by a large buckle of silver, gold and sometimes of jewels. These shoes are seen in patent leather, French kid and satin, or in a combination of the two, or even the three. But the patent leather is the favorite, and nothing could be prettier for a shapely foot. The sober-minded girl must make no mistake and buy a pair of Dolly Varden shoes, however, for that would never do. There is nothing more frivolous than these dainty conceptions in footwear. They are for the use at a great garden fete to be given at Newport this summer, and is almost as short in the skirt as a rainy-day dress, barely failing to the ankles. This, of course, is to be worn by quite a young girl. With her quaintly beautiful costume she will wear flowered hosiery and flowered satin slippers, strapped with a huge buckle of silver.

It goes without saying that no other dress will be so popular at the seashore as the Dolly Varden. It is so well adpated to the environment of any watering place that few other costumes can be thought of by those who care a fig for smartness.

One of the ultra-fashionable novelties of the summer will be the Dolly Varden bathing dress. This will be made of the usual materials, flannels and brilliantine, but with an excess of frills and borderings on sleeves and skirt of miniature roses and carnations. A pure white flannel bathing costume, with short, bell-shaped skirt, almost covered with tiny hand-embroidered flowers, is now on exhibition. It is doubtful, however, if any woman with a sense of the properties can be found who would be daring enough to appear at either Newport or Narragansett pier attired in the decidedly novel, but extremely vociferous, costume.

But the piece de resistance of the "Varden" craze is the hat. It is a marvel, and counts for much in price. In shape it is a cross between a shepherdess hat and a gypsy bonnet, and is both picturesque and beautiful. Here again the sober-minded girl with the quiet face will do well if she be not tempted to purchase this "confection" of flowers and ribbon. The Dolly Varden hat is not meant for the thoughtful face. It is intended to shade laughing eyes and saucy lips, and only she wears a bedowered gown and high-heeled silver buckled shoes is entitled to promenade Broadway in this ensnaring headpiece.

Silver gray, or that new, peculiar and most realistic tone in dress fabrics called potato brown, have come to prevail in the choice of all smart, well appointen motor suits. Whether you run a seven horse power tonneau carriage or a spider runabout, or merely expect and hope to be asked to tour in somebody's car, a well fitting, perfectly equipped motor dress seems to be an essential in every wardrobe.

WHITE EMBROIDERED SWISS.

Simple waist of white embroidered and spotted mull. The elbow sleeves have black velvet, run through embroidery, and tied on little bows.

laughing, soft-eyed, coquettish maiden and the lovely matron who still retains the right to flaunt her vanity. As for the demure damsel, she must be content to stick to her common-sense heels, else she will commit an unpardonable offense against fashion and make of the Dolly Varden shoe a mere anachronism.

The great charm of the Dolly Varden fabrics lies in their daintiness of pattern and delicate harmonies of color. Flowers of natural size form the chief part of the design, and these are interspersed or alternated with small wreaths of forget-me-nots and tiny garlands of roses. The true Dolly Varden skirt spreads outward from the hips, and has an overskirt with a wide ruffle. There is nothing positive in the costume; it is all a billow of frills and tucks. The goods are made of various light summer fabrics, foulard, grenadine and muslin bellowered and bright, with the soft colors of an old-fashioned garden a-bloom.

The Dolly Varden dress has a decided advantage over most other styles of the season, inasmuch as it is becoming to both maids and matrons, the cut of the figure and the statue of the wearer. The Dolly Varden costume has a singular grace of its own which is easily imparted to the one who dons it.

So great is the present demand for the new style that evening gowns modified to the requirements of full dress are being made for the most fashionable woman, and the effect in conjunction with old-timey flowers worn in the hair and the corsage is more than pleasing. One of the costliest evening frocks seen in New York was designed for a recent and noted bride of the "400," and it is almost a replica of the genuine Dolly Varden dress of the eighteenth century, with the exception that the skirt is long and has a train of considerable length. Another Dolly Varden costume is intended for

The tailors and dressmakers and milliners regard the situation very seriously, and have imported from France various startling ideas and equally aggressive cloths, but the American woman, who always knows what she wants and dresses for her part with praiseworthy practicality and perfection in detail, has her mind made up perfectly firmly on the question of what automobile costumes shall be.

It all depends, in such centers of fashion as Newport, etc., whether you are an automobilist, or a serious motorist. The automobile, whether it is a luxurious little low swung phaeton, a basket surrey, a light, graceful stanhope, or a runabout, calls for dress with a big D. Something fluffy, is the idea. An impressive dust coat usually covers the froufrou smartness of the gown itself, for no woman who respects herself as a motorist or who hopes to be respected by her friends and the public can be prevailed upon to take her seat as guest or hostess before swathing herself in the coquettish folds of a long, light surtout.

It is a sourtout millitaire for the large, loud tonneau carriage of foreign make; for the light-footed, dainty built Americanf electric vehicle it is of silver gray champaigne yellow, or mushroom gray silk wrap mohair, or peau de poisson, a new water-proof French fabric. Whatever it may be made of, and some of them are of the finest brown Holland linen, more or less treated with lace applications, it is sure to have a loose body, flaring skirts, wide sleeves and an abundance of capes falling upon the shoulders.

Under such a coat anything may be worn, from a teagown to a severely tallorish white duck suit, and in the country, for morning exercise, a complete white wash dress of duck, pique or linen is considered very sweet and appropriate. These white suits are piped and collared often in the wearer's livery colors, for nothing is smarter with all types of horseless carriages than for the owner to show the red and brown, red and blue, or red and green that is worn by her servant, and that is also apparent in the trimmings of the carriage itself.

On her head the woman who manages the levers wears anything that is comfortable and becoming, though the very well known that the big, elongated turbans and the hats with rolled up side brims so all-pervasive this spring have been the result of a study to find a shape of headgear that is both becoming and comfortable when speeding along in the electric and gasoline carriages. Over the hat or turban of chasseur chape from two or three veils are worn as a rule. French women have so far forgotten their coquetry as to adopt goggles, and black mica visors, that render them hideous and inhuman in appearance; the American wans will have none of these unless racing or long touring is in order. For general purposes they wear one thickness of black net over a layer of white tulle, and then upon these a brown or green made up automobile veil is put on after the automobilist climbs into her seat and slips off before she descends.

A good automobile veil is a yard long and has a draw string in its upper and lower edges. One string is pulled tight about the hat crown, the other gathers the fullness under the chin, and the ends are caught with two little gilt clasps at the rear.

As a rule, gloves match the veils, and a big, baggy pair of potato brown wash fawnskin gloves, fastening with one large snap clasp and provided with small rubber cogs in the palm, are preferred. Fawnskin gloves are as soft as the finest suede and as durable as rawhide, and they button on the top or on the outside of the wrist, and are liberally perforated on the back of the hand.

SLINK GREEN FAINTED.

Offered $100,000 For Horse He Sold For $30,000.

There was a vacant chair when the distinctively "horsey" crowd met at its usual place last week. Tobe Broderick was absent, but this did not prevent the others from responding cheerfully to "One-Eyed Hank's" invitation to "have something," says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. Justice having been done to this when it arrived, a more sociable feeling seemed to pervade the group, and when someone asked what had become of Tobe, "One-Eyed Hank" answered:

"I seen him down at—"

"You didn't 'seen' him at all."

It was the voice of Tobe, who had just come in, that interrupted Hank. "How often have I told you to say 'saw,' not 'seen'" he continued. "Really, Hank, sometimes I am mortified almost to death by the bad breaks in grammar you get off."

"Well, maybe, maybe," answered Hank, good-naturedly. "Just the same, I never knowed that grammar helped you or any other man to drive a 2:40 horse in 2:20."

"There's where you get away with a false start again," retorted Tobe. "Now I have driven a 2:40 horse in 2:20, and while I don't say exactly that my grammar made it possible for me to do so, I will say that a man who murders the language like you do couldn't possibly have done so."

At this "One-Eyed Hank" took vigorous exception, and the argument would have waxed warm had not the others restrained him and begged Tobe to tell them about his wonderful feat. The latter was nothing loath and started in with this:

"Did any of you fellows ever hear of 'Slink' Green, of Fall River, Mass.?" One or two of the group grunted assent and Tobe continued. "Well, this was many years ago, and I was training and driving horses around the East, when one day I got a letter from 'Slink' Green. He wanted me to come up to Fall River and look at a horse he had there and give him my opinion about the animal. As he sent me the price of the railway ticket, and as I hadn't anything else important to occupy my time, I went.

"When I got there I found the horse was a stallion, dark brown, and a fine looker. 'Slink' had driven him in some races down East, and had an idea that the horse would make a 'wonder' if he had the proper training. I thought so, too, after I found out how much money 'Slink' had and how much he was willing to pay for the training, and so I closed a deal with him by which I was to take the horse down to Brooklyn and develop him.

"Well, I got the horse—Judge Brigham was his name—down to Brooklyn, and got him quarters down at the old Prospect Park track. Then I began to train him regularly; and, say, you'd be surprised to know how fast that horse developed. I made up my mind that I had a world-beater right there, and when 'Slink' came down, about six weeks after I had taken the animal, to see what progress I had made with him, I told 'Slink' my honest opinion. It was only a short time before the Buffalo circuit races were to come off, and there was a sweepstakes to be trotted there, the entrance fee being $2000 each. There were already five horses entered, which made $10,000 in the pot, and I urged 'Slink' to enter Judge Brigham. 'If you do,' I said, 'I'm certain we can take down the money.'

"'I can't do it, Tobe,' says 'Slink.' 'The fact is that I am about down to cases. I've had a run of bad luck lately, and every dollar that I have got foots up just $500.'

"'Suppose I can raise the money,' I says, 'will you enter the horse and give me a bit if we win?'

"'Sure thing,' says 'Slink,' and that ended the conversation.

"I used to dally with the 'tiger' a little in those days, in the interval of training horses, and in that way had become acquainted with a number of the big gamblers around New York. So that very night I goes over to New York and hunts up a couple of them that I knew to be game sports and to have big bank rolls. Louis Barrell and Jim Irving were the men, and they were just the king pins in their business.

"'What is it now?' asks Barrell, 'Have you found out how to make gold dollars out of lead?'

"Then I tells them about this horse, Judge Brigham, and what a crackerjack he was. 'If you'll only put up the money for his entrance in the Buffalo sweepstakes,' I says, 'you'll make so much money that you won't know how to carry it home. Why, Judge Brigham will win that race in a walk,' I says, 'and, as he isn't known, you can buy him in the pools for a song. Judge Fullerton is in the race, and he is bound to be a prime favorite. Why, you ought to walk away with at least $50,000.'

"Well, the result of all my talk was that the two gamblers agreed to put up the money. First, however, I had to show them that the horse could go. I arranged to do that the following night. It was a bright moonlight evening, and when the men came over to the track I sent Judge Brigham around three times. He did the miles in 2:18, 2:18 and 2:15¼. That was all the gamblers wanted to see, as that was lightning speed for those days.

"So we shipped the horse to Buffalo and made the entry. As I expected, when the pools were opened the public just rushed to get the money down on Judge Fullerton. There were other horses in the race that had good backing, but Judge Brigham didn't seem to have a friend. The two gamblers were on deck, and they kept buying the field in every pool for anywhere from $10 to $20, and when the day of the race came they stood to win $75,000 on Judge Brigham.

"I was in the sulky, and the first heat I did not try to force the horse, letting him go easy and just saving my distance. The second heat, however, I let the horse out, especially as the driver of Fullerton was urging that horse with the idea of tiring out the others. The result was that I won the heat in 2:22 flat and distanced every horse in the race except Judge Fullerton. After that it was easy. Judge Brigham won the third heat in 2:22¼ and the fourth in the same time. That gave us the purse, and the second heat gave Brigham the stallion record for the world up to that time.

"Among the men who were fond of horses at the meeting was Jim Fisk, who owned a number of trotters in partnership with a Wall street broker named Hall. After the second heat of the race Fisk sent Jack Nodine, a noted trainer of those days, to 'Slink' Green with an offer of $30,000 for Judge Brigham. Green had been offered the same sum by an agent of Robert Bonner, who had seen the horse doing the moonlight trial, but he couldn't accept it then on account of his agreement with the gamblers. When Fisk's man came along, though, and pulled out $5000 in bills to clinch the deal, 'Slink' couldn't resist the temptation and closed with him. Conequently, when I met 'Slink,' after being weighed, the first thing he gave me was: 'Well, I've sold the horse to Fisk for $30,000.' I was rather taken back at this news, because I had been calculating to drive Brigham around the circuit and pick up a big chunk of money. I told 'Slink' that I was disappointed, and he handed me a $1000 bill to kind of console me. Well, that was something, and I was just stowing it away when Budd Doble came up to us.

"'Green,' says Budd, 'I want to buy Judge Brigham. I'm authorized to offer you $100,000 for the horse.'

"'Slink' just looked at him and went pale and then red and then pale again, and then suddenly toppled over and lay still on the ground.

"'Good heavens,' I said to Budd, 'you've killed him.' I certainly thought that old 'Slink' had kicked the bucket at the thought of what he had missed. So did Budd. But 'Slink' was not dead. He had only fainted, and as soon as he had regained his senses he began to curse his luck.

"What did I get out of the race? Well, there was the thousand that 'Slink' had given me, and the gamblers were not backward. They gave me $1500 apiece, and then I had bought a few pools myself. Altogether I carried away about $5000 from Buffalo. Judge Brigham never did a thing on the turf afterward. I'm not saying why, but it's my opinion that if Fisk had engaged me to look after the horse it might have turned out more satisfactory for him. But Fisk didn't, so there's no use in speculating as to what might have been. I asked Nodine afterward who he was trying to buy the horse for, and he told me it was for Henry N. Smith, the owner of Goldsmith Maid."

"It's a mighty good story, as you tell it," remarked One-Eyed Hank, "but there's one question I would like to ask you."

"Well, what is it?" said Tobe, looking suspiciously at Hank.

"Have you got enough of that $5000 left to buy the drinks?"

"I have, and I'm going to keep it, too," answered Tobe. "If that story doesn't make some of you fellows loosen up, you will never hear another."

MINERS ARE PRISONERS

Terrible Explosion Traps Men at Fernie, B. C.

Small Hopes Entertained For Their Safety.

St. Paul, May 23.—A special to the Dispatch from Fernie, B. C., says: A terrible explosion occurred at 7 o'clock last evening in No. 2 mine, which is connected with No. 3 shaft, and also with the high line shaft. All three openings were blocked. One hundred and fifty men were estimated at work, sixteen of whom escaped from No. 3 before the cave in. One boy has since died. The remainder are prisoners, and small hopes are entertained for their safety. Good orded prevails, and everything possible is being done to relieve the situation. The fan was disabled, but was quickly restored. No. 3 is expected to be opened soon.

BAD FLOODS IN IOWA

Northeastern Portion of the State Is Half Submerged and Immense Financial Losses Have Been Sustained.

St. Paul, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The entire northeastern portion of Iowa is half submerged, and immense financial losses have been sustained. Jesse A. Gregg, of St. Paul, has returned from the inundated district and reports great destruction of property. It was estimated by the people living in the stricken district that between 2 and 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, when the cloudburst swept over, that not less than six inches of water fell. The water formed in the low places until all barriers were overflowed and then rushed down the creek beds and ravines, pouring a great torrent into a stream called the Dry Rock, running through Decorah and other good sized towns in the vicinity.

The downpour was appalling in its volume and tropical in its violence. All running streams were out of their banks within thirty minutes. Streets became impassable, and walking was nearly impossible, owing to the gale of wind which accompanied the storms. The situation for three hours was one of great peril to everyone, but so far as Mr. Gregg learned, only two lives were lost. A mother, aroused by the encroachment of the water into the house, leaped from her bed in the dark with her child in her arms and apparently went out doors. The child screamed and managed to free itself from its mother's arms and fell into the water. In the darkness the mother was unable to locate the little one, who was drowned. A large egg warehouse located a half mile from the torrent was swept away and an old man drowned.

Between Conover and Decorah, a distance of nine miles, seven miles of track owned by the Milwaukee was washed out. Sixteen bridges in and about Decorah, owned by the city and county, were destroyed. All the bridges were iron. It is impossible to get from one section of the city to the other. The stream which overflowed its banks runs through a portion of the residence district and the railroad district of the town, and great damage was done to private and railroad property. There were six washouts between Austin and Preston, on the open prairie. Ten miles of track was destroyed on the Iowa and Minnesota division of the Milwaukee.

At one point the flood undermined a track on which a coal train was standing, overturning the train. A depot was overturned thereby.

Mr. Gregg says the damage at Decorah was estimated at $600,000.

A Conover, Iowa, special to the Dispatch says: The heaviest rain, accompanied by hail, reached this city the night of the 21st, flooding everything before it. At Decorah two lives were lost and the town swept by the flood. Houses were washed from foundations and some have gone down stream. People residing on the flats fled to the hills for safety. Most all of the country bridges are gone, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul tracks are an almost total wreck on the branch to Decorah.

The damage throughout the country cannot be estimated, and more loss of life is feared, as all points have not been heard from. At Fort Atkinson eleven cars were washed into the stream, and loss of stock is reported throughout the country.

ONE BURGLAR KILLED

New York, May 23.—In a wild chase after burglars through Harlem streets, early today, forty or fifty shots were fired. One burglar, Walter White, was shot in the temple and killed instantly.

The robbers, three in number, were discovered leaving the store of an optician at 2068 Third avenue, by a watchman. He followed them until he found a policeman. Then the pursuit was on and the robbers began shooting. The officer returned the fire. A few blocks further along one of the burglars fell.

By this time ten policemen had joined in the chase, and a constant fire was kept up on the two remaining robbers, who apparently had exhausted their ammunition. At Fifth avenue they were surrounded and, after being clubbed, they surrendered.

Several bundles of valuables which they had stolen were found in the street where the burglars had dropped them.

None of the policemen were injured in the fight.

JOKERS RETURN PICTURES

New York, May 23.—A collection of photographs illustrative of German art, presented by Emperor William of Germany through Prince Henry to Harvard university, and recently reported as having been stolen from the Fogg art museum in Cambridge, is reported to have been returned.

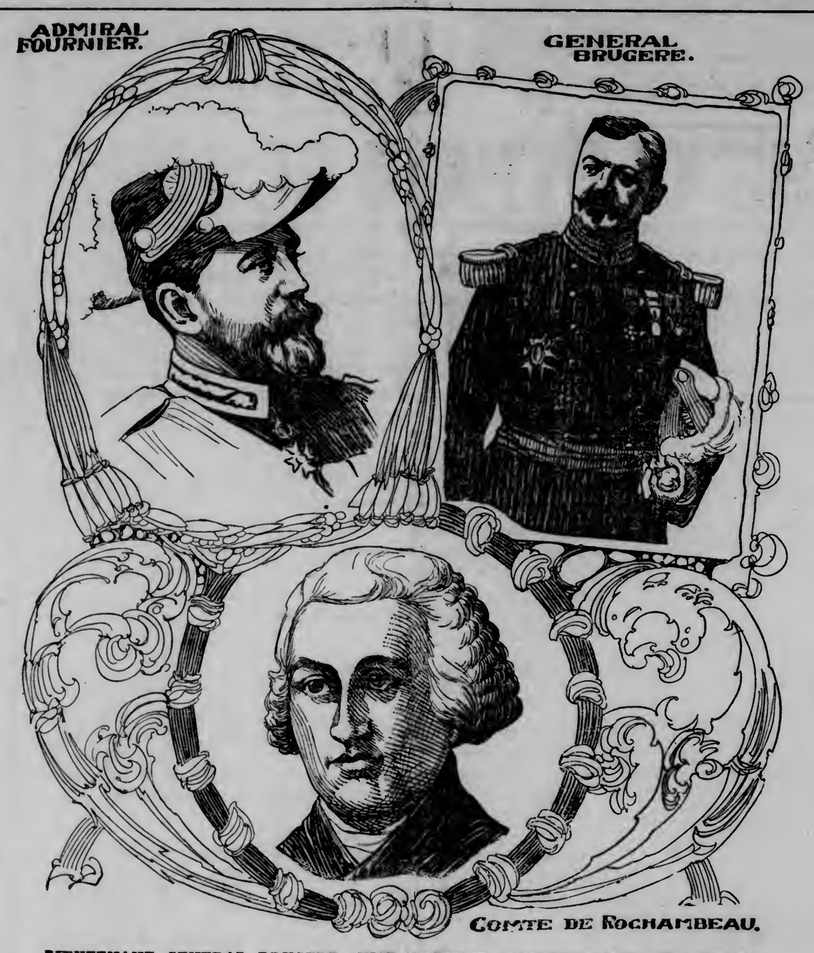
The portfolio was restored to its proper place as mysteriously as it had been removed. None of the photographs is missing. The mystery with which the whole affair has been attended, and the apparent lack of other motive than mere mischief in withdrawing the imperial gift for seventy-two hours, tends to confirm the theory that some society among the students spirited away the photographs. The authorities in charge of the museum had an unpleasant time for three days, and are much relieved at the happy issue, though no less indignant over the invasion of the university decorum.

SCHWAB MAKES A DONATION

New York, May 23.—Rev. George Street, pastor of the First Baptist church, has received a check from Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, for $5000 to be added to the building fund of the new church which is being erected by the congregation at a cost of $20,000, says a Braddock, Pa., special to the World. The congregation is composed principally of employes of the mills and furnaces of the Carnegie Steel company, who expect to dedicate their church early in June. Mr. Schwab latest contribution makes a total of $15,000 he has given Braddock churches.

OLD TRAMP WANTS A HOME

Hudson, Wis., May 23.—Ingwald Running and Edward Nyton, two hoboes accused of breaking into freight cars and stealing merchandise, pleaded guilty before Judge Helms. They were sentenced to the state reformatory at Green Bay for from one to two years. Sheriff Bell will take them there next week. Edward Lang, the venerable tramp, who pleaded guilty to robbing the Wilson postoffice, was taken from here to Eau Claire by Marshal Charles Leadston for trial before the United States court. He says he will plead guilty there also, as he is anxious to get a permanent abiding place. He has been a wanderer ever since he was a child.



LIEUTENANT GENERAL BRUGERE, VICE ADMIRAL FOURNIER AND THE GREAT ROCHAMBEAU.

Lieutenant General Brugere, commander of the French army, and Vice Admiral Fournier are the guests of America during the ceremonies attendant upon the unveiling of the Rochambeau monument. Comte de Rochambeau's service in the cause of America's independence will never be forgotten by the people of the United States.

IRELAND

May Be Among Candidates For Vacant Archbishopric.

Rome, May 23.—The vatican is discussing the probability of the archdiocese of New York sending in the name of Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, Minn., with the names of Bishop Charles McDonnell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Auxiliary Bishop John M. Farley, of New York, as candidates from whom the propaganda shall select a successor to the late Archbishop Corrigan. The belief in this possibility is based on the idea that the Catholics of the archdiocese are ambitious to have a cardinal as the archbishop, and that none of the American archbishops or bishops have such a good chance of obtaining the scarlet beretta as Archbishop Ireland.

New York, May 23.—Bishop Farley, of New York, left at the vatican a most excellent impression after his long stay here when the pope showed how highly he appreciated him, says a Rome dispatch to the Tribune. His candidature for the archbishopric of New York seems to be held in the greatest favor, but the vatican will not commit itself, saying that any prediction is now premature, because of the importance of the see at New York and because of the complexion affairs in America may take after the Taft mission.

HANGING TO A TREE.

Susquehanna, Pa., School Principal Ends Life.

Susquehanna, Pa., May 23.—Professor Benton E. James, for many years principal of the Montrose high school, committed suicide last night by hanging himself to a tree in the outskirts of the borough. His body was found today. Temporary insanity caused by ill-health is supposed to be the cause. Professor James was one of the ablest and best known instructors in Northern Pennsylvania. He was a former superintendent of schools of Susquehanna county.

QUIET PREVAILS.

Nothing Doing Around Mine Workers Headquarters.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 23.—All of the district leaders having gone to their homes, the headquarters of the United Mine Workers was about the quietest place that could be found in the coal regions today. The only persons here directly connected with the miners' strike were National President Mitchell and District Presidents Nichol, Fahey and Duffy. Reports from the outlying districts this morning were that calm prevails everywhere.

FOREST FIRE RAGES.

Canon City, Col., May 23.—A forest fire, covering the whole top of Sheep mountain, between this city and Victor, is in progress, and the illumination can be seen from here. The mountain seems to be a seething mass of flame. There are prospectors at work on the mountain, and fears are entertained for their safety. A large number of horses and cattle that graze there also are imperiled.

LUNCHED ON GAULOIS

President Roosevelt, With Prominent Officials and the Members of the Rochambeau Party Spent Day at Annapolis.

Washington, May 23.—Today's official ceremonies, preliminary to the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue tomorrow, centered at Annapolis where a distinguished party, including President Roosevelt, members of the cabinet, the entire French delegation sent to this country to participate in the ceremonies, the French embassy and high representatives of the United States army and navy, attended a luncheon aboard the Gaulois. The Rochambeau delegation went on a special car attached to the regular train over the Pennsylvania railroad that pulled out at 9:30 o'clock this morning. In the party, beside the distinguished French visitors, were the attaches of the embassy, Assistant Secretary of State Pierce, Gen. Miles and Admiral Dewey, Admiral Taylor, Mr. Gourd, president of the French chamber of commerce; Gen. Horace Porter, the United States ambassador to Paris, and a number of ladies attached to the party. The special car will leave Annapolis on its return trip to Washington at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The second train left an hour later over the Pennsylvania road. It included the president, Ambassador and Mme. Cambon, Miss Alice Roosevelt, Miss Carew, Secretary Moody, Secretary Root, Mr. Cortelyou, Mrs. Cortelyou, Dr. Rixey, Mrs. Senator Lodge, Lieut. Commander Winslow and Representative Foss.

The president's party will leave Annapolis for Washington at 3:30 p. m.

MANY PEOPLE GET AWAY

Business at Fort de France Is Badly Demoralized on Account of So Many of the Inhabitants Leaving.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, Thursday, May 22.—At 5 o'clock this afternoon the sky was clear and the population was calm; but despite this favorable change in the situation, many families left Fort de France by the French steamers Versailles and the Ville de Tanger for Trinidad and for Cayenne, French Guiana. This, with the 1200 persons who have gone to the island of Guadeloupe, and many others who have sought refuge at St. Lucia and other islands, has lessened the population considerably. Besides these, some 200 people left for the southern parts of the island of Martinique, where 3000 refugees have now assembled. This desertion of Fort de France has resulted in the disorganization of many trades. A number of bakers have been compelled to close their stores, owing to the fact that their employes are among those who have fled.

The French cruiser Tage, having Admiral Servan on board, arrived here this evening. She reported that Mount Pelee now presents a more assuring prospect. The clouds of smoke leaving the crater mingle with the clouds in the sky and do not have the threatening aspect which they formerly presented.

A new crater has formed in the vicinity of Ajoupa Bouillon. A locality known as Camae Trianon is causing a good deal of anxiety at present. The Capote river is running with hot water.

The French cruiser D'Assas has arrived here from Brest, having on board the French government relief commission and large supplies of money and provisions.

The French cruiser Tage left New Orleans May 11 with money and supplies for the Martinique sufferers, contributed by the citizens of New Orleans.

Paris, May 23.—A dispatch received here from the governor of Martinique, M. L'Huerre, dated yesterday, reads:

"Have consulted with the council of the colony on the subject of total or partial evacuation of the island. They are unanimous in declaring that such a measure is not justifiable at present. A trans-Atlantic line steamship, now undergoing repairs here, might be used to transport those who are desirous of leaving. About 1000 persons are leaving by the Versailles, and others are sailing on the Ville De Tanger for Trinidad and Cheyenne. There have been no new fatalities."

CUBAN'S DECORATION DAY

New York, May 23.—The house has adopted a resolution, says a dispatch from Havana to the World, declaring May 19 Decoration day, and a motion expressing sympathy for American soldiers killed in Cuba.

Pickpockets are reaping a harvest on the Prado, the principal promenade, and crooks of various kinds are doing a rushing business.

A policeman who attempted to arrest a crook was killed.

Fifty-nine Nanigos, alleged to be a secret order of assassins, have been captured by the police while new members were being initiated. The new members were in the act of signing their obligation in blood when the police arrested the entire party. The Nanigos are greatly dreaded throughout Cuba.

CHAPTER OF TRAGEDIES

South Bend, Ind., Sweethearts Die Together.

Domestic Infelicities Cause of Two Deaths.

South Bend, Ind., May 23.—John W. Churry, aged 31, a carpenter, shot and killed his sweetheart, Susanne Keskemeti, aged 16, early this morning, and then killed himself with the same revolver. Churry and the girl, with her parents, all apparently in good spirits, sat on the porch until midnight, when the parents retired. About fifteen minutes later the mother heard three shots. She gave the matter but little thought and went to sleep.

At 2 o'clock she awoke and looking out saw the bodies of her daughter and Churry lying on the ground. The couple evidently had planned to die together. The girl had laid her best dress and underclothing on a chair in the parlor, and the man was attired in his best clothes. They apparently had lain on the ground side by side. He then, evidently, placed the 38-caliber revolver over her heart and fired twice. Both bullets, not an inch apart, passed through her body and buried themselves in the ground. He then shot himself in the mouth. His right hand, still clutching the weapon, lay across his breast. There was no indication of a struggle, and no reason for the tragedy is known.

Chicago, May 23.—Angered because sufficient haste was not made with his evening meal, Frederick W. Eberhardt last night shot his wife Mary four times at their home, killing her instantly. Before committing the crime Eberhardt had barred all doors, and his wife fell dead apparently while trying to make her escape by the front way.

The police had to break in the door and overpower Eberhardt, who attempted to use his revolver on them.

Eberhardt is a waiter, 35 years old. Mrs. Eberhardt was four years his junior.

Pittsburg, May 23.—Jospeh Pearson, a horse jockey, was shot and instantly killed by his wife, Louise, at the latter's home in Esplen borough last night. He had threatened to strike her with a hatchet, when the woman fired at his head. The bullet entered the right cheek and lodged in the brain. Pearson falling dead at the feet of his wife, his son and daughter. Mrs. Pearson surrendered to the officers at once, and will be held pending the coroner's verdict.

Chicago, May 23.—Fred M. Gale was found today, in his room at the Great Northern hotel, with a revolver clasped in his right hand and a bullet wound in his right temple.

Peoria, May 23.—Fred Gale resided in Peoria until about two months ago, when he told his employers he had a better position in Chicago as a bookkeeper. It is believed here his suicide was due to domestic troubles. He was a son of Edward Gale, who died at Denver a few months ago. The family was formerly prominent in Peoria.

PEACE SEEMS CERTAIN

London Papers Say That End of Boer War Is Undoubtedly Assured---Important Messages Have Been Received.

London, May 23.—The Daily Chronicle this morning claims authority to say that peace in South Africa is practically assured. This is also the general impression with the other newspapers and the public, although the former do not go so far as the assertion published by the Chronicle.

At a late hour last night, however, the government departments declined to give any information on the matter. It is understood that important dispatches were received yesterday from Lord Milner, the British high commissioner in South Africa, and from Lord Kitchener, but nothing can be ascertained as to the nature of the contents of these dispatches.

The fact that the cabinet was summoned so quickly after the arrival of the delegates at Pretoria is regarded as a good augury, as the discussions at Pretoria could only have commenced Monday.

The cabinet will meet late this afternoon in order to enable the ministers who are at a distance to reach London in time for the meeting.

A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Pretoria says that the Boers are seeking permission to retain their horses.

Cabling from Pretoria under date of Wednesday, May 21, the correspondent of the Times says the Boer meeting there is not necessarily final, and it is believed the Boer delegates, after obtaining information on certain points, will return to Vereeningen.

The Daily Mail this morning says it is known that owing to the protracte tactics of the Boer leaders at Pretoria, Great Britain has presented them with what is practically an ultimatum, their reply to which is awaited, and which it is expected they will accept.

Dispatches received here from Pretoria, continues the Daily Mail, say that during the stay of the Boer delegates there the conference will continue at Vereeningen, and that a majority of those present at the conference are trying to persuade the recalcitrant minority into a unanimous vote.

In the meantime the British columns have been resting and refitting, and are now all ready for immediate action.

PUGILIST MEETS DEATH

Eddie Dixon Landed a Blow on the Jaw of Tommy Noonan From Which He Never Recovered.

Boston, May 23.—Tommy Noonan, of Chelsea, Mass., died this morning from the effects of a blow received from Eddie Dixon, of Chicago, in a boxing contest at the Lenox club here, last night.

Dixon is in custody, having surrendered to the police immediately after it became apparent last night that Noonan had received a serious injury.

While generally known in sporting circles as Tommy Noonan, the dead boxers' real name was John Cassidy, and his home was in Chelsea. He was 20 years of age. The fatal blow was delivered in the fourth round of what was to have been a six-round bout. It landed on Noonan's jaw and he dropped to the floor, where he lay until counted out. It was quickly seen that he was in a serious condition, and physicians were summoned. They pronounced him suffering with concussion of the brain. Noonan was removed to a hospital, where death ensued about 8 o'clock this morning.

STREET CAR'S WILD RUN

Rushed Down a Steep Hill at Terrific Speed and Jumped Track, Killing Two, and Injuring Many.

Easton, Pa., May 23.—Two men were killed and many men and women injured in a trolley wreck a few miles beyond Easton at midnight last night. The dead:

EDWARD COMMODORE, Nazareth.

JOSEPH DERHAMMER, Easton.

An Easton and Nazareth car left this city shortly before midnight, carrying eighty-nine passengers. On a steep hill in Palmer township the brakes refused to work and the car ran away, descending the incline at a terrific rate of speed. At the foot of the hill there is a sharp curve. Here the car jumped the track, and tearing loose from the trucks, fell on its side in the country road. The greatest excitement prevailed. Many women fainted, while others became hysterical through fright. There was a wild scramble to get out of the car. While the passengers were being dragged from the car windows, an effort was being made to release Commodore from beneath the trucks, but before he could be gotten out, life was extinct. The body of Derhammer was found several yards from the wrecked car. The skull was fractured and the body was terribly bruised.

AMUSEMENTS.

"WHEN REUBEN COMES TO TOWN."

"When Reuben Comes to Town" will be at the Lyceum this evening. It is a musical comedy, the work of Herman Perlet, and has been touring on the Pacific coast. The story is claimed to be a very funny one and the situations laughable. In the company are: Edwin Nicander, Douglass Flint, Edouard Durant, Margaret Sayre, Frank Beamish, Charles Stanley, Ella Ohry, Eleanor Page, Edna Hickey, Ruby Rothwell, Edythe Gibons, Mildred Manners, Maude Corey, Nellie Victoria, Grace Von Brocklin and others.

THE KING DRAMATIC COMPANY.

The management of the Lyceum announces a novelty next week as the King Dramatic company is known to be a direct departure from any of the stock organizations which visit this city. Their repertoire includes "The Cotton King," "A Ward of France," "Faust," "Cumberland '61," "Jim, the Penman," "The Cherry Pickers," and "The Power of the Press," which have hitherto been considered exclusively high priced attractions. The management promises, as well as guarantees, that the plays will be presented entire, by a capable organization headed by Lon Beasley and Miss Lillian Mae Crawford.

SIXTH AVENUE THEATER.

"An Awful Liar," a rollicking farce comedy, was the offering last night at the Sixth Avenue theater by Angell's comedians. Tonight "Monte Cristo" will be presented with complete scenic details. A grand ladies and children's matinee will be given Saturday at 2:30 p. m.

Butter Slipping Downward and Vegetables Getting Reasonable.

If the meat lists could be removed from the Michigan street market it would tend to harmony and symmetry. Without them there is not a solitary change in the market this week that is not toward cheaper prices.

But meat is still the fly in the ointment of the housekeeper. All of the meat prices that have not increased are holding steady, and some of them have gone higher. Pork loins are the guilty objects. They have gone back to 12 cents per pound, from which lofty perch they slipped down a notch to 11 cents not long ago. This was looked upon as a hopeful sign, and it was such a refreshing change to witness a reduction in meat prices that housekeepers almost felt inclined to be cheerful. Still, it seemed too good to be true, and nobody will be surprised to find that there was a string to the reduction.

In sympathy with the meats that come from larger animals, poultry is stronger. Hens have gone up ½ cent to 13 and 13½ cents, and other sorts of poultry are holding firm. There are no spring chickens on the market yet, and when they come the prices will be such that everyone should get ready to hold his breath, for in the days when any sort of meat comes under the head of luxuries, something particularly strenuous may be looked for from spring chicken when it first comes into the market.

It is a pleasant relief to flee the precincts of the meat men and scan the field elsewhere.

Butter is slowly slipping down the scale, at the rate of a cent or two each week. Fresh prints of creamery are now down to 23 cents per pound on Michigan street, and creamery in tubs is selling at 22 and 23 cents. Dairy butter is not far behind, the price being 21 cents per pound. Eggs are holding firm, without any further increases or decreases just now. Cheeses is easier, full cream twins having declined 1 cent to 14 cents per pound.

In the department of fruits and vegetables the story is still more pleasant. Nearly everything in this line is now within easy reach of everybody with anything at all in their pocketbooks. With the hot summer weather coming on, and the opinion of experts that meat, which is not a good thing to eat too much of at any time, is very poor hot weather food, there is food for cheerfulness in these conditions.

With green onions at 12½ to 15 cents per dozen bunches on Michigan street, and radishes 40 cents per dozen bunches, everybody should have fresh vegetables. Cucumbers are down to 85 cents a dozen, which makes it much easier to acquire a stomachache than it has been any time this spring. Spinach by the bushel is only 80 cents, and "greens" are exceptionally wholesome, people say. Pie-plant, sometimes called rhubarb, is only $1 per box, and this is encouraging to those who love rhubarb pie better than their stomachs.

Even potatoes—old potatoes, that is—are cheaper. They are now down to 85 and 95 cents per bushel. New potatoes are holding rather steady at $2.25 per bushel.

Strawberries continue to go down, and they are now down to $3 per case, and are to be found on almost every table.

Cherries are ripe. They are not particularly plentiful on Michigan street yet, but they began to come in during the week, and most of the fruit stores have them.

OF INTEREST.

Gould Purchase of Ann Arbor Line of Concern Here.

There has been some discussion among local freight men as to the possible bearing the purchase by the Goulds of the Ann Arbor rail and car ferry line may have on the situation in Duluth and the Northwest. The Ann Arbor rail line extends northwesterly across the lower peninsula of Michigan from Toledo to Frankfort. Here is run in connection with a line of car ferries, which ply in connection with the Wisconsin Central at Manitowoc, the Green Bay road at Kewaunee, the Northwestern at Menominee and the Soo and South Shore at Manistique.

The Goulds, by the acquisition of this line thus gain two routes into Duluth, working with either the Wisconsin Central or South Shore. Either one, it is said, would be a little cumbersome to handle in connection with pro-rating, for the reason that the Ann Arbor on Duluth business would have to share with the Wisconsin Central and the Northern Pacific over one route, or with the Manistique and the South Shore over the other. The more divisions of the through rate there are, the less effective the route for freight business.

In this connection, it is suggested that it might not be a surprise later to learn that the Goulds had gotten into Wisconsin Central. It is known that they have been ambitious for some months past to get a route through to the Atlantic and also to put themselves in a position to back up such a through route with feeders in the Northwest.

The Ann Arbor road has been one of those paupers which nobody owned and which never was affiliated with any of the large railroad systems. The Ashleys of Toledo and Amasa W. Wright of Alma, Mich., who is largely interested in Duluth, for years have been the principal stockholders, and it has been known for some time that they were anxious to sell and put the road in stronger hands. The Wabash connects with the road at Toledo, and it can utilize it to better advantage than any other road with the exception of the Michigan Central and South Shore. It has been believed all along that the Vanderbilts would secure control of the Ann Arbor road and make it a part of the Michigan Central system, and it seems strange that they should allow it to be gobbled up by a competitor like the Wabash.

President Ramsey, of the Wabash, says the purchase was not directly made by his road.

ARE BUSY.

Health Inspectors Pushing Work of Cleaning the City.

The work of cleaning the city is going steadily on, though not very much is heard about it in a public way. The health inspectors are diligently inspecting all parts of the city and wherever nuisances are found, direct the occupants of the premises to remove them.

The greatest difficulty met with is in getting unoccupied property cleaned of rubbish, etc. Many persons are found, too, who will clean their own premises by dumping their refuse on the vacant property adjoining. This is a most reprehensible practice and one very difficult to prevent. If honor and civic pride cannot be appealed to, there is little hope of preventing it.

The Woman's council is especially concerned over this feature of the work of keeping the city clean, recognizing it as the most difficult to combat. If the vacant property could only be kept clean, there would be no trouble in maintaining a beautifully clean city.

Plant Is Closed.

The high price of flax is said to be responsible for the closing down of the linseed oil mill that recently started up in West Superior. The manufacturers claim that with flax worth about $1.76 a bushel here and $1.59 in Chicago, there is no profit in the business at the present time. The management hopes to start the mill again some time this summer or coming fall. While the plant is idle a number of improvements will be made.

Patronized the Dances.

The delightfully balmy weather of last evening drew a large number of people to the dance on Park Point. It was really the first evening this season that the weather has been suitable for that form of social amusement, and the young people took advantage of it. The dance at Lester Park was also well attended.

Six Coaches In Train and 125 In the Party.

J. L. Washburn to Be Toastmaster at Banquet Saturday Evening.

A special train of six new passenger coaches will arrive at the Union station over the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway at 5:20 this afternoon. It is bringing as the guests of Vice President Fitch, of the South Shore road, about 125 business men of Calumet, Houghton and Hancock, who will be met by the business men of Duluth and given the best entertainment that has yet been offered any of the city's visitors. The arrangements for the dispensation of hospitality by the jobbing, retail and other business interests here at this time are more complete and on a larger scale than has been attempted in the past.

The special train, which is composed of brand new cars of the most improved and artistic pattern that have been turned out of the shops lately, left Calumet about 9 o'clock this morning. The party was not quite so large as had been hoped for. The busy time of the season found some of the business men invited unable to leave their affairs at home for three days, though some of these are likely to follow on tonight's train. Division Freight Agent James Robertson, of the South Shore road, went down the line to take charge of the party, and was aboard when it left Calumet.

On the regular train leaving Duluth this morning for the East, a committee of local business men, including John Panton and W. R. Peyton and General Freight Agent Walker, of the South Shore, left to meet the special down the road, probably at Lake Gogebic.

When the train arrives this afternoon, the party of visitors will find awaiting them the committee on reception appointed for the occasion, escorted by the Third regiment band. The visitors will form in line and march to the trading room of the Board of Trade. Here they will be formally welcomed to the city by Mayor Hugo and announcement will be made of the program of entertainment that has been provided for them.

From that time until tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock the visitors will be free lances. It is expected that they will wish to look up friends, make calls on business correspondents and jobbers and see the city and the great progress that has been made here during the past year or so, and it is believed that it will be best to allow this to be done unhampered with any outlined program.

At 4 p. m. tomorrow tally-hos and other vehicles will leave the Spalding hotel for a drive around the Boulevard. This is a part of the program outlined by the entertainment committee.

At 8:30 tomorrow evening a banquet to be given at the Spalding hotel will begin. The committee is feeling elated over inducing J. L. Washburn to act as toastmaster at the banquet. The program of toasts will to a certain extent depend on the make-up of the party of visitors. The local speakers will include J. Adam Bede and E. L. Millar, both of whom are depended upon to brighten up the spirit of the event. There will be others, including some prominent jobbers, who will be called on for impromptu responses to toasts that Mr. Washburn is expected to improvise in his happiest style.

An especially elaborate musical program, orchestral, vocal and instrumental solos, will be given at the banquet, and it is expected it will prove the most pretentious affair of the kind that has ever been given here.

ARE DOING WELL.

Maj. Horton's Opinion of Duluth and Superior.

Maj. J. H. Horton, of Cleveland, was calling on old acquaintances in Duluth today. He was formerly manager of the Youghlogheny & Lehigh Coal company's dock and interests in West Superior, and left the coal company to accept a position with one of the Eastern railway companies. He says that his visit has no special significance, and that he is here on personal business and on a pleasure trip. He comments favorably on the industrial growth of the head of the lakes during the past two years, and particularly that of his former home city, West Superior. The major believes that the head of the lakes cities are in line for greater things in the future, and says that the attention of business and manufacturing interests in the East is turned this way more than then it ever was in previous years. Maj. Horton says that the new water power development planned for Duluth and Superior has done much to advertise the two cities.

SUPPORTED.

Price of Potatoes Said to Be Kept Up Unreasonably.

Board of trade men who sometimes get consignments of potatoes from their farmer constituents, say that the local prices of the tuber are being held up by main strength. One man says that about a week ago he received a carload of potatoes from a man out in the country, and when he went to the Michigan street houses to sell them he was told that there was not much market for potatoes. He finally sold them for 70 cents a bushel. At that time the quoted wholesale price was 90 cents to $1.00.

He says further that since then other commission men have received potatoes in the same manner, and they have sold them for 60 cents a bushel and even lower. The wholesale price, at which retailers buy the potatoes, is now 85 and 95 cents.

THE JULY DULLNESS.

Capt. Weeks Thinks It Is Here Now.

"Lumber movement from the head of the lakes is rather slow at present," said Capt. Charles Weeks, the vesselman, this forenoon. "I would not be surprised if we are getting now the lull in the trade that we usually have in July. It is possible, however, that we may have a lull now and another a little later. I do not see as there is much reason to complain. True, we vesselmen would like to see lumber move a little faster and a demand for more boats, but it must be rememoered that about 50,000,000 feet has already been forwarded this spring. The reason for the slow movement should be attributed to the fact that dry stocks are pretty well cleaned out and the new cut is not yet on the docks in sufficient quantities to cause any flurry. The rail shipments of about 45,000,000 feet of dry lumber during the past winter has had an effect on the early lake shipments. The lumber boats are now moving mostly the lumber that was cut the past winter. The rate is firm at $2.50."

A Bad Place.

Commenting on the predicament of the steamer Leland, which is stuck in the mud, outside of the channel off the Merrill & Ring lumber docks, marine men say that the locality is a particularly bad one for boats to get out of their course. They say the mud is deep and of a consistency that makes it almost impossible to pull a boat out of it when once she gets into it to any great extent.

Expected to Continue.

The summer weather that succeeded the northeast storm over the Lake Superior region still prevails, and today temperatures as recorded by the thermometers about the city are quite high. Some of the instruments recorded nearly 90 degrees. During the twenty-four hours up to 7 o'clock this morning. The minimum temperature, as recorded by the government thermometer, was 58 and the maximum 84 degrees. The weather forecast indicates a continuance of warm weather, with possible local showers or thunder storms.

IN A HURRY.

Whatcom, Wash., May 23.—Alfred Hamilton, alias Alfred Hawkins, was hanged this morning for the murder of D. M. Woodbury at Anacortes in September, 1901. He cursed the sheriff when he read the death warrant to him and rushed up the scaffold stairs two steps at a time.

Alfred Hamilton, alias Fred Hawkins, murdered D. M. Woodbury in Anacortes, Skagit county, Washington, Sept. 7, 1901. Hamilton, who was a fisherman, went into Anacortes on the afternoon of Sept. 6. After disposing of his catch for more than $1,000, he started out to hold up the town.

During the night and the next forenoon he enforced his commands at the point of a pistol. The city marshal attempted to arrest him, but Hamilton got the drop on the officer and marched him into a neighboring building. Woodbury followed and expostulated with Hamilton, who shot him fatally.

Stob's mercantile establishment were also totally consumed by the flames. Several other buildings were made into wrecks before the fire could be checked. At the time of the fire it seemed that the business part of the town would be gutted by the flames and the Willmar fire department was ordered out. Loss about $27,000; insurance, $13,000.

THE FIRST VERDICT

Personal Injury Plaintiff Wins For First Time This Term.

Erickson Estate Gets $1000 From Commodore Mining Company.

Theodore Hollister Gets Verdict From E. F. Sweeney and Others.

The first personal injury case of the present term of district court to result in favor of the plaintiff was that of the estate of John Erickson against the Commodore Mining company.

The jury this morning returned into court a verdict awarding the plaintiff $1000. Erickson was killed in the Commodore mine, and his administrator sued for $5000 damages. The case was given to the jury yesterday forenoon, and at 6:30 o'clock last night, after the jury had thought over it seven hours, it reached a verdict. As court was not in session at that time the verdict was sealed and turned into court this morning. The company made a motion for a new trial, which will be argued later. Adams & Miller were plaintiff's attorneys.

In the case of Theodore Hollister and others against E. F. Sweeney and others, Judge Dibell this morning directed the jury to return a verdict for $3900. The plaintiffs sued to recover that amount due on a lease of certain mining property on the iron ranges.

Jurge Ensign and a jury today were trying the case of John Fraser against William Clark. Fraser claimed that he sold Clark the minutes to some pine lands, near Sucker river, with the agreement that he was to have half the proceeds of the sale of pine. He claimed that Clark sold the timber for $6000, and he sued for half that amount. At the conclusion of the plaintiff's case the defendant moved to dismiss on the ground that no case had been made out, and on the further ground that if there was such a contract it was fraudulent, as the United State's laws prohibits such agreements. This morning Judge Ensign denied the motion, and the defense proceeded.

Judge Cant this noon was still hearing the case of Mary McComber against the city of Duluth. The city made a motion at the close of the plaintiff's case to dismiss, but Judge Cant withheld his decision until the close of the city's case.

Judge Dibell and a jury this morning took up the case of C. S. Prosser & Co. against C. H. Oppel & Sons to recover $1946.12, alleged to be due for feed furnished O. W. Saunders on a logging job for which the defendants are alleged to have promised to pay.

A HEARING.

Plumbing Ordinance Discussed Before Council Committee.

A public hearing on the proposed plumbing ordinance was held in the city hall yesterday afternoon by Aldermen McEwen, Moore and Wing.

Both master and journeymen plumbers appeared before the committee. W. B. Silvey, of the Spalding hotel, also appeared against it. The ordinance according to Mr. Silvey would prohibit the engineers of large buildings from making the most ordinary repairs such as leaks, and this would mean a large plumbing bill for the owners of the buildings.

Otto Strum of the journeymen's union said that such a thing was not contemplated in the proposed ordinance and Chairman McEwen of the ordinance committee said this feature would be given further consideration.

The proposed ordinance was presented at the request of the journeymen plumbers and the boss plumbers registered strenuous objections to certain features. The ordinance designates certain kinds of material for certain work and this was objected to by the bosses.

It was suggested that instead of fees for plumbing inspection the plumbers' license should be made $50 a year and have the municipal inspection without fees. The meeting adjourned without any definite action.

LUNDMARK & FRANSON.

IT WASN'T THE SHEET.

When a man has a natural propensity for talking in his sleep it is not always a very pleasant situation for his friend who occupies half the same bed, says Tid-Bits. I once experienced this with a friend of mine whose daily occupation was to serve behind the counter in a linen draper's shop. We had not been in bed more than ten minutes before he commenced after the following style:

"What did you say, lady—two yards of pink ribbon? Yes, lady."

I turned round, shook him and asked him to keep quiet, which he did for about a minute, then commenced again:

"Print, lady; best quality hose, two and five pence three farthings. What did you ask for, lady—six yards of unbleached calico?"

He then rolled over, and suddenly I heard something like the tearing of calico.

"All right, my counter-jumper," I thought, "you'll have the landlady's sheet to pay for at the end of the week."

To my surprise the next morning he had not torn the sheet at all, but—bad luck to him!—he had ripped a strip clean off my nightshirt.

CONFIDENT

That Peace Is Assured Although Confirmation Is Lacking.

London, May 23.—Peace in South Africa is regarded as assured, but an official declaration to that effect is still lacking, and there is nothing official to indicate when an announcement may be expected. Opinion is divided as to whether a statement on the situation will be issued tonight, after the cabinet meeting, or whether it will be reserved for the meeting of the house of commons Monday. It seems, however, at the best, that only the bases of the peace terms will be before the ministers, and that if they are accepted the discussion of details may still occupy some time, during which presumably an armistice will be declared. Meanwhile, outside the Boer commandoes connected with the peace negotiations, fighting continues. Lovat's scouts surprised Fouches' command, in Cape Colony Wednesday last, and captured most of the Boer supplies.

Greater public interest was manifested in today's meeting of the cabinet than has been the case in any of the meetings since the earlier stages of the war. The ministers were greeted by hundreds of people anxious for some sign of the probable trend of affairs.

The exchange has fully made up its mind how things are going, and declares that the basis of peace were signed at Pretoria yesterday. Interesting references to peace are contained in a letter from Kerksdorp, South Western Transvaal, dated April 25. It says:

"Seventy thousand to eighty thousand British troops are here waiting for Gen. Delarey's answer from the peace conference, and every hour we are expecting them (the Boers) to march in and surrender. We have actually sent out wagon loads of clothes to enable them to come in tidy, so there is every prospect of peace. Lord Kitchener comes here from Pretoria every other day, and seems to be in particularly good spirits. He actually smiles, and that's a thing he not often does. We attach great importance to those smiles in regard to peace."

CLOTHING

For Martinique Sufferers Was Left By the Sterling.

San Juan, P. R., May 23.—The United States collier Sterling, which left Fort de France last Tuesday, arrived here yesterday and reports that she transferred to the British cruiser Indefatigable sixteen boxes of army clothing for distribution among the sufferers from the volcanic outbreak on the island of St. Vincent. During the panic at Fort de France, Tuesday last, the launch of the United States cruiser Cincinnti took the wife of the commander of the French cruiser Suchet from the shore to that warship.

A soldier who arrived at Fort de France Tuesday morning reported that ten men belonging to the cordon of troops guarding the road to St. Pierre were killed by gases which issued from Mount Pelee. The commander of the Sterling has a letter from the governor of Martinique, M. L'Heurre, containing hearty expressions of gratitude to the governor of Porto Rico, Mr. Hunt, for the supplies sent to Martinique sufferers.

GARBLED HISTORY.

"I don't think there has ever been published in England a history that gives anything like an impartial account of the conflict between Great Britain and the United States, known as the war of 1812," said a literary man to the Galveston News. "From none of the existing works that contain the political and military history of the United States previous to the civil war—that is from none of those written for English consumption—could the most acute reader glean the idea that this country had ever had any naval history at all before 1864. The exploits of Paul Jones and the feats of Perry, Decatur, Bainbridge and Porter are always consistently ignored, and the war of 1812 especially is spoken of in a casual way, as though it began and ended with the burning of Washington and the encounter between the Chesapeake and the Shannon. Even to events that only indirectly reflect on Britain's prowess the lofty British mind has seen fit to affect a sort of intellectual amblyopia. For instance, in that volume of the 'Stories of the Nations' series, which deals with the Barbary pirates, not a word is said to show that the United States ever had any conflict with them. Why? Because, after narrating how Great Britain, like the continental nations, meekly paid blackmail to those marauders rather than fight them, no Englishman likes to tell how the United States, though at that time weak and almost moneyless, firmly refused to buy an ignoble peace, but answered with her cannon the demand for tribute, blew the piratical blackamoors out of the water and sent a force that marched upon their capital and put an end to their insolence forever. Even some American writers, when writing for an international audience, have too often mildly glazed over the facts that might be unpalatable to Englishmen. Professor Edward Channing of Harvard university, in narrating the history of the United States for the new edition of 'Chambers' Cyclopedia,' speaks of the war of 1812 as if he were half ashamed of what his country accomplished in that unequal but glorious struggle. He has nothing to say of the battles on Lac Champlain and on Lake Erie, and of the surrender of two British fleets to extemporised American squadrons; and in mentioning the battle of New Orleans, he seems to give the greater praise to English valor when he euphemistically says that 'Gen. Jackson repelled a most gallant attack of the British on New Orleans.' 'Repelled' is good.'"

OBSERVANCE

Of Sabbath Was Subject of Discussion By Presbyterians.

New York, May 23.—The Presbyterian general assembly resumed its sessions today with a good attendance and the moderator, the Rev. Dr. Van Dyke, called up the report of the special committee on Sabbath observance as the special order of the day. The report was read by James Yereance.

During the consideration of the report of the special committee on Sabbath observance, R. M. Caruthers, of Grand Rapids, N. D., moved to strike out a part of the report in which card parties on Sunday are condemned. "It would convey the idea that the general assembly of this church approves of card parties on other parts of the week," said Mr. Caruthers. The amendment was accepted.

The report of the standing committee on church erection was next called up. The report, which was presented by the chairman, the Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Mcmillan, of this city, opens by saying that 35 per cent of all churches established sooner or later cease to exist, but that this is no reason to cease to aid in building new ones. The report commends the work of the board of church erection during the year.

The board commenced the year with $193,275, and spent $205,269. The board begins the coming year with an empty treasury, and only contributions received after the annual report had been completed enabled it to report no debt. Two hundred and fifty-nine churches were aided during the year to erect new structures.

The report, with its recommendations, was adopted.

The Rev. Dr. Hubbell, of the New York Sabbath committee, was then introduced and briefly described the work of that organization. Dr. Hubbel said the police department had helped them very much in their work. "Even Devery used to help us," he said.

Judge Robert N. Wilson read the report of the special committe on vacancies and supplies.

The sixty-fourth annual report of the board of publication and Sabbath school work of the Presbyterian church in the United States records a prosperous and encouraging year. The missionary work for the year, which covers the period between April 1, 1901 and March 31, 1902, was carried on in thirty-one states and territories and the city of Havana, Cuba, through twenty-three synods and eighty-one presbyteries. One missionary was at work during the year in Cuba, and thirteen synodical and eighty-three presbyterial in the United States. Their labors were highly successful, 773 new Sabbath schools having been organized and 338 reorganized, with a grand total membership of nearly 40,000 pupils and teachers. Sixty-one churches were organized from schools established by the missionaries and 54 of these church were Presbyterian.

An increase in the balance of income over expenses from $34,936 to $45,288 is shown and the report says that in view of this large balance an effort will be made to secure the approval of the board for these propositions:

To place not more than forty summer missionaries in the field; to seek men for the force of permanent missionaries after the summer missionaries leave the field.

Steps have been taken to see what additional publications for the foreign population of the United States are needed. The report says the business department closed the year with net profits amounting to $36,261.76, which are $12,389.56 greater than last year.

The number of churches, chapels and manses, erected during the year in connection with Sabbath schools organized by missionaries was 63 and they cost $109,475.

An interesting chapter of the report is devoted to missionary work in Cuba.

"After two years and a half of pioneer work in the city of Havana," the report says, "the Rev. Pedro Rioseco had the satisfaction of welcoming Rev. J. Milton Greene, D.D., representative of the Presbyterian board of home missions, who took charge of the work in Industria and Lealtad streets with a view to organizing the First Presbyterian church of Havana. This organization took place the following December. Rev. Rioseco then turned his attention to another part of the city and organized a school which had 120 pupils and three teachers with regular preaching."

Other interesting chapters tell of missionary work among the colored people in the "way back" districts of the South, among white people in the mountain region of the South, in the Rocky mountain region and on the Pacific coast. It is pointed out that the large and growing foreign element in Wisconsin acts as a check on the multiplication of churches, but as a spur to the organization of purely missionary Sabbath schools.

In another part of the report, after relating that missionaries travel in all kinds of country and weather among miners, ranchmen, lumbermen and tollers of every kind, Bible in hand, the board says: "It is hardly conceivable that any instrumentality could be devised which so effectively can meet the spiritual needs of our outlying population as this great agency of Sabbath school missions."

"Mormonism," is discussed as follows:

"Our work comes into close conflict with this great delusion. While the churches are debating what should be done, the Sabbath school missionary is to a large extent answering the question in the most practical way.

"In Utah and Idaho, where Mormonism is the ruling power in society, our Synodical missionary devotes his entire energes to the planting of Presbyterian Sabbath schools and preaching stations. These become rallying centers for the so-called Gentiles and attract to their services not a few Mormons, parents and children. By avoiding direct controversy and relying on simple and pure gospel teaching and preaching, public opinion is influenced, and yet no excuse is furnished the Mormon hierarchy to attack and endeavor to close up the schools.

"In other states, where Mormonism is less powerful, our missionaries carry on a more open conflict, reasoning from house to house daily, and on all suitable public occasions."

The business department is shown by the report to have distributed over 45,000,000 copies of books, tracts and reports during the year, partly through the agency of the 9900 Sunday schools of the church. The receipts were $210,445.10 for books and tracts and $278,096.88 for periodicals. The capital is now reported at $253,347.80.

The editorial department reports that for a considerable time it has had under consideration a subject referred to the board by the last assembly—the elaboration of a plan for a more systematic training of young people in Bible study, and along the line of denominational life and work. The new "Normal Quarterly" it is believed, has met this need, at least in a measure. It is admitted that much remains to be done in the preparation of literature for Young People's societies. The editorial department says: "It is proper to state that a distinguished clergyman of our church has been for some time engaged in the preparation of a work in the line indicated."

In regard to the Witherspoon building the report says the encumbrance, in the form of bonds secured by mortgage and bearing interests at 5 per cent, is now redeemable at the option of the board, in multiples of $5000, at any interest period. The report offers the following suggestion:

"Inasmuch as the entire net income derived from this building, over and above expenses of maintenance and repair, by resolution of the board, approved by the general assembly, has been pledged to the missionary department, the board believes that it may be wise to apply a portion of the business profits annually credited to that department to retiring each year some of these bonds.

"Such a policy, by effecting a steady reduction of this indebtedness, and diminishing from year to year the amount paid out in interests, is simply funding a portion of the yearly profits at 5 per cent interest. It will result in a larger assured revenue for the missionary department in time to come. The board therefore recommends that it be permitted, when it can be done without curtailing the operations of the missionary department, to apply a portion of the business profits accruing to the missionary department to the annual retirement of a portion of the mortgage bonds."

SCALE FOR MARRIAGES.

Marriages in Paris churches are arranged on curiously stereotyped lines, which must save the best man a great deal of brain fag. The ceremonies are divided into classes just as in the case of funerals, says the London Tatler. There are ten classes, each with its own carefully defined accessories, and each provided with a tariff minimum and a tariff general, just like a custom house schedule. The one scale comprises all the indispensable features of the solemnity and the other specifies all such extras as are considered appropriate. Should you order a second-class wedding you may take your pick of the second-class extras, but you cannot have the first-class ones. Such a lawless interference with order and method could not be tolerated for a moment.

The first-class wedding runs to £23, including £5 12s for the cure and 8s for the wax candles placed beside the bride and bridegroom. The list of accessories includes twenty-seven articles, such as hangings, flowers, additional clergy, choir, voluntaries, soloists, and so on. The second-class is quoted at £19 and excludes flowers on the assumption that persons who require such luxuries can afford to pay on the higher scale. The other grades range from £12 to 5s, for which latter figure you are entitled to a suisse, a beadle and chorister, but no mass. Couples may even be united for nothing, provided they declare themselves indigent.

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Duluth Men Interested In Mine Down There.

Duluth men have become interested in a gold mining proposition in North Carolina. The Daily Observer, of Charlotte, N. C., in its issue of May 16, reports a visit of the men interested to the property at Asheboro on May 10, saying:

'On Saturday, May 10, a party of Northern capitalists, consisting of W. O. Brien, St. Paul, Minn.; A. J. Launners, George A. Lounners, John W. Nelson, Alexander Johnson, David Carmichael, of Stillwater, Minn.; A. D. Stevens, W. E. McKenzie, of Crookston, Minn.; W. E. Seeley, Frank Bohn, of Brainerd, Minn.; Robert Fitzgerald, Charles Leland, Andy Gowan, C. P. Maginnis, of Duluth, Minn.; A. E. Underwood, Solway, Minn.; Dr. Lehman, mining expert, and J. G. Miller, railroad commissioner, of Minnesota, arrived here in their special car. These gentlemen are developing very valuable mining property in Southeast Randolph. They have recently organized under the laws of Minnesota the Pine Hill Gold Mining company, and will soon install on the premises a complete plant equipped with the latest improved machinery for handling the ore and extracting the gold at an estimated cost of $100,000.

"The present owners have spent considerable money in developing and testing the property and within the last six months have had several experts of national reputation here, who, after critical examinations, have advised the owners that the property is very valuable and will yield big returns. Recently the same gentlemen purchased what is known as the Sawyer mine, situated in the western part of Randolph county, and have commenced operating the same, giving employment to about 100 men. For years the Sawyer mine has been known locally as valuable property, and since the present owners have began work a vein has been discovered which assays $1000 per ton. This is a quartz vein and an actual test made.

"These gentlemen are engaged in the lumber business in the state of Minnesota, and have been eminently successful. They say that the end of the timber in that state is in sight and they are necessarily seeking other fields for investment, and they express themselves as being delighted with the outlook in this state in general, and with Randolph in particular."

Launches to Marquette.

Two of the gasoline launches recently built by the Pearson Boat Construction company, of this city, were sent to Marquette, Mich., today. The company is rushed with orders and is working to the full capacity of its enlarged plant. A large number of boats have been shipped to out of town buyers already this spring and other consignments are being turned out as fast as possible. A lively local trade is also reported, there being a stronger demand than ever before for small launches and row boats.

ALREADY TOO SMALL.

Northern Pacific's Big Freight House Inadequate.

It is said that the extensive local freight house built by the Northern Pacific road and fronting on Fifth avenue west, a little over a year ago, is already proving inadequate to the needs of the traffic that passes through it. In this connection it is rumored that it is quite within the range of possibilities that another house of the same character will very soon be built in the uptown yards. One will probably be used for in-freight and the other for local freight consigned out.

There was some talk at the time the Northern Pacific built the present warehouse as to whether it should be built with two stories, the upper floor for storage purposes. It was also a question for consideration whether the warehouse should be built with two sections. If the latter plan had been adopted, a series of several railway tracks would probably have been built in the center, and teaming space left on either side.

The Northern Pacific owns the ground in the block between Fourth and Fifth avenues west extending up to Michigan street, and could extend its local warehouse facilities up to the latter street. There is some speculation as to whether the recent contract for paving a driveway easterly through the yards to St. Croix avenue does not indicate that the second local warehouse will not be located at that end of the yard.

The present warehouse when it was built was considered an especially large building of that character for a city of the size of Duluth, but it is said to have proven quite insufficient to meet the demands made upon it.

THE RESILIA

The sole of comfort. Something new to our Duluth patrons.

It fits the sole of the foot instantly.

At every step fresh air inhaled and expelled.

The insole of the Resilia shoe expands from the outsole each time the foot is lifted.

In doing this it draws in fresh air through a hidden valve in the heel, which locks it in.

When the foot bears down upon the insole, this air, contained in the cross channels, is then forced up into the shoe by the wearer's weight, through insole perforations under the foot.

As the air cannot go out where it came in, it is then compelled to circulate up around the stocking and out at the boot top, keeping the foot dry, clean, hardy and healthy.

For Ladies and Gents, patent leather, vici kid and velour calf, all—

DULUTH IN LEAD

Raises More Garden Truck Than Balance of the County.

Gardening Will Be More Popular Than Ever This Year.

Strawberries One of Most Profitable Things to Raise Here.

More garden truck is raised in Duluth each year than in all the rest of St. Louis county.

A man that has followed truck gardening in this part of the state for the past ten years stands as authority for the above statement, and he says that it would be an immense surprise to know exactly the number of bushels of potatoes and other vegetables raised within the city limits last year.

This year gardening in the city will be more popular than ever. The high price of meats will bring about a larger consumption of vegetables and a large proportion of the Duluth consumption will be home grown.

Every seed selling establishment in the city has been caught short in the seed supply in the rush of the city gardeners, and the hardware stores are reporting a big run on garden implements.

A trip from West Duluth to Lakeside on the street cars will show more than 1000 little garden patches, in fact practically every back yard, except through the center of town, is being planted.

Duluth vegetables are almost in a class by themselves when it comes to superiority. Duluth grown potatoes last year commanded a higher price than those that were imported. One well known citizen boasts of having taken out fifty bushels of potatoes from a lot fifty by one hundred and forty feet that did not belong to him.

Gardening on the property of nonresidents is a favorite practice of the suburbanites, and a story is told of a Lakeside gardener that put in hours of hard work all last summer on a vacant lot. When his crop was ready the owner of the lot turned up and claimed it—a compromise was effected by which the two men split even and agreed never to speak to each other again.

Strawberry gardening in Duluth is about the same as owning a mint. The berries grown here are of exceptional size and flavor, and come fully a month after all other strawberry growing districts have ceased to ship.

Consequently the man that raises strawberries for market can command his own price. Last year Duluth strawberries were shipped to Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul—strawberries that were raised right within the city limits. Last season some of the largest berries ever seen in Duulth were raised on a small lot out London road. Woodland, also claimed the honor of raising the largest.

The amateur gardeners, that is, those that have just caught the fever this spring, are just planting their onion, raddish, lettuce and other seed, but the old-timers—the gardeners that have been in the business for at least two seasons, have had their seeds sprouting in the huose for weeks and are now setting out small plants.

About the only vegetable that has not been an entire success in the Duluth gardens is the tomato. Some gardeners report indifferent success, but the majority have given up the attempt after one season.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB.

Several Important Matters Will Come Before It.

The Business Men's club, of the West End, will meet at 8 o'clock this evening in one of the rooms of Normanna hall, at the corner of Twenty-first avenue west and Superior street. Several important propositions are to come before the club for consideration. It has been hoped that a decision would be handed down in the Twentieth avenue station case and awaiting the decision there has not been a meeting of the club in some weeks. Other matters of interest of the West End require the attention of the club, however, and President Nelson has decided not to wait longer. There are said to be a number of new applications for membership to be presented this evening.

A RUSH POSSIBLE.

Prediction That White Pine Will Find Brisk Sale.

One of the local timber land dealers predicts a rush for white pine tracts the coming summer and fall. He bases his prediction on the fact that some of the lumber manufacturers are getting pretty near the end of their available log supplies and will be compelled to buy new tracts or go out of business. He does not anticipate any material advances in the price of stumpage this summer. It is held that prices are practically to the top notch now. Intending buyers, in some cases, claim that prices are even now prohibitory. There have been numerous inquiries during the past few weeks, but no sales.

Don't start the summer with a cold. One Minute Cough Cure will set you right. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup, grip, bronchitis, all throat and lung troubles. Max Wirth.

TRAINING OF ANIMALS.

Their Natural Laziness Important Thing to Overcome.

"One of the essential things in the training of animals," says Mr. Norris, of the Norris and Rowe Big Trained Animal Show, "is to get an idea into their heads of what you want them to do, and another is to overcome their natural laziness. Some animals will protest against performing, more because they are lazy than because they do not approve of performing. The transmission of the idea that you wish to convey to a dumb animal requires infinite care and patience. First, it is necessary to make the subject understand words of command and manners of authority, then he ponders it all over, and if he is fond of his trainer, become willing to learn. It is a peculiar fact that some persons have a power over animals from the moment they come in contact, while others are never able to exercise the slightest control. In general man is master of any animal, but to control it without harm or violence is a far different matter.

"The first principle in the training of animals is a systematic kindness. Some animals, especially elephants, learn to perform entirely through imitation, while others take months of a trainer's time, and different species require different treatment. The work is very much like that of school teacher, who has both stupid and clever pupils in his classes.

"The elephant is the most intelligent of all animals, being an observer and reasoner from babyhood, and has a memory that is absolutely faultless. I have known an elephant to recognize a man whom he had not seen for twenty years. Hero, one of the dwarf elephants with our shows is a striking example of elephantine sagacity and wisdom. He never deserts a friend and has on several occasions shown great pereference for a Lilliputian Bos Indicus, or Sacred Bull, which we imported from India. A mother watching over her baby could not express more solicitude than he does for his companion. One night after our performance had closed, and the entire family of trained animals were waiting in the railroad yards for their departure, a tragedy occurred. Her and Bos Indicus were standing by the car, apparently oblivious of everything, when suddenly there came a howl from the Bos Indicus as a big, strange yellow dog sneaked up and bit him. A second later and the shrill trumpeting of an angry elephant was heard, and Hero was very much awake. He grabbed the yellow dog and, holding him in the air for a moment, with terrific force dashed the unfortunate creature against a box-car some twenty feet away, where he was picked up dead. Since then the bonds of friendship between Hero and the Bos Indicus have become still more closely woven."

The Norris & Rowe show will be in Duluth Monday and Tuesday next, at the corner of London road and Thirteenth avenue east.

No Use For It Any More.

How good food put a good minister on his feet again is an interesting story. He says: "A little more than a year ago I commenced the use of Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food. At that time I had been suffering from dyspepsia for about five years. I had tried all the remedies my friends told me about, but with no permanent relief.

"My Sabbath duties at that time nearly prostrated me, and the following day I was of no use to myself or to anyone else.

"After beginning the food a change began to take place and gradually the dyspepsia and disturbance left me. Now I have gained twenty pounds and am free from stomach troubles that I suffered so long from.

"I can do twice the amount of work with ease, am well all of the time, and naturally sing the praises of the delicious food that has put me right. I am perfectly willing to have my name appear as endorsing your excellent food, for I know from personal experience of its value." L. R. Danforth, pastor of the First M. E. church, Haverhill, Mass.

Replaced With Steel.

The Great Northern Railway company has replaced the wooden supports to its steel viaduct over the Northern Pacific tracks, on Rice's Point, with steel trusses. The construction work was completed yesterday afternoon. This gives the company an all steel viaduct to the interstate bridge.

ACTIVELY OPPOSED

To the Morris Bill Are the Leading Lumbermen.

Claim That Vital Portion of the Bill Is Impracticable.

Morris Believes Bill Will Pass If Given Consideration.

Washington, May 22.—The objections of the lumbermen of Minnesota and other states to the Morris bill for the disposal of timber on the Chippewa reservations in Minnesota have been set before parties in Washington interested in this legislation, and by them in turn laid before members of congress who would have the bill amended to suit the demands of these lumbermen.

According to those who are conversant with the situation, all the big lumbermen of Minnesota are more or less actively opposed to the proposed bill. These operators have all the timber land they want now, or will want for a number of years. They are accordingly using their best endeavors to have action on the bill delayed and, if possible, defeated. One objection after another is being offered in the hope that the bill will be amended to such an extent that the Minnesota delegation will not accept it. The objection which has weight with Speaker Henderson—that raised by the Dubuque operators about the provision relating to cleaning up the debris—can be met by the friends of the measure when it comes up in the house, and that opposition can be placated. This is what Judge Morris believes. He says that he is willing to accept an amendment to this paragraph which will meet the wishes of the Dubuque people, but he is not willing to concede that the objection of the other lumbermen—those from Minnesota and Wisconsin—are raised for any other purpose than to delay action.

The cry of the opposition to the Morris bill is that it is not drawn so that the law can be administered on "business principles." They charge that the vital portion of the bill, providing for the manner of the sale, the cutting of the timber and the cleaning up of the refuse after the timber is cut, is impractical. If followed out, they say, it will result in the timber being sold at a price much less than would be received for the timber under the proper and business-like methods and rules governing these points.

It is contended that the terms of the bill are too indefinite. The objecting lumbermen say that no time is specified in which to remove the timber and the details relating to cleaning up the refuse are obscure. Another objection is that bidders cannot know whether they will receive awards for a large or a small tract, and that they cannot know whether the timber they are allowed to purchase is in contiguous tracts or tracts widely scattered. This objection would be overcome, it is urged, if the timber were sold at public auction, the buyer at auction would know what he is getting. If, for instance, at the beginning of a sale he had bought a tract in one location, he could afford to pay more for contiguous tracts than he had paid for the original tract; but under the sealed bid method, not knowing whether the tract to be awarded him on his bids were to be contiguous or not, he would be obliged, in self-protection, to bid on the supposition that he would not get contiguous tracts in order to protect himself against that contingency.

Another argument against the sealed bid proposition, offered by the lumbermen, says practically this: "It is a mistake to suppose that sealed bids will serve as a protection against collusion on the part of buyers. It has been amply demonstrated by unnumbered experiences in all lines of public business, from the furnishing of coal for a county heating plant up to building a state capitol, that sealed bids are not only not a protection against collusion, but are a most successful and convenient channel for its practice."

These are the objections offered to the Morris bill and which the opponents of the measure hope to instill in the minds of members in the hope that they will vote against it. As before stated, Judge Morris thinks that he can meet these objections and he is certain that the bill will pass, if Speaker Henderson will only give a day for its consideration.

LOSES HER SUIT.

St. Cloud Woman Who Claimed Breach of Promise.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 23.—The jury in the $3000 damage case of Mrs. Margaret Meagher against George M. Kolb, a prominent business man, brought in a verdict for the defendant. The plaintiff sued for breach of promise, alleging that the defendant had promised to marry her, and that improper relations had existed as a result thereof. Defendant denied all allegations. Both parties have, since the alleged promise of marriage, married.

PLACE FOR GRIGSBY.

President to Remember Rough Rider Comrade.

Washington, May 23.—Col. M. W. Grigsby, of Sioux Falls, S. D., is to receive a federal appointment at the hands of President Roosevelt, notwithstanding the fact that neither Senator Kittridge nor Gamble has indorsed the commander of a regiment of rough riders during the Spanish-American war.

But the senators will not interpose any objections, since they consider the forthcoming appointment a personal one of the president, and there will consequently be no objections to confirmation.

The position which Col. Grigsby is most likely to get is United States district attorney for Alaska.

The president is very friendly to the Sioux Falls man, and it is said that he would have received an indorsement from the White House a long time ago had it not been for the fact that none of the South Dakota delegation volunteered to recommend Grigsby. There have been several conferences of late between the president and the South Dakota senators.

VARIED

Career of Man Who Has Been Sport, Lawyer and Rector.

Chicago, May 2.—Donald D. Donnan, lawyer, sporting editor, Episcopal rector and traveling salesman, has been arrested on the charge of abandoning his wife, Mrs. Lula Cole Donnan. Separate maintenance proceedings against Donnan have been pending in the circuit court since April.

Mr. Donnan, while in Chicago, makes his home with the family of J. B. Hayes, 5948 Prairie avenue. Miss Jean B. Hayes is the person who, Mrs. Donnan asserts, has come between her and her husband.

The career of Donald D. Donnan has been varied. He attended the University of Iowa, graduated from the law department, and was admitted to the bar. Mrs. Donnan was society editor of a Cedar Rapids paper. July 25, 1883, they were married at Toulon, Ill. They came to Chicago, and he became a sporting reporter on a morning paper. He was interested in horses, and had charge of the trotting news. His wife often stayed late at the newspaper office helping with his work.

He had become an authority on trotting horses, when he one day startled his friends by announcing that he intended to enter the ministry. He matriculated at Western Theological seminary, and Mrs. Donnan started working in a store. He graduated and was appointed to the Irving Park church. For a year under his leadership the church prospered wonderfully. Then came his acquaintance with Miss Hayes, his retirement from the ministry and his separation from his wife.

Mr. Donnan is a son of ex-Representative W. G. Donnan of Independence, Iowa.

VIEWED CRATER

Martinique Legislator Gets Part Way Up Mount Pelee.

Cavity Is About Three Hundred Meters In Diameter.

Descent of the Mountain Proved to Be Very Dangerous.

Fort de France, Martinique, May 23.—The correspondent of the Associated Press has had an interview with M. Clere, a member of the legislature of Martinique, who recently explored the vicinity of Mount Pelee. He said:

"I started Friday last for Mount Pelee by the road leading along the coast from Basse Pointe, and, accompanied by M. Telloame Chancele, chief engineer of the sugar works, I reached a height of 1235 meters without difficulty and was able to ascertain that the present crater is about 300 meters in diameter. On the east it is overlooked by the Morne la Croix, the culminating point of the island, having an altitude of 1350 meters, which is completely crumbled and mined at its base, as a result of the volcanic action, and might easily collapse. The Morne Petit bon Homme has an incandescent aspect.

"In order to make our presence known at the point where we stood, I waved a piece of white cloth, attached to a stick, in the air, which was replied to by a corresponding signal from an inhabitant of Morne Rouge, who signalled to me in this manner in order to show that he saw us.

"We felt a number of electric commotions, and our shoes were damaged by the heat.

"The pond which was situated near Morne la Croix is completely dried up.

"The iron cross which stood at the foot of the mountain has been melted.

"Only the base of the masonry on which the cross stood and the lower part of the foot of the cross can be seen.

"The rims of the crater have very much changed in appearance. The heat where we stood was intense, and the whole aspect of the mountain was terrific. Stones fell around us and we picked up large pieces of sulphur, which, however, we were unable to retain. The whole spot was so charged with electricity, which became so violent that we were obliged to retreat.

"Our descent from the mountain was more difficult than our ascent. A blinding rain of ashes fell upon us, and the engineer was nearly killed by a large stone which fell near him. We succeeded in reaching Basse Pointe, on our return, after having been four hours on the mountain under the most dangerous circumstances."

The recent rains of ashes and volcanic rocks, weighing as much as 75 grammes, which have fallen here, caused so much consternation among the inhabitants of Fort de France that those who had not left the city are anxious to do so, and large numbers are emigrating to the island of Guadeloupe, where, it is now estimated here, 1200 people from Martinique have already sought shelter.

During her last exploring trip about the island, the French cruiser Suchet, which did not stop at St. Pierre, noticed that all the formerly cultivated land between Grande Rivere and Margot has been completely destroyed. The inhabitants of those towns have suffered and are still suffering a deal, but they have not yet determined to abandon those localities, and efforts are being made to supply them with provisions.

The Suchet also reports that as she approached the point of the land where the land was in a better state of preservation, especially between Macouba and Lorraine, a shower of stones and sulphur caused those of the population of Morne Rouge who had remained there, to hastily evacuate that place.

For a time some apprehension was felt regarding the safety of the detachment of French troops quartered at Le Carbet, but there has been no loss of life among them, according to the most recent reports.

The French gunboat took on board about 150 of the inhabitants of the neighborhood of Le Carbet. It is estimated that about 3000 persons will, by night time today, have left Fort de France for the extreme southern part of the island.

New York, May 23.—The West Indian newspapers containing accounts of the volanic outbreak began to reach New York yesterday. The following are extracts from the Voice of St. Lucia, printed at Castries, St. Lucia, May 8:

The Montagne Pelee in the last days of April began to show signs of uneasiness. On May 3 it began to throw out dense volumes of smoke and at midnight belched out flames accompanied by rumbling noises. At 5:30 a. m., flames were again visible and similar noises were audible. At the foot of the Montagne Pelee are the villages of Precheurs and Ste. Philomene. The inhabitants were thrown into the greatest consternation by the sights and sounds of the laboring mountain and especially by the darkening of the sky by volumes of thick semoke and the clouds of ashes which began to fall.

There was an exodus from all the district. The town of St. Pierre was, on the morning of last Saturday, covered with a layer of ashes about one-quarter of an inch thick, and appeared as though enevelope1 in a fog. The mountain was invisible, being wrapped in the smoke which issued from it. The greatest anxiety prevailed and all business was suspended.

A very anxious morning was passed at Martinique May 4. Thanks, however, to a sea breeze from about 11 a. m., the situation then appeared better; but, as the breeze died away at sunset, a large quantity of ashes again began to fall, and the mountain and its environs presented a most dismal spectacle, causing much alarm as to what the night would bring forth. Nothing happened, however, and on Monday morning, May 5, although everything was not quite serene, the aspect was decidedly encouraging. Less excitement prevailed.

At about 9 a. m. on the morning of May 6 a private telegram was received from Martinique advising that the Plissonneau family had chartered the steamer Topaze, one of the boats of the Compagnie Girard, and had started for St. Lucia at 5 a. m.

At about 11 o'clock the Topaze arrived with Mrs. Plissonneau, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Plissonneau and three children, Mrs. Pierre Plissonneau and child, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ernoult and three children, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McHugh and four children, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston de Crandmaison and three children, Mr. Henrie de Pompingan, Mrs. Anatole de Pompingan, Miss Cecile de Pompingan, Masters Maurice de Pompingan, Ernest and Gabriel Hayot, and Miss Susane Hayot.

They reported that at noon on Monday, May 5, a stream of burning lava had suddenly rushed down the southwestern slope of the mountain and, following the course of the Riviere Blanche, the bed of which is dry at this season of the year, had overwhelmed everything which obstructed its tremendous rush to the sea. Estates and buildings were covered up by the fiery wave, which appeared to rise to a height of some twenty feet over an area of nearly a quarter of a mile. When the torrent had poured itself on the beach near the mouth of the Riviere Blanche, some five miles distant from the mountain and two from St. Pierre, was entirely embedded in lava, the tall chimney alone being visible.

BITTER QUARREL

Among the Reed Brothers In Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., May 23.—A rule has been issued by Judge Miller against P. Booker Reed, ex-Mayor of Louisville, and well known as both a Democratic and Republican politician, to show why he has not complied with an order directing him to have three copies of a portrait of his father made.

When the estate of the elder Reed was settled there was a dispute as to which of the brothers should have the portrait of their father. Judge Miller ordered Booker Reed, who had the portrait, to have the copies made. He alleges that he has lost the original. Back of the affair is the most bitter family quarrel ever known in Louisville. It has waged for years among the Reed brothers, one of whom once remarked in giving a deposition that he did not know any people whose funerals he would rather attend than those of his brothers.

INDIAN BLOOD

Will Give Land to Houston Police Chief.

Houston, Texas, May 2.—George Ellis, chief of the Houston police department, has been digging about the family tree of late and has made the discovery that through remote ancestors the blood of the noble red man flows in his veins.

In addition to the genealogical interest which attaches to the discovery, it bids fair to be to the finanical advantage of Chief Ellis.

Mr. Ellis will leave for the Choctaw nation, in the Indian Territory, where he will appear before the Dawes commission to prove his rights. He will be joined by his brother, J. J. Ellis, of Edwards county.

In case Mr. Ellis is successful in establishing his Indian lineage, it will give himself and relatives the same landed rights in the Choctaw nation enjoyed by other members of the tribe.

AT LAST

Patience of Missouri Town Rewarded By a Railroad.

Macon, Mo., May 23.—A party of civil engineers will come down Charlton valley from Elmer into Macon next week to make a preliminary survey for the Iowa & St. Louis railroad through the county as far as the Burlington road.

The line from the Iowa border to Elmer is already surveyed, and construction work is well under way at several points. The road taps all the large coal fields of Northern Missouri, and is presumed to be principally a sort of fuel feeder for the great trunk lines it will cross, though regular passenger and freight trains will be run.

A Jefferson City dispatch says the Iowa & Missouri Railroad company was chartered Thursday with a capital of $1,500,000. This road will connect with the Iowa line at Macon, and from here make the connection for St. Louis.

If the line hits old Bloomington, as seems now assure, it will awaken the ghost of a hope that was buried there half a century back. In the early '50s Bloomington was the real metropolis of Northern Missouri. It was to this section what Kansas City is now to the western part of the state.

Some of the most important political meetings of the day were held there. The old inhabitants yet speak of the time when Thomas Benton addressed a crowd of 7000 in the courthouse yard, and "Bob" Stewart rode in behind four oxen and told the citizens he was going to run the Hannibal & St. Joe right through the main street of their town.

It was the county seat and general headquarters for political discussions.

Railroads were projected to it from Alexandria, Hannibal and St. Louis. Town lots went sky righ and speculation in property was the business of all.

Speaking today of this hopeful period, Squire W. D. Love, who was then a resident of Bloomington, said:

"Those were the liveliest days of my life, and about the only time I really thought I was going to be a millionaire. I had a number of valuable lots and was offered what would now seem a fabulous sum for them, but I had heard of fellows selling silver mines that afterwards turned out to be gold, and I held on. Some of us have never seen a railroad, and none knew how the'd get over the hills, but we stood ready with our ox teams in case they got stalled.

"Bob Stewart and his staff came, shook hands all around, talked grandly about excavations, rights-of-way and naturai advantages, but he left and so did the road. We had raised $25,000 to assist the enterprise.

"This was returned to us. The road went south so as to strike the coal fields 'round Bevier.

"Then the North Missouri came along and missed us. There was a meeting of the citizens, and most of them decided to move over to the railroads.

"A few grimly held on, believing a railroad would yet come their way and they have never lost hope.

"It is said patience is one of the Lord's greatest gifts to men. There will be about a dozen men in old Bloomington who will be prepared to vouch for this if the Iowa road runs through there, for they's waited nearly fifty years. And, when a man waits that long for anything, he appreciates it."

Bloomington was begun in 1840. Daniel Toole, one of the pioneer citizens, erected a store building there that year, and he kept inside of it everything a family could want between the cradle and the grave. This structure, the home of the earliest preacher of the neighborhood, Rev. Samuel Caldwell, and Abe Lewis' "Old Curiosity Shop" are still standing. There is a modern church and a few up-to-date dwellings; an atmosphere of departed grandeur hovers over the village.

When the war came on, Bloomington ran up a Southern flag and sent a company to Price's army. For this, when the federal government got control of Missouri, the county seat was removed to Macon, then headquarters for the department of Northern Missouri.

The country surrounding the town is fine for farming purposes, and underlying the soil are rich veins of coal. It is nearer the center of the county than Macon, and, with a railroad, might yet be a formidable rival for capital honors.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A bill has been introduced by Senator Lodge providing for the removal of the battle ship Maine from the harbor of Havana and the recovery of the bodies of the American sailors who sank with the vessel. The bill appropriated $1,000,000 for the purpose.

Shipping men at Boston are satisfied that the schooner Helena Augusta, bound from Stonington, Me., for New York, recently, foundered with all on board, twenty-five miles southeast of Thatcher's island as reported by Capt. Thorndyke of the schooner Ellen Francis. She was commanded by Capt. Moore, of Green Port, L. I., and carried a crew of six men besides the captain.

Seven hundred men, woman and children attacked a Norfolk street butcher's shop at New York. The butcher had opened his store for the sale of meat, disregarding the edict of the East Side people that no meat should be sold. The butcher refused to obey the mob that ordered him to close, and before the police reserves could be summoned, his place was a wreck. Four arrests were made.

H. H. Matteson, former cashier of the First National bank of Great Falls, Mont., was indicted on ninety counts on the charge of embezzling $188,000 while cashier of the bank.

Rev. Father Taylor Griffith has resigned the rectorship of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd at Omaha, because of lack of belief by the congregation of the real presence of Christ in the holy communion.

Fire which started about midnight destroyed the transfer house of the New York Central at the East Buffalo stock yards. The flames spread to the cars surrounding the building, and 600 of them were destroyed. Most of them contained valuable merchandise. William Lester, a switchman, was killed by falling timbers. The loss is roughly estimated at $600,000.

POOR JEWS COMING.

Large Party on Way to the United States.

Vienna, May 23.—A large party of Roumanian Jews, principally women, girls and young children, stopped at Vienna yesterday on their way to the United States. A majority of the immigrants intend to join relatives in Philadelphia and Milwaukee. All are pinched with hunger and are evidently wretchedly poor. They are enthusiastically confident, however, that in the United States their condition will be bettered. This party is only the beginning of what promises to be an exodus of Roumanian Jews during the next three months, owing, it is said, to oppressive legislation.

Dr. Theo. Hersel, the founder of the Zionist movement, informs the representative here of the Associated Press that the condition of the Jews in Roumania is fast becoming untenable. The new industrial law which excludes Jews from every department of industry will become effective next September said Dr. Hersel, and it is already impossible for Jews to find employment.

MONEY TAKEN FROM NEELEY.

Washington, May 23.—Secretary Root has received from Gen. Wood an express package containing $6234, being the money taken from Charles F. Neeley at the time of his arrest at Rochester, N. Y., in May, 1900, and sent by the postal authorities to Gen. Wood at Havana for use as evidence at the trial of Neeley. The secretary directed that the money be sent to the postmaster general for such disposition as he deemed proper.

"I have used DeWitt's Little Early Risers for constipation. I am glad to indorse them," writes Alfred Heinze, Quincy, Ill. Max Wirth.

Democrats Preparing For Campaign.

The Democratic leaders throughout the country are well pleased with the list of men who are to form the Democratic congressional committee for the coming campaign and they believe it augurs well for the success of the party. The list as announced by Secretary Edwards contains the names of Benjamin T. Cable, Lewis Nixon, Josiah Quincy, as well as those of Senator Clark, of Montana, Isidor Straus, of New York, Senator Turner, of Washington, and Clark Howell, of Georgia. Clark, Turner and Straus are all rich men, and money is needed in any campaign. The headquarters of the committee will be located in Washington, and will open for business on the 29th of May. Ex-Congressman Cable, chairman of the executive committee, is regarded as one of the ablest and most energetic political managers of the country. He is a hustler from 'way back, and has the confidence of the big commercial and financial men of the East and West. Democratic members of congress, particularly of the East, seem to be confident that the labor vote will be cast solidly for the Democratic ticket this fall, and they expect that this will enable them to carry many of the doubtful districts of New York, Illinois and Indiana. The secretary of the campaign committee has already begun the distribution of Democratic literature. It is stated in inside Democratic circles that Senator Hill has agreed to work with Edward M. Shepard and Lewis Nixon in New York state, and that nothing will be done there without these three men being consulted. It is understood that Cable is to have absolute charge of the campaign in the Middle West, and that he and Carter Harrison will map out the plan of campaign for that section of the country. The headquarters of the executive committee will be in Chicago. The Democrats will make the effort of their lives to make the next house Democratic and are confident of success.

A Decision of Far Reaching Effect.

The decision handed down by the supreme court at the first of the week in the Deming case is quite far reaching in its effect. To be brief, the decision of the court was that a court martial composed entirely of officers of the regular army was not competent to pass upon a case involving the rights of a volunteer officer. The decision affects at once Deming himself, Read and another officer convicted of complicity in the commissary frauds at Manila, and one officer who was convicted of corruptly participating in a plot to run hemp out of Philippine ports without paying the export tax. Besides these, a number of enlisted men who are undergoing sentences of life or long-term imprisonment by the commutation of death sentences, will be affected by it if their counsel overhaul the records and bring their cases to the attention of the authorities. The decision releases all these men, for it is equivalent to saying that they have never been tried. There are several offenses catalogued in the sixtieth article of war, and if any of the culprits have been guilty of these, they might still be summoned before a court and tried, otherwise, as the volunteer army was mustered out of service last year by operation of law, they are private citizens and no longer amenable to the military authority in any sense. There is no likelihood whatever that any attempt will be made to try them under the sixtieth article, as the best lawyers have always regarded its constitutionality doubtful, and the war department is not anxious to get involved in any more constitutional snarls. The question then arises naturally whether the men who have been punished by the deprivation of pay, etc., during their terms of imprisonment now pronounced illegal, may not come back upon the government for damages. There does not seem to be any way open for them to do this successfully. In Capt. Deming's case there would certainly be none, as his confession to the court that he embezzled $5000 and spent it on bad company would stop him, even if he should come to congress with a private relief bill. It is not probable that these cases will be heard of again, for the present, at least. The culprits are satisfied to be released and the government is willing to wash its hands of them.

DULUTH'S GUESTS.

The delegation of business men from the upper peninsula of Michigan that arrived in Duluth this afternoon were met "down the road" by a committee of the Duluth Commercial club and extended a cordial welcome to the city, and a large crowd at the Union depot on their arrival emphasized the warm greeting. The visitors from the copper country come by special invitation of the management of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, and during their brief stay here will be entertained by the Commercial club. It is a practical demonstration of the value of such an organization.

On Saturday afternoon the visitors will be taken on a trip around the Boulevard, and if the weather should prove pleasant, as now seems probable, they will find it very enjoyable. In the evening there will be a banquet at the Spalding under the direction of the Commercial club, and the guests will be entertained by a "feast of oratory and flow of soul," as well as an elaborate menu.

It is cause for regret that the home of the Commercial club has not yet been completed, otherwise the business men here would be in a better position to entertain the visitors, but when they come on another trip—and these visits should be frequent—they will find the club better equipped to make their stay a pleasant one.

A DIFFERENCE.

That the people were robbed by the manufacturers of letter boxes for the rural mail routes is evident from the bids submitted under the recent advertisement for proposals. Much to the surprise of the postoffice department, the manufacturers have offered to manufacture for the government, at a cost of 50 cents each boxes that are identical with those for which the patrons of the rural free delivery service are now paying $2.50 each.

When the amendment offered by Senator Tillman was made to the postoffice appropriation bill providing for the purchase by the government for delivery to patrons of the rural free delivery of boxes at a cost not exceeding 50 cents each, it was generally thought that manufacturers would refuse to bid. It was not believed that any large manufacturing concern would undertake to produce the kind of boxes required at the price named. The opening of bids by the department showed that several manufacturers were ready to undertake the work.

Manufacturers explain the remarkable reduction in the price of their wares in a very plausible manner. They state that under the present system they are compelled to employ traveling salesmen, pay commissions and incur heavy expenses without being assured of any considerable demand for their product. With the government as the purchaser, all of the expense of soliciting trade and the marketing of the boxes is removed. In addition to this the manufacturer is assured of the sale of a very large number of the boxes and can afford to sell them at the low price of 50 cents each.

This explanation is plausible, but should be well seasoned before acceptance. However, bygones should be bygones as long as the boxes may now be obtained at a reasonable figure.

FACTS ABOUT CUBA.

With the birth of the republic of Cuba and the starting out of the island under the control of its own people, some facts as to area, population and industry are of especial interest. Cuba has about the same area as the combined states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland; in other words, about 47,000 square miles, with a coast line of 2200 miles. Its natural resources, which are great, will undoubtedly be greatly developed by American enterprise. There are uncleared forests of 17,000,000 acres, and the mountains are rich in minerals. Gen. Wood estimated the value of the sugar and tobacco yield of 1900 at $100,000,000.

The latest census of Cuba was taken in 1900 under the direction of the United States military government. The total population was returned as 1,572,797, including 815,205 males and 757,592 females. There are 447,372 white males and 462,926 white females of native birth. The foreign whites number 115,760 males and 26,458 females. There are 111,898 male negroes and 122,740 female negroes. The negroes constitute, therefore, but 32 per cent of the population. The mixed races number 125,500 males and 145,305 females. There are 14,694 male and 163 female Chinese. The population of Havana city is 235,981, and of the province of Havana 424,304. The population of the province of Matanzas is 202,444, of Pinar del Rio, 173,064, of Puerto Principe 88,234, of Santa Clara 356,536 and of Santiago 327,715. Of the total population of the island 1,108,709 persons are set down as single, 246,351 as married, while 131,787 live together by mutual consent. There are 85,112 widows. Of the total population, according to citizenship, 20,487 are Spaniards, 1,296,367 are Cubans, 175,811 were in suspense, 79,526 are of other citizenship and 616 are unknown. The Spaniards by birth number 129,240. Of the children 10 years old and over, 49,414 have attended school. Of the total population, 443,426 can read and write and 19,158 have a superior education.

The above certainly makes an excellent showing and there seems to be no good reason why the new republic should not be successful in every way.

THE ST. LAWRENCE ROUTE.

It is of interest to Duluth grain shippers and vesselmen to learn that the new Canadian minister of marine, James Sutherland, has set himself steadily to the task of removing the disabilities under which navigation by the St. Lawrence route labors by reason of discriminatory rates levied by the marine insurance companies. Owing to heavy losses from the wrecking of ships in the St. Lawrence channel or in the ocean approaches leading thereto, insurance companies have been increasing their rates until they are now from two to five times as high or the same ships and cargoes to New York. This is, of course, a very serious handicap to trade by that route, since the exporter suffers doubly from the high insurance rates and from the heavier freight rates consequent upon the sparseness of the return cargoes.

Mr. Sutherland secured from the Canadian parliament at its last session a grant of $250,000 for the improvement of the St. Lawrence navigation, to consist chiefly of more powerful lighthouses and for fog signals. It is also the intention of the department to have a thorough survey made of the dangerous waters in the neighborhood of Cape Race, where there have been several marine disasters within the past few years. The currents and reefs of these waters do not appear to be accurately marked on existing charts, and the lighthouse and signal stations on the coast are also deficient. Cape Race is outside the jurisdiction of the Canadian government, but it is expected that some arrangements will be made with Newfoundland whereby Canada will take charge of the signal stations and lighthouses in that neighborhood.

While the navy is clamorous before congress for an increase of officers in all branches of the service on the ground that the present number is grossly insufficient, there is a growing suspicion owing to recent disclosures concerning the department that there is a considerable number of officers whose terms of service ashore seem to be largely in excess of cruising at sea, which is likely to prove an obstacle to the plan of increasing the naval list. The Schley business and the Miles quarrel have opened the eyes of members of congress to what they consider a usurpation of the military power in functions which have been for years regarded as purely civil. The undue power possessed by the bureau of navigation, with its new adjunct, the general policy board, is caustically commented upon by those who make laws and appropriate money, and a good deal of tact just at present is essential on the part of navy folks to keep the congressional temper in friendly mood. It is no secret that neither the army nor the navy stands very well at present with congress or the people in general.

The report that 5000 of the striking anthracite coal miners will spend the time in Europe pending the settlement of the strike goes to show that they are far from destitute. Perhaps the touring miners may come across some of the touring coal barons at the fashionable European resorts and fix the trouble up over their wine.

Formerly, up till less than twenty years ago, the British house of commons met at 4 p. m., and frequently sat in session till long after midnight. Since 1886 it has met at 3, and hereafter it will meet at 2. In a few years more it may catch up with the American congress, which meets at high 12.

And now it is said President Roosevelt intends to give a good appointment to Col. Grigeby, of South Dakota. If there are any Rough Riders out of office, let them ride to the front.

AT THE HOTELS

"I've been coming to Duluth for over two years, and never yet have struck an unpleasant day here," said George D. Taylor, of St. Paul at the Spalding this morning. "I've heard a great deal about Duluth's bad weather in the late winter and early summer, but my testimony must be wholly in favor of the defendant. My trips have been made as frequently as once in thirty or sixty days, but I never found a day that wasn't bright and pleasant in summer or clear and warm in winter. I never had to wear a cap when I was here during the cool season. So when I hear people tell about Duluth's bad weather, I cant understand it, and if a stranger is doing the talking, I simply tell him he doesn't know what he is talking about, citing my experience in proof of my position."

Inasmuch as Mr. Taylor came up yesterday afternoon in a decidedly negligee mode, wearing a Panama hat, a negligee shirt and no vest, it was just as well perhaps that he didn't arrive a day earlier.

EACH WANTS JUDGE

Heinze and Amalgamated Would Control Courts.

Helena, Mont., May 23.—Although Montana will elect only one state officer, a congressman at large, members of the lower house of the legislature and about one-half of the state senators, as well as county officers in each county at the election of 1902 will come up to the average in absorbing interest. Interest centers around the election of an associate justice of the supreme court to succeed justice William T. Pigott. Both the Amalgamated Copper company and F. A. Heinze, who furnish about 70 per cent of the cases before the court, are deeply interested in the election of a judge. It is an open secret that both sides will strive to elect a man favorable to them. It is rather a humiliating spectacle for the average citizen, but he cannot help himself.

The latest rumor afloat is that Heinze, in order to elect favorable members of the legislature and a friendly justice of the supreme court, will appeal to the laboring men for votes by coming out for $4 a day for mine and smeltermen. This would prove to be an argument that it would be hard for the opposition to meet. It is said to have been Mr. Heinze's foresight that induced W. A. Clark to grant his miners the eight-hour day at $3.50, during the campaign two years ago, which resulted in carrying the state for Clark and Heinze. Now Heinze will go one better and pay him miners and smeltermen $4 a day of eight hours.

This appears to be an astonishing proposition considering the low price of copper, but it is explained that if Heinze can elect his men to the legislature and a friendly justice he can well afford the extra 50 cents a day upon his men's wages.

There is no disputing that the Amalgamated Copper company views the situation with alarm.

TWO DEAD

From a Terrific Electrical Storm In Ohio.

Toledo, Ohio, May 23.—A terrific electrical and windstorm passed over Northwestern Ohio yesterday afternoon. Two persons were killed, one fatally injured and many others less seriously injured. Much damage was done in the oil fields. Dead:

HENRY JAULTMAN, a farm hand, at Danbury.

ISADORE METZGER, aged 25, oil man, at Delphos.

Metzger and five companions were in a barn which was struck by lightning. Marcus Suver was fatally injured and Lee Bekman, William Webber, Nicholas Sarber and Garrett Wienken were injured.

VOLCANIC ERUPTION

On a Lone Island South of Martinique.

New York, May 23.—Capt. Hansen, of the Norwegian steamship Talisman, from Barbadoes, discovered a volcanic eruption, hitherto unreported, on Diamond Rock, an uninhabited little island about two miles southeast of Diamond Hill, the extreme southwest point of Martinique. The apex of the rock is 574 feet above the sea.

The Talisman drew near the rock before sunrise on May 13. Capt. Hansen noticed a bright light near the top of the rock. He thought at first it was the searchlight of a warship. As dawn broke and the light was still glowing he decided that it was likely that refugees from Martinique were on the rock burning signals for assistance.

Capt. Hansen steamed within 1000 feet and noticed that the glow was from a hole in the rocks. While he was steaming closer there was a great whiff of fire and smoke from the hole shooting down toward the sea, instead of skyward. It was like a puff from a big gun on a rampart. The outpour of fire and smoke grew worse, and the captain decided to get out of range and headed on his course.

USED A BREAD KNIFE.

Trial In Montana For First Degree Murder.

Townsend, Mont., May 23.—The trial of Thomas Tighe on a charge of murder in the first degree has commenced. He killed Paul Koch at Winston, March 6. He was foreman of the East Pacific mine and Koch was a cook. The two had a fight in the kitchen when Tighe stabbed Koch to death with a bread knife. Tighe says he acted in self defense. The trial is drawing large crowds and promises to last several days.

CORBETT AND BROAD.

Fighters All Ready For Bout at Denver.

Denver, May 23.—Young Corbett, the featherweight champion, will meet Kid Broad, of Cleveland, tonight in a ten-round bout before the Coliseum Athletic club. This is the champion's first fight since he won the title by defeating Terry McGovern last Thanksgiving day. Both men have trained carefully for the bout, and both are confident of winning. The betting in Denver is 2 to 1 in favor of Corbett, with no Broad money in sight. The preliminaries will be good fights. Young Devaney will go on for six rounds with Reddy Coogan, and Rube Smith will meet Eddy Toy.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

The Sudden Death of Captain George Cowie.

New York, May 23.—Capt. George Cowie, a well known naval officer who served under Admiral Farragut in the civil war and was chief engineer of the battleship Philadelphia in the war with Spain, has been killed at Rahway, N. J., by an express train. He was standing on the track waiting for a train to clear the crossing when the express, coming from the opposite direction, ran him down.

LARGE CARGO

Of Wheat Will Leave Pacific Coast For Africa.

Portland, Ore., May 23.—The largest cargo of wheat that has ever left the Pacific coast for South Africa will be shipped from Portland early in June on the big ship Speke. This vessel, which is said to be the largest three-masted ship afloat, was chartered yesterday to load a full cargo at this port for the "Dark Continent" at 27 shillings and 6 pence. This leaves the Columbia river again without a disengaged grain ship ready for business.

Attempt to Break Will of Eccentric Bachelor.

Milwaukee, May 23.—The courts are trying to decide whether Charles James was sane when he bequeathed $166,258 to Millicent Holmes, his niece, who cared for him after he became helpless. He was an eccentric bachelor of Wauwautosa, 85 years old at the time of his death and paralyzed. A trust company petitioned the court to set aside the will on the ground that he was not in his right mind when he made it.

GOES AFTER BAIRD.

Lincoln, Neb., May 23.—Detective Malone left for Kansas City this morning to bring back Al Beard, wanted here on the charge of murdering former Representative John J. Gillian last August. Minneapolis officers, who suspected Beard of being connected with the murder of Policeman Mayer, have waived their claim in favor of Lincoln. An alleged accomplice is in jail here.

PUGILIST MAY DIE.

Boston, May 23.—Tommy Noonon, of Chelsea, is believed to be dying from concussion of the brain as a result of a blow received in a boxing contest with Eddie Dixon, of Chicago, at the Lenox A. C. last night. Dixon gave himself up to the police. The men met at catch weights for a six-round go, and had nearly completed four rounds when the knockout blow was given.

THE DAKOTAS.

Burglars Rob Plankington Man of Four Hundred Dollars.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Plankington—The residence of A. H. Cramer, a prominent business man, was entered by burglars late Wednesday night, and about $800 in money taken. Mr. Cramer was awakened as the burglars were escaping through a window and, grabbing a revolver ran to the porch and mistaking a friend passing by for the thief took a few shots at him. Luckily his aim was wild. The neighborhood was greatly aroused, but a systematic search failed to reveal a trace of the robber. Mr. Cramer says the work was done by local men.

Pierre—Sheriff John F. Sides of Dakota county, Nebraska, came after an extradition warrant for Sheriff Lewiston and deputies of Union county, this state, for their part in the Turgeon shooting over a land dispute several days ago. The Union county officers, expecting such action, several days ago filed an application for a hearing and it will be given them, probably at Elk Point. The Turgeons applied for a hearing in Nebraska and it will be given them before any action is taken on the South Dakota requisition, which has been granted.

Lake Preston—Deputy Sheriff Peterman received a telephone message from Vienna, S. D., to arrest J. A. Struble, cashier of the Vienna Savings bank, who was on his way to Flandreau. He was taken from the train here and turned over to a deputy from Clark county. The warrant was issued by the bank people, who assert that he locked the bank without notice, but Struble says he left the bank in charge of one of the directors and that it is in good condition.

Lead—The compulsory education laws of the state are to be enforced in Lead. W. B. Perkins, clerk of the board of education, has been issuing notices to parents and guardians that unless all children between the ages of 8 and 12 years enter school prosecutions will be instituted.

Belle Fouche—The upper Belle Fouche roundup has started and is expected to reach here in between two and three weeks. Other roundups have been in progress several weeks. It is found that the loss to cattle on account of the hard March storms was not as heavy as at first believed. It was confined entirely to small sections, the worst being on the Moreau and tributaries. Heavy rains have impeded roundup work the past few days.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The water in the Red river has risen over a foot the last few days as a result of heavy rains. The water is extremely muddy and is scarcely fit for bathing purposes let alone culinary use and drinking. It seems probable that water will have to be piped from some Minnesota lake, and if this is done the cost will be $150,000 to $200,000. A big artesian well may be put down and a pumping test made.

North Dakotans are rather enjoying the reports of the $25,000 damage suit started by Emil J. Pepke of this state against Collector Nixon and other officials of Chicago, who seized his fourteen diamonds, which he won back after carrying the case to the United States supreme court. A bill has been introduced in congress to reimburse him for the diamond case in the courts.

Jamestown—The old variety theater on Main street, which was opened just twenty years ago, has been sold. The material will be used in the construction of a Catholic church. Another old building, the Jamestown holier rink, will shortly be dismantled, having been sold to a farmer who will construct a barn from the material.

IN MICHIGAN.

Little Italian Girl at Houghton Is Fatally Scalded.

Houghton—Lena Gemijmoni, an Italian child, the 2-year-old daughter of Francisco Gemijmoni, of the Franklin location, was badly scalded in a tub of boiling hot water, and died. The mother was preparing to scrub at the time, and left the room to get a scrubbing brush. She was gone but an instant, but when she returned the baby whom she had left alone in the room was in the tub. The little one had been attracted by the steam arising from the tub, and being too curious fell in. Nothing could be done for the child, and it suffered great agony.

Gladstone—A 9-foot vein of copper is said to have been struck by the Northern Michigan Oil and Improvement company while drilling for oil on Black's farm north of Rapid river. The vein is at a depth of 900 feet and is said to be very rich.

Crystal Falls—A company of local capitalists has been organized to build and operate a woodenware factory here that, in a measure, will furnish more competition for the veneer work trust. The capital is $10,000, of which three-fourths is paid in. Several hundred acres of hardwood lands have already been turned over to the new concern.

Lake Crystal—William Jenkins was instantly killed Wednesday afternoon by west-bound train No. 3. He was 85 years old and a pioneer in this community.

Calumet—Miss Nettie Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Thompson, of Laurium, was married to William G. Cruse, assistant cashier of the State Savings bank, at the home of her parents, Rev. Dr. Hunter of the Calumet Congregational church performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of intimate friends. Miss Ina Babcock, of Appleton, Wis., was the bridesmaid and Dr. Edwin Cruse, of Iron Mountain, was best man. After a trip East Mr. and Mrs. Cruse will return to make their home in Laurium.

Isle Royale—The Isle Royale mine will dispense with the services of 100 to 125 of its miners, most of these having already been laid off. Sinking and drifting in all shafts will be practically stopped. The mill will be kept running with three heads as there is ample rock for some time. Since the mine started mining operations a little over a year ago probably not a tenth of the rock has been sent to the mill. There is a big reserve supply on hand and the company can easily curtail mining operations for a considerable period. Ten drills which were in commission have stopped working. The reduction in the force will lessen the monthly running expenses several thousand dollars, $13,000 being a rough estimate.

NOT MUCH IS KNOWN

Effect of Eastern Minnesota Change a Mystery as Yet.

Disposition of Present General Officers Is Not Known.

Assistant Supt. Knebel Transferred---New Man Comes.

Two announcements of changes affecting the Eastern Minnesota road are shrouded with mystery. One is to the effect that the Eastern will, after July 1, be leased to and operated by the Great Northern as a part of the system. Another piece of news, which does not seem to be official as yet, though it appears to be authentic, is that Assistant Superintendent Robert L. Knebel, with charge of the Fosston branch, has been transferred to the Willmar division, and that he will be succeeded at Superior by J. C. Howard. Mr. Knebel is well known in Duluth, where he lived for a number of years for a long time as chief clerk of the Duluth & Winnipeg, and later of the Eastern Minnesota. He has made a good record on the Eastern, and he won his promotion by hard and faithful work. That much is generally known in railway circles.

Any effort to get information about Mr. Howard has been fruitless. Nobody seems to know what road he has been connected with, in fact nothing about his railway career, except that he is new to the Great Northern road.

The published explanation of the reason for consolidating the operating departments of the Eastern with the Great Northern seems to be borne out by the announcement that the same movement will extend to other constituent parts of the Great Northern system. It is believed that much red tape and extra work in the auditors's department will be saved by the changes. The system will be made less cumbersome throughout.

As far as known nobody seems to know just what the titles of the present general officers of the Eastern will be under the new deal. It seems to be well established that the present general officers will continue in their present relations to the road with which they have been connected, but possibly under new titles.

It is a very well known fact that the Eastern Minnesota road has always been very largely controlled by members of the Hill family. The stock has not been spread around as much as the shares of other parts of the Hill system. The reason for this is that the traffic of this part of the system is the heaviest per ton mile that is hauled on any part of the Great Northern. Moreover, it stands up well among the heavy freight traffic roads of the country, only the New York Central, and perhaps one or two other roads, exceeding it in mile tonnages.

The reason for this is that the largest part of the freight traffic of the entire system is concentrated at this eastern apex of the system. Here it gathers in passing from the West to the East, and from Duluth it is distributed over the Eastern to the West. The Fosston branch relieved the former congestion existing on the original Eastern line to the West, but traffic has developed very largely since that line was put through, particularly on account of the purchase of the Wright-Davis road, on the Mesaba range, and the heavy ore tonnage that is grought down over a part of the Fosston branch.

DROWNED FROM FERRY.

Unknown Man Fell Off the Belle at Superior.

An unknown man was drowned in Tower bay slip, in West Superior, yesterday. He fell from the ferry boat Belle as she was nearing the dock. He rose to the surface but once and a life preserver was thrown to him, but he appeared helpless. The body was recovered shortly afterward by the police, with the aid of grappling hooks.

Some of the people witnessing the accident claim that the man was drunk and lost his balance. The body was taken in charge by Coroner Dudley, of Douglas county. Nothing was found in his pockets to give a clue to his identity. His general appearance is that of a laboringman. Efforts are being made by the authorities to locate the man's relatives.

BASEBALL.

Brainerd and Duluth High School Teams Meet Saturday.

The Duluth high school will play a game of baseball with the team from the Brainerd high school at the Driving park tomorrow afternoon.

The Brainerd men have a good reputation, having defeated a number of the best high school teams in the state. The local men have played two highly successful games already this season, and are confident of carrying off the scalps of the boys from the southern part of the state when they cross bats with them Saturday.

The local men have been indulging in their usual steady practice during the week, and they will be in fine fettel when the game is called. Capt. Cummings, the remarkable pitcher of the local nine, is in good trim, and he is to be depended upon to show the Brainerd men some slants that will astonish them.

Some of the Duluth men are back in their studies. On this account the exact line-up is not yet known, as the players are not allowed to participate in a game unless they are in good standing on the scholarship records of the school. But the team will not be weakened materially, as only one or two of the less important men are in danger of not being allowed to play, and there are a number of eager substitutes waiting to take their places.

The Brainerd men have a good reputation for fair play, and there is no doubt but that they will play a good, straight game, with none of the dirt which the Minneapolis Central high school disgusted the crowd at the last high school game.

This is the first time that the Duluth and Brainerd high schools have come together, but it will not be the last. The local boys intend to make Brainerd one of their regular opponents.

If the weather is favorable a large crowd is expected to attend the game.

CREDIT INSURANCE.

Movement Among Manufacturers and Jobbers.

A movement is said to be under way among some of the manufacturers and jobbers of the city for taking out credit insurance with an Eastern credit indemnity company. The idea is somewhat new in this section of the country, but not in the Eastern cities. In the main the idea is the insurance of the wholesaler against losses by failures of the retail merchants to whom he has extended large credit. There are few merchants who do not feel at some time or another a sense of wronged and misplaced confidence when they get a notice of the insolvency of a customer. It invariably happens in unexpected quarters. Too many of these instances are apt to disgust and discourage the wholesaler and make serious inroads into his profits for a season.

The credit indemnity company claims to protect its policy holders against excessive losses. The insurance does not cover that percentage of losses on a year's sales which are natural through business methods and the commodities dealt in, but beyond these losses the merchant is said to be able to protect himself from an adverse season or the blows that may come from any source to effect his outstanding credits.

Another advantage credit indemnity is claimed to give the merchant is that his collections may be handled from a more aggressive standpoint when he chooses, or when it may be a matter of expediency for him to do so. On the other hand a customer can be granted an extension when in straitened circumstances and can be held above the drowning level until he is on a firm financial footing again.

IRON ORE

Buying Has Fallen Off During Last Fortnight.

Cleveland, May 23.—The Iron Trade Review says: The buying of iron ore in lots ranging from 5000 to 20,000 tons which was quite steady in April and the early portion of May has fallen off materially in the past fortnight and the market is now rather quiet. There is still a good tonnage for sale, both of old range and Mesaba ores. Shippers of ore appear recently to have returned to their policy of last season, in chartering about all the boats offered at the head of the lakes. The facilities there for loading ore are very much in excess of those at the lower lakes for unloading and the result is that the vessels are coming down the lakes much faster than they can be unloaded, causing numerous and long drawn out delays. The loss to the vessel owners, therefore, comes in the form of delays to their boats rather than a reduction of the carrying charges, as the shippers do not seem inclined to interfere with present rates.

CANADA TO GULF.

Promoters Talk About Long Distance Electric Line.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 23.—A double track electric railway from the borders of Canada to the Gulf of Mexico will be a realization within the next few years if the plans of a syndicate of the Mississippi valley with Judge John Porter, of Eldora, Ia., at the head, are carried out. The railway, according to present plans, will start near the Lake of the Woods and will follow the Mississippi valley to the gulf. Judge Porter was in Waterloo yesterday to get President Cass of the Waterloo & Cedar Falls electric railway into the deal. He states that it is practically a sure go.

A meeting of the promoters representing every state between Minnesota and the gulf will be held in Des Moines June 1 to perfect organization. Judge Porter is one of the best known promoters of electric railways in Iowa and the Middle West.

TO FIGHT IN LONDON.

Harry Harns, Chicago Feather weight Goes Abroad.

New York, May 23.—Harry Harris, the Chicago featherweight, who defeated Pedlar Palmer before the National Sporting club in London a year ago, will sail tomorrow on the Campania. He goes to London to engage in a contest with Andrew Tokell, the champion bantam of England, for the championship of the world. The fight will take place during coronation week before the National Sporting club.

GIFT OF PREMIER

Collection of Sketches Presented to Mrs. Roosevelt.

On Occasion of State Dinner at White House.

Was Given In Honor of Distinguished French Visitors.

Washington, May 2.—A state dinner was given at the White House last night by President and Miss Roosevelt, in honor of the distinguished visitors from France who are in this country in connection with the Rochambeau statue. The company invited to meet the visitors was a thoroughly representative one, including the members of the cabinet, senators and representatives in congress and high officials of the army and navy. Owing to the large number of guests the table, semi-circular in shape, was set in the historic east room, which was appropriately decorated with the French and American flags, with palms, cut flowers and crotons. Maidenhair ferns, metor and bridal roses and carnations were used in the table decorations. The Marine band played especially selected music. The president and Miss Roosevelt met their guests in the blue parlor.

The president, who sat at the head of the table, had at his right Mme. Cambon, the wife of the French ambassador, while to his left was the Countess Rochambeau, who had at her left the ambassador of France. The Count de Rochambeau escorted Miss Carew to the table, and the Count de Lafayette Mrs. Payne, the wife of the postmaster general.

An interesting event of the evening was the presentation to Mrs. Roosevelt of a rare collection of sketches and engravings, a gift from the premier of the French cabinet, M. Waldeck Rousseau. The sketches are by the distinguished Parisian artist, M. Renouard, who is one of the members of the mission now here, and who personally made the presentation. The sketches are some forty in number, showing glimpses of Paris during the exposition.

During the dinner President Roosevelt proposed the toast, "To the President of the French Republic and to the People of France."

Ambassador Cambon gave as a toast "The President of the United States," and made a short, graceful speech. Secretary Hay proposed "The Members of the Rochambeau Mission." Gen. Brugere responded.

TEST CASE

To Decide the Validity of Food Law Is Argued.

St. Paul, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The test case which will decide the validity of the law prohibiting the use of preservatives in food products was argued before the state supreme court. The cases were those of the state against C. F. Wagenhals and J. M. Rumberg, who appealed from the decision of the municipal court of Minneapolis fining them for using preservatives.

Rome G. Brown, of Minneapolis, argued that borax is harmless, and that to prevent its use and allow salt to be used as preservative was a discrimination which made the preservatives act unconstitutional. Attorney General Douglas, who appeared for the state, argued that borax was frequently injurious to health, and that it was no discrimination to allow the use of salt as a preservative, as it is a necessity for health, whereas borax is not required by the human system.

The police say that Batchelder had a number of confederates, and that they have done a great deal of counterfeiting in the last few months.

IN CONGRESS.

Joint Resolution Passed to Meet Objections By President.

Washington, May 23.—Soon after the senate convened today Mr. Hale (Me.), from the appropriations committee, reported a bill making additional appropriations supplying urgent deficiency in the appropriations for the present fiscal year. As the bill passed the house it carried an appropriation of $81,500, and the senate committee added $98,500. The principal additions were for printing for the navy and interior departments. The bill was passed.

Mr. Stewart (Nev.), chairman of the Indian affairs committee, offered a joint resolution, which, he said, met some objections of the president to the Indian appropriation bill. The resolution provided for the modification of certain provisions of the Indian appropriation bill relating to the making of allotments to the Indians of the Spokane Indian reservation, to the payment to certain Indians of an amount aggregating $70,064, and to the settlement of the Indian lands.

The resolution was passed.

At the conclusion of the morning business the army appropriation bill, with the message from the house asking for a conference, with instructions to its conferees not to agree to the senate amendments relating to the construction of barracks and quarters at established military posts, thus striking out the appropriation for such buildings in Manila, was laid before the senate.

Mr. Proctor, in charge of the bill, said it was a new and unusual condition presented. To bring the matter up he moved that the senate agree to the conference asked.

Mr. Spooner said it was of the utmost consequence that there should be the utmost harmony between the two branches of congress, but it was just as necessary that there should be full and free conferences. He thought the procedure of the house was inadmissible, and if the senate acquiesced now in the proposition made, there would be no end to the trouble which would arise.

Mr. Foraker suggested that the senate merely insists upon its amendments and thus send the bill back to the house. He said that while the house had been exceedingly disrespectful, the senate did not desire to be disrespectful to the house.

Mr. Hoar moved that the senate insist upon its amendments, and that it ask the house for a free conference.

Mr. Pettus (Ala.) thought the best mode of procedure would be to appoint a committee of the senate to try to smooth out the differences.

Mr. Allison agreed with Mr. Pettus, and said if Mr. Hoar's motion were adopted it might complicate the difficulty rather than reduce it. He believed the better plan would be to agree to the conference asked, and let the protest against the injunctions already made stand as a notice to the house of the senate's feeling.

THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 23.—Upon the reconvening of the house today, Mr. Wadsworth (N. Y.) presented the conference report on the agricultural bill for printing in the record, according to the rule adopted yesterday, and gave notice that he would call it up on Monday next.

Bills were passed: To establish storm warning stations at South Manitou Island, Lake Michigan, $15,000; to redivide the district of Alaska into three recording and judicial districts; for the promotion of First Lieut. Joseph M. Simms, revenue cutter service.

The house disagreed to the senate amendments to the bill to prevent the false branding or marking of food or dairy products, and asked for a conference

The house then proceeded to the consideration of private pension bills.

AT WEST DULUTH

The police department is beginning to think that West Duluth is being raided by professional chicken thieves, and that there is a well organized gang of them. Minor complaints of stolen chickens in small numbers have been numerous in the past few weeks, but last evening thieves broke into the coop belonging to Andrew P. Carlson, of 4526 West Fourth street, and stole twenty-five chickens, two turkey-hens and a gobbler. Another gobbler was stolen last evening from Robert Woods, who resides near Mr. Carlson.

The police department has been investigating the robbery today, but up to this afternoon had no clue to work on. The fact that the stealing was not done by amateurs was evidenced in the methods used. The floor of the coop is sprinkled with sulphur that was burned by the marauders to stupefy the chickens so that they would make no outcry. Mr. Carlson has about sixty chickens, and it is supposed that the reason that the thieves did not take all of them was because they were either frightened away or did not have bags enough to carry away their booty. So quietly did they work that no noise was heard during the night by any of the Carlson family, and the chickens were not missed until an early morning hour, when Mr. Carlson went out to feed them.

Another peculiar robbery last evening was that of a horse from the barn of David McGibbon. The horse was taken at a late hour and was not missed until this morning, when it was found tied near the barn. The animal had been driven quite hard, and its legs were badly scratched. With the horse was an old buggy that does not belong to Mr. Gibbon, and he does not know from whence it came. The police are at a loss to know definitely if there is any connection between the two deeds, whether the chicken thieves used the rig to get away with their plunder, and if so, who could have brought the horse back.

MRS. NITTERAUER DEAD.

Death has laid claim to another prominent and popular West Duluth woman, Mrs. Charles W. Nitterauer, of 412 North Fifty-second avenue west, died yesterday afternoon after an illness of a month, of erysipelas. The disease reached her brain and Mrs. Nitterauer became unconscious, in which condition she remained until her death.

The decedent was about 45 years of age and leaves no other immediate relatives other than her husband, Charles Nitterauer, who is superintendent of the Duluth Brass works. The funeral was held from the residence this afternoon and the remains were sent to Milwaukee for interment. Handsome floral designs were presented by Euclid lodge and Royal chapter, R. A. M.

MAY BE TOO HIGH.

Some of the storekeepers along the west side of Central avenue are wondering what the effect will be when the new sidewalk is put down in front of their places of business. The old sidewalk has been down a number of years, and as the stringers have rotted away the walk has settled. In front of the new Wieland & Wade building the walk has settled eight inches. When the new walk is put down at the established grade, it is likely to be higher than the door sills of some of the stores, and the buildings may have to be raised.

STEAMER STILL FAST.

The steamer Leland, which went hard aground in the bay off the foot of Fortieth avenue west, early yesterday morning, is still stuck fast in the sand in spite of her own efforts and the efforts of a tug to get her off. The Leland was going up the bay to load lumber, and while proceeding in the fog, got way out of the channel. The boat was running light and stands high out of water.

MAY START A FACTORY.

It is rumored that steps are being taken toward the repair and starting up again of the sash and door factory in the western part of West Duluth. The factory has been closed down for about two years, and will need considerable repair work. It was owned by A. S. Chase, but it is understood that he has either sold or leased the factory to parties that will operate it. The factory, when operating, employs employs about twelve or fifteen men.

HOUSES ARE SCARCE.

Complaint is being made that houses for rent are very scarce in West Duluth. One man, who expects to settle in West Duluth, was hunting all the morning for a house, but said he was unable to find one. Of the West Duluth rental agents several claim to have absolutely nothing to offer in the way of houses, while few others have desirable places for residence. There are a large number of real estate deals pending that may be closed before tomorrow evening.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The funeral of Mrs. Robert L. Cochrane will be held from the family residence tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made at Oneota cemetery. It was expected that the decedent's father would arrive today for the funeral, but he is too far advanced in years to withstand the long journey up here.

The funeral of Miss Jennie Dass will be held from the Asbury M. E. church Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Burial will be made at Oneota cemetery.

A large number of the men now employed in repairing the blast furnace and getting it ready for operation were brought to West Duluth from the shipyards at West Superior.

Already the business men of West Duluth are talking Fourth of July celebration. It is thought likely that the Commercial club will take the initiative in getting up a celebration for this end of the city.

Tonight the Irving School Alumni association will meet in annual banquet. The arrangements have all been completed and a very enjoyable affair is anticipated.

F. Ceybroski, who formerly resided here, and who returned recently from Brainerd, has purchased the one-story building on Central avenue from William Chestock and will open a tailoring establishment.

George O'Brien arrived in West Duluth yesterday.

William Spencer has returned from a short business trip in the South.

Fred Laundry has returned from Texas, where he went several months ago.

John Sullivan and P. Murray have gone to Pike Lake on a fishing trip.

J. M. Lauermann, the popular shoe dealer, will give a whistle to every boy that calls at his store Saturday afternoon, between 4 and 5 o'clock.

The West Duluth butter store and milk depot will be open Sunday morning from 8:30 to 9:30 to accommodate those desiring milk and cream.

For wall paper go to S. J. Nygren's. Lauermann's shoes fit my feet.

OUT OF RACE.

Dr. Hemptead Will Not Be a Candidate For Congress.

St. Paul, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Werner Hempstead, of Brainerd, announces that he is out of the race for the Democratic nomination for congress from the new Sixth district. Dr. Hempstead will be a candidate to succeed himself in the house.

Dr. Hempstead was generally conceded the congressional nomination. This leaves the field open to Judge Bruner, of St. Cloud, and Dr. Bubois, of Sauk Center. Neither Dr. Bubois nor Judge Bruener has officially announced that they will become candidates for the nomination, though both have friends, who are confident that one of them will take it, and that either can be elected by a handsome majority.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED.

Old Man Knocked Down By a Bicycle.

Winona, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—An accident which will probably result fatally occurred yesterday afternoon on West Broadway, in this city. B. F. Baker, aged 76 years, a prominent resident of the West End, was met by a bicycle rider on the sidewalk. In endeavoring to get out of the way he tripped and fell, his head striking the brick pavement. He was at once carried to the hospital, where it was found that his head was fractured to one side from the crown to the eye socket. He is still unconscious, and small hopes are held for his recovery. There is an ordinance in this city strictly prohibiting sidewalk riding, but it has not been enforced.

NO TIME TO SPARE

Two Men Nearly Asphyxiated at the Hotel Victoria.

Apparently Dead When Door Was Forced Open This Morning.

Evidently Turned on the Gas Instead of Electric Light.

Two guests of the Hotel Victoria, opposite the Union depot, were nearly fatally asphyxiated this morning.

William McCarthy and James Doyle went to the hotel last evening and engaged the same room.

The hotel authorities detected a strong odor of gas in the vicinity of the room about 9 o'clock this morning. The door was forced open and both men were on the bed apparently dead.

Dr. Bagley and Dr. Patton were summoned and worked over the two men for more than an hour before they were considered out of danger. The gas made both so ill that they were removed to the Duluth Red Cross hospital.

Owing to the condition of the men when found, it was not possible to get their story of the gas leakage, but the general supposition is that one of them got up in the night and turned the gas on instead of the electric light.

The electric and gas lighting apparatus in the room makes such a mistake possible. The men were from the country and apparently were little acquainted with modern hotel lighting arrangements.

At the Red Cross hospital this afternoon it was announced that the two men were slowly recovering from the effects of the gas, but still miserably ill.

The Famous Shoe Store.

Painters, decorators, carpenters and electricians are vieing with each other in rushing on the improvements for the Famous Shoe store, at 115 West Superior street. It will be in perfect order for tomorrow's trade, and with the largely increased clerical force, the best service in the city is guaranteed to the trade. Prof. Charles Bennett Smith, formerly at the Ryan hotel in St. Paul, will have charge of the shoe shining stands at the Famous, and special attention will be given to the care of ladies and children's shoes. the best materials only will be used. Elegant price will be but 5 cents. Elegant chairs have been secured, and every attention possible will be given to those having their shoes shined at the Famous.

THOUGHT HER DEAD

"Santee Bill" Searching Pacific Northwest For His Daughter.

Has Not Set Eyes on Her For Thirty Years.

Fourteen Ugly Scars Tell Story of His Strenuous Life.

Seattle, May 2.—After twenty years "Santee Bill" Warren, one of the famous Indian scouts of Custer's time, believes he is soon to see the daughter he had mourned as lost.

In 1872 "Santee," whose real name is W. J. Seymour, and his wife separated. They had a daughter, Alice, to whom her father was devoted. The child was to go with its mother, and it was hard for "Santee Bill" to lose her, but he always cherished the hope of having her with him again.

Some time after the separation a message of three words came to "Santee." It was, "Alice is dead."

Recently "Santee" read the name of Dell Lampham in a Seattle report of the trial of John Considine for the murder of Chief of Police Meredith of Seattle. His wife's maiden name was Lampham, and the report reminded him that he had a nephew of that name. Correspondence developed the fact that Dell Lampham was really that nephew.

"Santee' went to Seattle. He met his nephew and his own wife's brother.

"Do you know where your daughter, Alice, is?" asked the brother.

"Santee' was, for a moment, too astonished to speak. Finally, trembling with emotion, he cried out:

"Do you mean to say that Alice is alive?"

"Of course she is, and married. Her husband is a newspaper man somewhere in the Pacific Northwest."

Now, going from town to town throughout all the great Northwest, "Santee Bill" is wandering in search of the daughter he had longed for so many years. The news that she is still alive has lifted ten years from him.

Fourteen ugly scars tell the story of "Santee Bill's" strenuous life on the trail. Most of them were received while he was campaigning with Custer, the Yellow-haired Chief. Among Custer's splendid band of scouts none will have greater fame than "Bill." There was no mission too dangerous for this keen-witted plainsman, no Indian trail so hot that he shrank from following it up to the edge of the firelit circle.

"Santee" still wears a medal bearing this inscription:

PRESENTED TO W. J. SEYMOUR
("SANTEE BILL")
BY GEORGE A. CUSTER.
NOV. 27, 1868.

The medal was received for gallantry during the engagement of Washita.

When the massacre of the Little Big Horn occurred, in June, 1876, "Santee" was carrying dispatches from Custer to Gen. Alfred Taylor on Tongue river.

Although well along in years the old scout is still in perfect health and active of body and mind. He is still a splendid specimen of a man, of a type that is fast dying out, even in the West.

When Imagination Failed

By Angela Morgan.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

The friends of William Wallace Forbes were inclined to doubt his assertion that he had never been in live when they read the exquisite portrayal of that sublime passion in his latest novel.

"It is surely impossible," they declared, "for a writer to so truthfully depict the divine emotion unless he himself has felt its influence."

Thereupon Forbes, with an indulgently superior smile, proceeded to enlighten their dense ignorance.

"The real artist," he explained, "does not need the inspiration of personal experience in order that he may successfully portray human emotion. His imagination supplies that inspiration. Through its medium he puts himself in touch with every phase of feeling known to mankind. He hates without hating, envies but envies not, despairs yet does not despair. For this very reason he may love—love rapturously, intensely—even though in actual life he may have found no one who inspires in him any such supreme devotion."

Georgia Nellis, who had long grown accustomed to the self-sufficient quality of Forbes' theories, smiled her inscrutable smile at the repetition of this familiar statement.

"What a wonderful possession—such an imagination!" she remarked.

Forbes glanced at her quickly. In spite of the good-comradeship between them he never could feel quite sure of Georgia's meanings, when she spoke until he had caught a glimpse of her face. Even then he was sometimes doubtful.

Just now his swift suspicion of a lurking sarcasm in her tone changed to puzzled uncertainty as he met the inscrutable smile.

"You mean——" he began.

"Oh, I don't mean anything whatever!" she interrupted, flippantly.

Her variable moods were a constant wonder to Forbes. He had given up trying to understand her. Their friendship seemed to progress smoothly enough without that exertion on his part. She was appreciative, responsive, delightfully companionable. He accepted her as such and resolved not to trouble himself regarding the complexities and contradictions of her peculiar individuality.

He dropped into her studio two days later to tell her of his inspiration for a new novel.

"The success of your other book is having a most desirable effect, I see," was her smiling comment.

"You mean——"

"I mean, in the words of the French proverb, altered to suit this occasion, that nothing inspires like success."

"Georgia! As if any such sordid consideration——"

"Never mind. We won't discuss that now. It's too exhausting. I have a bit of news, too—relatively unimportant, however."

"Yes?"

"I'm going away for a month or two."

"Going away?"

"Up in the mountains, to a dear little out-of-the-way nook among the pines. I shall give my palette and brushes a well earned rest and myself a vacation."

"Oh, I see. Well, I'll be sorry to have you go, of course. But the rest will——"

"Do me good, I know. That's what my friends have been telling me for the past six months. So I'm going. I hope you'll succeed with your new book. Don't let the inspiration escape before you start at it."

Forbes assured her that he would not. Indeed, her admonition seemed entirely unnecessary. He was even now impatient to begin the work. His teeming brain longed to relieve itself of the brilliant thoughts that crowded it. What a revelation this book would be—how it would astonish the literary world by its proof of his unfailing imaginative powers!

He was well launched upon the narrative when the day came for Georgia's departure. Of course he accompanied her to the train and they parted with the hearty handshake of sturdy friendship.

Forbes returned to his writing that afternoon. But his ideas did not flow quite so readily as before. He told himself that the morning's interruption had disturbed his train of thought. After a few ineffectual attempts to revitalize his mood he threw aside his pen and decided to wait for the freshness of tomorrow morning's influence.

When morning came he started to work with a flourish. But the flourish did not continue. After a time he read what he had written and flung the sheets into the waste basket.

The next morning's effort was but a repetition of this experience. But Forbes still persisted. Each day he renewed the attack, doggedly determined to recapture the glowing mood of inspiration which so hatefully eluded him.

But his struggle was in vain. No effort of will could breathe vigor into the now lifeless plot or fire the lusterless theme with the potent meaning of his intention. The entire structure of the work seemed to have collapsed.

Forbes found himself facing that dread calamity which is at once the terror and the despair of an author's soul—a vanished inspiration.

His impulse now was to go to Georgia—Georgia, who would understand and sympathize. Then he remembered that the studio would be empty of her presence. How odd—how very odd it seemed not to have her near by ready to listen to his woes. For the first time he realized that her absence did make a difference.

He meditated a great deal that day. A vague consciousness of loss, of lack, seemed to encompass him. The mere thought of returning to his desk sickened him. "What I need is rest," he concluded. "I've needed it all this time, but didn't realize it until just now."

"And so," said Georgia Nellis, as she fanned herself with a big sun hat and gazed calmly upon the young man who had seated himself at her feet, "you forsook that wonderful inspiration of yours for the uncertain delights of this absurd little out-of-the-way summer resort!"

"I did not forsake the inspiration," said Forbes, "it forsook me."

And he told her.

"In fact," he said, when the dismal story was finished, "I reached the conclusion that I overestimated the value of my imagination. It was not, as I supposed, the source of my inspiration. Within the last two weeks I have come to know just what, just who, is that source."

Georgia, striving to adjust her thought to his changed attitude, found his meaning made startlingly clear when his hand closed over hers in an ardent pressure.

"I can't write any more, I can't live any more, if you are away from me, Georgia," he pursued, rapidly. "You know the answer I want, dear. Can you give it?"

"Well," said Georgia, demurely, "of course, if the fate of that book hangs on my decision, I have no choice but to make it favorable."

MATCH OF THE YEAR.

Miss Gill of Baltimore to Wed Millionaire.

Baltimore, Md., May 23.—Miss Nina Gill has made what fashionable society declares to be "the match" of the year. Her engagement is announced to William Francis Cochran, Jr., son of the late William F. Cochran, the multimillionaire, of New York, who was interested in the Seaboard Air line.

Miss Gill is the daughter of the late C. Loraine Gill, and is one of the prettiest girls in the most exclusive set. She made her debut last winter at the swagger bachelors' cotilion, the holy of holies in Baltimore's social life, and was chaperoned by Mrs. "Allie" Brown, wife of the banker, and the leader in the younger married women's set. Mr. and Mrs. Brown's daughter, Miss Hannet Brown, and Miss Gill, were the belles of a winter that "brought out" the daughters of a number of the most prominent houses.

Mr. Cochran has lived here about one year, and has a suite of rooms at a fashionable apartment house for bachelors. With the death of his father last winter he was made a director in the Seaboard Air line. He has a beautiful summer home at Yonkers, N. Y., and is a millionaire in his own right.

PREACHER MURDERER

Confesses to the Killing of His Traveling Companion.

Narrates Details of Crime With Remarkable Coolness.

"If I Go to the Scaffold I Will Not Flinch."

Springfield, Ill., May 23.—Of all the prisoners in jail here, Rev. John Poleet, former pastor of a Baptist mission at McCluskey, Ill., who has just confessed to the murder of his traveling companion and friend, Charles Isoksson, is the least perturbed.

Poleet does not show the slightest indication that he repents his crime.

He chats in a much happier vein than those about him who are locked up for petty offenses.

He is far less concerned over his deed than are disinterested persons who have closely followed the history of the case.

His coolness is remarkable.

Poleet's confession was voluntary, and was given after he had strenuously made pleas of innocence.

Deputy Sheriff Frank Ryan informed him that the grand jury had indicted him for the murder of Isaksson. This information did not startle the preacher. He was as unconcerned and cool as a free man.

Ryan then confronted him with the evidence that had been secured in the case. The evidence was beyond dispute, and Poleet knew it.

The news was a surprise to the murderer.

He thought he had covered up his tracks well, and what Ryan told him came like a thunderbolt from a clear sky.

Bowing his head and placing his right to his forehead, Poleet sat a moment as if in deep study. There was no sign of emotion. Then Poleet extended his hand and, without a tremor, said:

"It's too plain. You have got the evidence too straight and I can't get away from it. I will throw myself upon the mercy of the court."

Poleet started his confession in the most deliberate manner and finished in the same way, giving the details of the crime without feeling or color. The confession was as follows:

"Isaksson and I were employed at Granite City. We decided to take a trip to Chicago and left Granite City Saturday, April 26. We arrived in Springfield Sunday night, and the following evening walked north of the city to wait for a train.

"We sat down beside the railroad tracks like ordinary tramps.

"While talking together, the thought suddenly struck me that I could get Isaksson's money. I looked about, and a short distance away I discovered an air-brake coupling hose.

"This, I concluded, would do the work all right, so I got up and went over and picked up the hose.

"My companion did not get up and was paying no attention to me.

"I walked up behind the boy and, in a moment of frenzy, I dealt him a powerful blow on the head.

"How many more blows I struck after that I cannot remember, but there were several.

"When I was satisfied I had killed him I stooped over and relieved him of everything I had, which consisted of about $15 in money, a gold watch, a pocket case and some other things.

"After I had rifled his pockets I started to town. Arriving in the city, I stopped at a boarding house, where I registered under the name of Joel Able. The next morning I took Isaksson's watch to a pawnshop, where I traded it and a revolver for a silver watch and $2.50 in money. I then boarded a train and went to Jerseyville, where my wife was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker. From there I went to Grafton, my home, where I was arrested."

Poleet's father-in-law was in the city when it was made, but Poleet refused to make the confession before Walker.

"I have wronged my father-in-law and deceived him through all," replied the prisoner.

"I don't want to see him nor anyone else. I will write and let him know all by letter."

Poleet then sat down and wrote a letter confessing his guilt to his father-in-law. It was as follows:

"Mr. John Walker:

"Dear Friend: I have come to the conclusion that the quicker this is settled the better it will be. Please go home and I will write you the full particulars Wednesday. It's useless for you to send any more money.

"In a moment of frenzy I committed a deed that I always believed myself incapable of and can't yet understand. It is useless for me to say more, for you understand everything. I sincerely thank you for what you have done and what you would have done. But the money could, and can be, used better in other ways.

"All I ask is that you see that my wife and babies are cared for, for I know you will do this. Give Nettie any excuse that you care to, but please, for God's sake, don't let her know the truth. Tell Nettie that I will write to her at once and for her not to be frightened. Please take the train for home, as it will be hard on both of us to prolong this.

"Don't blame Deputy Ryan for his work, for he only did his duty. Give my love to all. I would like to see Nettie and the babies, but it is possibly better that I should not. Goodbye. Try not to think too hard of me, and remember youth is rash and in a moment a deed that is bad may be committed.

"If you have love for Nettie keep this from her. Tell her my case has been prolonged indefinitely. Good-bye. God bless you and yours. I have made my peace with God and have no fear.

"J. POLEET."

After the letter was written Ryan took it to Walker, who was astonished. He said he must see Poleet, but Ryan repeated to him his son-in-law's request that no one, not even his father-in-law, be permitted to see him. Walker insisted that he should see him, if it only was for a few minutes.

The two then went to the jail. Poleet was sound asleep and was awakened with great difficulty. He consented to see his father-in-law, and when Walker appeared before him he acknowledged his guilt. He told Walker he was ready to plead guilty to the crime any time; that he was prepared for the worst.

While Poleet realizes the seriousness of his case, he does not believe he will be sentenced to death. He boasts, however, of his courage to face any kind of punishment. He urged the Post-Dispatch correspondent that, in the event he was sentenced to pay the death penalty for his crime, to watch his every movement from the time the death march commenced until the trap was sprung.

"You will not see me flinch; I will take my medicine like a man," declared the prisoner.

Poleet is only 24 years old, and was a young man of excellent reputation. His victim was 17 years old.

ECZEMA

is due to the retention in the system of Uric Acid or other inflammatory poisons which find their way into the blood, and are forced by the circulation through the glands and pores of the skin, causing it to itching allows no rest night or day. Eczema appears in a great many different forms, beginning frequently as a mere redness of the skin, followed by little blisters or pimples, from which a clear or straw colored matter oozes, forming into sores, scales or scabs this is weeping Eczema, commonly called Salt Rheum. These acid poisons sometimes dry up the natural oils and the skin becomes hard and dry, often cracking and bleeding and causing intense pain and fearful itching. This form of Eczema is known as Tetter, and oftenest attacks the hands and feet. Unsightly eruptions in the shape of pimples and blackheads break out upon the face, neck and shoulders as a result of polluted blood, and this humiliating disease is called Acne. Local remedies afford but scant relief. The blood and system being saturated with the poison, the disease cannot be reached with washes, salves, powders or other local applications. S. S. S. restores the deteriorated blood to its normal condition, stimulates the sluggish organs, and all the waste matter is eliminated through the proper channels. S. S. S. makes the blood rich and strong, and under its tonic and invigorating effects the general health improves, and the skin becomes soft and smooth again.

FROM RING TO PULPIT

Went an Ohio Village Blacksmith Filled With Hope.

Now Striking Powerful Blows For Lord and Master.

Shaping Iron on Week Days and Preaching Sundays.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, May 23.—"A blacksmith by trade and a preacher by the call of God," is the way that Rev. B. F. McKinnon, of Lake View, Logan county, characterizes his two occupations in life.

Rev. McKinnon is of athletic build and 38 years old. Among his acquaintances he says that now he is "getting an education at the feet of the greatest teacher the world has ever known, Christ, our Lord and Master."

Pounding the anvil by day and preaching the gospel at night, Rev. McKinnon is a busy man, but during a leisure hour he gave to a correspondent the story of his remarkable life.

"While busy at my anvil, one day a few years ago, the Lord's hand was laid upon me and I heard the voice of our Master saying, 'Follow thou Me,' and I obeyed His call, and my efforts thus far have been pleasing to God the Father, for he had wonderfully blessed me in preaching the gospel. Everywhere I go He seems pleased to pour out the spirit upon my work, and souls are being converted. I have seen 168 souls born unto the kingdom this winter."

"At present I am the pastor of the Lake View Methodist Protestant church. I am getting a good salary, although when I decided to divide my time between the anvil and the pulpit I had not one cent of salary in view. I had a family to support, too, but since that day I have not wanted for anything. The Lord has provided for me and my family most bountifully."

"I was converted Feb. 5, 1895, during a revival meeting in the Methodist church of which I am now pastor. My conversion was powerful, and a complete surprise to the community. My main ambition had always been to spend my money in having a big time, and the prize ring had quite an affinity for me, as I was quite an athlete and an adept with the gloves, and my desire was to enter the professional ranks of pugilism, and to this end was training hard. But the Lord gave me the knock-out blow by putting His spirit of conviction upon me. He knocked the prize-fight, the devil and all the nonsense out of me with one blow of His great, strong arm of divine love.

"When I announced my intention of entering the ministry I met with considerable opposition, and the old cry of "crank," "crazy," "you have no education," etc., went up. In spite of all foes within and without the church I obeyed the call of God, and my career thus far has been a complete success."

"When I had no point at which to preach I would go out and make a point. God seems to use me mostly in reviving and resurrecting dead churches, and I follow His will in everything.

"One Sunday when passing the ball grounds where a tri-county contest was on the spirit of the Lord came upon me to stop and preach to them. I went in and asked the managers of both teams for a few minutes to address the crowd, and when I began there were cries of "Hit him!" "Play ball!" "Put him out," etc., but God was with me and I had no fear. I told them I had been sent by God to deliver a message, and I intended to obey His command. I lifted my hand to heaven and asked for strength, and the crowd became as quiet as in any church.

"For twenty minutes or more I spoke, and when I left the grounds there was not a scoff nor a sneer. The result was the abandonment of Sunday baseball in that place."

WEDDED FIVE TIMES.

And Now He Is Being Sued For Divorce.

New York, May 23.—John Little, who at the present time is only 45 years old, having been successively married five times and buried four wives, is being sued by his fifth and latest wife, Amelia Little, for a limited divorce. She tells a tale of woe to Justice O'Gorman and informs him that as a result of a blow on the neck administered in loving chastisement by her husband, her hair is falling out, and, although only 33 years old, she bids fair to become absolutely bald.

Little denies his wife's allegations and asserts that she is a woman of violent temper. He casually mentions that shortly after his marriage Mrs. Little slapped him in the face and took the pictures of his former wives and threw them at him. He says on another occasion in the presence of company his wife threw a plate of soup in his face and that at another time, also in the presence of company, she hurled the tablecloth at him. He concludes by saying that his life with his fifth wife has been anything but a bed of roses.

HERMIT FOUND DEAD.

And It Is Believed He Killed Himself.

Georgetown, Ohio, May 23.—While passing through a wood east of here a few miles the dead body of John Grayson was found by friends, which adds another to the long list of suicides which have taken place here recently. Grayson was known from the fact that he was a hermit and had spent the past winter barefooted and living in the woods. Near his body was found a gun, which told how he had come to his death. He had been dead several days.

COUGHED

To Let a Burglar Know That She Was Awake.

Paducah, Ky., May 23—For three long hours Miss Ada E. Enders, a society girl, lay in terror in her apartment at City Attorney J. M. Worten's residence, knowing that there was a burglar in the room, yet afraid to make an outcry for fear he would attempt to do her personal injury

About 1 a. m. Miss Enders was awakened by a man prowling about her room. She was greatly frightened, but lay quite still, debating what to do. She saw him open drawers, but as there was no light in the room she could only distinguish the outline of the man. She was sleeping upstairs away from the rest of the family.

Miss Enders finally concluded to let the prowler know she was awake, and audibly cleared her throat. This had the effect of making the burglar cease his search, as he crouched down in a corner and remained motionless, seemingly as scared as the young lady. The minutes dragged on, each seeming an hour to the terror-stricken girl. At 4 o'clock Miss Enders heard the intruder slip out either a door or window, she could not tell which. In a state of collapse she aroused the household, but after examining the room no articles were found missing. Miss Enders is quite ill from the shock.

BEQUEST TO CHURCH.

Turns Out to Be a Swindler's Fake.

Carrollton, Ky., May 23.—On Wednesday of last week an elderly man, seemingly about 60 years of age, representing himself as R. M. Gorman, of Baltimore, cousin of Senator Gorman, of Maryland, came to Carrollton bringing a bequest of $500 to the Methodist church south, of this city. He stated that it was willed to the church by Mrs. Elizabeth Dorsey, who had lately died, a resident of Carroll county, Maryland, aged 76; that Mrs. Dorsey's maiden name was Winship, and that she removed from Carrollton in 1845.

He gave the trustees a draft on a New York bank for $500. While no one in the city remembers the name Winship, the transaction was regarded as a bona fide one until Tuesday, when a letter was received, stating that the draft had been protested and that there was no such party. The church people believe that the man was trying to bunco them, and they refused to give him any money. It is believed that he has gone to some other city.

FAITH

In Fortune Tellers Has Departed From an Ohio Farmer.

Gallipolis, Ohio, May 23.—The charge that Professor Harry Woodmancy, fortune teller and clairvoyant, had stolen $427 from Grover A. Radebaugh, has been made to the police. Radebaugh had visited Woodmancy a number of times and had loaned him, it is said, $100, taking his note as security. Later Woodmancy told Radebaugh, according to the latter, that if he would draw what money he had from the bank, all in bills, he could tell him how to make $2500 clear. After drawing his money from the bank, $427, Radebaugh says, he hunted up Professor Woodmancy, who told him to put the money in an envelope, seal it and then put it in another envelope and seal again. The professor now said that he must take the package into another room, where he would make "burnt offering" and return the package, and after eight days he could open the package.

Radebaugh became alarmed and the package was opened. There was no money there. The $427 was gone and only newspaper clippings and a small burnt piece of paper, probably the "burnt offering."

The authorities went to arrest Woodmancy, but he was not to be found, although his wife was at his place of business. Later it was learned that he had purchased a ticket for Parkersburg, W. Va.

FEASTED

On Delicacies and Pounded Stone For Exercise.

Columbus, Ohio, May 23.—The trustees of the Lancaster Industrial School for Boys promise to make trouble for Judge Fielder of Cleveland. Fielder went into a deal with a Cleveland paper to railroad a youth through the Lancaster school so as to show up some of the alleged iniquities of the place. A young newspaper man, named Boalt, was committed to the Home, but when he landed there a Cleveland woman recognized him as a newspaper man and tipped him off to Superintendent Adams.

The pseudo-incorrigible was fed on delicacies and treated royally except at such times as he was compelled to pound stone for exercise. Then Boalt wanted to get out, and Superintendent Adams refused to release him. Cleveland people were rushed to Lancaster and Boalt was released.

The trustees considered the matter of the Cuyahoga county judge signing alleged false papers, and along that line something may be doing.

"Five years ago dyspepsia took such hold of me I could scarcely go." writes George S. Marsh, Nocoma, Tex. "I took quantities of medicine but nothing helped me. STUDIES IN THE BOOK OF ACTS

PAUL IN ANTIOCH IN PISIDIA.

International Sunday School Lesson For May 25, 1902.

Acts 13:42-52. "Now when the synagogue broke up, many of the Jews and of the devout proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas; who, speaking to them, urged them to continue in the grace of God.

"And the next Sabbath almost the whole city was gathered together to hear the word of God. But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with jealousy, and contradicted the things which were spoken by Paul, and blasphemed. And Paul and Barnabas spoke out boldly, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first be spoken to you. Seeing ye thrust it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, That thou shouldst be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth. And as the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of God: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed. And the word of the Lord was spread abroad throughout all the region. But the Jews urged on the devout women of honorable estate, and the chief men of the city, and stirred up a persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and cast them out of their borders. But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium. And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost."

Golden Text: "Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins." Acts 13:38.

ON TO ANTIOCH.

From the time of his triumph over Elymas at Paphos, Paul appears as the leader of the missionary party. Up until that time the record had referred to Barnabas and Saul. Thenceforth the order is Paul and Barnabas. From Paphos the three men sailed northwest by north to the southern coast of Asia minor.

Their ship probably anchored inside the mouth of the river Cestrus, where they disembarked and tourneyed seven or eight miles inland to Perga, which was the important city of that region and lay on the direct route to the greater city of Antioch whither they were bound. They did not begin a work in Perga at that time, perhaps because the inhabitants had gone northwards to escape the season of the malarial fevers. For some reason unknown to us Mark withdrew from the journey at this point, much to the displeasure of Paul, who was perhaps greatly inconvenienced by the loss of his assistance. Paul objected to taking Mark along on the second journey, the cause of this desertion; but he seems to have regained confidence in him later in life.

From Perga the two men began the ascent of Taurus. In one place the road is called Klimax or the ladder, because it literally ascends two thousand feet by a series of broad steps. It has been thought that Paul referred to the dangers of this journey when he wrote the passage to the Corinthians which says, I have been in "journeyings often, in perils of rivers, in perils of robbers, in perils from my countrymen, in perils from the gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness." The route lay directly north to Pisidian Antioch, which was probably one of the sixteen Antiochs founded by Seleucus Nikanor (301 to 280 B. C.) and named after his father. On their arrival, the tired travelers found a resting place in the rooms set apart for strangers in connection with the synagogue until they had time to secure permanent quarters. When the Sabbath day came, Paul and Barnabas were at home in the service of the synagogue, which was a good place in which to begin the ministry of the gospel, for the law of Moses was a better school master than the law of nature to prepare the way for the message of Christ.

The scripture for that day was probably the first chapters of Deuteronomy and Isaiah, for, in the opening of his disclosure, Paul uses words that occur very often in the scriptures. Furthermore these two chapters are now assigned to be read in the synagogue on the same Sabbath. It was customary for the preacher to use the day's lesson as a text for his disclosure. Paul's reference to the ministry of John implies that the Baptist's work was familiar to the Jews of the dispersion, for he makes no effort to enlarge upon it. John's testimony to Jesus marked the culmination of the nation's history in the inauguration of the actual work of the world's Savior. But the nation did not acknowledge Jesus as the Messiah. They caused him to be put to death for laying claim to his actual position among them. God raised him from the dead, thus making him the Father's first begotten and ushering him into privileges greater than any David had ever enjoyed. His everlasting priesthood was thus rendered possible, which was an essential step to the remission of sins for all who look to him as their Savior. With the eternal priest provided, the next thing required before forgiveness is for the sinner to repent and confess his sins. The gospel of Christ then assures him of forgiveness, which is far more than is meant by the forgiveness of man to man. A man can only assure another that no animosity will be harbored on account of the offense; but divine forgiveness means that God not only withdraws the condemnation that had been registered against the sinner, but purifies his soul of all the gross elements that sin is wont to leave behind. But Paul did not stop with teaching forgiveness; he went on to a doctrine that became one of the especial features of his letters: that of justification by faith. The rest of this speech might have been delivered by one of the other apostles; but this reference to justification puts on it the stamp of Paul's thought. His old struggle to attain justification by obedience to the law adds zest to the argument and lends point to the warning that his hearers should beware lest their neglect of the message bring upon them some ill results.

ANTIOCH AWAKENED.

It was the privilege of the visiting Rabbi to speak upon whatever theme was on his mind when he was invited to address the assembly in the synagogue. It was customary on such occasions for travelers to make known the doctrines of any new sect to which they might belong, as well as to speak upon religious questions of general or special interest. There was among the Jews a liberality in this respect that is entirely unknown in the modern Christian pulpit, which accounts for the wide use the early Christian church made of the synagogue as a platform for the preaching of its truth.

Paul used this privilege to the utmost on many occasions, but never more notably than on the occasion of this visit in Antioch. When the service had finished, the congregation broke into an earnest conversation upon the theme of the discourse. Many of the auditors followed Paul and Barnabas, who encouraged them to accept the message that had been preached, and to believe on Jesus as the Christ. There was a general request that the two teachers would continue to speak upon the same theme on the next Sabbath. They, of course, acceded to the request gladly, and were met on the following Sabbath by a large concourse of the people, both Jews and Gentiles. The presence of so many people made the Jews jealous of the popularity of the missionaries. The leaders did not care to see their position of leadership so easily wrested from them by any casual visitors. Hence they began to dispute the claims set forth by the missionaries. They even went so far as to rail on the claims of the Messiaship of Jesus and the other religious innovations taught by the visitors. Many a time in the history of the church the efforts of her best workers have met with a like opposition from those not in sympathy with her mission. But the church should not halt in its progress on that account. She should emulate the example set by Paul and Barnabas, who at once boldly declared that God had ordained that the gospel should be preached to the Jews, but that, since the Jews had rejected it, the heralds of the cross would turn thenceforth to the Gentiles, and thus fulfill the prophetic words that long ago indicated that the Lord's anointed would shine as a light for the Gentiles. his early glimpse at Paul's thought is interesting in that it shows the fact that Paul had, at the very opening of his career as a missionary, the thorough conviction that Christianity was essentially for the benefit of the whole world.

The joy of the Gentiles at having the gospel preached, especially for them was expressed in glorifying praise. But at that point a thing occurred that seems strange to persons who are accustomed to associate womanhood with all that is good in Christianity. The opposition to the apostles was intensified by the agitation of numbers of prominent women, who were devout in their attachment to Judaism, but who thus showed that they failed utterly to appreciate the relation of the new faith to that of their ancestors. So intense was the opposition thus aroused that the two apostles had to flee to another place for safety. But the new converts were as truly undaunted as were the apostles. They rejoiced in the presence of the Holy Spirit and revelled in his spiritual blessings. Spiritual prosperity is independent of exterior circumstances. Theer may be the most real sort of joy in a man's soul amid events the most annoying. Paul and Barnabas looked to no arm of flesh to help them, but took their way along the dusty road to Iconium in the hope of finding there an open door to preach once more the gospel of an everlasting salvation.

The gospel spread abroad through all that region, probably assisted in its spread by the very opposition that was calculated to put a stop to it. The Lord himself had ordered the course of events in such a way that even the opposition of man could not thwart the outcome. The doctrine of foreordination has sometimes been taught in such a way as to seem to preclude the free action of man in his moral choices. But God never arranges things in advance in such a way as to relieve man from moral responsibility for all his choices and volitions. And yet God does see what is coming to pass, and does prearrange things for the ultimate glory of his kingdom. Such doctrines as this, however, are never taught in such a way as to affect the seeker after God. The New Testament does not refer to the elect except in such places as make it clear that the reference is to those already in the kingdom and the church. A multitude of passages might be cited from both the Old and New Testaments to show that any person who desires to have the salvation and race of Christ can have them with sweet assurance. Yes, more than that can be said, for the invitations of the gospel are extended to all persons who will trust the Lord and seek to do his will.

DOMESTIC TROUBLES

Sauerkraut and Novels Are Strange Causes of Infelicity.

One Wife Charged With Reading Books In Bed.

Man Complains of Too Much Hashed Cabbage and Pork.

Chicago, May 23.—Eating crackerjack and lying in bed reading novels were shortcomings charged against his wife by Attorney Samuel A. Wight in an answer that he filed in the circuit court to her bill for divorce. Another unusual cause assigned for domestic infelicity was a too steady diet of sauerkraut and spare ribs, given by Michael Toomey as the reason why he left home in the abandonment case brought by his wife in Justice Dooley's court. He produced expert medical testimony in court to prove that such a diet was a sure route to dyspepsia of a most aggravated kind, designed in the long run to put murder in a man's heart.

Mrs. Wight brought divorce proceedings against her husband several weeks ago, charging him with cruelty. According to Wight's answer, the couple were married Oct. 19, 1881. He denies that he has been guilty of extreme and repeated cruelty toward his wife, and in answer sets forth that he has been told by his children that while he was in Philadelphia his wife "used to lie in bed in the daytime and read novels and eat crackerjack and give none to her little children." The answer also accuses Mrs. Wight of imbibing freely of intoxicating liquors and of writing tender poetry about her husband. Wight has his office at 167 Dearborn street.

Wight connects the name of Charles M. Whipple, treasurer of the Columbia Mines company, with offices in the Fort Dearborn building, with his wife's actions. He avers that the first time he quarreled with his wife was when she had an interview with Whipple. She had a photograph of Whipple in her possession at one time. On another occasion, it is alleged, he found his wife in Whipple's office, and told Whipple that if his wife remained with him he would sue Whipple for damages for alienating his wife's affections. This suit was subsequently brought for $100,000 damages, it is alleged, but was dismissed upon Mrs. Wight agreeing to return to her husband and the latter making a statement to Whipple that he believed his wife was true to him.

Michael Toomey, an Irish teamster, who has been in the habit of visiting with his wife at 66 West Nineteenth street at long intervals during the past few years, objects to a continuous German diet of sauerkraut and spare ribs. Show he was entirely unprejudiced as to German dishes, Justice Dooley, also an Irishman, reserved his decision until Monday. However, Mr. and Mrs. Toomey compromised on pork chops after the trial, and Toomey said last week the case had been "reconvinued."

By the ingenuousness of his defense Toomey proved his nationality beyond all question. Mrs. Toomey had on hand an assortment of star witnesses to prove her assertions that Toomey had been guilty of wife abandonment, but she was unprepared when her husband went on the stand, admitted her allegations, and sprung a spare rib and sauerkraut defense. Toomey made a clever witness in his own behalf, and was well backed up by his Irish attorney, James McGinley, and his Polish medical expert, Joseph Audnicki, a druggist at Nineteenth street and Hoyne avenue.

Mrs. Toomey had the first inning and presented evidence, backed up by witnesses, that Toomey had left home no less than four times, once remaining away ten months. When winter came around and she had filled the coal bins and the larder, Toomey was in the habit of showing up half-starved and frozen, she said, and she had not the heart to throw him out. After spending the past winter with her, Toomey was said to have decamped about two weeks ago, and she had him arrested. The couple have been married six years.

Toomey actually blushed when he told of the amount of kraut and ribs he had consumed in the six years of his married life. He said he was ashamed to "look a head of cabbage in the face." Toomey said he had begged and pleaded with his wife to no avail. Every time he protested she laid in a new supply of ribs and kraut. In desperation he left home to save his stomach from the throes of dyspepsia. "I was unable to stand it any longer," said Toomey, "and sought rest by abandoning my home, the sauerkraut and the spare ribs."

CUSTOM

Thrown to the Winds By President Roosevelt.

New York, May 23.—A Washington dispatch to the Herald is as follows:

President Roosevelt has created a flutter in the diplomatic corps by calling at the British embassy and remaining for three quarters of an hour with Lord Pauncefote and members of the family.

When the president called at the German embassy and paid his respects to Prince Henry and subsequently lunched with the latter on board the Hohenzollern he broke a custom which forbade the chief executive of the nation to set foot in a foreign man-or-war because of the extra-territorial character of those places. By visiting the British embassy he has inaugurated the practice of calling on ambassadors. He will, it is expected, dine Friday night at the French embassy.

In calling upon Lord Pauncefote, who is seriously ill, diplomats say the president has done a graceful thing, and they appreciate it as a compliment to the entire corps. At the same time it is pointed out that comment would be made should the president fail now to call on the other ambassadors. The rulers of Europe make it a practice to pay visits of courtesy to ambassadors on the ground that those diplomats represent the persons of their sovereigns. The president has met the several ambassadors here, and it is expected that now he has broken the ice he will call upon all of them.

DECLINE IN WHEAT

After Continuing Steady Early In Session, Market Weakens.

Cables Higher, Receipts Small But Weather Conditions Ideal.

Flax Trading Very Quiet and Prices Advance Moderately.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 23.—The wheat market was very quiet this morning and up to noon moved within a very narrow range. After that it fell off and closed at a decline. Cables were slightly higher, the receipts were small, but on the other hand the weather conditions were excellent and the Argentine shipments showed an increase, being 1,104,000 bus for the week against 624,000 bus last week. The Liverpool market was stronger, closing at an advance of 1⅝@¾d.

Primary receipts of wheat were 188,000 bus, last year 250,000 bus. Shipments 165,000 bus, last year 750,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 340,000 bus. Bradstreet reports exports of wheat and flour for the week of 3,184,000 bus, against 5,172,000 bus the week previous and 4,796,000 bus last year.

Clearances were 15,700 bus. Bradstreet reported exports for the week of 99,000 bus, last week 82,000 bus, last year 2,285,000 bus.

Trading in the local market was very light. Up to noon all trades were at 75¾c, an advance of ⅛c. After that there was a decline and it sold at 74⅝c at 12:30 and finally closed at 75⅜c, a decline of ⅛c. Chicago declined ⅜@⅝c and Minneapolis ⅜@⅝c.

Cash sales were practically nothing and prices continued at July price for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2 northern and 3½c under for No. 3.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opened Shade Higher On a Slow Market.

Chicago, May 23.—July wheat opened a shade higher to unchanged at 74@74⅛c to 74c on a slow market. Cables were a trifle higher; receipts were small and there was some scattered buying by commission houses. These bullish factors, however, were offset by increased Argentine shipments and ideal weather conditions. July sold to 74⅜@74c and steadily. Local receipts were 16 cars, 1 of contract grade.

Minneapolis and Duluth reported 105 cars, making a total for the three points of 116 cars, against 196 last week and 220 a year ago. Argentine shipments were 1,104,000 bus for the week against 624,000 bus last week.

Later in the session bears pressed the wheat market hard. Business was dull and the pit had shown little strength. As a result prices slumped badly and July closed weak, 5@6c lower at 73¼@73⅝c.

Corn started strong. Cables were indifferent and the demand was not heavy, but the wet weather, while excellent for crops, restricted the movement so that receipts were small. In consequence July opened a shade to ⅛c higher at 62⅝c to 62⅝@⅝c and quickly sold up to 62¾c. Offerings were light although reports from the country had it that farmers were selling a good deal every day. Forecasters of this year's crop say that everything promises a bumper yield; that because of the shortage last year and the consequently high prices the acreage has been increased. It is estimated that there is not more than 25 per cent of stocks now in first hands. Receipts, 77 cars.

Oats held its strength well until wheat broke. Then offerings became freer and July declined to a weak close, ⅛@¼c lower at 31⅞c.

The oats pit was crowded and nervous at the opening. A deal of some sort was supposed to be pending and prices were strong. May options have been pushed to 43½c by the heavy holder of that delivery and the prevailing opinion is that the shorts will yet have to settle at much advanced prices. July stuff was bought liberally by the same bull and was pushed gradually up from an unchanged opening at 37⅜c to 37⅝c. Cash business was good. Receipts were 161 cars.

Provisions held about steady at the opening. Packers' brokers took much of the offerings and a steady hog market and prospects of reduced stocks sustained pit prices. July pork opened a shade up at $17.15, dipped to $17.07½ and then reacted 5c; July lard started a shade up at $10.20 and eased 2½c and July ribs opened unchanged at $9.62½@9.65.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: The market here shows dullness, but was strong early on higher Liverpool. Later it turned weak and declined off about 1 cent. Trade light. General speculative interest smaller; prices feel lack of it. Offerings found few buying orders to protect the market. Conditions improved throughout the country. Northwest stocks have decreased for the week about 1,600,000, and the visible on Monday is expected to show a liberal decrease. The government report, it is thought, will show total yield of wheat last year from what further details will be if any.

• • •

The government crop report giving figures on the yield and acreage for 1901 is expected at 3 p. m. today. It may change the existing estimates to a large extent, and if such is the case, it is likely to have an important effect on estimates. Private statements on government data indicate a wheat crop of 721,000,000 bus; corn, 1,359,000,000; oats, 655,000,000; rye, 23,000,000; barley, 71,000,000.

• • •

Modern Miller: Weather conditions continue favorable for winter wheat. The plant is advancing rapidly toward maturity, but there is some complaint of wheat heading on too short a growth. Little damage by insects has been noted as yet, although the chinch bug and Hessian fly are reported in scattered sections. An early harvest is looked for. Wheat is being cut in Northern Texas, and cutting will begin in South Oklahoma next week. Deliveries are liberal of soft winter wheat, but light of hard winter wheat.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, May 23.—The local crowd tried very hard to bring about a reaction in wheat today, and although they had the help of strong coarse grain markets early, still the weather in this country and abroad, together with increased offerings from the winter wheat belt, proved too much for them, because later in the day when they tried to realize there was absolutely no support, prices sharply broke a cent a bushel from the high point, and the market closed weak at the lowest point of the day. July ¾@⅞c lower, September ⅝c and December ⅝c lower than last night. Liverpool reported their market as quiet ½d to ¼d higher for the day. Continental markets were generally steady. Cash demand was rather quiet. Export limits generally below a working basis. Seaboard reported moderate business done there on the break. The general situation looks heavy, and unless we get serious accident to the growing crops in this country or abroad, we think prices will go still lower. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 15 cars.

There was a fairly large trade in corn today and the market after ruling firm early, owing to very light country offerings, later became weak on realizing favorable weather and in sympathy with the weakness in wheat, prices broke ⅞c to 1⅛ from high point and close was weak, July ¼c, September ½c lower than last night. Cash demand was rather quiet. Foreign markets were steady. Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼d higher for the day. Advices from Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska indicate some willingness on the part of farmers to sell, but they are holding back on account of weather being too wet. As soon as it clears we look for a larger movement to the market. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 55 cars.

There was a moderate trade in oats today and market held very firm considering the late weakness in both wheat and corn, country offerings were light, cash demand very good. Weather generally favorable, although too much rain was reported in some parts. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 130 cars.

Provisions opened very dull with scarcely a trade for half an hour. Then the market was bulled vigorously and a sharp advance took place. But on heavy selling by brokers supposed to be for one of the leading holders broke very rapidly. All Chicago smaller packers as well as Western houses were sellers most of the day but the attempt to sell by the leaders demoralized the market which closed with losses for the day. The market today demonstrated that speculation is too small and the feeling too nervous to stand any undue selling by leaders. We look for liquidation of at least the followers of deal any day and consider the market weak from every standpoint. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 18,000 hogs.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Majority of Stocks Show Fractional Gains at Opening.

Indicated Increase In the Bank Reserves Caused Buying.

Response Was Not Universal and Closing Was Heavy.

New York, May 23.—The stock market opened dull and irregular but the majority of stocks showed fractional gains. Amalgamated Copper opened at an advance of 1¼ but lost nearly all of it in a few transactions. Chicago & Alton declined a point. The uniform gains shown by international stocks in London was without much effect in this market.

The prices of stocks became heavy and receded to last night's level or below. Delaware & Hudson lost a point. Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville fell 1¾ and Chicago Terminal preferred a point. There were advances of 2 in Westinghouse Electric and of a point or more in Smelting, Anaconda, Virginia-Carolina Chemical ex-dividend and Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. The market was dull and narrow.

The market was slightly feverish but in the main dull and heavy. Canadian Pacific receded on account of the extent of ¾ and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie rose 1¼. Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville rallied 1½. The National Lead stocks became active and rose 2½, the preferred selling ex-dividend. International Silver preferred rose 3½. United States Express 1½ and Pacific Mail over a point. Northwestern lost 6 and New Haven 1½. Bonds were dull and firm at noon.

A rise of ⅛ in St. Paul caused the general market to move only a shade. Pacific Mail, Linseed and Louisville fell off 1½. Northwestern rallied 4 point, Cleveland, Cairo & Chicago preferred dropped 2½ and Lake Erie & Western about a point. It required only a few feet of ticker tape to record the transactions in stocks and bonds from 1 to 2 o'clock and there was a small rise in some stocks. Delaware & Hudson rallied to above last night and Pressed Steel Car rose a point. Canada Southern and Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling fell 1½ and Western Union reacted over a point.

The preliminary figures of the week's currency movement indicating an increase of over $5,000,000 in bank reserves induced buying of stocks. The response was not universal. The New York public utilities, Atchison, St. Paul and Union Pacific rose between 1 and 2. George A. Fuller company, 1½; Brooklyn Union, 4, and Colorado Fuel, 1⅞. The movement elsewhere was trivial. The closing was dull and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Contrary to general expectations, the railroads continue to show earnings about 10 per cent greater than for the corresponding period last year. This is all the more remarkable as last year's earnings were about 10 per cent greater than those of year before than. These continued increases of railway earnings is undoubtedly a great bull factor. I hear very bullish talk about copper and smelters. People who know what there are about or at least think so were buying these stocks freely yesterday. They say smelters is good for 60 and copper for 85. The tips seem to be all right, but I took profits on my copper yesterday above 71 and smelters above 48. They ought to be a buy on reactions. As to the general list, though bullish, I advise against buying on reactions or on a scale down. Money promises to remain easy from now till next winter. We may get quite a bull wave if the coal miners settle their differences, but as the outlook for the present is, it is well to take profits.

• • •

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: The market is acting about as the larger operators have expected. The latter tell their friends tonight that while a reaction of a point or two is due the short interest having been pretty well eliminated and public commission business being light, good stocks should be bought on the setback. One of the principal reasons for growing confidence in a higher range of prices as the outcome of existing conditions, is the growing belief that the miners strike in the coal regions realize that even this early in the fight they are doomed to defeat. The mine owners themselves are sure that the strikers will not dare to call out the firemen and pumpmen or order out the bituminous coal miners for a sympathetic strike. This leads to the impression that the strikers will weaken.

In the industrial list the favorite stock is A. C. P., a further advance in the price of metal and an urgent export demand being the incentives to buyers. Sugar comment is also bullish and it is reported that the current buying of stock is in anticipation of favorable legislation and large profits during the busy season.

• • •

Dick to B. E. Baker: As we see it, the strike is likely to be prolonged. Exceedingly favorable news from the corn belt was responsible for the buying of Atchison and St. Paul. Should this stock be selling at a low price, such a move might be warranted. The Chicago crowd are acting on the market bidding up St. Paul and Delaware & Hudson. We see no reason to change our position and would sell stocks on strong days.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Hayden, Stone & Co. to William H. Laidley & Co.: Regular summer dullness. The feeling in coppers continues cheerful. Parrot is very strong at 32. Amster & Co. are out with a written bull circular on Old Dominion. Amalgamated and United copper continue to be well bought and no pressure to sell.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: There was further activity in lake copper today, which advanced a fraction further, although buying is said to be of the speculative kind. Lake July delivery sold at 12⅝. Lake closed at 12¾ and Elec at 12⅜.

• • •

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The American Metal company sold Electrolytic copper plate yesterday afternoon at 12½ cents, an advance of ⅛c. It is said in the trade that the American Metal company is in control of nearly all spot copper in this country while the Amalgamated Copper is bound at steady rates on all stocks made in January for delivery running till July 1.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Coppers are very dull today but firm. There are big buying orders just under the market in Copper Range and Mass, and they should be bought on any recession.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 23.—Cotton opened steady with prices unchanged to 2 points higher and following the call worked upward on straggling demand. Crop and weather reports were good and commission houses appeared to have little business. But against these factors were abnormally light receipts and a strong statistical situation. Later the room contingent was bearish and covered on the advance. July improved to 8.36 and August to 8.66 in the first hour's trading.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9¼c; middling gulf, 9¾c; sales, 2106 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady: May, 9.14; June, 9.09; July, 8.90; August, 8.59; September, 8.05; October, 7.92; November, 7.85; December, 7.84; January, 7.85; February, 7.85.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, May 23.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $187,685,-253; gold, $104,000,000. Silver, $20,337,057; U. S. notes, $7,787,019; treasury notes of 1890, $166,040; national bank notes, $8,476,931; total receipts this day, $1,593,318; total receipts this month, $36,647,746; total receipts this year, $500,866,106; total expenditures this day, $660,000; total expenditures this month, $33,685,000; total expenditures this year, $432,309,966; deposits in national banks, $124,488,092.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 23.—Close: Money on call easier at 2¾@3½ per cent, closing bid and asked 2¾@3 per cent; prime mercantile paper, 4½@5 per cent. Sterling exchange heavy, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.85 for demand and at $4.83¾ for 60 days; posted rates, $4.85¼ and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.83⅜@4.84¾; bar silver, 51⅞c; Mexican dollars, 41¾c. Government bonds, easy; state bonds, inactive; railroad bonds, firm.

WHY HE HAD REFORMED.

There was but one unoccupied seat in the car and the coarse looking, but well dressed man took it. He stared down at his great, red hands and smiled. He was an ill-looking man when his face was in repose, but when he smiled he seemed like a demon. A little badly dressed man alongside of him hacked a dry, subdued cough. The sound of it seemed to wake old associations in the mind of the coarse looking man, says the New York Mail and Express. He turned and whispered; in a peculiarly sorry sort of way and whispered:

"Hello," he said, "are you alive yet?"

A look of horror came over the ghastly face of the little man as he hacked again.

"Several times before he said:

"Yes, it seems hard to kill me."

"What are you doing?" inquired the big man, as he rubbed his giant fingers across his well-groomed mustaches.

"Nothing. I am too weak to work."

"Too what?" asked the coarse man in evident amazement.

"I am honest now," meekly said the feeble voice.

"An honest now," meekly said the bass voice, looking his companion all over.

"Hungry, but honest," returned the little man as the ghost of a smile came upon his face.

"You are a fool. I have the finest game in all America. If they ever see me up at Auburn again it will surprise me, you just bet. I might give you a show at this 'grab,' but, pshaw, you're going to die in a few days anyhow, and besides you're a blamed ass."

"I was a fool once," said the little man. "I paid for my folly, too."

"Let me see. You served three years, did you not?"

"Hush," whispered the little man. "You may be heard."

"My, but you have changed! Now listen to me. Don't be a clamdigger any longer. I haven't got any respect for a pocket-picker, as you know, but if I hadn't a good game to be I have I'd do even that for a living. I wouldn't go hungry, you just bet, with so many fat pocketbooks bulging out of the pockets of half-witted owners. Look at that crowd there! Why, if I stooped to it I could turn a pretty penny in a few minutes. But I have a dead sure thing—little risk and big profits. My, won't the police open their eyes if they ever find me out! Ha! ha! it is to laugh. Why did you reform?"

"I promised my wife to lead an honest life. She is dead now."

"You ought to be thankful of that. Wives are luxuries and husbands are fools. I'd like to be a widower myself."

A look of shame came over the thin man's wan countenance, and he said quietly as his lip trembled:

"But I loved my wife."

"How did you happen to go to Auburn, then?"

"I didn't take her advice. My eyes opened too late."

"You are an ass."

"I know it."

"Let me tell you. You haven't long to last at best. I'll give you a chance of a lifetime. Let us get off at the next corner and I'll tell you how we can fool the cops. Come."

"I have not had a square meal in several days," said the little man. "I made a few cents Tuesday, but my little boy has to live, and I'll feed him first always. I want money, oh, so badly—for him. But I'll not go back, John. Never. I'll see that lad die from hunger first. She made me promise that for him and her. Good-by."

"You are a fool, an insane fool. Good-by."

And the coarse man left by the rear door, and as he stepped to the sidewalk he laughed.

DAY FOR KIDS.

Many Youngsters Brought Into Court on Various Charges.

This was juvenile day in police circles. Youngsters of various descriptions and ages were arrested for petty larcenies.

Joseph Telega, aged 14, and Martin Casla, aged 13, were taken in custody for alleged implication in the wholesale stealing of twine from Johnson & Moe's big West End store. About forty-five pounds of twine was stolen and many of the West End boys are using home-made baseballs as a result. Some of the twine was recovered, but there is still twenty-one pounds missing.

Youthful grain rustlers on Garfield avenue invaded the barn of William R. Hawthorne, stealing thirty bushels of oats valued at 50 cents a bushel, which they sold for 25 cents a bushel.

The boys arrested are Fred Sayne, Samuel Erickson, Henry Jackovsky and Henry Dzikowski. The cases against them will be heard in police court on June 4.

ON LAKE AVENUE

W. W. Billson Buys One Hundred Feet of Dock Property.

Lies Just South of Marshall-Wells Hardware Building.

Price Paid Is Three Hundred Dollars a Front Foot.

A notable sale of Lake avenue dock property has been filed of record in the register of deeds office. The purchaser is William W. Billson, and the conveyor is the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company. The property is that on the east side of the Lake avenue slip, lying just south of the property improved for the Marshall-Wells Hardware company. The price is equal to $200 per front foot, which is said to be an advance of $120 over the last sale made on that side of the street, which was the Marshall-Wells property. The latter deal was made about three years ago, at $180 a foot, pretty well at the bottom of the dull times, so it does not afford a fair basis for comparison with the Billson deal. The price paid in this last deal is, however, considered very reasonable.

The description of the property transferred is lots 5 and 6, Transfer division. The consideration is $30,000. Coincidently is filed a mortgage running to the seller from Mr. Billson, which is security for $24,000 of the purchase price, and bears interest at 5 per cent.

The property has 100 feet frontage on the slip, and runs back 260 feet to the avenue. Most of the property in that immediate part of the city is said to have been acquired by the Zenith Investment company, which is composed of A. B. Wolvin and associates, and it is intimated that Mr. Billson may be acting in this purchase for others as well as for himself.

Great development of the property in that part of the city is looked for at an early day. The building of the Marshall-Wells warehouses, followed by the extensive plant of the Northwestern Manufacturing company, the enormous buildings for which have just been completed on St. Croix avenue, are predicted by many as the precursor of early industrial developments thereabouts of large moment.

It is announced by H. L. Billson, who acted for W. W. Billson in the transaction, that the purchase is made for investment, and that the property will be leased for a long term.

ISLE ROYALE

Is Certain to Be Popular Resort For Duluth People.

The outlook now is that Washington harbor will be made a fashionable resort for Duluth people. It seems quite likely that the warm period of midsummer will find quite a colony of well known Duluthians there this season.

The fact was published some time ago that a coterie of well-to-do business men are contemplating the purchase of the large log house erected at Washington harbor by the English corporation that is a large owner of property on Isle Royale. The purpose of the purchase would be to make of the house a club house for those who are considering the deal and some of their intimate friends.

The building is said to be admirably adapted to forest and fishing club purposes. It was erected by the English company as the headquarters of its copper explorations on Isle Royale. The house, which is built of well selected logs, contains twenty large rooms, and is plastered throughout. There is a fine large deck in front of the premises on Washington harbor and the grounds that go with the house cover an area of forty acres. The view is said to be a beautiful one.

Among those who contemplate the purchase of the property are said to be George G. Barnum, Charles R. Haines, M. H. Aiworth, R. C. Ray, Capt. Ray T. Lewis and George C. Stone. These gentlemen went to Washington harbor on the steamer Iroquois Tuesday evening and returned today.

Capt. Lewis, who was a member of the party, declined to discuss the reported purchase of the property, but he was willing to talk enthusiastically of the Iroquois and its service in all departments. The captain has been all over the world as master of his own vessel and has seen most of the fine passenger and private craft on all waters. Said he this morning.

"You can say that there is no better craft on the lakes than the Iroquois, and is as fine a vessel as the big Northern boats, though she is not so large. The service is admirable in all departments.

The boat was a revelation to me, as much in her speed and navigating qualities as in any other way. We hear a great deal about the speed of vessels, but they don't always come up to their promises. The Iroquois on the contrary made eighteen miles an hour with the greatest ease in the world, and could make twenty with little effort. Such enterprise as Capt. Singer has shown in placing this fine vessel on the north shore route should be appreciated and liberally remunerated."

In addition to the plans for a clubhouse at Washington harbor, it is said that Ward Ames will build a fine cottage there. The plan of G. G. Barnum to build a cottage at the same place has already been announced. It is understood that Capt. W. H. Singer has made arrangements with parties for the erection of a summer resort hotel at this landing.

DEMISE OF DIPLOMAT

Lord Pauncefote Lies Dead at Washington.

Ably Served Interests of Great Britain.

Washington, May 24.—Lord Pauncefote, British ambassador to the United States, died at the embassy this morning at 5:35 o'clock.

The improvement which had been noted in his condition during the past week received a sudden check about 6 o'clock last night, when it was noticed that he was experiencing difficulty in breathing. Dr. Jung, his physician, was immediately sent for and he immediately decided upon a consultation with a local physician. In the meantime telegraphing for Dr. Osler, of Baltimore. In his stead came Dr. Thayer, of John Hopkins university, arriving about 2 o'clock this morning. The patient's pulse was still good, and when Dr. Thayer left the embassy at 3 o'clock for Baltimore the ambassador was resting so comfortably that a cablegram was sent to his son-in-law, Mr. Bromley, in London, that there was no immediate danger.

Soon after 3 o'clock a distinct weakness of the heart developed and his pulse began to collapse. He died so peacefully that it surprised even his physician, who feared that the asthmatic affection would prove troublesome when the end came.

At the bedside when the distinguished diplomat passed away, were Mrs. Pauncefote, the Honorable Maude Pauncefote, Miss Sibyl and Miss Audrey, Dr. Jung and Mr. Radford, one of the clerks attached to the embassy.

No arrangements of any kind have been made for the funeral.

As soon as it became generally known that Lord Pauncefote was dead flags were half masted over the different embassies and legations. At the Arlington hotel, where the visiting Frenchmen who have come to witness the Rochambeau statue unveiling are stopping, the French flag was placed at half mast.

The news of Lord Pauncefote's death brought Secretary Hay to the White House shortly after 9 o'clock, and he spent some time with the president considering what action should be taken. Later it was announced that the president would call at the British embassy immediately after the unveiling ceremonies to offer his personal condolences and ascertain the wishes of Lord Pauncefote's family in regard to further plans. The president also sent a letter of codolence to Lady Pauncefote. Immediately after the unveiling ceremonies, the flag on the White House was placed at half mast.

Mrs. L. Z. Leiter, who was to have given a reception in honor of the French delegation this afternoon, has called it off on account of Lord Pauncefote's death, and it is very likely that the French ambassador also will recall the invitations to his reception tonight.

After his conference with the president, Secretary Hay proceeded directly to the British embassy, where he made a formal call of condolence as the personal representative of the president, preliminary to the call which the president himself was to make later in the day. Then returning to the state department Secretary Hay dispatched the following cablegram:

Department of State, May 24, 1901.

"The Marquis of Lansdowne, London:

"Permit me to express my deep sympathy and sorrow at the death of Lord Pauncefote. His majesty's government has lost a most able and faithful servant, and this country a valued friend.

Signed, "JOHN HAY."

The secretary had fully expressed his sentiments in the above cablegram, and all that he cared to say in addition of the deceased peer was:

"He was not only a man of very high personal merit, but he was a good friend of ours." Having dispatched his message of condolence the secretary of state proceeded to attend the ceremonies connected with the dedication of the Rochambeau statue. At first there seemed to be an incongruity interest, but that appeared that an act of congress required the statue to be unveiled as of this date and although

AN ELECTRICAL CINCH

General Electric Company Will Absorb Sprague Company and Then With Westinghouse Will Control the Market.

New York, May 24.—Circulars have been sent out to the stockholders of the Sprague Electric company notifying them that an offer has been made by the General Electric company to acquire control of the Sprague company. The circulars convey the information that the terms of the offer have been approved by many of the largest bond and stockholders and that the merger practically is assured.

According to the circular the General Electric company will acquire the Sprague company by an exchange of securities and a little cash.

The options which the security holders of the Sprague company arerequired to give expire on July 1. The capital stock of the Sprague company is given as $5,000,000. The General Electric company recently increased its stock to $45,000,000. The absorption of the former concern practically leaves the manufacture of large electrical goods in the hands of two concerns—the Westinghouse and the General Electric.

DISINHERITED BY A NOD

New York Woman Was Unable to Speak, But She Cast Off Her Son By a Movement of Her Head.

New York, May 24.—By a nod of her head, Mrs. Virginia Wilde, who died recently, disinherited her son and gave her entire estate to her daughter. At the time of the execution of the will Mrs. Wilde was suffering from throat affection, making it difficult for her to articulate. She preferred to answer questions with a nod or shake of the head.

The executor prepared her will and read it to Mrs. Wilde in the presence of the witnesses assembled at her bedside. She was asked if she understood and nodded assent, and the witnesses signed the document. Her son threatens to contest the will on the ground that she was incompetent to make it and was unable to sign the document. Surrogate Church, of Brooklyn, however, admitted the will to probate.

RESCUERS DRIVEN BACK

Gas In the Mines Near Fernie Causes the Volunteers to Quickly Collapse In Their Work of Rescue.

Fernie, B. C., May 24.—Volunteers were called for and a score of men rushed to the work. Every few minutes men would collapse and would be borne to the outer air, but their places were quickly filled by fresh volunteers. The first body recovered was taken from No. 3 mine about 11 o'clock, and was that of Willie Robertson, a lad of 13. Several hours elapsed and then three more bodies were recovered. None of the victims gave the slightest signs of life. At 4 a. m. the relief parties had penetrated so far that the gas became unbearable, and operations had to be suspended for an hour or two. Many acts of bravery were witnessed during the night. The dead so far recovered are: Steve Morgan, Joe Saugaula, Willie Robertson, Victor Johnson, John Leadbeater, Frank Salter, John McLeod, T. Fearful, L. Johnson and a miner whose name is unknown.

The mine is free from fire and the bodies will be removed as fast as the after-damp is cleared.

The town is horror-stricken, and heartrending scenes meet the eye on every side. All day the roads to the mine have been crowded by anxious friends and relatives of the imprisoned men hurrying to the scene of the disaster.

A meeting of the board of trade has been called to organize a relief fund for the benefit of the sufferers.

The cause of the explosion is unknown, but the opinion of many is that it was the result of a heavy shot from one of the machines.

LONG RESIGNS AGAIN.

Columbus, Ohio, May 24.—Rev. S. P. Long, of this city, has tendered his resignation as president of Lima college for the second time, and it has now been accepted. Prolonged sickness in his family is given as the reason for his retirement.

NO CHANGE AT MARTINIQUE.

Paris, May 24.—A dispatch received here from Governor L'Huerre, dated from Fort de France, Martinique, yesterday, reports that there is no change in the situation there. It is impossible to enter St. Pierre.

A WARM DENUNCIATION

Second Volume of the History of the War Issued By the "Thunderer" Has Scathing Criticism For British Officers.

London, May 24.—The second volume of the London Times' "History of the War," which has just appeared, is attracting unusual attention because of its scathing denunciation of British generals and the war office. The criticism is given additional weight by the fact of its appearing under the auspices of the "Thunderer." No enemy of Great Britain could more frankly denounce British blunders. Starting with Gen. White's last fight before he withdrew to Ladysmith, the author says it was in reality a serious defeat of infantry badly handled by the officer in command, who "proved quite unfit to grapple with the official situation, in which, largely by the mistakes of others, he was placed." The cavalry was as bad as the infantry, and the situation was only saved by the heroism of the artillery.

The surrender of troops at Nicholson's Nek is described as premature, though "no more humiliating than many surrenders which occurred after it."

Passing to Stormberg, the writer describes the succession of blunders which led to the reverse as "sheer mismanagement on the part of Gen. Gatacre or his staff."

Touching the crowning misfortune at Colenso, the author says: "Just as in the hour of battle Gen. Buller had failed the men whom he led, so now in the hour of trials he was to fail his country, which had entrusted the fortune of war to his hands. He utterly lost heart. Not only did he despair of doing anything himself, but he despaired for others."

STATUE IS UNVEILED

International Goodwill Demonstrated at Rochambeau Exercises.

Many Distinguished Men Were Present.

Thousands of People Witnessed Ceremony.

Washington, May 24.—The president of the United States today joined with the official representatives of the French republic in unveiling the statue of Marshal de Rochambeau, the compatriot of Washington and the commander-in-chief of the French forces in America during the revolutionary war. It was an event combining many demonstrations of international good will, with French sailors from the battleship Gaulois mingling their cheers with American blue jackets, French flags entwining their folds with the stars and stripes, and with oratory and music expressive of Franco-American friendship.

The ceremony of unveiling was fixed for 11 o'clock this morning, but long before that hour the streets were filled with marching men and with a great crowd eager to witness the exercises and review. A battalion of French seamen arrived by special train from Annapolis early in the day and headed by the crack band from the French battleship, swung through Pennsylvania avenue to Lafayette square, where the shrouded figure of the French field marshal awaited the signal for unveiling. The American soldiers, sailors and marines already had assembled and gave their French brothers-in-arms a hearty welcome. The American troops were under command of Maj. Gen. S. B. M. Young and embraced a battalion of engineers, a battalion of sailors and marines, with the Marine band, a battalion of cavalry and of field artillery and a brigade of National Guardsmen of the District of Columbia, representing in all the various branches of the United States military and naval service.

President Roosevelt and members of the cabinet arrived at the reviewing stand shortly before 11 o'clock and took position immediately facing the draped figure. Alongside the presidential party sat the French ambassador, M. Cambon, Gen. Brugere, Vice Admiral Fournier and other distinguished representatives of the French government, and also the Count and Countess de Rochambeau and Count de Lafayette, descendants of the gallant soldiers who fought with Washington.

THE PRESIDENT'S WELCOME.

Cardinal Gibbons was to have opened the exercises with an invocation, but in his unavoidable absence the Rev. Dr. Stafford delivered an impressive opening prayer. At its conclusion, President Roosevelt stepped to the front of the platform and extended a generous welcome to the French guests.

The president spoke as follows:

Mr. Ambassador and you, representatives of the mighty republic of France: I extend to you on behalf of the people of the United States the warmest and most cordial greetings. We appreciate to the full all that is implied in this embassy, composed of such men as those who have been sent over here by President Loubet to commemorate the unveiling of the statue of the great marshal, who, with the soldiers and sailors of France, struck the decisive blow in the war which started this country on the path of independence among the nations of the earth. (Applause.) I am sure that I give utterance to the sentiments of every citizen of the United States, of every American to whom the honor and the glory of our republic in the past as the present are dear, when I say that we prize this fresh proof of the friendship of the French people not only because it is necessarily pleasing to us to have the friendship of a nation so mighty in war and so mighty in peace as France has ever shown herself to be, but because it is peculiarly pleasant to feel that, after a century and a quarter of independent existence as a nation, the French republic should feel that in that century and a quarter we have justified the sacrifices France made on our behalf. (Applause.)

"I am sure, my fellow-citizens, that you welcome the chance which brings it about that this embassy of the French people should come to our shores at the very time when we, in our turn, have done our part in starting on the path of independence a sister republic—the republic of Cuba. (Applause.)

"Mr. Ambassador, the American people, peculiarly because they are the American people, and because the history of the United States has been so interwoven with what France has done for us, also, because they are proud of the whole world, which acknowledges and must ever acknowledge in a peculiar degree the headship of France along so many lines in the march of progress and civilization—the American people, through me, extend their thanks to you, and in their name I beg to express my acknowledgments to the embassy that has come here and to President Loubet and all of the French nation, both for the deed and for the magnanimous spirit that laid behind the doing of the deed, and I thank you." (Loud applause.)

As the president closed his remarks, the Countess de Rochambeau drew aside the veils enveloping the figure, bringing into view the massive bronze proportions of the famous French commander, standing proudly erect with arm outstretched, directing the fortunes of war on the field of Yorktown. A great cheer went up from Frenchmen and Americans alike, and at the same instant the Marine band broke into inspiring strains of "The Marseillaise."

AMBASSADOR CAMBON SPEAKS.

As the French national hymn died away, Ambassador Cambon escorted to the front of the platform the youthful sculptor, M. Hamar, who executed the statue. Then the ambassador, speaking in French, delivered a brief address. He said:

"The art of France and the generosity of an American congress are joining this day in the erection of a monument to the memory of Marshall de Rochambeau. This is a fitting tribute paid to the French military leader who fought under Washington for America's independence. But a short distance hence the American people had already consecrated the glorious memory of these young and enthusiastic French patriots who, fired with an inspiration which but echoed the silent wish of the entire French nation, had from the very dawn of the struggle brought their sword with Lafayette to the service of the thirteen colonies. It was just that honor should be rendered also to those warriors who came hither by order of the government of France and who, understanding their duty, fulfilled it without reserve and insured the final success of the patriotic enterprise. In the person of Rochambeau we glorify jointly with their commander the army of France, its regiments, its officers unknown, its obscure soldiery.

"It is a very great honor for me to speak here as ambassador of the French republic, and to express to you all today, who represent here the government, the magistracy and the congress of the United States, our appreciation of the homage which you are now paying to the man who carried to this closing triumph the "fleur de lis" of ancient France. Today the French republic sends you a mission which is headed by the most eminent of our general officers, Gen. Brugere. We must behold in him the French army and navy advancing, with a sort of national piety, to celebrate the memory of their elders—devotees like themselves to liberty.

"Rochambeau was a strict disciplinarian, a severe and courageous commander, careful of the lives of his men; he was wont at times to remark to the young men around him that during the long course of his military career 15,000 men had died under him, but that he could not reproach himself with the death of a single one of these. Thus he earned for our army the esteem of your people, and won for himself the affectionate devotion of your great Washington.

"Hence it is that this monument, which in appearance seems only destined to evoke the recollection of warlike deeds, becomes, by the character of the struggle which it recalls and of the man whom it glorifies, a monument and pledge of union between two nations. Today, just as they did 120 years ago, the soldiers and sailors of France and of the United States stand side by side; they surround this monument; they march under one and the same command; they blend in one common chord their national hymns, and in celebrating their common glory they give the world an example of fidelity in friendship.

"This friendship you have proven to us. The French antilles have just suffered the shock of a tragic event, of a catastrophe the like of which the world had not witnessed for twenty centuries. The president of the United States, congress and the American people have vied with one another in promptness to send relief to our stricken countrymen. Permit me to avail myself of this solemn occasion and to thank publicly, in the name of my government and country, you yourself, Mr. President, and the entire population of these United States.

GYPSY SHOT TO KILL

Woman Causes Great Excitement In New York By Drawing a Revolver and Shooting a Man Riding By on Bicycle.

New York, May 24.—Surrounded by an enormous crowd watching a fire in West Forty-third street, a woman drew a revolver from her waist and shot a young man who was passing on a bicycle. The wounded man fell and was carried to a hospital.

The woman, who was hatless, after firing the first shot attempted to pull the trigger again, but her nerve failed and she swept the revolver around in front of the crowd. Everybody fell back in fright, opening a way for her to escape, which she did with great celerity.

At the hospital the victim said he was Leon Galloway, and that the woman was his wife, a former gypsy, from whom he was separated. It was found that he had been shot in the back, the bullet passing under his heart. The surgeons say his condition was critical.

ORDERED TO CLOSE DOWN

Independent Coal Operators Who Have Met All the Demands of the Strikers Are Forbidden to Mine Coal.

Hazelton, Pa., May 24.—President Duffy of the United Mine Workers' organization of this district today notified the owners of the Dusky Diamond colliery, at Beaver Brook, and Matthias Schwab, operator of a small mine at South Heberton, which furnish coal for domestic use, to close down until after the strike. The former is still at work, and no report has been received from South Heberton, which is situated in an isoated portion of the district.

Agents from the bituminous field of West Virginia are here trying to secure miners. The miner officers have notified the strikers not to go south, as they say there is danger of the early inauguration of a strike at the section where miners are wanted.

The pumpmen at the Crystal Ridge colliery of A. Pardee & Co. have been suspended, and bosses have been put in charge of the pumps.

BUNG ESCAPES PUNISHMENT

New York, May 24.—Theodore Bung, who on Sept. 13, 1884, shot and killed Dr. Adolph Nookin, in this city, and who was declared insane, after having been indicted for murder, and since confined in an asylum, has been discharged. He recently was liberated from the asylum and immediately demanded a trial on the old indictment. When the case was called the district attorney announced that all the states witnesses are dead and the case was quashed.

CINCINNATI HOSPITAL FIRE

Cincinnati, May 24.—Fire in the city hospital at 4 o'clock this morning causer dire alarm, but fortunately loss of life was prevented. Four attendants were overcome by smoke and injured. The fire started in the drying room. By a wise precaution the fire department, which recognized the hospital as a dangerous building answered the call in force. There were twenty-five girls sleeping on the floor above the fire, who escaped.

The superintendent and nurses of the hospital used every effort to prevent patients and others from reckless flight and with the assistance of police and firemen, a fatal panic was prevented. The fire was soon under control. Kate Gaffney, Annie Rusch, Helen Bovery and Rose Pallee were found unconscious in their rooms and upon the verge of death. They are still in a serious condition but will recover.

FOUR THOUSAND BENEFITED

Trenton, N. J., May 24.—The John A. Roeblings Sons company today announced an increase of wages to its 4000 employes averaging 10 per cent. The increase is a voluntary one and was made, as explained by Charles G. Roebling, "in consequence of the increased cost of living to which our employes have been subjected."

The company's principal output is wire rope and is now furnishing the wire cables for the new East river bridge.

HANDBILL NUISANCE

Many Complaints Against the Scattering of Advertising Handbills.

They Litter Up Private Premises and Public Streets.

Sidewalk Clearing Ordinance Not Popular With All Merchants.

Since the inauguration of the sidewalk clearing campaign by city officers hundreds of citizens have been asking that another nuisance be abolished.

This particular nuisance is the throwing of paper about the streets, and it is particularly aimed at the hand-bill epidemic which seems to have invaded Duluth within the past few weeks.

Prominent citizens registered vigorous protests at police headquarters this morning because a number of boys were distributing hand-bills through the hillside residence district and also in the East End. One said:

"Ever since our municipal cleaning day I have made it a point to keep my lawn in a neat and clean condition, but how are we going to do that when the city permits youngsters to scatter hand-bills all over the premises.

"If you had seen my lawn yesterday and then taken another look at it today, you would be justified in swearing that it was not the same piece of property."

Similar complaints were received all along the line, and Chief Troyer immediately notified the patrolmen to look up the offenders and order them to desist, while the chief himself is making a careful study of the numerous conflicting ordinances to ascertain just what his duties are in suppressing the nuisance.

For a while Duluth was comparatively free from hand-bill throwing, but scarcely a day now passes that several boys do not go through the residence districts from Lakeside to West Duluth throwing down hand-bills for the wind to scatter in all directions.

It has been rather discouraging to those that are interested in the work of cleaning up the city, as nothing litters up a clean yard so much as paper.

Last week a force of men were sent out by the department of public works to clean up an avenue against which a great deal of complaint had been made. The men did it in first class shape by night. Next morning a hand bill gang worked the neighborhood and the last state of that avenue was worse than the first.

A number of the larger merchants of the city have endorsed the movement to clear the sidewalk of advertising obstructions and this morning there was scarcely a leading grocery store along Superior street that did not observe the recent request of the department of public works and keep their vegetable displays off the sidewalk.

One grocer said: "We shall certainly do all in our power to aid the police in keeping the sidewalks cleared. Perhaps you do not know it, but crowded walks drive a great deal of the Saturday trade to stores off Superior street and I think it decidedly to our advantage to obey the recent order."

All grocers do not take such a philosophical view of the matter, however. Some are talking of petitioning the council against the order and seeking its revocation.

The most trouble is experienced with the smaller class of stores that have secondhand goods hanging out over the sidewalks. The owners of these establishments say the police are trying to interfere with their business and they propose to fight the order.

GOOD WORDS

For Duluth Heard By M. S. Burrows In the East.

M. S. Burrows, of the Great Eastern store, returned this morning after a month's absence in the East, during which time he was selecting the woolens for the fall and winter stocks of the Great Eastern store, and superintending the enlargement of his establishment in New York city, where is manufactured Mr. Burrows' own idea of ready to wear clothing, which is now becoming so well known throughout the Northwest as "Burrows' Form Fitting Clothing." Mr. Burrows has spent twenty-five years in the study of ready made clothing, and the form fitting clothing has been a great success from the very start. Hereafter he will confine his attention almost exclusively to the manufacture of his own idea of clothing.

While in the East, in company with other manufacturers, Mr. Burrows attended a forced sale of woolens in New England, consisting of thousands of yads, which they bought at a great discount. He also bought the surplus spring stocks of Roberts-Wicks company, and of Joseph Skolny & Company.

Mr. Burrows says that the long continued bad weather has seriously affected the retail trade of the East, but the Western merchants are still hopeful. The East is dreading the effect of the strike of the coal miners, but the miners have the sympathy largely of the public in their fight against the coal barons. Mr. Burrows believes that wages should advance in keeping with the increased cost of living.

During his absence Mr. Burrows heard nothing but good words for Duluth. The Eastern business interests are confident of the city's future and the wholesalers and financial men that he met all spoke well of the Zenith city. The Easterners are looking with interest at the tide of immigration that is setting into the Northwest, and they argue that it means a world of good to Duluth. Mr. Burrows says the opinion is that without question Duluth is destined to be ranked among the solid cities of the country.

On his return Mr. Burrows was pleased to meet a number of his Northern Michigan friends. He says that while the prosperity of the Northern Michigan interests has been guaranteed by the copper production of that section, Duluth, because of its proximity to the iron ore supply will be marked hereafter to escape the hard times that will reach less fortunately situated municipalities.

IMPROVED.

H. F. Chaffee Says Crop Conditions Are Considerably Better.

H. F. Chaffee, of the Amenia & Sharon Land company, of Amenia, N. D., is in the city. His company has one of the very large farms in that state of large farms and he visits Duluth frequently. With reference to crop conditions in the Red River valley Mr. Chaffee said this morning:

"I left home about a week ago and I have been since informed that the condition had greatly improved and that we have not much cause for worry in our locality. Further east and north of us they seem to have suffered more.

"We will have 10,000 acres in wheat this year, about 5,000 acres in flax and the same amount in barley and corn. We do no summer fallowing, finding it better to seed corn. This puts the land in better condition.

"Our flax last year ran from 5 to 6 bushels to the acre. This was a large yield, when figured against the average of the valley, but a small one in comparison with what we expected and what we can do. I consider a 10-bushel-average low for the Red River valley."

GOV. VAN SANT COMING.

Will Attend the Funeral of G. Fred Stevens.

Governor Van Sant is expected in Duluth early tomorrow morning. He wired last night that he would be here to attend the funeral of the late G. Fred Stevens tomorrow afternoon, though he did not designate the exact hour of his arrival.

ADVERSE POSSESSION.

Portion of a Street Claimed On That Ground.

A suit to clear title to a portion of a street on the ground of adverse possession is the somewhat peculiar nature of the case of the Zenith Investment company against the city of Duluth, begun in district court yesterday afternoon. The plaintiff claims to be the owners of lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 15, 16, 17, 18 and 20, Minnesota avenue, Cowles' addition, and to that part of Minnesota avenue adjoining the property on the front. It is alleged that the city never used the street and that the plaintiff had been for more than twenty years in open and notorious possession of it. Therefore the company claims the street by adverse possession, and sues to clear its title. Searle & Spencer are the attorneys.

Iroquois Gives Good Account of Herself In the Blow.

Captain Worden, of the steamer Iroquois, is well pleased with the conduct of the white boat during her trip up the north shore the first of the week. The Iroquois left the Duluth harbor in the face of a stiff northeaster Tuesday afternoon. A large crowd congregated at the piers to see her go out of the canal, as the waves were rolling through that afternoon with great force. The Iroquois was warped around the end of Singer's dock and as soon as headed into the canal the line was cast off and she was driven ahead under full head of steam.

The trip through the canal was an exciting one, the steamer seeming to stand first on one end and then on the other, but her progress was steady and she rode over the rough water like a duck. One old gentleman that was standing at the stern holding on with both hands was swept back by the water that dashed high over the front end of the boat when she made her first plunge. After that he was content to remain in the cabin.

After leaving the canal the Iroquois made good time in spite of the heavy sea, and arrived in Port Arthur the next morning at 7 o'clock. At midnight she ran out of the storm, which seemed confined entirely to the upper end of the lake.

Captain Worden says that Wednesday he left Port Arthur and headed across the lake toward Houghton, but was struck by a gale so severe that the Iroquois was turned clear around and he was forced to put back to Duluth. He says that the Houghton papers criticised him for not making that port, but if some of the newspaper men had as much experience in running a boat as he has they would be in a better position to understand why the Iroquois was not put into Houghton on the last trip.

Tomorrow the Iroquois will make a trip to the Apostle Islands, touching at Two Harbors both ways, as a large number of the people of that town have signified their desire to go up to the islands.

COSTLY PICTURES

Forrest & Le Tourneau's Indecent Machine an Expensive Thing.

District Court Adds $300 to the $100 Previously Paid.

Orders the Pictures Destroyed---Two Criminals Sentenced.

It cost C. M. Forrest and Alphonse Le Tourneau $400 to have in their saloon a picture machine showing indecent views.

The municipal court fined them $50 apiece some time ago.

This morning the district court added $150 more for each member of the firm. They paid it, and thus escaped the alternative of ninety days in the county jail that accompanied the sentence.

The pictures will offend no more, for they were taken out of the machine this morning and destroyed, on the order of the court. County Attorney McClintock opened the machine, tore out the pictures and touched a match to them. Those who had seen them said that this seemed a severe case of carrying coals to Newcastle, but the pictures burned up merrily.

The machine, which is as suitable for showing the works of art as it is for showing the depths of indecency, will be returned to the defendants.

The men pleaded guilty a couple of days ago, and they were arraigned this morning before Judge Ensign for sentence. Before administering sentence Judge Ensign delivered a severe commentary on the exhibition of such pictures. He said that he made the sentence light because the defendants had already been before one court.

"The sentence does not represent my views," said Judge Ensign. "It is hard to express them with the coolness that I should use."

The defendants went down to the clerk's room and paid their fines, and then the county attorney cremated the pictures.

James Brown, who forged some time checks, and when he was arraigned on the indictment plead guilty, saying that he had committed the crime and must suffer for it, was sentenced to the state prison at Stillwater on the reformatory plan.

Julius Hagen, who pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree, was sentenced to state prison for one year at St. Cloud. He stole a couple of pairs of trousers from a second hand store, sold them in another second hand store nearby, and then went back and stole a suit of clothes.

Both men were drunk when they committed their offenses. Hagen admitted that he had been convicted of petty larceny in this county once before.

The case of Mary E. McComber against the city of Duluth will go to the jury Monday forenoon. The evidence was all in yesterday afternoon, and the arguments to the jury begun. The case of John Fraser against William Clark was still on trial in room No. 1 when court adjourned yesterday afternoon to Monday morning.

Sheehy Wins Out.

Joseph Sheehy came under the wire a winner in place court this morning.

He was recently arrested for forcefully maintaining possession of desk space in an office at No. 5 South Fifth avenue west. The court held that he could not be removed by criminal process, and stated that there was a civil remedy in such cases that was more advisable.

DEED FILED.

Instrument Transferring Flour Trust Mills On Record Here.

A deed covering all of the property of the late so-called flour trust was filed this morning in the office of the register of deeds.

It runs from the special master in chancery to the Standard Milling company, and it carries out the sale under foreclosure of the mortgage bonds of the United States Flour Milling company.

The consideration named in the deed is $1,500,000, and the revenue stamps amount to $748.75.

The deed covers all of the trust's property, including that in Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York and elsewhere, and it is filed in this county to cover the Imperial mill.

The sale took place March 28, 1902, and it was bid in for $3,500,000. The consideration, however, is only $1,500,000. The purchaser assumes the building liens of the Barnett & Record company, which it agrees to pay if the court finds that the liens are prior to the mortgage.

COAL STRIKE.

Peace Rumors In the Air Concerning the Situation.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 24.—Peace rumors are again in the air. Around strike headquarters today President Mitchell was busy with his affairs and his movements did not give the slightest indication that he was considering any proposition from the other side, or that he was doing anything that could lead to a settlement of the strike. The morning developed nothing. Reports from the entire coal field showed that every locality was quiet. President Mitchell will leave late this afternoon for a flying trip to Chicago to see his family. He will stop at national headquarters at Indianapolis on his way back. There is a belief in some quarters that his real reason for making the journey is to confer with some of the labor leaders in the bituminous regions, but this he emphatically denies.

Blairsville, Pa., May 24.—The striking coal miners have established a camp at this place and active efforts will be made to close down the mines still in operation. A brass band from Carnegie and nearly 1000 strikers are here and it is said they will remain until the agreement is signed by the operators. President Dolan is advising the men against the use of violence. He says they will depend entirely on moral suasion. Daily parades will be a feature of the camp.

A Domestic at St. Cloud Overturns Lamp.

St. Paul, May 24.—A St. Cloud, Minn., special to the Dispaten says: Rose Kindler, a domestic, employed in the family of C. E. Rensberger, was perhaps fatally burned last night by the overturning of a lighted lamp into the bed where she was sleeping. Her clothes were saturated with oil. The lamp sat on a stand beside the bed. She read until she fell asleep and left the light burning. It is supposed she overturned the lamp while asleep.

Washington, May 24.—The following cablegram has been received at the navy department from Capt. McLean of the Cincinnati, dated St. Lucia, as follows: "Cincinnati made circuit of St. Vincent and is now going to Fort de France. One hundred and thirty are in hospital here in bungtown, eighty more badly burned, to come in. Four thousand receiving food. A steamer circuits the island daily. Dixie will finish discharging Tuesday."

BULGARIANS KILLED

Constantinople, May 24.—A band of sixty Bulgarian revolutionists engaged in raiding the neighborhood of Malesh Planina, Roumelia, came in contact with a detachment of Turkish troops May 20. Sharp fighting ensued during which six Bulgarians were killed and seven were wounded. The Turks also suffered some casualties.

BRYAN BACK FROM CUBA.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 24.—W. J. Bryan passed through this city this morning, en route to his home in Lincoln, Neb., from Havana, Cuba, where he witnessed the ceremonies attendant upon the inauguration of the Cuban republic. In an interview here he stated that the natives exhibited superior patriotism during the ceremonies. He further said he believed the United States would eventually give the Filipinos a government of their own.

BREEDING

Of Oysters to Please the Taste of the Epicure.

How the Succulent Bivalve Is Made Perfect For Eating.

When the sea swept back and uncovered New Jersey it presented at least one service for which the generations of a later age were to render devout thanksgiving. It yielded up an extra portion in the South, a finger-like projection, which in the course of time was to become known as the country of Cape May; and on the west of this it held to its own, assuming the form of Delaware Bay, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. Snugly ensconsed in the uppermost eastern corner of this ocean province lies a great cove, formed by the sweep of the ancient tides, and now protected by that finger-like projection and the land to the north, which is the county of Cumberland.

Here thrives the oyster known as the Maurice River cove, which for delicacy of flavor and purity fears no rival, since only in this basin, hollowed out ages ago, exist the peculiar conditions of water, food and climate to which it owes its superb features.

The most promising field is the Maurice River cove section, which takes in part of the Delaware River, most of the Delaware bay, and the cove proper with the hundreds of creeks that empty into it. When the violent topographical transformations of centuries ago operated to create the great oyster ground it divided in into two sections—the natural beds, where the oyster propagates, and the planting bottom, where the young oysters, after being taken from the beds, are placed and left to grow to marketable size. The bottom suitable for propagation contains about 20,000 acres, of which only 10,000 are now productive; while the planting bottom of the cove holds some 50,000 acres, 13,000 of which have been leased to the oystermen.

The lessees pay 25 cents per acre to the state, under whose control it is expected that fully 25,000 acres will be developed as planting ground within the next four or five years.

To bring about this growth the services of several oystermen and professional biologists have been utilized. Today the entire industry is under the official care of an oyster commission, composed of three expert planters—E. L. Riley, Edward Stites, jr., and Jeremiah N. Ogden—appointed in the spring of 1899; and an oyster superintendent, Colonel Thomas E. Austin, who championed the cause of the oystermen in the state legislature for three terms. Under their direction the various grounds held by the planters were marked out; deeds of ownership under state recognition were issued; thieving and oyster piracy were suppressed, and illegal dredging prosecuted; and the oyster grounds were divide into lots an leased to residents of the state. Maps of all of the oyster lands so leased are in the hands of the commission, and infractions of the right of ownership are punishable both by fine and imprisonment.

In the southern part of the county of Cumberland, which encompasses the famous cove, there is to be found a race of people apart from the common run. Their forefathers in many instances followed oystering for a livlihood as far back as two centuries ago. Indeed, there is on record an act passed in the year 1719, when New Jersey was a royal province, declares that whereas oyster beds within the provinces "are wasted and destroyed by strangers and others at unseasonable times of the year," no persons not residing within the province "shall directly or indirectly rake or gather up any oysters or shells within this province, and put them on any canoe, periauger, flat, scow, boat, or other vessel whatsoever" not belonging to residents. The penalty was the seizure of boat and cargo. The desire for protection is as strong today as ever, an act prohibiting the importation of oystersmen from other states having been demanded, and passed, in 1899.

New Jersey's largest oyster villages are Bivalve—well named—and Maurice River. life here is typical of life in the big oyster districts all along the coast, some piling up wealth upon their oyster shells, others remaining poor in spite of their labor, but all combining to repel the vandal stranger.

Last season $2,250,000 worth of oysters were shipped from the Bivalve, Maurice and Greenwich piers, licenses being issued to 580 boats to engage in the business. Fully 6000 people in the two larger oyster village rely upon it for their support, and these include boat and shipbuilders, blacksmiths, sailmakers, scow hands, planters, tongers, dredgers, bay sailors, watchmen, counters, shippers and general clerks. Their average wage is $40 per month.

Most picturesque of all are the real oystermen—those who go into the bay and up the little creeks to long for the "seed oysters;" who man the boats and scows, dredge for the "plants," and work about the cove in their jackets, blouses and great boots, laying the young oysters away to feed and fatten. These men seldom get far from the cove. The cove is their home. They know it and its traditions and its work—and but little else. Many of them have families and when they are not out at the oyster grounds, where they spend days and nights at a time, living on the boats, they smoke and yarn at the half-marine, half-rural corner stores of Bivalve and Maurice River, or enjoy the domestic fecility to be found in cabins and cottages not too pretentious in size or too luxuriously furnished. It is a rough life they lead, with little in it to develop the mental entity or encourage inventiveness or ambition—simply dredge, dredge, dredge! and cull, cull, cull! week in and week out, that the palates of others may be pleased and their own stomachs and those of their families filled.

During the "off" season the oystermen turn their hand to some other trade. In this exigency many of them take to farming. Nearly all the natives possess patches of ground, some of which claim the dignity of "properties." Their chief production is strawberries, and the district wins as great fame for fruit in summer as it holds for the succulent bivalve in winter. The berries are shipped direct to Boston, in which market there is an extraordinary demand for them.

Time was when a large part of the oyster villages was given over to a far different mode of life in the summer months than it is now, when the oystermen, the proceeds of their season's toil, and the ground remained uncultivated. The native oystermen who led cleanly lives and provided for their families could not compete with the men who received only $15 a month, and sometimes less. Impoverishment was the inevitable result; a few of the weaker followed suitedly in the wake of the invaders, and when the month of June came the demoralizing element intermingled with the respectable. Some of the Southern laborers, who were of the lowest class of society, became mendicants and tramps, others took up their abode in the village or on the outskirts in miserable hovels and bade defiance to the decencies of civilization.

The passage of laws prohibiting the importation of "foreign labor" was largely hastened by this condition of affairs.

When the right to labor in the state's grounds was reserved to its residents the moral and physical aspect of the villages underwent a great change. Now, as a result of their industry, not a few of the oystermen have attained to the dignity of shippers, employing others to do the rough work.

These men are proud of their forebears and hold to a rigid standard of honesty. Indeed, "the word of an oysterman" is a phrase that implies the most courageous and unflinching steadfastness. Contracts or written agreements are as little used in daily transactions as they are in the busiest rushes of the stock exchanges. If a planter tells a shipper that he will deliver a hundred barrels or bushels of oysters on a certain day at, say 40 cents, and in the meantime the market price rises to 70, there is no demur. A broken contract or an unpaid bill are things unknown in the cove.

Yet withal there exists among a certain class of oystermen a form of dishonesty against which the state has waged its hardest battle. It is a dishonesty which at once robs nature and future generations. Other states have fought it more or less successfully, and New Jersey seems to have solved the problem in what is known as its rough cull law.

In the first place it must be known that the bivalve is propagated by means of the spat, which is simply the eggs of the oyster. When discharged in its first state it floats freely and is carried in all directions in the waters of the bay and cove, in a short time being hatched into embryo oysters. Millions of these attach themselves to clean rough surfaces to which they can adhere in order to attain primary growth. Such lodging places are found on shells and stones in what are called the natural beds. The growth of an oyster during the first three months is amazing, but if the embryo cannot find a natural bed it soon dies. On the other hand, the fecundity of an oyster under proper conditions guarantees a never-failing supply. Biologists have calculated that each large oyster yields 30,000,000 good eggs. The sexes being equal in number, the average for five years would be 15,000,000 per year, and as each oyster is replaced by only one every five years, it is reasoned that 75,000,000 more young than are needed are produced. The deduction is that each egg stands one chance in 75,000,000 of becoming a 5-year-old oyster. The spat and the young oyster are prey for myriad creatures. Many of these that survive find short shrift. The superintendent recently received a shell about four inches long by two wide on which were fastened 467 young oysters. Crowding would cause the death of most of them, in the natural course of events, and probably twelve would reach the size of seed plants.

Before the passage of the rough cull law the natural beds were continually dredged over and everything suitable for lodging places removed, the lazy and "dishonest" oystermen taking the whole catch to his planting periauger, that, scow, boat, or other vessel whatsoever" not belonging to residents. The penalty was the seizure of boat and cargo. The desire for protection is as strong today as ever, an act prohibiting the importation of oystersmen from other states having been demanded, and passed, in 1899.

The natural beds, from the earliest known times have belonged to the citizens of the state who have been allowed to take them from all the oysters they dredged. But legislative enactments now restrict these privileges somewhat, the catching of oysters while in milk and at other specified times being prohibited as well as rough culling.

The oysters found in the natural beds are by no means the bivalves of commerce. The seed plants must be removed to the individual fisher's ground, where they are deposited after the separation of the bunches, in from two to four years they increase in size from the diameter of a quarter dollar to the "culls" and "primes" beloved of the epicures. From April 1 to June 15 is the seed oyster season. The handling of the marketable commodity begins in September and continues until the following spring. During the "freeze-up" season oysters in the scows and on the floats, where they are placed for fattening, are protected by blankets.

The police system by which marketable oysters are guarded from the poachers and pirates is interesting. The commission is equipped with swift guard boats which patrol the oyster grounds where each planter's beds are marked off by stakes and numbered with large brass tags. The numbers on the commissions map correspond to these, and if a dredger is found at work on another's lot he is liable to fine and imprisonment. An observatory, with sighting instruments, quadrant, and telescope, is located at Maurice river, and suspicious operators are viewed from here by the unwinking eye of the commissioner's engineers. In addition a secret service is maintained, and oystermen known to have been pilferers are carefully watched. The commission has vigorously prosecuted offenders against the rights of planters as well as those who have infringed upon the rough cull law, and has secured several convictions.

Recently a party of expert oyster-planters of Connecticut, with several biologists, visited the cove for the purpose of learning certain things about oyster culture; for while Connecticut, as well as Virginia and Maryland, ship a greater number of bivalves than New Jersey, the latter's product is noted for quality. The Jerseymen in turn inspected Connecticut grounds in Long island sound. They found that steam dredging was a feature of the business, tons of oysters being taken up in this way as against barrels by the hand-dredging process in Delaware bay. The oyster laws of the Garden state prohibit steam dredging, an argument truly ingenuous being advanced against it.

"If we permit steam to take the place of manual labor," say the legislators from Southern New Jersey, where the oyster vote is large and has powerful affiliations, "a monopoly of the industry will result. The rich planters will be able to take up such large quantities that the one-boat oystermen who operate in a small way will be forced out. And the oyster bottoms belong to the people."

Besides, the oystermen believe overproduction would lessen the price. Hence steam is blacklisted. While the commercial problem is thus considered, the purely scientific is by no means lost sight of.

There was a time when is was as vastly surprising news to some oysters that had sex. Few knew that its body contained liver, stomach and heart, which received colorless blood from the gills and sent it through the mass. Nowadays the study of the oyster comprises a liberal education. The planter who has an old age of comfortable retirement in view finds "book learning" a necessary ally. It follows that all the well equipped biologists are not those who write treatises or conduct experiments. Many of the cove's large operators might profitably take a scientific degree. Meanwhile, science and legislation combine to advance the industry, and in New Jersey, as in other coastwise states, the politician and the biologist here at least find common ground.

MAKING INROADS

Duluth Jobbers Rapidly Working Into Copper Country Trade.

Mining Towns All Reported to Be In Thriving Condition.

Short Notice of Excursion Responsible For Small Number.

"Duluth jobbers are working in on the copper country field in good shape," said Editor C. H. Kelsey of the Houghton Mining Gazette, who is at the Spalding as a member of the copper country party. Mr. Kelsey has been in the daily newspaper business in upper Michigan for fifteen or twenty years. He used to own a quarter interest in the Marquette Mining Journal, and retired from that paper to put in a large plant and morning paper at Houghton.

"Originally Detroit had a big trade up in upper Michigan. Chicago and Milwaukee, I think, now have the largest part of it, as a result of having steadily developed business relations that originated back in the early days before Duluth had any jobbers. So what progress Duluth has made it has had to fight for with markets that were already well intrenched. I am convinced that splendid headway is being made. Your grocery houses, your wholesale drug house and your hardware houses, in about the order named, I think have made the most headway.

"Houghton is the smallest of the three big towns in the copper country. What is known as Calumet is the largest. In reality this community of 40,000 people has no common municipal government. The Calumet & Hecla mine location settlement is composed of the village of Red Jacket, town of Laurium and the town of Calumet. It is all one thickly built community, and you step across the street from one into the limits of another. There is no general municipal government embracing all three.

"Houghton is having a rapid growth and has had since 1899. This is due to the discovery of important copper mining properties on the south range, and gives promise that there will be a population there equal to that on the older range. The mine formerly existing on the south range was the comparatively small Atlantic. Now we have the Isle Royale, Baltic, Trimountain and Champion, each closely adjoining the other. The Isle Royale is building stamp mills just east of town. Houghton has for years been the social, financial and political capital of the copper country.

"Our paper is doing well. Last year we did a publishing, printing and bindery business of $100,000. We have a perfecting press and all modern equipment."

A. D. Pettit, manager of the evening paper of the copper county—the Hancock Copper Journal—has been in the newspaper business there for six years. About a year ago he, as the publisher of Progress, a weekly paper, and another weekly, consolidated and began the publication of a daily. Mr. Pettit, who is stopping at the St. Louis, said this afternoon that this was his third visit to Duluth, and that he found fresh evidence on each occasion of this city's development.

"We have a town of 7500 to 8000 at Hancock," said he, "and we think its a pretty good town. It is developing rapidly now, as a result of the discovery of new mines.

"On the hill, 600 feet above the city of Hancock, is the Quincy mine. Then we have the Franklin, Arcadian, and the Isle Royale and Atlantic, as well as many new mines that are not yet fully developed. We now have one electric road running to Calumet, and are about to have two more routes. Another electric line is building from Hancock to Calumet by way of Lake Linden, while the Copper Range steam road is building from Houghton to Calumet via Hancock. The routes are quite different. When all are completed we shall have exceptionally free and easy community centers, and we expect it to result in mutual advantage. The copper country is in fine shape now. For a time people over there were chary of copper because of the reaction in the market, but confidence is becoming restored, and business is getting on a good basis.

"Many of our trades people were so unfortunate as to receive their invitations for this trip only the night before we started. They were unable then to make arrangements to leave their business on such short notice. I received mine last Sunday. There would have been many more of us here if a little longer notice had been given.

"We are glad to get closer to Duluth in spirit and trade. Duluth's jobbing trade has developed very rapidly in the copper country. I was surprised today to see the great hardware house you have here. I imagine that no member of our party who had not previously been through the Marshall-Wells house had any conception of how extensive it was. I think that this trip will do much to promote the trade relations that have developed between the copper country and Duluth."

James Hear, manager of the general mercantile house of H. F. Sutton & Co., of Lake Linden, talked enthusiastically about trade in his town, and foresaw much to come from the present trip.

"Lake Linden," said he, "is the location of the stamp mills of the Calumet and Hecla and other large mines. These mills employ 2000 or 3000 men, and are now running at full capacity."

"The Calumet and Hecla, if it keeps up its present rate of production, interjected Mr. Pettit, "will mine more copper than was produced in the entire United States eleven years ago."

"Lake Linden," continued Mr. Hoar, "has about 6000 people. Business with us is very prosperous. Your wholesale grocery, drug and hardware houses are doing a fine business up in our country. We are glad to get up here and improve our acquaintance with your people, and we are having a good time."

Local Court Reversed.

The supreme court yesterday handed down a decision in the case of Patrick Holden, appellant, against Mrs. Ellen O'Brien, respondent, in which the Duluth municipal court is reversed. The suit was to recover on a promissory note given on Sunday.

The court holds that the casual delivery of a note or contract on Sunday does not invalidate the document, but in this case several defenses were made, of which this was only one. A general verdict for the defendant was rendered and the court holds that in order to stand it must be made to appear on what issue the verdict was rendered.

Makes Large Lease.

Alfred Merritt has closed a lease for 400 acres on Pine island, in Lake Vermilion. There are promising iron prospects on the island, and $5000 was paid for the lease without any development work being done. The outcrop is said to be 200 feet wide and 800 feet long. But Peace Announcement Not Ready For Publication.

London, May 24.—The developments in the South African peace situation today bear out all the details cabled to the Associated Press. A member of the government said today: "You are perfectly correct in insisting that everything is practically settled and that the war is at an end. It may be, however, that several weeks will elapse before a definite announcement can be made. We want to give the Boer leaders every chance in their conferences with their followers, and that takes time."

THE BREAKFAST CUP

Can Bring Joy or Trouble.

Change in food and drink will sometimes make over even elderly people and restore them to natural health.

A man of 70 writes that at the age of 60 he began to break down and was a partial invalid until 67, when he concluded that coffee was one of the prime causes of his sickness, and began using Postum Food Coffee in its place with Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food and some fruit at his meals.

He says: "Now, at the age of 70, I am as strong and hearty as I was at 50. I would not go back to my old mode of living for a hundred thousand dollars."

This man was a pioneer in Illinois in 1867, later on was an early settler in North Dakota. He requests that his name shall not appear in print. Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Philadelphia, May 24.—The dual track meet between athletes representing Cornell and the university of Pennsylvania, were held on Franklin field this afternoon. The weather was very warm and threatening. By reason of a protest entered by the Pennsylvania has withdrawn two of the strongest members of her team, W. Baird and Irvine Orton.

Baird represented the university of Illinois in the intercollegiate contests last year and Orton competed in the exposition games at Buffalo under the colors of the Toronto Athletic club. These facts which are generally known, prevented these men from entering collegiate contests.

Now that the protests have been made Pennsylvania's faculty committee will take the matter in hand and records of all the athletics will be carefully looked into.

Cornell has also lost two of her best men. Frank M. Sears, the fastest sprinter on the team, and Capt. Young, who will not be able to compete on account of an injury.

New York, May 24.—Conditions were favorable today for one of the greatest Brooklyn handicaps ever run. The list of probable starters yas large and of extra high class, and according to the card, if all eighteen go, it will be the second largest field in the history of the race. A conservative estimate of the crowd to attend the race placed it at 35,000. The sport of racing has grown so in the estimation of the public that the attendances this year have been enormously increased even on the most ordinary days and the programs have been dult and unattractive.

Those who try to pick winners were divided in opinions as to the merits of the horses entered. Apparently first in favor were Blues, Advance Guard, Roehampton, Herbert and 3-year-olds Tom Hall and Sweet and Pentrose. But little is known here of the Western horse Monograph, but his races at Delmar park last fall were good. The regent, Eddie S. Ettlinger, Reskin, Kamara and Carbuncle were lightly weighted and therefore had the support of those who believe that weight tell against the horse that has to carry it.

The day was bright and warm, but there is a good breeze blowing. All lines of transportation were crowded with persons bound for Gravesend.

Reina wins the handicap; Advance Guard, second; Pentecost, third; Blues, fourth.

Cambridge, Mass., May 24.—More than usual interest was manifested today in the Harvard-Yale dual athletic meet on Soldiers' field, as it has been years since the college teams were considered so evenly matched. Rival sympathizers claimed victory for their contestants by a narrow margin. The day, which was cloudy, with showers before noon, improved later and by the time the games began the rain was shifting. A rather strong southwest wind was blowing and the temperature was 82. Summary:

440-yard run—First, Rust, Harvard; second, Lightner, Harvard; third, Bordman, Yale. Time, 50 4-5 seconds.

Score: Harvard, 7; Yale, 1.

In the 120-yard hurdles, Harvard won first and second places in both trial heats, thus taking away Yale's chance at the final. This will give Harvard a total score of 15 to Yale's 1.

New Haven, May 24.—Harvard won the first round in the Tennis tournament with Yale today, taking 5 matches in the singles to Yale's 1.

T. B. DUNSTAN DEAD.

At One Time Lieut.-Governor of Michigan.

Chicago, May 24.—Former Lieut. Governor T. B. Dunstan, of Michigan, died last night at the Auditorium. Death was caused by a complication of internal diseases for which he has been compelled in recent years to undergo several operations. Mr. Dunstan came to Chicago two months ago, and since that time has been under special treatment. He has been failing rapidly for some days. His wife and four children, one son from West Point and his oldest daughter from Vassar college, were summoned, and were present at his death.

Mr. Dunstan served several terms in the Michigan legislature and was prominent in business circles, having large interests in mines near Marquette, Mich. He was elected lieutenant governor at the same time Pingree was made governor. As president of the Michigan school of mines, Mr. Dunstan gained distinction in the work of technical education. He was president of the Victoria copper mine and he owned considerable stock in the Quincy, Adventure and Rhode Island mines.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

New York, May 24.—There was a full attendance at the Presbyterian general assembly today, when United States Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, and Rev. William J. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate, came to convey to the assembly the goodwill and greeting of the Methodist Episcopal church. Vice Moderator Noyes occupied the chair. Both spoke eloquently.

SUES BROOKE.

Countess of Buena Vista Deprived of Slaughter Privileges.

New York, May 24.—Suit was entered in the United States district court today by the countess of Vuena Vista against Gen. Brooke of the United States army, for $250,000. The countess alleges that Gen. Brooke abrogated rights held by her through inheritance to the privilege of conducting the slaughter house at Havana, and to the distribution of meats and the collecting of fixed charges for said meats. The countess claimed these privileges, by virtue of a special decree from the king of Spain, dated 1701.

The countess declared that the business under the privilege was successful and profitable until 1899. In that year, she alleged, Gen Brooke, then military governor of Cuba, issued an order to the effect that the hereditary privileges connected with the slaughter of cattle in Havana were terminated and declared null and void. This order the plaintiff alleges was in direct violation of a section of the treaty of Paris, stating that so long as the United States held possession of the island, life and property would be protected.

SENSATION

Caused By Baptist Minister's Attack on Roman Catholics.

Ct. Paul, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Archbishop Ireland wields a tremendous power in politics which he is using for the Romish church," declared Rev. T. J. Morgan, corresponding secretary of the Baptist Home Mission society, at the opening session of that organization today. He was discussing the obstacles to mission work in America and linked together "Romanism, Mormanism, Heathenism and Christian Science as the greatest hindrances to progress and the greatest enemies to Christianity and the nation." He further stated: "I cannot prove it absolutely, but I am morally certain that in the last election Mark Hanna, representing the Republican party, of which I am a member, formally agreed with Archbishop Ireland, representing a mass of voters, that in consideration of turning over these votes to the Republican party, the Roman church would be given concessions in the Indian schools. And when issues arose thereafter and Indian officials were inclined to oppose the claims of the Romanist with regard to the Indians, they were told by higher authority that a bargain had been made and must be carried out." It was the most sensational utterance during the anniversary meeting.

The executive board's report recommended that a conference be held soon in New York to arrange for a consolidation of this organization with the Woman's Baptist Home Mission society, of Chicago and the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission society of Boston. The work of the year in the United States, Alaska, Porto Rico, Eastern Cuba and Mexico was reviewed briefly.

Frank R. Hathaway, treasurer, reported that last year $570,741.25 was collected for missions, but that the society was still $13,000 in debt.

A communication was received from Bishop Doane and others of the Protestant Episcopal church asking for a conference to come to some agreement as to divorce and the marriage of divorced persons. It was said the Presbyterians had responded favorably to a similar communication.

The president appointed a committee of three to represent the Baptists at such conference, consisting of Dr. Henry G. Weston, of Pennsylvania; Dr. Alvah Nowell, of Massachusetts, and Dr. W. E. Meacham, of Washington, D. C.

Dr. Moss' resolution looking to the appointment of fifteen men to go, if need be, to look after closed co-ordination of the various Baptist societies was adopted. This resolution has now been adopted by all three of the bodies affected.

No sessions were held this afternoon, an excursion trip to the suburban lakes having been arranged.

BOY DROWNED.

Long Prairie Lad Loses Life While Bathing.

St. Paul, May 24.—A special from Long Prairie, Minn., to the Dispatch says: About 6 o'clock last evening, while bathing in the river at this place with two companions about his own age, Carl Shinaberger, aged 8 years, got beyond his depth in the swift current of the flooded stream and was drowned. Up to this noon the body had not been found.

TOLSTOI HAS TYPHOID.

London, May 24.—The agent in England of Count Tolstoi, the Russian novelist and reformer, telegraphed to the Associated Press today confirming the report that Tolstoi is suffering from typhoid fever.

CURED.

A West Superior Woman Cured of Cancer By Violet Rays.

The Actinic or Violet Ray treatment for cancer and consumption that is being used so successfully in New York city, and is now used in Duluth by the Herbaqueen Co., of 319 First avenue east, is very highly commended by those who have tried it.

Mrs. Pietterson, of 1614 Maryland avenue, West Superior, says: I very gladly endorse the new light cure for cancer, for I believe it saved my life. I was afflicted with cancer through my whole system, and was given up by doctors and friends as beyond cure.

I heard of the Herbaqueen Co.'s treatment for cancer and similar ailments, and decided to try them.

I soon began to improve and, after taking twenty-five of the light baths I am glad to say that I am entirely well and able to do my own house work.

I will gladly talk with anyone who is troubled as I was.

SHAVING THE DEAD.

"The union prices in Washington call for $5 for shaving dead men," said a barber to the Washington Star of the city, "but it is not always that this sum is obtained. The barber charges much according to the ability to pay. He seldom asks less than $2.50, and the amount runs all the way up from that to $5. In the case of rich people the maximum sum allowed by the union is charged. Undertakers always charge $5 if they shave or have a man shaved. Often they will shave a dead man themselves, without calling in a barber, and put in a bill for $5. They never charge less than that amount. Why is so much charged? Oh, of course, it is a good deal like the charges of doctors, druggists and undertakers, but in the case of a barber there is the additional expense of a razor. Razors that are used on dead men can not be used on live men afterward. Frequently a new razor has to be bought each time. That takes a large part of the fee. Then again the work is objectionable, of course. With some corpses it is anything else than pleasant. I don't think $5 is a large sum when everything is considered. We would always charge it, too, if we thought the people could pay."

HOLLAND SUPERIOR

To Other Submarine Boats Planned By American Inventors.

So Declares Commander Wainwright of the Naval Academy.

Advises Purchase of As Many Boats As Necessary.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Commander Richard Wainwright, U. S. N., commandant of the naval academy, whose work in connection with the destruction of the Spanish torpedo boats at Santiago made him a national hero, was a leading witness before the house committee on naval affairs this week on the subject of submarine navigation, and particularly the advisability of the United States ordering the construction of additional submarine boats of the Holland type. Commander Wainwright explained that he was very familiar with this subject, having studied it ever since it was first brought to his attention, when he was chief intelligence officer of the navy. For several years the Holland has been stationed at the academy for the benefit of the naval cadets, and Gen. Wainwright has observed it very closely. He was positive in his assertion that the Holland boat was far superior to any other boat planned or completed by American inventors. The Lake boat, he said, was a subsurface boat, and while it mighe be very useful for mining, counter-mining and cutting cables, the great objection to it was that it must work entirely beneath the surface, and while submerged must feel its way around in the dark, as there is now no method of seeing under water, and he did not believe there would ever would be one, "unless we use the rays." On the other hand, the Holland boat rose to the surface, delivered its torpedo and almost instantly dived, the facility with which it was handled enabling it to escape any shots from the enemy. Representative Dayton of West Virginia proposed that the government should not construct any torpedo boats, but should wait until war was declared or about to be declared and then build them, as these vessels could be constructed, so it was claimed by the naval constructors, in a very short time. Commander Wainwright vigorously combatted this idea, saying, "If you get in a war with a first-class naval power you won't have time to build anything, for it will strike quick and hard. You must buy your guns before you can shoot them."

"How many boats would you advise us to purchase?" asked Mr. Dayton.

"As many boats as necessary," replied Commander Wainwright, somewhat enigmatically. "If we let go of the Holland boat now we will have to take it up again later and pay for all the experiments made by other nations. I would look to see how many boats are necessary to keep this company going and order that number."

He warned the committee that unless something was done in this direction the United States would lose the submarine boat as they had lost the Hotchkiss Maxim guns. Commander Wainwright opposed the views of Admiral Melville, of whose opinion he said he had a high regard on engineering matters. As a naval weapon he considered the Holland vastly superior to the Lake boat. A question by Representative Foss brought out the fact that the naval officers were so interested in the development of submarine warfare that it is never necessary for the secretary to assign any of them to go down in submarine boats as there are always a sufficient number of applications. He treated the accident to the Fulton as of no consequence, saying that the machinery often went wrong and there was no more danger from escaping gasoline than from escaping steam. He said the failure of the Plunger, the first boat built by this company, was due to the fact that it was wrongly constructed by reason of the navy department insisting on certain changes being made in it. The only submarine boat in the world which he considered approached the Holland boat in its efficiency was the new type of French submarine boat, which, if all reports were true, was almost equal to the Holland type. Lieut. Lawrence Spear, a United States naval constructor, who has become so interested in the subject that he has surrendered his position with the navy department, followed with technical testimony as to the value of the boat. A number of other officers of the navy and representatives of the Holland company were also heard.

Sometimes men in congress proceed with their ordinary duties year after year without attracting any great attention to themselves and then suddenly spring into prominence by the advocacy for or opposition to some important measure. This was true in the case of John K. Stewart of New York, who made a fight in the house against the organization of what would have been a pretty severe tax upon the people of the city of Washington. Until a few years ago there were two municipal corporations in the district, one known as Washington, and the other as Georgetown. In each of these municipalities there existed a gas company. Both of these companies are owned by the same people. The capital stock of the larger company is $2,000,000 and that of the smaller company somewhere about $500,000. The company has physical assets worth, at a liberal estimate, $5,500,000, and it was proposed to consolidate and capitalize at $13,750,000 without, of course, the payment of an additional dollar in the treasury of the combined corporation. In other words, the gas people planned a nice little scheme whereby they proposed to add about $9,000,000 worth of water to their stock. Everything went along smoothly and the friends of the corporation were so confident of the success of their scheme, that their stock jumped something like 20 points on the local market. But Mr. Stewart, as a member of the district committee, fought this bill, fought it to a finish. He worked day and night gathering statistics and information and he convinced the house that to enact this bill into law would be to set a dangerous precedent because it would mean the endorsement of a trust right at the national capital. Besides this it would preclude the possibility of a reduction of the price of gas to consumers in Washington for a generation. Although there was a clear majority in favor of the bill until Mr. Stewart took up the cudgel in defense of the people of Washington, his arguments were so clear and so forceful that he soon won the fight and it will be a long time before another attempt will be made to force $9,000,000 worth of watered stock of the Washington Gas Light company upon investors. It is worthy of note in this connection that the stock quotations show a falling off in the quoted value of Gas light stock, of $1,780,000 since the defeat of the consolidation scheme.

A reform movement has been started in Washington for the double purpose of more rigidly enforcing the liquor laws and bringing about the enactment of a law that will close up business houses that keep open on the Sabbath. A local organization that is leading in the agitation for a Sunday law detailed scouts to patrol a certain part of the city below Pennsylvania avenue and take account of all places of business that were open. Then scouts went over all that part of Washington south of the avenue from Georgetown to the navy yard and counted 330 stores open and doing business. No account was taken of drug stores and lunch rooms which are not included in the list of places at which the proposed law is directed. A similar canvass will be made in other sections of the city and when the statistics have been arranged they will be presented to the house committee on the District of Columbia in charge of the Sabbath observance bill, as an indication of the need of such legislation. The canvass was made in order to refute the statement of local officials that Washington business men observed the Sabbath and that there was no occasion for action by congress. Sentiment in the house has not been ascertained definitely, but the committee that will pass on the bill is said to be opposed to hasty action so the chances are that the reform measure will not be reported at this session of congress. Advocates of a Sunday law say they will keep up their fight until the bill is either passed or defeated.

The temperance reformers started their movement against the saloons by having the managers of the cafes at the capitol arrested for selling liquor without license. For many years liquor has been dispensed to thirsty statesmen and others at both house and senate ends and although efforts have been made repeatedly by the advocates of temperance to stop this practice they have invariably met with defeat as the senate and house committees on public buildings and grounds have supported the managers of the cafes. At the trial of those arrested this week the point was made by counsel for the accused that the alleged offense was committed on a reservation over which congress had exclusive supervision and that therefore the courts of the District of Columbia had no jurisdiction. The cases are still pending but the chances are that a way will be found out of the difficulty and that congressmen will continue to present themselves at the bars of the house and senate with astonishing regularity.

Representative Rucker, of Missouri, a few days ago received the cheerful information that he had been indicted by a Missouri grand jury for playing poker in violation of the gambling laws of the state. Several members of the house commiserated with him and expressed indignation over the attempt of the grand jury to interfere with their colleague's arrangements. Some of them inorder to accentuate his predicament offered to go to Missouri and defend him when the case is called in court. Mr. Rucker declined these profers of assistance, remarking dryly that as he had served three terms as district attorney and as judge on a circuit court bench for six years he thought he could take care of his interests alone. Besides, he said, if the case became too complicated for his legal attainments he could obtain the assistance of a justice of the supreme court of Missouri, who had been indicted for the same offense. The alleged offense of which the grand jury took notice was committed last fall when Mr. Rucker and a party of friends, at one of which several Democratic politicians of Missouri were on a fishing trip on a stream in Charlton county, known as the "Charlton cut off." Mr. Rucker explains that while some of the party did play, the game did not reach the dignity of sure enough poker, for the limit at it was penny-ante, with beans as chips. He also admits that the game continued through several hours, but affirms that no one lost more than 30 cents. "Its a low stick," said the congressman, "and it was instigated by some soak that thinks he's smart. When I locate the responsible person I shall retaliate in a way he will not regard as funny. The members of the fishing party were the guests of Charlton county in a sense and this is the way they are treated. By, my, you know that when the game was over the beans were put in the soup pot. But somebody shall hear from this." And the congressman shook his fist and tore his hair. Mr. Rucker's party consited of seventy-five men, nearly all of whom were indicted.

BEAUTIFUL SUNSET

Caused at San Juan By Volcanic Dust.

San Juan, P. R., May 24.—The most brilliant sunset ever seen here was witnessed last evening. It was caused by the reflection of the rays of the sun through an atmosphere laden with smoke and other volcanic matter. matter. After sunset the horizon, from west to north, and the sky line to a considerable height, were a livid red, behind a curtain of billowy dark clouds. The glare was reflected on the ocean and produced a most beautiful effect. The streets and the ocean front were thronged by an excited crowd.

The superstitious people of the lower classes were preparing for the end of the world, which had been predicted for Thursday last. On that day the peons in several places refused to work, the children remained away from school, and the inhabitants of the rural districts attended a special mass.

In various towns fairs and theatrical performances are being given for the benefit of the Martinique sufferers. The French consul here has forwarded $1210, which has been collected from French residents of this island.

UNGRATEFUL PEOPLE.

Peter S. McNally, of Boston, who holds the world's record as a life-saver, having saved more than 300 persons from drowning, makes the surprising statement that the most ungrateful mortals he has ever come in contact with are those same persons he has saved from drowning. McNally is the champion long-distance swimmer of the world.

"I am a strong swimmer," said the life-saver when seen by a World reporter, "and life-saving has always been a natural instinct with me; but when I think of the many people I have saved from drowning and the little gratitude shown by them it almost disgusts me with the whole business.

"I have never been a professional life-saver, all of my rescues having been on occasions where I happened to be present when I was most needed. At no time when hauling some half-drowned person from the water, or perhaps being myself dragged down by them in their struggles, have I ever expected any reward, but it certainly hurts one's pride to meet the same persons whose life you have saved several days later and have that person pass you by without even so much as a nod of recognition.

"I have received medals, of course, for the work I have done, any amount of them, from various humane societies and a gold medal from congress.

"Only two summers ago I rescued two boys who had gone beyond their depth while bathing on the beach at Narragansett pier. The mother of these boys, whom I afterward learned was a prominent New York society woman, came rushing down to the water's edge as I carried them in, both half dead, and because I appeared to treat them, to her mind, somewhat roughly in putting them through the usual method of resuscitation, she struck me over the head with her parasol. Nor would she even tell me her name or where she hailed from when I spoke to her.

"I had a rather humorous experience in the year 1899, when I rescued a woman from drowning in Portland harbor, which might give an idea of the generosity of some people.

"This woman fell from the gangplank of a crowded excursion boat and I dived after her from the boat's upper deck. I had some dimculty in getting her out, as the wash from the boat kept the paddle-wheel carried us under the wharf. But when I did finally get her ashore the woman's husband handed me two silver quarters as my reward.

"While I stood gazing in a half-dazed manner at the silver and wondering if it was all a joke, an old fisherman who stood near by and who had seen the whole affair consoled me by telling me that I was a foolish young man, and that perhaps if I had let her drown my reward might have been doubled.

"Another experience which I will long remember was one I had about fifteen years ago while saving a longshoreman who fell from Hettinger's wharf, in Charlestown. I knew that I would have no show in the water with this fellow if he should try to struggle with me, as a drowning man always will, particularly if he has gone down a couple of times, so I picked up a half brick lying on the dock and, with it in my hand, jumped after him. Before he could grab me I struck him over the head with the half brick, rendering him unconscious. The rest, of course, was easy. All I had to do was to keep him afloat and swim with him to the shore. Would you believe it, that fellow taunted for me for three weeks with a loaded whip, threatening to kill me on sight.

"I met this same man at an entertainment given for the Charlestown almshouse about two years ago, fully thirteen years after I had saved his life, and when I was pointed out to him as Peter McNally, who rescued him from drowning, he came over to me, and we shook hands. This is what he said: 'You nearly killed me once, Peter. I've had it in for you a long time, but it's all right now; you're forgiven.'"

TOO MUCH SEWING

Women Should Be Careful Not to Overdo Themselves.

The Experience of Mrs. Prazak, Wife of the Town Clerk of Millersville, Minnesota.

The woman with the responsibility of a house and family on her shoulders has always been given to overdoing herself. As a result almost every day we hear of one breaking down. Her nerves have given away or her strength has failed. Such was the experience of Mrs. Prazak, wife of J. M. Prazak, town clerk of Millersville, Douglas county, Minn. She says:

"I had been sewing a great deal and it was too much for me. Between that and my household duties I began to be very nervous, I had no appetite and there was a feeling of heaviness around my heart, so bad at times that it seemed as if I couldn't get any air. I was so nervous always that any little thing would upset me. Nothing that I could do gave me any relief and it became so bad that I was obliged to neglect my housework. I had nervous prostration.

"Some time in March, after I had been suffering for several months, I happened to get a book that gave the statements of people who had suffered from complaints similar to mine and had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I thought that if Pink Pills had done so much good in other cases they might benefit me also and began taking them. I felt a little better and that made me willing to give them a thorough trial. I took the pills regularly for two months and by that time my health was completely restored.

"I am glad of this chance to tell how easily and thoroughly I was cured by Pink Pills for Pale People. I keep them in the house all the time and strongly recommend them to all who are afflicted as I was."

The pills which cured Mrs. Prazak act directly on the blood and nerves and in that are different from any other medicine. They cure locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, after-effects of the grip, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold at all druggists, or will be sent direct from Dr. Williams' Medicine company, Schnectady, N. Y., postpaid, on receipt of price, fifty cents per box; six boxes for two dollars and a half. Send for free booklet of medical advice.

IF YOU ARE SICK

Lay your prejudice aside, say you are ready to be cured, that you actually wish to be well and Dr. Mitchell will positively cure you. He has cured hundreds of every known disease; his treatment knows no failure, but is truly a cure for incurables; it brings happiness and health out of darkness and despair; it gives hope to the hopeless, health and strength to every one who will avail himself of its benefits. Here are a few testimonials of the many thousands who have been cured by Healer Mitchell:

Mr. Anton Peterson, a man who is a well known stone mason and an old resident of Duluth, had rheumatism and paralysis of one arm, which caused him a great deal of suffering, after trying physicians, who failed to give him any relief, was cured by Dr. Mitchell. Dr. Mitchell has also successfully treated three other members of the family, all of whom are enthusiastic over what the doctor has done for them. This statement can be verified by calling at 617 Twenty-third avenue west.

A lady well known in Duluth says: "I was a miserable sick woman, my throat and lungs were in a serious condition. Now all this is gone, my appetite is better, I am well. If any one doubts the efficiency of your wonderful treatment you can refer them to me."

Mr. Silas Williams, of Mahtowa, writes: "After taking treatment from you for only four weeks my lung trouble disappeared and has not returned. I know I am cured, for it is now over two years that I took Dr. Mitchell's treatment. If he can cure a case as bad as mine in four weeks he ought to cure the worst case on record in three months. I will be glad to tell any one what I think of your treatment."

Mrs. Lautwe says: "I was sick with female trouble for a number of years and had been treated by the best physicians without deriving any benefit, and had not hoped to live through the summer, for I had cancer of the womb, but I am very thankful to be able to say that after taking Dr. Mitchell's magnetic treatment I am a well woman." Any one doubting this statement can verify same by calling at 125 North Fifty-sixth avenue west.

Mr. Rankin, of Duluth, was going blind. He says: "I am now cured an can see as well as ever. I am a blacksmith with Smith & Alger, and will be pleased to substantiate this statement."

Mr. Burel, from the range, had a cancer on his face, which was cured by Dr. Mitchell's treatment, after having tried everything without getting relief.

With this wonderful magnetic treatment sexual weakness disappears as if by magic and the normal functions are restored quickly, and positively. Many, after repeated trials of many remedies and famous physicians, had abandoned all hope, have by Dr. Mitchell's treatment in a few days been restored to health.

The village of Monoque, three miles north of this city, was seriously damaged, Ambrose Scholl's house was destroyed, its occupants being compelled to seek refuge in the cellar. Dozens of other houses were unroofed or blown down.

ENJOYING THE DAY

Copper Country Visitors Being Entertained By Duluth Hosts.

Fine Banquet Prepared For Tonight---An Attractive Program.

Formal Reception of the Guests at Board of Trade.

About 105 of the best representatives of the commercial interests of the copper country, who arrived by special train last evening as guests of Vice President Fitch of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road are being well entertained in Duluth today.

On arrival here yesterday afternoon they were met by a large delegation of business men and the Third Regiment band, who escorted them to the Board of Trade trading room. Here Mayor Hugo welcomed the visitors to the city, and John McLennan, of Hancock, responded happily on the part of the invaders. Last evening the visitors spent according to their own fancy. This forenoon about 11 o'clock the visitors left on the steamer Iroquois, as guests of Capt. W. H. Singer, manager of the White Line Transportation company. The captain took the copper country people down the bay and for a short ride out on the lake, returning about 1 o'clock.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock sharp the party will leave the Spalding hotel for a drive around the Boulevard, as guests of the business men of Duluth. At 8 o'clock this evening a banquet will be given at the Spalding hotel, at which J. L. Washburn will act as toastmaster. It is probable that A. B. Pottit, manager of the Hancock Evening Journal, will make the chief response for the visitors, though plenty of room has been left under the head of "There are others." The list of toasts will necessarily be of an impromptu character and will not be determined until later in the day. The program for the banquet, as far as it can be outlined at this time, is as follows:

The menu that will be prepared for this evening's event will be as follows:

Of the best feelings of mankind, which grow
More tender, as we every day behold,
Than that all softening, overpowering knell,
The tocsin of the soul—the dinner bell"
—Byron.

The visitors are still talking about the warmth of the welcome they received on their arrival here last evening. The special train provided by Mr. Fitch, composed entirely of new cars, pulled into the Union depot almost on time. As it came into the trainshed the people on the train could hear evidence from Flaaten's Third Regiment band that they were expected. As they alighted they could see the shed and steps black with people. When all had appeared, and were awaiting opportunity to form in line of march, some of their leaders started the copper country yell:

"Ra, ra, ra!
Who are we?
Copper country,
Copper country!
Don't you see!
Ra, ra, ra!"

Along Superior street to Third avenue west large numbers of people had gathered in anticipation of showing greeting to the guests. When all had marched into the big exchange room of board of trade it was fairly well filled. The band took a position in a farther corner and played. Another copper country yell was repeated with gusto, and E. L. Millar, beaming forth a happy smile of welcome, and clad in an effective negligee costume, mounted the side of the trading pit and introduced Mayor Hugo.

The mayor's address of welcome was along the line of what might be accomplished if all the cities of the north and south shores of Lake Superior would pull together. He referred to a remark made to him by a Superior man the other day, who recalled that whenever Duluth and Superior went after anything together they had always gotten it. He declared that Duluth was anxious to form an alliance with both shores of Lake Superior—with the south shore as far as the copper country, at least, and with the Two Harbors and Grand Marais on the north shore—so that the joint interests of the whole section might be urged with a solid front on the part of all the cities represented. He spoke particularly of the progress that this visit should make in that direction.

The mayor address was made in his customary felicitious style, which tended to place the visitors at home at once. His address proper was as follows:

"It affords me great pleasure to extend to the visitors from the copper country a welcome as warm as the weather. I may add that this weather was gotten up expressly for your benefit; it is not the kind we are accustomed to at all. The city of Duluth is yours from this time on. I don't know that we have much to show you that will interest you, but I think we have a few things. I may add that I fully believe that this visit will be the beginning of many similar in character. We want you to visit us on every occasion, and we shall want some day to visit you. We are proud of our city and we have reason to believe that this pride is shared, in a considerable degree, by other Lake Superior communities. Duluth seeks closer relationship with these places on both the north and the south shores. There may be times when united effort will be desiable for one or the other and working in that way we will be able to wield an influence that in most cases will be successful.

"Minnesota, to a large extent, supplies the world with ore. Duluth is one of the great wheat markets of the world, and as a flax market it now leads all others. We trust that we are not always going to be mere producers of ore. We hope that in the years to come we shall derive many benefits from the manufacture of the product here and elsewhere in the Lake Superior region.

"This meeting is of interest to all. I trust that your visit will tend to cement the friendship of Duluth and copper country people, and broaden their common sphere of action. Again, on behalf of the city of Duluth and the Duluth Commercial club, I welcome you to Duluth."

John McLennan, of Hancock, was called forth from among the ranks of the visitors to accept in their behalf the welcome given by Mayor Hugo, who was given a hearty round of applause as he stepped down. Mr. McLennan gave formal thanks for the mayor's greeting, and added:

"The mayor said that the weather was prepared for our special benefit, but we are tenacious of our own prerogative. We brought this weather with us.

"We are pleased to come to your beautiful and enterprising city. We can well understand now why it has been named the Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas. You have ample reason to be proud of your city, and we are glad to feel an exceptional interest in it. Our interests do not clash. We produce largely one article that does not compete with you, and you furnish us with the necessities of life.

"Your welcome has been a most hearty one. But if you had extended anything less than the whole city we would not be satisfied. However, referring to the mayor's allusion to your shortage of jail facilities, we can say that we hope to so conduct ourselves as to relieve you of the necessity of adding to them on our account.

"I have no hesitation in saying that we believe that our stay in Duluth will be as pleasant and agreeable as the welcome has been."

The trip from Calumet to Duluth is reported to have been a most agreeable one. The handsome cars provided furnished the maximum of comfort for a day ride, and steps had been taken to make full provision for the wants of the inner man by stocking a large baggage car with the best things in the refreshment line. The personnel of the party was not so large as had been looked for because in over half the instances the invitations were not received in time for the business men to arrange their affairs at this busy time of the year so they could make the trip. It is said that much disappointment was felt by those that could not come, and it is regretted here that the invitations were not sent out earlier by the jobbers. As it is, the party is made up largely as follows:

F. M. Van Poppelen, A. M. McLennan, J. W. Lalgne, S. Seagal, A. Finlup, J. C. McLennan, P. S. Anderson, Jos. Schuite, A. M. Schulte, Ed Haas, O. Maywoun, E. C. Griffin, P. J. O'Donnell, E. F. HOAR WAS EFFECTIVE

Those Opposed to His Views Admired His Earnestness.

Pleaded Cause of Filipinos and For American Honor.

Urged a Pause In the Mad Career of Imperialism.

Chicago, May 24.—Walter Wellman, in his Washington correspondence to the Record-Herald, says: One of the greatest speeches ever heard in the American congress fell yesterday from the lips of George Frisbie Hoar, the "old man eloquent" from Massachusetts. It was an oration which will live in history among the classics of the senate. It recalls the days of the fathers in that body.

Senator Hoar pleaded the cause of the Filipino people. He pleaded for American honor. He begged the government to pause in its mad career of imperialism, of conquest, of substitution, of the doctrine of force for that of kindness and justice. He appealed to the people of the greatest of republic to return to their earlier ideals. He warned senators that the war of three years would go on for three centuries in some form or other, as the desire for liberty could never be crushed out of the human breast.

In vivid words he contrasted the policy which the United States has pursued in Cuba with that it has followed in the Philippines. "From one we have just come with honor, from the other we have come with nothing of honor."

Six hundred millions of treasure and nearly 10,000 lives—the flower of our youth —have we sacrificed in the Phinppines, he declared, and for what? To gain the undying hatred of the Filipino people.

The army in the main is just and humane, he said, but the responsibility was not upon the soldiers; it rested upon those who declared and maintained policy of subjugation. Where a superior race attempts the conquest of an inferior race, cruelty, atrocity, degradation or both will inevitably follow.

No such brilliant speech as this has been heard in the senate chamber for a quarter of a century. Men who don't all agree with the argument of the senator from Massachusetts are among the most enthusiastic admirers of his art. After speaking for more than two hours to a rapt audience—to an audience which, both upon the floor and in the galleries, was as still as can be—Senator Hoar closed with an eloquent passage which brought applause from many and tears from a few. Senators of both parties and of all shades of opinion on the Philippine question joined in the demonstration of approval.

Senator Spooner, who is soon to essay an answer to this sweeping denunciation, this touching appeal, started the applause. Republicans and Democrats took it up, despite the rules of the senate. And when the presiding officer warned the galleries that "expressions of approval or disapproval are not permitted under the rules of the senate," Mr. Bacon called the attention of the chair to the fact that most of the applause had come from the floor. It was a remarkable closing of a noteworthy speech.

Profoundly impressed were all who watched and heard the white-haired old man today pour out his wealth of feeling, of culture, of intellect and of soul. The rankest imperialist sat only to admire. Young Mr. Beveridge was as one in a dream. Senator Lodge as in a trance. Mr. Spooner heroically taking notes like one who realizes the desperate nature of the task before him in framing an answer. Mr. Carmack so beside himself with joy that as the aged senator sat down he could express his feelings in no other way than by violently pounding his desk.

The question of questions which has to be answered—and it can't be answered in a speech nor in the senate in any way, nor in one year or one campaign—is whether or not this wonderful old man from the star of Webster and Sumner is a poet-dreamer of days and things that have passed or an inspired prophet of the judgment that is to come. This answer must some day be given by the American people, and as a preparation therefor they can do no better than read what the senator from Massachusetts yesterday so beautifully said to the silent, eager senate.

OPENINGS

In Revenue Cutter Service and Examinations June 17.

Washington, May 24.—New and young blood is to be infused into the revenue cutter service as a result of the passage of the bill to reorganize the service. This bill provides for the retirement of officers who have reached the age of 64 years, or who have seen thirty years' service. It will result in the retirement of ten or more of the older officers, and the promotion of that number from the lower grades, and the vacancies created at the foot of the list are to be filled by the appointment of cadets.

In order to fill these vacancies the civil service commisison has issued notices that examinations will be held on June 17, 18 and 19, at various cities throughout the country. Under the regulations of the treasury department applicants must not be less than 18 nor more than 25 years of age, of vigorous constitution, physically sound and well formed, and not less than five feet three inches in height, of good moral character and unmarried.

Service in the revenue cutter service is even more desirable than in the army or navy. Because of the fewer number of officers promotion is more rapid, while the grades and pay are approximately the same as in the military and naval branches of the government. A cadet does not have to serve so long before he gets his commission. After he is appointed he goes aboard the practice ship Chase, if he enters the service in summer he goes off on a cruise, returning to the vicinity of the naval academy at Annapolis in the winter, where he studies until the following spring, when he goes off on another cruise, repeating the winter program in the second year. After two years the cadet gets a commission as third lieutenant. While serving as a cadet he gets a salary of $500 a year, and as third lieutenant $1400 a year. On promotion to a second lieutenancy he gets $1500 a year; as first lieutenant $1800, and as captain $2500. In addition to salary, there are certain allowances, etc., such as rations, medical attendance, etc., which are furnished free by the government.

It is announced by the civil service commission that eligibles to appointment, as a result of the present and future examinations, will be certified in accordance with the civil service law and rules." This will almost certainly insure the selection of a greater percentage of young men who are residents of interior and Pacific coast states than has formerly been the case. The civil service regulations require that each state shall have its quota of appointments in each branch of the service, based on the population of each. A glance at the register of the revenue cutter service shows that nearly all of the commissioned officers were appointed from states bordering on the Atlantic coast, from Maine to Georgia, while the Middle, Western and Pacific coast states have been neglected almost entirely. If the announcement of the commission is carried out, candidates from Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Washington, Oregon and other Middle, Western and Pacific coast states will have the first call. But the examination is almost equal to that for admission to West Point and Annapolis.

Applicants from Minnesota may take this examination at St. Paul, Mankato or Duluth; from Wisconsin at Milwaukee, La Crosse, Stevens Point, Chippewa Falls, Ashland or Marinette; from North Dakota, at Fargo, Grand Forks or Pembina; from South Dakota, at Deadwood, Mitchell, Watertown or Aberdeen; from Iowa, at Des Molnes, Sioux City, Fort Madison or Mason City.

there was every disposition in official circles and on the part of the French embassy to defer the ceremonies until another day in deference to the memory of the deceased, yet they felt bound to carry forward the program.

All through the past winter Lord Pauncefote had been a sufferer from intermittent attacks of asthma and rheumatic gout, but he bravely kept on his feet as much as possible, and generally strove to keep up his active duties, though it was evident that the effort it caused was great. In the early part of March the ambassador went to North Carolina on a visit to George Vanderbilt at Baltimore and stayed there for about a fortnight in the hope of recuperating from his affliction in the Carolina pines. He returned to Washington about the middle of the month with his sufferings but little abated. In April there came another severe attack, and from that until his death the ambassador had been confined almost continuously to his bed and his strength had been slowly leaving him. He suffered pain from his swollen limbs so intense as to bring toward the last temporary delirium, and to gain rest for him Dr. Jung, of this city, and Dr. Osler, of Baltimore, his attending physicians, found it necessary to administer opiates, though these were given most cautiously in fear of detriment to his heart.

London, May 24.—The news of the death of Lord Pauncefote, the British ambassador at Washington, this morning, was conveyed by a representative of the Associated Press to the foreign office and the United States embassy. The officials were greatly shocked, and expressed the deepest sympathy with the widow and a realization of the loss which both coutries have sustained. The foreign office representatives were thunderstruck, as they had no idea that the ambassdor's condition had been critical. No action particularly affected, as, apparently, will be taken, in all probability, except the sending of private messages of condolence, before Monday next.

The Rt. Hon. Lord Pauncefote of Preston, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., was first ambassador to the United States and dean of the diplomatic corps in Washton, was born in Munich, Bavaria, 74 years ago, and was the issue of one of the most ancient of British families, whose history is founded in the "Doomsday book." One, Sir Grimald Pauncefote was knighted by Sir Edward Bobun, at the taking of Gloucester Castle during the war of the Bacons, and obtained from him the lioncels whole have constituted the armorial bearings of the family ever since. Sir Grimald married an heiress in the church of Much Cowarne, in Herefordshire. There is still to be seen an effigy of the Pauncefote, who sailed with Prince Edward to Tunis in 1270, and was taken prisoner by the Saracens, and whose wife is supposed to have obtained his release by sending her right hand as a ransom to the Infidels.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, as he was known when he came to Washington, was educated at Paris and Geneva. He at first adapted the military profession, but finding this life unsuitable to his tastes, he began his forensic studies at the Inner Temple. He practiced as a conveyance before he went to Hong Kong to become attorney general and draft a code of civil procedure. In 1872 he was knighted and appointed chief justice of the Leeward islands. After presiding on the bench for some years, he returned to England to succeed Lord Knutsford as the legal assistant to the under secretary of state at the colonial office. He declined the chief justiceship of Ceylon, but accepted the legal assistant under secretaryship at the foreign office tendered to him by Lord Derby. New honors were crowded upon him. Lord Beaconsfield gave him the ribbons of the Bath and the colonial order, and Lord Granville selected him as the permanent under secretary of state for foreign affairs. For six years he held this office and discharged its duties in a manner to mark him for further distinction. He was sent to Washington in 1889, first as minister and later as first ambassador. His service has been an unbroken record of successful diplomacy, in recognition of which he was raised to the British peerage.

The Behring sea negotiations were among his earliest works of note and it was his familiarity with that difficult subject that led to his selection by the foreign office for the post at Washington. The arbitration treaty negotiated with Secretary Olney was the forerunner of the great work accomplished at The Hague; and it may be said that it embodied some of the most important principles of the great general convention regulating arbitration afterwards framed by The Hague conference. Then came a number of reciprocity treaties and arrangements involving a vast amount of study and work, all of which were perfected as the executive branch of our government could co-operate with Lord Pauncefote. Soon after Secretary Hay assumed office, Lord Pauncefote began the task which he himself regarded as the greatest accomplishment of his busy life, namely, to forever set at rest the questions growing out of the old Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and he entered with energy again upon negotiations, the result of which was the framing of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty recently ratified. For these valuable services the British government did Lord Pauncefote the honor to three times extend the term of his service at Washington, which would otherwise have ceased when he attained the age of 70 years.

"You have shown by this act that something new had taken birth between the nations; that they might be united by a bond of disinterested sympathy and of mutual good will, and that those ideals of ustice and of liberty for which our fathers fought and bled together 121 years since had really borne fruit in the hearts of men.

"A little humanity has won its way into international relations and three years ago we beheld representatives from all nations fathered together to devise means of ensuring the maintenance of peace between the nations. It is a happy coincidence that even while I am speaking here, the youthful and generous sovereign who had summoned the peace conference at The Hague, and the president of the French republic, are together in St. Petersburg. Thus we may behold everywhere, even in the remotest regions of the earth, a manifest expression of the same sentiments of union by and between the highest and supreme representatives of nations.

"Nor are those mere barren manifestations. The world, gradually gaining in self-consciousness, begins to frown more and more severely on those who seek to disturb its peace, and when we measure the work accomplished and the advance made since Washington and Rochambeau fought together for the good of humanity, we may well conclude that they have not combatted in vain.

"This monument shall bear witness to this fact, and shall endure as a symbol thereof in the eyes of the generations to come."

GEN. PORTER'S ADDRESS.

Following the French ambassador, Gen. Horace Porter, the United State's ambassador to France, spoke as follows:

Two years ago it became my pleasant duty to take part in the dedication of the statue of the distinguished French marshal erected in his native city, Vendome. When upon that occasion I saw our country's flags everywhere displayed from the housetops, heard our national airs played through all the streets and witnessed the touching demonstrations of the people without regard to class, expressive of their sympathy for America, I felt that the effect of the treaty of friendship and alliance made a century and a quarter ago, was still potent for good.

Upon returning from the land of Rochambeau, it is an especial pleasure to participate in the inauguration of his statue in the land of Washington. Two countries claim a share in the glory which illumined his career. His remains repose on the banks of the Loire; it is fitting that his statue should stand on the banks of the Potomac.

In the heart of the nation's capital, in presence of this vast assemblage of representative citizens of the old world and the new, in memory of a contest in which French and American blood moistened this same soil in battling for a common cause, we meet to dedicate a statue in honor of a hero of two continents—the illustrious Rochambeau.

Its purpose is to recall the record of imperishible deeds, to testify that his name is not a dead memory but a living reality; to quicken our sense of appreciation and emphasize the fidelity of our affection. In erecting yonder statue in honor of this great representative soldier, America has raised constructively, a monument in the memory of every Frenchman who fought for the cause of her national independence. Its dedication celebrates the joint victory which terminated a struggle that gave freedom to the American colonies and consecrated all the New World eventually to liberty and the rights of man.

To fully appreciate the genuiness of Rochambeau's character, as exemplified in his American campaign, we must recollect that he was a member of the old French nobility and the wearer of decorations bestowed by royal hands, yet coming here to gain battles in the interest of advanced republican principles. It was not his own country for which he was fighting; he had no intention of remaining here to share in the prosperity which would follow success; he therefore did not have the powerful stimulus of patriotism to animate him. He came to our shores with a proud army, handsomely equipped, brilliantly uniformed and disciplined in the rigid school of a leading military power of the old world, to find himself associated with the modest yeomanry of the colonies who constituted the American forces, who were not supplied with clothing enough to cover their honorable wounds, and the march of whose shoeless battalions could be traced by the blood which flowed from their lacerated feet. Frequent communication with France impossible and Rochambeau had been given almost unrestricted liberty of action. Under these circumstances a man with less modesty and magnanimity of character and a less earnest spirit of accommodation, might have been overbearing, arrogant and indisposed to look with favor upon plans presented by the American commander, but he manifested from the outset an undisguised willingness to adopt all measures which might facilitate the joint military operations upon this difficult theater of war and sank all considerations other than those which would conduce to the complete success of the allied armies.

In all their intercourse they both showed themselves adherents of the principle that it is time to abandon the path of ambition when it becomes so narrow that two cannot walk it abreast.

Rochambeau in landing upon our shores defined his policy towards the Americans in the comprehensive words: "I am the friend of their friends and the foe of their foes."

His modesty was proverbial. He says in his memoirs, in speaking of the surrender of Yorktown, "Lord Cornwallis was ill and Gen. O'Hara marched out at the head of the garrison. On arriving, he presented his sword to me. I pointed opposite to Gen. Washington at the head of the American army and I said that the French army being auxiliary upon that continent, it was to the American general that he must look for his orders."

There is a mute eloquence in the very attitude of yonder statue which speaks of his accustomed modesty. The outstretched arm which in life had so often pointed out the path to victory, is now extended to Mount Vernon as if obeying the generous impulses of the living subject's heart in diverting attention from himself to his illustrious brother in arms.

Rochambeau left this country crowned with the laurels of success and the bearer of every token of recognition which a grateful country could bestow. If he were permitted to return to earth, he would see in the matchless prosperity of the country an ample vindication of the principles of government for the sake of battles in America were fought. He would find that the thirteen feeble colonies had grown to forty-five vigorous states, that the three million of people had been swollen to 85,000,000, that the population had been strengthened by an interweaving of the stoutest fibres of other nations and nurtured by the best blood of many lands, that the flag which had once struggled for bare existence in a few Atlantic states had moved across a vast continent and had been planted even in the opposite ends of the earth. He would find here all things changed his services. These will be cherished. Living he dwelt in the affections of his except the sentiments of gratitude for American comrades, dead, he is enshrined in the hearts of their posterity, for the friendship of the fathers is a precious legacy to the sons and a common heritage of ancient glory can never be divided.

This statue is not simply to commemorate war, but to typify peace and good will between the newest republic of the old world and the oldest republic of the new world. Seas made us distant, comradeship has made us near. This inauguration takes place because the three resplendent colors which at the present day are those of the respective banners of the sister republics. Their folds have a right to be placed in close touch, for the old flags which they represent were interlaced in battle, waved together in victory, and were entertwined in peace. May the ruthless hand of discord never rend them asunder.

Let me close by quoting the eloquent words of President Loubet, the distinguished chief magistrate of the French republic, spoken by him two years ago at the inauguration of the statue of Lafayette, the gift of the American school children to the city of Paris: "This friendship, born in the comradeship of arms, has developed and grown stronger during the century which is ending; the generations which succeed will not suffer it to grow weaker."

The orator of the day was Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, who began his address as the French band concluded a selection.

(Mr. Lodge's oration will be found on page 1 of section 2 of this edition of The Herald.)

As Mr. Lodge closed, the French band played the "Star Spangled Banner." The closing remarks of the day were by Gen. Brugere, of the French army.

Bishop Saterlee brought the ceremonies to a close with benediction, and the French guests visited the capital and the congressional library.

All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.

They litter the whole system.

Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestion, dull headaches and many other troubles are due to them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove all humors, overcome all their effects, strengthen, tone and invigorate the whole system.

"I had salt rheum on my hands so that could not work. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it drove out the humor. I continued its use till the sores disappeared." MRS. IRA O. BROWN, Rumford Falls, Me.

IN MICHIGAN.

Menominee Turners Are Preparing For a Big Rally.

Menominee—The Turners are making preparations for the annual convention of the societies of the Wisconsin district of which Menominee is a member, and the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the local society. The convention will be held on May 31, and the celebration of the anniversary will be held on Sunday, June 1, at Riverside Park. There will be representatives from the societies of Milwaukee, Green Bay and of about every society of the organization in Wisconsin. On Sunday morning there will be a monster parade to the park, where there will be speeches and games.

Mass City—Jacob Kolpi, a Mass City saloonkeeper, had a thumb and two fingers blown off while hunting, by the accidental discharge of a Winchester rifle. Kolpi walked six miles to town, after his injury, and was about exhausted when he reached medical assistance.

Negaunee—William Neely, who recently purchased from Mrs. Anthony Broad the property on Jackson street which was occupied for many years as a meat market, is tearing down the structure. The building is one of the oldest on the street and has been in a dilapidated state for some years past. It is quite possible that Mr. Neely will erect a new block on the lot.

Isle Royale—Rock is supplied regularly to three heads at the Isle Royale mill, and the May product will, in our opinion, establish a new record, says the Hancock Evening Journal. A decided appearance is noted in the quantity of the rock shipped from No. 2 shaft, while in the matter of heavier grades the amount of mass and barrel work stored at the shaft since May 1, compares favorably with the total from this source during April. It is a notable fact that best results at Isle Royale are secured from the lower openings. The ground south of No. 2 shaft at the sixteenth level is yielding a good stamp rock. There is absolutely no construction work under way at either the mine or mill, the surface equipment for all purposes being complete in every respect. The surface force is reduced to the minimum, and the only prospective increase is for the exploratory work which the company will most certainly conduct during the summer. It is claimed, and the claim seems well founded, that a new vein has been exposed by a number of pits on the lands south adjoining the Isle Royale. The owner of the land asserts that he has the Baltic lode, but on this point there is considerable doubt.

MUCH NEEDED

Is Missionary Work In Porto Rico, Says Rider.

New York, May 24.—Rev. Dr. C. J. Rider, secretary of the American Missionary association, who has just returned after an extended trip around the island of Porto Rico, says he passed over some mountain trails that no Americans except a party of detectives have before crossed. "No one can exaggerate the value of missionary work in the island of Porto Rico," he said. "The necessity is simply appalling. The work of the American Missionary association is well done, as is that of other similar organizations, I visited every railway on the island, including several Catholic churches. But there is still a field for so much more work. I went through dozens of schools, meeting the supervisors and the teachers. The United States government has done excellent work already among the children. But here again the field is large. There are 250,000 children of school age in Porto Rico, while all the public schools, if filled to the doors would accommodate only 60,000.

ELKS All Elks will meet at hall Sunday 1:30 p. m. sharp to attend funeral of Brother G. Fred Stevens to be held at residence, 1507 Jefferson street.

ALIVE WITH BEARS.

The vast swamps, or "llsemals," as they are colloquially known, that occupy large quarters of the peninsula counties of North Carolina are alive with bears, which fatten on the berries of the black gum, on wild grapes and nutritious swamp roots and growths. And not infrequently they molest the cattle of the farmers, writes the Roper, N. C., correspondent of the New York Sun.

There are many wild hogs in the swamps—fierce, big-tusked, long-legged and long-snouted beasts—and while these bears do not hesitate to give battle to these when their appetites particularly crave pork, the wild hogs are such savage and tenacious fighters that Bruin, as a rule, is taken his chances in stealing the less pugnacious, cord-fed shoats of the farmers.

There are three kinds of bears in these North Carolina swamps. One, because of its color, the natives call the cinnamon bear, but it is far from being the ponderous and ferocious cinnamon bear of the Rocky mountain regions. Another is the black bear, with fur of the deepest, deadest black, but lacking firmness in the skin. This bear is invariably fat and its flesh is sweet, tender and juicy. Much blacker than the black bear of Northern woods, this variety is also much heavier, a 500-pounder being no rarity.

The other bear dweller in these swamps is one not much more than half the size of the black, and is dark brown in color. This one is known as the hog bear, not because it has a fondness for hog, but on account of its partiality for food it has to root or dig in the ground to obtain—insects, grubs, frogs, lizards and the like. There is only one thing the hog bear likes better than these and that is corn when it is in the milk or at the roasting ear stage.

The bear is consequently a great corn stealer, and despoils the farmer of much of his corn crop. It is the habit of the bear to seek at night the corn fields when the corn is in the milk, and strip the ears from row after row of stalks, husking them as expertly as a champion corn husker could do it. Next morning piles of husks and piles of cobs tell of the marauding visit.

The bear eats the kernels of corn from the cob by holding the ear in its paws and running it to and fro between its teeth, turning the ear and handling it as deftly during the process as it could be done in the fingers of the daintiest diner at the table.

Because of the abundance of bears in these swamps bears hunters are naturally plentiful and bear hunting is much indulged in by the amateur sportsman. Packs of trained bear dogs are kept at many places, notably at Shawboro and Hertford, on the Norfolk and Southern railroad, and at Swan Quarter, in Hyde county.

These dogs are broken to hunt bears and nothing else. Some of them excel as "stickers," others as "strikers," and a good one in either accomplishments is worth a good deal of money.

A sticking bear dog is one that will take the trail and stick to it until the bear is brought to bay, no matter what the obstacles may be. A striking bear dog is one that is a master of tactics in worrying the bear when brought to bay, and keeping it there until the hunters come upon the scene.

IS UP TO DULUTH

Chance to Secure Location of a Large Seminary Here.

Now at Red Wing But May Select New Place.

Minneapolis Working For It---Hardy School Is Offered.

A strong effort is being made to secure the permanent location of the seminary of the Hauge Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran synod at Duluth.

At the present time this seminary is located at Red Wing, but the building in use there has been outgrown. At the annual meeting of the synod, held at Grafton, N. D., in June, 1900, it was decided to erect a new and modern building to meet the demand for more room. A year later it was decided to defer the erection of the building to see if other cities than Red Wing would be preferable for the permanent location of the institution. It was the belief of many members of the synod that a larger city than Red Wing would be better for finer facilities in the educational line would be given to the students in a larger city, such for instance as public libraries, lecture courses, etc.

After this step had been taken Minneapolis entered the field as an active candidate for the location of the seminary. Until that time Duluth members had taken no steps toward offering this city as a place well adapted for its location, but soon after Minneapolis entered the field, Duluth members became active.

The Bethesda Lutheran church in this city is identified with the Hauge synod, and Rev. L. G. Aschim, its pastor, conceived the idea that Duluth offered excellent advantages as a place for the location of the seminary and began a movement which has brought this city to the front as a prominent competitor.

A proposition has been secured from the owners of the Hardy school at Glen Avon to sell for $40,000. There are five acres of ground, valued at $15,000, and the building cost $66,000 ten years ago, a total of $81,000. The Duluth members of the synod are favorably impressed with the price made and believe that it will appeal to all members as a good one.

Minneapolis has offered the Minneapolis Academy building, a stone building, located on two and one-half acres of ground, for $17,000. The building is small, however, and a very large addition would be necessary.

Red Wing is very anxious to retain the seminary and has made inducements which it regards as better than those offered by either Duluth or Minneapolis. The city has arranged to add to the property of the seminary so as to give it about fifteen acres, upon this it can add the buildings it needs.

The Duluth building will not be large enough, although it is very much larger than the one at Minneapolis. If it is taken a new building will have to be erected at once. Four large class rooms and a chapel will be necessary, in addition to the room provided by the Hardy school.

The number of students at the Red Wing institution now is 150. This is all that can be accommodated and there are many who are anxious to attend but who cannot because the facilities will not permit. The school was established in Red Wing in 1879 and it has three departments, the academic, the collegiate and the theological. There are seven in the faculty. A statement of the purpose of the school made by the secretary of the synod is as follows:

"The aim of the school is: First, to furnish a general Christian culture; second, to prepare young men for the ministry and for teaching in public and parochial schools. Believing that Christian truth is the highest department of that world of universal truth which is the proper sphere of human knowledge, the entire course of study will not only b based upon and permeated by its principles, but distinct religious instruction will be given in accordance with the confession of the Lutheran church. By this means, as well as by daily and weekly devotional exercises, an endeavor will be made to establish and maintain among the students a Christian spirit, and to lead them to a deeper insight and a better appreciation of the precious inheritance of the Christian church. On this religious basis the school instructs in the practical branches necessary for good citizenship, and through a special course prepares young men who may feel a call, to labor as ministers in the Norwegian Lutheran church.

"There are three departments:

"1. The academic, requiring three years for completion. The course offered in this department is intended to prepare young men for practical life and to accommodate those who have limited time and means.

"2. The collegiate requiring five years' work. This course is intended to prepare for professional studies, especially that of theology, and for entering the state university.

"3. The theological, covering a period of three years. An effort is made to prepare earnest, consecrated, and trained workers in the Lord's vineyard."

The synod covers a very large territory and therefore has a large area from which to draw students. In its membership are represented the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, and a few from Kansas.

June 1 next the synod will meet at Sacred Heart near Minneapolis, and at that time the matter will come before it for disposition. The friends of Minneapolis are making a determined effort to get the seminary and some of the most influential members of the synod are enlisted in the support of that city.

The Duluth members are confident that this city will have many friends among the members of the synod, and are anxious to secure some support from the citizens at large. They believe that it will be of as much or greater value to the city than the normal school. The original investment will be practically the same, for the synod expects to spend from $50,000 to $75,000 to begin with.

The value it will be to the business of the city is shown by the interest Red Wing is taking in retaining it. At the council meeting there a few nights ago business men said that the students left not less than $20,000 annually in the city and some put this amount higher than that.

It is suggested by the Duluth people interested in getting it here that the Commercial club should take the matter up. The Minneapolis Commercial club got out a handsome folder setting forth the advantages of that city as a place for the location of the seminary. It contains a flattering endorsement of the educational standing of the seminary from Dr. Cyrus Northrop, president of the Minnesota university, a description of the building offered and several pages of facts about Minneapolis, handsomely illustrated. It is apparent that Minneapolis is going after it in no uncertain or hesitating way and that the best interests of the city have taken up the campaign.

It is now up to Duluth.

CHICAGO'S CONTRIBUTION.

Chicago, May 24.—The Martinique relief committee of Chicago has issued an announcement signed by John J. Mitchell, Graeme Stewart, Marshal Field, Marvin Hughitt and E. B. Butler, that contributions for the earthquake sufferers have reached $8422 and that no further subscriptions need be made. The amount has been forwarded to Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York city, who is treasurer of the general fund. The local committee expresses its thanks for the prompt response to the call made.

"I HAD BACKACHE MOST OF THE TIME."

"Pe-ru-na Is a Woman's Friend,"

Writes Miss Lindsay, of Marinette, Wis.

Tired Women, Run Down, Weary and Weak, Morning, Noon and Night.

If one were to ask all the nervous, fretted, jaded, fagged-out women who work day after day, hardly able to keep on their feet—if a person were to ask them what their trouble was, one would say dyspepsia, another nervous prostration, another female weakness, and so on.

The fact is, however, that they nearly all have the same disease, and that disease is chronic catarrh.

Thousands of people have chronic catarrh and do not know it.

They realize that they are sick, but they do not suspect that their disease is chronic catarrh.

If they have catarrh of the stomach, they call it dyspepsia; if they have general catarrhal debility, they call it nervous prostration; if they have catarrh of the liver or kidneys, they say they are bilious or have kidney disease; and if they have catarrh of the pelvic organs they name it female weakness.

The truth is, all these organs are subject to catarrh, and the land is full of toiling women, half invalids, who have chronic catarrh in some stage or form of some of these organs.

Women from all parts of the United States bear testimony to the fact that Peruna cures female catarrhal diseases.

Mrs. Kate Mann, 806 Bathurst street, Toronto, Ont., Canada, vice president of the Ladies' Aid society, writes:

"I am pleased to give praise to Peruna for the blessed relief I found through its use.

"I suffered for years with backache and dragging down pains, and often had to go to bed and stay there when I was so busy that I could ill be spared. It was therefore a simple Godsend to me when Peruna was brought to my notice. Every day seemed to give me new life, and every day made me feel much better, and I promised myself if it cured me I would advocate it so that other suffering women should know of it.

"I have been in perfect health for one year. I enjoy work and pleasure because in such fine health, and no trouble seems to heavy for me to bear when I have good health.

"Peruna has simply been a household blessing and I will never be without it again." MRS. KATE MANN.

Miss Olive J. Fitts, 520 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

"About a year ago I was troubled with a severe attack of nervous debility and was reduced in flesh to skeleton-like proportions. My friends advised a change of climate and I went to Phoenix, Ariz., but received no permanent or even appreciable relief until I began the use of Peruna. I was recommended to try a bottle there.

"I took perhaps three bottles and am today well and hearty, but will not say how much I weight for fear I might be called fat. OLIVE J. FITTS."

Mrs. Col. E. J. Gresham, treasurer Daughters of the Confederacy, and president Herndon Village Improvement society, writes the following letter from Herndon, Fairfax county, Va.:

Herndon, Va.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

"Gentlemen—I cannot speak too highly of the value of Peruna. I believe that I owe my life to its wonderful merits. I suffered with catarrh of the head and lungs in its worst form, until the doctors fairly gave me up, and I despaired of ever seeing well again.

"I noticed your advertisement and the splendid testimonials given by people who had been cured by Peruna, and determined to try a bottle. I felt but little better, but used a second and third bottle and kept on improving slowly.

"It took six bottles to cure me, but they were worth a king's ransom to me. I talk Peruna to all my friends and am a true believer in its worth.

"MRS. COL. E. J. GRESHAM."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

A Grateful Girl's Letter to Dr. Hartman.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"My experience with Peruna has been such that I am very glad indeed to be able to recommend it. About two years ago my health began to fail, I lost my appetite, had backache most of the time, and any over-exertion would keep me in bed for a week or more. I needed a good tonic to bring me back to health and strength, but I did not know which would be of benefit. Peruna was recommended as a woman's friend and such it proved to be, for six bottles have been used and I am restored to health."

BUT FEW SURVIVED

Loss of Life at Fernie Heavier Than First Reported.

Believed That Nearly Two Hundred Met Instant Death.

Fire Damp Prevents Rescuing Parties From Entering Mine.

Fernie, B. C., May 24.—The loss of life in the Coal Creek mine on Thursday is even greater than was at first reported. It is now estimated that from 10 to 175 men met almost instant death. Superintendent Drennen, Dr. Bonnel ad True Weatherby were the first to enter the mine. When about 500 feet into the working, Drennan was overcome by after damp, and had it not been for his two companions would have perished. One being removed to the outer air he recovered and gave instructions to the rescuing party to commence repairing the pipes which conduct the air through the mine, as they had been almost completely destroyed. It was impossible to enter owing to the after damp which prevailed.

What caused the explosion has not yet been definitely ascertained. Many of the miners were ignorant foreigners, and one of the mine shafts was always more or less gaseous. It is reported in Fernie that the explosion occurred by the careless use of an open or naked lamp by an Italian. Another theory is that a miner struck a match, exploding the gas, which was almost always present in No. 2 shaft. The true cause of the disaster will probably not be positively ascertained, for it is doubtful if any man who knows will ever reach the outer air alive, or be able to tell the tale. The explosion took place in No. 2 shaft of the mine, being repeated in a few seconds in No. 3, with which it was connected.

The two shafts in which the explosion occurred are situated on Coal Creek, about six miles from Fernie. No. 2 has always been considered the more dangerous, being dry, dusty and gaseous. Recently the dangerous conditions which had hitherto prevailed in No. 2 tunnel had been greatly modified and improved. New fans were installed, furnishing an excess of air with 40 per cent reserve.

From all available sources assistance is being rushed to the scene of the calamity, but there is little hope for the rescue of any of the entombed men. Already the work of liberation has been begun with such means as are at local command, and eighteen bodies have been taken from the mine. The presence of coal damp makes the work of rescue very dangerous, and is seriously hindering the efforts of the workers.

The scene in the neighborhood of the mouth of the tunnel is distressing in the extreme, and all the more so as it is utterly impossible to hold out any hope to the women, whose cries are for entombed husbands and fathers and brothers.

In No. 2 tunnel, in which the first explosion occurred, from 100 to 120 men and boys are usually employed, and in No. 3 tunnel, to which the explosion extended, about 30 men generally worked. In both mines there are many foreigners, and the difficulty of disciplining these men and impressing upon them the danger of the use of unprotected lights has always been very great. The main road of No. 2 tunnel is 9 by 6½ feet in area, and would be sufficient for reasonable ventilation, were it not for the fact that there was a motor working on the road, which almost stopped the current of the intake. When the men were at work the liberation of gas heavily charged the atmosphere and made it dangerous to employ lights which were not absolutely protected.

The explosion, which occurred at about 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening, was distinctly heard in the village six miles away. A few minutes later the alarming intelligence had spread like wildfire from house to house, and quickly the whole population was on the streets and hurrying towards the scene of the disaster. All the available men were at once organized for the rescue, and the work of getting at the entombed miners was begun without delay. Great difficulty was experienced in keeping back the women whose husbands, most of them foreigners, were known to have been employed in the tunnels. From the time the work of rescue was begun until twenty-four hours after the disaster many women have refused to leave the ground and return home. With the passing hours hope at Fernie for the safety of the five score men entombed has gradually faded away. The eighteen bodies already recovered were those of men who have been engaged at work not a great distance from the mouth of the tunnel, and the fact that they were overcome would seem to indicate that there is little hope for those further in the mine. The work of rescue was made difficult during the night by the lack of sufficient lighting facilities and by the coal damp which issued in great volume from the runs, but no delay will be allowed to occur in the work of clearing away the wreck and releasing the men, if happily, any of them are still alive, or of taking out the bodies of the dead, if there are no more survivors.

The Cuban Bill in the Senate.

What the friends of the president are doing in the senate for the Cuban relief bill is a matter of merest conjecture; until the roll is called the matter is entirely problematical and not until then can the result be known. Certain it is, however, that the president is still firm for reciprocity with the Cuban republic and has no intention of accepting the rebate compromise. It is a fight to the finish with him. The extra session question will depend upon what congress does or leaves undone. It may pass a measure wholly inadequate to meet the recommendations of the president, but undoubtedly it must dispose of the matter in some way if it would escape being called together again. The president has made no threats, but he has said very plainly to one or two senators that it is now congress' turn to act. He has done all he can. Congress knows that the nation stands pledged to do something. The only branch of the government that can act now, and has not acted, is the legislature. He therefore insists that congress shall say "Yes" or "No" in simple terms. It will be a bitter disappointment to him if a poor and insufficient measure is enacted; but something must be passed and the subject finally disposed of. If it is left still "hung up" when the present session adjourns, he will issue a call for an extra session beyond a peradventure. The nation's pledge may be redeemed in a generous way, or in a stingy way, but in some way it must be, and the world will know where to place the responsibility for the way this demand of honor is met.

The Diplomatic Dean at Havana.

Some of the administration officials who are given to ostentatious display on every occasion are inclined to find fault because of the delay in the senate of the ratification of the nomination of H. G. Squires as minister to Cuba, thus destroying the chances of this country's representative becoming the dean of the resident diplomatic corps at Havana. From advices received it appears that this honor has fallen to Great Britain, that country having appointed as minister its resident consul general. Being on the ground, he had but to present his credentials to secure early recognition, and by doing so became senior to the representatives of other countries. There was some criticism of President Roosevelt because he sent the name of Mr. Squires as minister and Gen. Bragg as consul general to the senate so far in advance of the time for the inauguration of the Cuban government. While there is no material advantage in the United States minister being the ranking member of the diplomatic corps, it was greatly desired by Mr. Hay for sentimental reasons. The administration seeks in all things to secure for the United States the place which, in view of what this country has done for Cuba, it is believed she is entitled to. While it is regretted that the senate did not act more promptly and make possible the recognition of the minister of this country first, the advantage is not considered important enough to warrant any unusual steps being taken by this country. Mr. Squires will arrive at Havana on Sunday and will present his credentials to the officers of the Cuban republic on Monday. By the very force of circumstances he will be one of the most, if not the most, important foreign representative at the Cuban capital. This is because of the limited protectornte which it can not be denied the United States still maintains over Cuba under the terms of the Platt amendment and conditioned withdrawal from the island.

A MILLION A DAY.

Surprising figures in regard to life insurance payments have been publised by the Insurance Press, showing the sums paid by life insurance companies in the different cities and towns. The tabulation covers 7,840 places, giving the operations of companies and associations during 1901 and presents an interesting study.

Last year the Insurance Press was able to apportion $197,831,811 among cities and towns in the United States, territorial possessions of the United States and Canada. This year it is possible to localize about $20,000,000 more, or $217,162,530. This large sum mainly represents payments made in the settlement of death claims or matured endowment policies, of which the old-line companies paid $136,000,000, the remainder being paid by various leading assessment and fraternal societies, whose transactions are acceptably reported. In addition to the $136,000,000 paid in claims, the old-line companies distributed $48,000,000 in dividends to policy-holders and for settlements by the surrender of policies prior to the maturity of contracts, but it is not practicable to distribue all of these millions locally. Thus the total payments to policy-holders by the old-line companies alone reached $184,000,000, on the basis of returns to the insurance department of the state of New York. Probably $6,000,000 or more was paid to policy-holders by companies not reporting to the New York insurance department. Hence it may fairly be said, in round numbers, that from $190,000,000 to $200,000,000 was distributed by the standar life insurance companies last year, and that the total payments by all companies, associations, societies and orders reached the $300,000,000 mark, this sum representing the aggregate amount distributed among the policy-holders or members by all kinds and descriptions of life insurance organizations. That means about $1,000,000 for every business day. It measures, as closely as measuring is practicable, the actual distribution of money last year by or in the name of life insurance. The total amount of claims paid in Minnesota was $2,592,340; the Duluth payments aggregated $105,050.

It is pointed out that a definite appreciation of the benefit of life insurance to the community is furnished by a consideration of the figures which exhibit the disposition of the payments of the standard life insurance companies of the United States in 1901, and also the investments in which was placed the excess of the income of these companies over the disbursements. In the first place, the companies paid $184,000,000 under, or on account of, their policy contracts; part of this was for death claims, providing for the widow and the orphan; a large amount was for matured endowment policies to insured persons who, by continuous self-denial and prompt attention to their obligations during a series of years thus reaped the reward of their persistence; part of the balance was distributed as dividends to policy-holders, the excess of thir premiums over the amount necessary to be retained for the fulfillment of their contracts; the balance was paid in surrender values to those who by inclination or necessity were called upon to realize upon their policies while yet unmatured, and a comparatively small amount was paid out in the form of life annuities.

The expenses of the commonwealth were partly met by contributions on the part of the life insurance companies amounting to $7,250,000, and it is a fair statement that this amount of direct taxation was avoided by the taxes and fees paid to the state from this source. Various forms of labor, manufacturing interests, the transportation and communication companies and a vast army of life insurance solicitors were compensated to the extent of $103,000,000, which sum did its share in carrying on the business and the life of the community.

Finally, $160,000,000 was paid out by the treasuries of the life companies, first to furnish loans on real estate and thus add capital to some of the active business interests of the country, and to satisfy in many instances that desire for a home which is a fundamental factor in the building up of a stable community; a large part of this amount went to assist in the refunding operations of large, reputable and important corporations, add many lines of industry and trade received through this medium additional means to carry on their affairs and strengthen the oncoming commercial supremacy of this country.

THE ZIONIST MOVEMENT.

The Zionist movement has again met with failure. It has been unable to enlist the co-operation of Jews throughout the civilized world according to the expectations of its promoters, and it has failed to make the colonists re-established in Palestine satisfied with the conditions surrounding them in the Promised Land. A recent interesting letter from William E. Curtis, the well-known newspaper correspondent, relating his observations on a recent visit to one of the twenty Jewish colonies planted by Baron Rothschild and given over to the direction of the London Jewish Colonization society, describes the life led by the modern inhabitants of what constituted the ancient Jewish state, and draws pertinent conclusions as follows:

"The appearance of things at Sammarin suggests that Baron Rothschild overdid things and pampered his colonists too much. The houses are too fine for such a purpose. They are not suitable for farmers, and are so much better than anything in the villages around as to furnish a disagreeable contrast. The colonists are generally discontented. Some who could scrape together sufficient money have gone away, and quite a number of the houses are empty. Others who still remain, unable to secure funds to pay their passage to any other place, are occupying their time abusing the management, while all of them are opposed to the Zionist movement of which they are a part, because they say there are altogether too many Jews in Palestine today."

If the Jews in Palestine today are all opposed to the Zionist movement, how, asks the Omaha Bee, can the Jews in other countries be expected to favor and support it? Why should the Jews, who have nothing in common except their creed, and even in that differ as much as Protestant does from Roman Catholic, expatriate themselves and move from the countries of their birth or adoption to a barren, desolate region in which at best they would be subjects of the Turkish autocrat? Why should the Jews, who enjoy the privileges of citizenship among nations under republican forms of government, abandon the countries to which they have voluntarily sworn allegiance, to colonize a country to which they have no other attachment than that of tradition? If the Zionist movement were to be carried on with renewed vigor, what reason is there to believe that new colonies would fare any better than those already established, which are gladly abandoned by their members at every favorable opportunity?

An alluring picture is presented by Zionism, but it rests on impractical foundations. The truth is that the amelioration of the condition of downtrodden and oppressed Jews, wherever they may be, is to be accomplished not by returning them to Palestine, but by assisting them to become useful and self-supporting citizens of the country to which they prefer to attach themselves.

MARTINIQUE'S ENDING.

Advices from Martinique indicate that the island is to be abandoned. The surviving inhabitants are leaving as fast as they can get away, and they do not intend to return. The French government has notified the governor that, if he deems it advisable, he can retire and leave the place to its fate, and it is probable that he will take advantage of this permission, because it is manifest that the lives of himself and the other officials are not safe, even in the capital city of Fort de France. The group of islands including Martinique and St. Vincent have been pronounced "the most attractive archipelago in all the world," and the very danger that the volcanoes would become active at some time gave them a fascinating attraction. Now it is not improbable that they will be abandoned as inhabitable and will be left to their fate—perchance to be wiped out of existence altogether by some convulsion of nature.

Martinique was discovered by Columbus on his last voyage, in 1502, 400 years to a day before this last and most destructive volcanic visitation. Its extreme length is about forty-five miles, its greatest width fifteen. At the end of its larger section Fort de France bays cuts in to within six miles of inlets on the other side. The whole area of nearly 400 square miles is mountainous, the highest elevation of land being Mount Pelee, 4450 feet high. Farther south, midway of the oval island, are the three crests of Courbet, and all along the rugged edge are black and ragged cones of old volcanoes. South of the deep bay mentioned are two less elevated ridges. All the east coast is notched with inlets and fringed with reefs, showing how the tireless embroidery of the polyp goes on, spite of the volcano's wrath. The interior is torn and gashed with ancient throes of volcano and earthquake, exhibiting perpendicular scarps, deep clefts and chasms, great holes filled with water, racing torrents dashing over precipices; but over most of the surface soaking rains and tropic suns converted the rotted lava into a rich soil, where bloomed a robe of verdure and color of rare luxuriance and beauty. There grew many tropical trees and plants, the ceiba, the palm, the bamboo, the breadfruit tree and orange groves and cane fields.

The fierce Caribs, whom Columbus found there, were allowed to remain undisturbed on Martinique till a Norman captain landed in 1635 and founded St. Pierre at the very foot of frowning, threatening Pelee. It was a long struggle with the natives, but they were gradually killed, transported or driven off, and France possessed the island in peace. Then negroes were brought in, cane and coffee-raising became profitable, and, as usual, a few grew rich by the unpaid labor of many. In 1831 occured a serious outbreak of the slaves, resulting in their being granted certain privileges, and they were emancipated in 1848. The exports were sugar, molasses, tafia, rum, tobacco, cacao, indigo, ginger and fruits, aggregating in value about $4,500,000 a year, while the imports were a million more.

The population was reckoned in 1899 at 175,000, of whom 10,000 were whites, 15,000 Asiatics and 150,000 more or less black. They were generally a gay, careless and rather sensuous admixture of people. Two women who attained high social position in France and wielded great political influence were born in the island of Martinique—the Empress Josephine and Madame de Maintenon. It was in the town of St. Pierre that Josephine was born—the place is now buried beneath the molten lava and the ashes and volcanic rock from the crater of Mount Pelee.

One of the most fashionable and wealthy churches in Washington, D. C., is St. John's Episcopal church. Two of its pews, owned by an estate, were sold at auction in a well-known auction room the other day for $2750 and $1600 respectively. A large and stylish crowd attended the sale, and the number of fine carriages in the street made it seem as if a fashionable reception was in progress. The Washington newspapers even had "write-ups" of the event.

CHANGES IN THE SENATE.

There is a gradual change in the political complexion of the senate, and it is evident that the Democrats are gradually strengthening their forces. A few years ago the border states supplied a considerable number of Republican senators, and since the election of the senate is for six years, a few still survive: but the tide is all against them, and it will not be long before Pritchard of North Carolina and McComas of Maryland will go out. Deboe of Kentucky, whose term expires with this congress, has been superseded by a Democrat. Wellington of Maryland gives place to Gorman; Marion Butler, Populist, of North Carolina, has been succeeded by Simmons, Democrat, and the probabilities are that Delaware will fall to the Democrats as soon as Mr. Addicks gets tired of trying to capture one of its seats in the senate.

This raises the question as to the Republican outlook in the senate; its present membership is today fifty-five, against thirty-three Democrats and two vacancies. Of the class of senators which expires with this congress, generally owing their election to the presidential ballot of 1896, eighteen are Republicans to twelve in the opposition. In the new class soon to take their places the Republicans will clearly lose three seats, viz., one each in Kentucky, North Carolina and Maryland; the Republicans stand a good chance to gain the three seats held by Harris of Kansas, Rawlins of Utah and Turner of Washington; these states were carried by Bryan in 1896, but have since become Republican, and unless there is some reaction this fall, will retire these Democratic senators. But there is some uncertainty in this old Populistic belt, and Turner's friends in Washington state are seemingly confident that he, for one, will pull through.

The changes should be welcome. The nearer the senate is divided politically, the better will be the legislation. Party projects will have to have merit to secure passage. There are always independents in every party, and with but a small majority for either side, questionable measures are likely to fail. The day will be welcomed when the division is very close.

The house bill providing for the building in government yards of one battleship, one armored cruiser and one gunboat is liable to meet with strong opposition in the senate. It is likely, however, that a compromise may be made in the matter. The senate committee is strongly opposed to the proposal to build warships in government yards. Mr. Hale, of Maine, its chairman, being especially active in opposition. His views usually prevail in that committee, and probably would in this instance but for the desire of the Republican leaders to avoid an open rupture over a question upon which the labor unions of the country are so deeply concerned and effectively organized. With this in view the house committee sought to compromise by directing that one ship be built in government yards, and the leaders considered that they had an understanding by which with this concession, their bill would not be further antagonized. But they were mistaken, and now it remains for the senate to help them out. Whether Mr. Hale's committee will develop the compromise plan in the senate or leave it for the conferrees is not fully determined.

The New England chess champion is now a Polish Jew, 23 years old, named Abraham Moses Sussman. His predecessors in that rank have been Benjamin Lynde Oliver (1850-43), George Hammond (1845-79), Preston Ware (1879-86), Franklin K. Young (1886-1901), Mr. Oliver died without a rival. Mr. Hammond, the only native American player who ever defeated Paul Morphy in an even game, also died in the championship. Mr. Ware claiming the succession as the champion of the Boston Chess club, as Mr. Hammond had determined the conditions, lost his place after close matches with Mr. Young, who now retires. Sussman learned the game in Poland, but has developed his extraordinary skill under the teaching of Young, who is a master; he is, however, ineligible to play as an American in cable matches. His game is not brilliant, but rather large and solid in its plans.

Rear Admiral Walker, president of the Isthmian canal commission, places great importance upon the consideration that the Nicaraguan canal route traverses a region that is exceptionally full of volcanic craters. As he says, or is quoted as saying: "It is not a question of earthquakes, but of proximity to volcanoes. One route has volcanoes, and the other has not. Which is safer?" Only a Nicaraguan monomaniac, it would seem, could answer, in view of the Martinique and St. Vincent eruptions, that the Nicaraguan route is the safer, says the Springfield Republican. Admiral Walker believes that the consideration of proximity to volcanoes, many of them not extinct, should settle this question in favor of Panama. How the point can be ignored by any one is not easy to understand, yet the Nicaraguan partisans appear to be in an ignoring mood.

During the past week, one of the foremost bishops of the American Methodist church in this country, Rev. William Taylor, PhD., has passed away after a career as an evangelist which took him all over the globe. Dr. Taylor was successful as an organizing missionary bishop in many lands, including Australia, New Zealand, the Congo country, South Africa and Great Britain, as well as India. In this country he traveled four circuits in the Southern states with notable success, and wherever he preached he made an extraordinary impression of earnestness and power. In 1898, while serving as bishop of Africa, he was retired on account of his age.

Possibly Rev. Dr. Hale's definition of a theologian as one who has a theory about God and his relation to his fellowmen, which he can state in scientific terms, and who devotes more attention to theories than to religious life, may stir up the theological schools a bit.

THE OLD TINTYPE.

He gazed on the old-time picture—
The tintype, faded and stained;
And over his face crept shadows
That showed how his heart was pained.
'Twas only an old-time picture
Of him, in the bygone days
That loom now, ever so faintly
Through memory's mellowing haze.

He sighed o'er the old, old picture,
Dented and scratched and dim;
Ana smiled at the maiden, dimpled,
Who sat by the side of him—
The maiden, dimpled and happy,
Who was pictured there, also;
The maiden who held his fingers
In the style of the long ago.

'Twas only an old-time picture,
And taken in old-time style—
Each held the hand of the other,
And each wore a tintype smile.
He frowned at the old-time picture,
The tintype, scratched and depressed.
"I wonder," he muttered grimly,
"I wonder who has the rest."

United States of the Future.

By LESLIE M. SHAW, Secretary of the Treasury.

If the door set ajar in the spring of 1898 by the unanimous vote of both houses of congress ever swings wide on its hinges, the United States will police not only the street on which it lives, but the entire Western hemisphere, and with it all islands washed by the Pacific. I give not audience to the thought without misgivings, and I mention it only as the logical sequence of the trend of our national development.

We must have the largest merchant fleet ever kissed by ocean breezes, and these carriers of internal commerce must be constructed from American material, in American yards, by American labor. They are to be manned by American sailors, fired by American coal or oil, and they are to float the stars and stripes. Whether this will be accomplished through government aid or by American patriotism and American capital and American energy I cannot say.

American wealth, American energy—plus Hawaii, which is ours; plus the Philippine islands, which are ours; plus the isthmian canal, which we will surely construct; plus the merchant marine, which we will surely build—transfers the sovereignty of the Pacific ocean from the union jack to the stars and stripes.

There is now pending in the United States court a suit begun by a representative of the executive department of this country to enjoin a great corporation, organized under the laws of a certain state, from owning, holding and voting the capital stock and controlling the policy of certain transportation companies.

Without expressing an opinion as to probable results, it is interesting to note that the most pronounced disciples of state sovereignty complain not of this action, and utter no other criticism than that it should have been begun earlier.

Note the demand for national regulation of railways, of express companies, of telegraph companies, of insurance and of trusts. Note the demand for uniformity in labor laws, divorce laws, interest and taxation laws. The trend of events and the trend of thought seem to be toward a still stronger and more centralized government.

Scientific Europe Led By America.

By LORD KELVIN, the World Famous Scientist.

The whole of Europe profits by the electrical appliances and inventions of your great inventors, mechanical engineers and scientists. Theirs is the work of the best workmen.

It has always been a pleasure to me to visit America. I have felt the progress of science more on every visit, and it has been my greatest stimulus.

American enterprise in science has accomplished far more than any other nation. Others stop where you but begin to work. In Europe we plod along in your wake and copy your advancement by taking advantage of your progress.

The greatest development of the transmission of power has taken place in America. It has been so great, so marvelous, that I hope to live to see the day when a dream I have ever had may be realized. I fervently hope to see the day when we shall have the transmission of electric power over 300 miles with a voltage of 40,000. When I first talked of this fifteen years ago I was scoffed at, but with the wonderful transmission of power at Niagara Falls my dream looks to be near fulfillment.

The mighty development of the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy is already of great value. We do not unwisely hope to find messages sent around the world without a wire. His transmission of messages a few hundred miles is of great commercial value, and he deserves much credit.

We may be on the brink of a change in electrical transmission, yet I think the cable for years and maybe for all time will hold its position.

We must not forget the gratitude due to the founders of submarine telegraphy, although we have in Marconi a man who may bring something more wonderful and greater in results. Let us not forget the great and enduring work of Cyrus Field.

The Church and Politics

By Rev. GEORGE W. STONE, Field Secretary of the American Unitarian Society for the Pacific States.

The line between things secular and things religious is too sharply drawn in these days. If a man is to be truly religious, he must exercise his power conscientiously in every department of life. He must be loyal and obedient to his impulses in the discharge of his duties as a citizen. He must do this if he would be truly faithful to his church. It is because men have created the artificial line referred to that we have bad laws, incompetent and corrupt administration. The smaller the governmental division the more likely we are to find evil conditions. Municipal administration, as a rule, is the worst. The interest in national elections is always greater than in any other, while the interest in municipal elections is generally the least of all. It is because of this that we have usually more incompetent administration in municipal government than elsewhere.

We must not be afraid of that word politics. Do not consent to the ruin of this word. The "boss system" is not politics. Politics is authoritatively defined as "the science of government." We have no more right to call this conspiracy against the freedom of the people known as the "boss system" politics than we have to call common, stupid lying by the name of diplomacy. The remedy for bossism is to be found only in the hearty and intelligent cooperation of men of all parties and of no parties in the work of destruction. This, I insist, is pre-eminently a religious duty. If the church has not enough influence to make us perform this duty, then there is something radically wrong with the church.

There is a world of difference between a leader and a boss. The leader says, "come on," the boss says, "go on;" the leader consults, the boss dictates; the leader serves the people, the boss tyrannizes the people; the leader plans, the boss schemes; the leader works in daylight, the boss in darkness.

Let each church have its "men's good government club," with meetings on a weekday, committed to the work of preparing the spiritual soil of the parish by redeeming it from the noxious weeds of vice, crime and all unlawful acts and deeds that hinder the progress of justice and righteousness.

May Heaven Help Despondent and Hopeless Sufferers from Kidney Disease to Accept the New Life Offered by

Paine's Celery Compound

The Great Medicine Cures Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Nephritis and Albuminuria.

Thousands of people suffer through a living death from some form of kidney disease. In the majority of cases, the poor sufferers have been informed by physicians that there is no hope.

If you are a victim of kidney disease, take courage, dear sufferer! There is a mighty saving agent that you have not yet called to your aid; it is Paine's Celery Compound. This grand medical prescription has conquered as desperate cases as yours; it has power to pluck you as a brand from the burning, if you have but faith to give it a trial.

You may perchance ask, "What will Paine's Celery Compound do for me that other medicines have failed to accomplish?"

Paine's Clerey Compound will accomplish vastly more for you in your distress than you can imagine. Its first great vital undertaking is the purification of the life stream from waste matter, the result of decomposition of the tissues. It will remove all morbid materials, saving you from uraemic poisoning, which so often proves fatal in kidney disease.

In addition to all this, Paine's Celery Compound will establish nerve force and new nerve fibre: it will nourish the weakened system and restore the full vital functions of the kidneys.

If you value life, delay not the use of Paine's Celery Compound a single hour. Your present critical condition demands the immediate use of this great life saver.

Emma Doty, of Red Buttes, Wyo., saved by Paine's Celery Compound from fatal kidney disease, writes as follows: "I had a terrible pain in my side owing to kidney troubles. I could hardly lie down; but that trouble has all left me through the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Last spring I had mountain fever and was sick a long time; since taking Paine's Celery Compound I am strong. I feel very grateful for your medicine. I am glad to say anything that would encourage people to use it."

AMUSEMENTS.

"WHEN REUBEN COMES TO TOWN."

"When Reuben Comes to Town" is a very good show, masquerading by the aid of a very poor name and unpromising paper, as a very bad one. The impression created by the unhappy title and the rather flashy billboard advertising matter was distinctly unfavorable, and it seems unfair to handicap a really clever performance in this manner.

The play is styled a "musical comedy," and that describes it as well as anything. It is possessed of rather more plot than most similar affairs, but the main purpose is to introduce specialties, though the play proper has an interesting vein of comedy. The specialties were good, the women good looking, the costumes new and handsome, the singing exceptionally pleasing, and altogether last night's performance at the Lyceum was surprisingly good. The house was large and hearty in its applause.

An interesting feature of the play is that most of the songs are new, and there is none of them that is hackneyed or stale. The company is full of good people, and the entire performance went off with dash and brilliancy. Among the more pleasing members of the cast were: Margaret Sayre, Anna Stanton, Edna Dorman, Edward Nicander, Charles Banks, Edward Durand and Douglas Flint. The latter was particularly good, his song, "Back! Back!" making a decided hit. A notable number was the trio, "It's Just Like a Scene in a Play," by Miss Stanton and Messrs. Nicander and Flint, in which familiar stage situations were burlesqued very happily.

Greatest of Monopolies.

Indianapolis Journal: When seeking the real cause of the anthracite strike it will be found in the combination owning the mines, and that its members have encouraged rather than made an attempt to prevent it. If half the complaints made of the mien owners have any basis in fact they constitute a monopoly which the law should reach.

J. B., with anger and despair,
I mark your swiftly falling star;
Soon, soon, old man, you won't know where

Soon you will wake—confounded, dumb—
To shame and ruin past redress,
All that you are, J. B., becomo

And driven shameful to the wall,
Stripped of your 'baccy, beef and sea,
You'll start to find for you it's all

The Whirl Of Politics

Much to the regret of many people, who believe Joseph B. Cotton to be strong congressional timber, his name must be finally withdrawn from consideration this time. He has flatly and positively told some of those who called upon him to induce him to run for congress that he will not consider it at this time. This must be considered as final.

So J. Adam Bede is still alone in the field, and the prospects are that he will be alone until a Democratic candidate comes to give him the comfort and excitement of opposition.

But, hold! From the point where the sky comes down in the west, from the charming precincts of Itasca county, from the imperial village of Cohasset, comes the thundering tread of an opponent. It is the sound of the footfalls of Hon. J. L. Jellison, who enters the race for the Republican nomination for congress against J. Adam Bede on a canal platform. His home is in the lively, hustling village of Cohasset, which is located on the Fosston branch of the Great Northern, and is bounded on the north by Cass Lake, on the west by the Winnibigoshish Indian reservation, on the east by Pokegama lake, and on the south by the letter S, in the word Minnesota, as it appears on the face of the map. Mr. Jellison opened his campaign at Grand Rapids last night, and he is due to start out on a strenuous campaign of the district. He believes that a canal should be built connecting the Great Lakes with the Atlantic ocean, and he is willing to go to congress in the interest of that scheme.

Mr. Jellison has not yet wandered this way, but as he proposes to cover the Eighth district thoroughly, he will hardly neglect Duluth.

• • •

It has been stated often of late that as Duluth goes, so goes the Eighth district, both on nominations and elections. This is in a measure true, but not necessarily so. St. Louis county has slightly more than half the total vote of the district, from figures based on the congressional vote at the 1900 election. So, if St. Louis county stood solid against the rest of the district, she would carry an election. The statement is certainly true of Democratic nominations, for St. Louis county has more than half the Democratic votes cast at the last election. It is less true of the Republican nomination than of anything else, however, for the outside counties had more than half the Republican votes cast two years ago. They cast 8852 Republican votes, while St. Louis county cast 7641 Republican votes. This county cast 5738 Democratic votes and the outside counties cast only 4521. The total vote cast in St. Louis county was 13,390, and that of the outside counties of the district was 13,373, only twenty-six less than this county.

So while the statement that St. Louis county will swing the district is generally true, it will never do for candidates to loose track of the outside counties on this showing.

• • •

There is no new candidate rumored this week. It is said that Charles A. Peterson, who used to work in the office of the county auditor, is a candidate for the office of register of deeds, or rather for the Republican nomination for that office. A. Lofgren is the present register, and it is understood that he is to be a candidate.

• • •

The Sixth congressional district fight has been changed to some extent this week. Albert F. Foster, of Litchfield, Meeker county, has announced himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination against Senator C. B. Buckman, and Dr. Werner Hemsted, of Brainerd, has withdrawn from the fight for the Democratic nomination, leaving Judge Bruener and Dr. Du Bois in the field. Dr. Hemsted will be a candidate for re-election to the house from the Morrison and Crow Wing county district.

• • •

The Aitkin Independent says: "It looks more and more like Bede and Baldwin for the congressional race."

• • •

Senator Baldwin, however, says he has done with politics for the present, and that he will content himself with the practice of law from now on. Still, voters sometimes have a rude way of forcing a nomination once in a while, in the manner that was styled "Rooseveltingˮ after the 1900 Republican nomination convention.

• • •

Here is the way the Grand Rapids Magnet sizes up the situation in this district:

"Those few Duluth politicians who are sitting up nights trying to find some good Republican to go against Bede for the congressional nomination, might just as well go home early. They are up against the real thing. Anybody who could have put enough money out to defeat Bede—conceding that such an outcome was possible, had such a man taken the field early—will not now take the chances, and it would be no earthly use to put up a man who could not command a large sum of money. Had McCarthy went into the race all would have been well. With McCarthy and Bede drawing a heavy county vote the Duluth gang could have put up a man with a good chance of winning out, thus getting rid of the two former gentlemen very easily, as they figured it. But the ways of the Duluth politician is well known at this time, and their scheme could not be made to work. We think we see the finish of what is known as the 'Willcuts' gang.'"

• • •

The Grand Rapids Magnet has come out strongly for Warren Potter, of Aitkin, for the nomination for senator from the Fifty-second district on the Republican ticket. He seeks to fill the place left vacant by Senator C. C. McCarthy, of Grand Rapids.

• • •

The St. Louis county Republican committee met at the St. Louis hotel Wednesday and formally called the county convention to select delegates to the state convention for June 24. The primaries will be held Saturday evening, June 21. The Democratic county convention will be held June 21, and the state convention June 25.

• • •

The Republican county committee adopted resolutions strongly declaring for Odin Halden's candidacy for state auditor, and the St. Louis county delegation will be a strong band of Halden hustlers.

• • •

Chairman Millar was authorized to call a meeting of Republicans after the primaries to endorse the selections made at the primaries for the various offices. The new county committee will be selected at this meeting.

• • •

After getting into the Van Sant band wagon, J. S. Vandiver, of the St. Peter Journal, has begun booming him as follows:

"Governor Van Sant may be neither a sage or a statesman, but he is better able to speak for himself than some of those curbstone whittlers are to speak for him. Just give Van plenty of pumphandle room, get the county fair dates fixed right, and turn him loose without any of his staff to hold his coat-tails out of the mud, and he'll be all right all right."

• • •

The New Paynesville Press speaks thus rudely of a prospective congressman:

"If Bede fails of getting the congressional nomination, now that he has no one to compete with for the race, he should be stripped of his birch bark and thoroughly spanked."

• • •

Editor Berryhill of the St. Paul Review is an incorrigible anti-Van Santer. In his last issue, in spite of the fact that he is the only member of his tribe still off the reservation, he beats the tom-tom and utters the war whoop in every column of his editorial page, and, like the party in the vocal exercise, he "thrusts his fists against the post and still insists he sees the ghost."

• • •

This is the way the New Paynesville Press receives the news of the new Richmond in the Sixth district field:

"At last a Moses has appeared to tie to. A. F. Foster, county attorney of the neighboring county of Meeker, has announced that he will go after the Republican nomination for congressman. Mr. Foster's ability and fitness for the position is unquestioned, and he will give a good account of himself in the battle to follow."

• • •

Says the Fosston Thirteen Towns:

"It is early in the season for political prognostication, but from reception reports J. Adam Bede has a flattering outlook for capturing the congressional prize in the Seventh district."

Editor Foss will find, if he consults the state blue books that his legislative members will provide for him, that Duluth never has been and never will be anywhere near the Seventh district.

• • •

This opinion of the Fairmount Sentinel will probably be more pleasing to some candidates for clerk of the supreme court than to the one mentioned;

"The result of the recent election in St. Paul is a back seat to Dar Reese, who managed the Republican side of the fight. Dar has had the fattest office in the state capital for eight years, and he should now have enough decency to retire in favor of the candidate from the Second district."

• • •

With hope, but without enthusiasm, the Little Falls Transcript thus views the Sixth district situaion:

"The Sixth district is Republican by a comfortable majority, although smaller than that in the other districts of the state. With a united party and an energetic campaign the district can certainly be carried this year, with such a vote-getter as Mr. Buckman has proved himself to be."

• • •

Announcements of the candidacy of Senator E. B. Hawkins for renomination and re-election to the state senate from the Forty-ninth district are among the things most frequently met with in the press these days. The Herald has announced it a few times, with pleasure always, and the St. Paul and iron range papers have taken to the habit of announcing it. The latest to breathe the news is the Hibbing Mesaba Ore, which gives it out with manifest approval. The Ore also notes with satisfaction the legislative ticket announced in The Herald last Saturday for the Forty-ninth district, composed of Senator Hawkins, Representative Mallory and Capt. D. E. Stevens.

• • •

The Eveleth Star confirms The Herald's guess that the Star's candidate from the ranges for a county office will be M. C. Palmer, of Virginia, and it ventures a prophecy that he is a winner.

• • •

The Halden campaign is growing daily, and support for his candidacy is coming from unexpected sources constantly. Duluth men who have been out in the state lately expect to see him land the nomination easily, and with a number of votes to spare. Others are confident that he will win out, but say that it will be a tight fight, and that a good deal of work must be done.

• • •

Many of the country papers are beginning to publish things like this, at so much per publish:

"At the request of many voters I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of sheriff of Blank county, and if I am nominated and elected I will do." etc.

• • •

The Hibbing Tribune acquits Duluth Republicans of having unduly interfered with the Hibbing postoffice affair.

• • •

Senator M. J. Daly, of Perham, Otter Tail county, having declined to run for the congressional nomination in the Ninth district, it is up to Alex McKinnon and Nat Campbell, of Crookston. Senator Daly will be a candidate for the senate again, which is mighty good news to everybody that has to be around the capitol while the legislature is in session, and that appreciates associations with a sunny temperament, an obliging and kindly nature and an unfailing overflow of courtesy.

• • •

On the Republican side of the fence in the Ninth district may be seen a pile of arms and legs owned by gentlemen who are mixing in a four-cornered scrap that promises to be the liveliest ever. The four are E. G. Valentine, of Breckenridge; Andrew Grindeland, of Warren; Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston, and S. G. Comstock, of Moorhead.

• • •

One editor says that the state auditorship fight will make an excellent test of the primary election law. The primary election law will be tested, but not by any state fights, for it does not affect them in any manner.

HENRY WATTERSON'S ADVICE TO TILLMAN.

Louisville Courier-Journal: A little less than three years before John Caldwell Calhoun died in Washington city, his harness on his back, there was born in Eregefield, South Carolina, a baby boy, destined to play a part and cut a figure in the public life of the Palmetto state, and to occupy the seat in the senate of the United States which Calhoun had filled so long; a farmer's boy, as Calhoun was; his name was Benjamin Ryan Tillman.

Pursuing the restless life of this stormy petrel of contemporary politics, we prefer to believe that two baby Tillmans were born that 11th of August, 1847; one with a pitchofrk, the other with a darning needle; both with a rattle, for it is not easy to reconcile Tillman, the constructive statesman of schools and industries—the Tillman of the darning needles mending South Carolina's stockings—the successful author of the greatest practical moral innovation of modern times, the dispensary system—and the Tillman of knock-down and drag-out politics, the Tillman of the pitchfork. Each of us doubtless has within himself something of the Jekyl and the Hyde. Why not Benjamin Ryan Tillman? Was it not Jekyl who studied under Galphin, who, though hut a child, enlisted for a soldier, and, stricken with half blindness, suffered the torments and horrors of the last year of the Confederacy, returning to an impoverished homestead to follow the plow during the awful days of reconstruction, and, getting a few pots and pans together, who married Sallie Starke? Surely it must have been, it was; whilst the Tillman who swooped down from the hills upon the bluebloods of the old regime, and sent both Hampton and Butler to grass, and raised so much hell to the square inch generally, was Hyde.

Everybody in Washington personally likes this brittle, brusque gentleman with the pitchfork. It is said the pitchfork is sometimes padded with velvet. In his private life Tillman is as virtuous and clean as Calhoun was. His integrity, as his courage, is unchallenged. His abilities show for themselves. Why should such a man, with his opportunities for good, his power for harm, not put himself through a course of introspection, why should he not begin to restrain himself? That fracas in the senate ought to have been as a flash of lightning indicating the situation as it concerns him individually. Honestly, he was seeking to smoke out a rat—He did it; but why place himself on an equality with a rat? One can always fight. Of all things a fight is the thing that cannot, will not get away from us unless we so let it. But, in politics, fighting is a mighty poor business. One has to kill so many adversaries; and though he kill a thousand, once he loses a battle, it is—

—Goodbye, my honey,
Good evenin', Mary Jane.

It is much better to give and take; to live and let live. Treat, Ben Tillman!

And so it is, addressing this sturdy, pugnacious, upright man, as one brother to another, we say, quit your foolishness, discipline your intellect and your temper, and keeping your pitchfork handy, reserve it for emergencies. Foraker is by nature a sweet fellow; and, even Lodge is not so bad if you fumigate the premises. They are professional politicians—statesmanlike bunco-steerers—spread-eagle card-sharps—and they play you, dear boy, for a farmer, as you are! Learn some of the tricks of the trade, if not for profit, at least for protection. Snatch the flag out of their hands—they have no more right to it than you have—and, after smuggling their faces with its folds, swipe the staff over their astonished craniums. Leave the nigger to simmer in his juice; but mop the floor with Lodge's cant about religion and civilization, and with Foraker's buncombe about the boys in blue! The pitchfork is all right, but do not always use the pitchfork.

And, finally, senator not merely in South Carolina, but in Democratic party councils generally, try the virtues of sweet oil. Throw the nasty old bottle of vitriol out of the window. Easy's better than hard. An ounce of sweet is worth a pound of sour; and you can afford it. Your name and fame as a fighter are safe. You have come to your kingdom. Lord it, if you please, but lord it like a king!

MEMORIAL PROGRAM

Various Exercises In Which the G. A. R. Will Participate.

Annual Memorial Service at First Presbyterian Church.

Patriotic Exercises at School---Program For Memorial Day.

During the coming week the exercises by which the members of the Grand Army of the Republic do honor to the members of their dead comrades and endeavor to instill in the minds of the young the great lesson of patriotism which their services and sacrifices in the conflict of 1861-65 teach, will be held. The program for this year is much the same as in former years, but the interests of the veterans in them is as keen as it ever was.

Tomorrow is Memorial Sunday, the day upon which members of the Grand Army attend service in a body. This year they will attend the First Presbyterian church, and will hear a sermon by Rev. H. B. Sutherland, of the Lakeside Presbyterian church. The members will assemble at their post halls at 10 o'clock, and the services will open at 10:30 o'clock.

Friday is Memorial day. The members of the G. A. R. will assemble at their post halls at 9:30 a. m. and march in a body to the central high school to attend the services at 10 o'clock, which will be under the direction of C. T. Clement, commander of Culver post. There will be music by the Temple Quartet and an address by Rev. Dr. Robert J. Forbes, followed by music by the Temple Quartet.

Immediately after the services at the High School, members of the G. A. R. veterans of the civil war, veterans of the Spanish-American war, Women's Relief corps, Ladies of the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans will proceed to the north pier of the ship canal and "strew with flowers the waters that run to the sea," in memory of the sailor dead who fell in the cause of the Republic. All citizens who sympathise with the spirit of the day are invited by the G. A. R. to unite in its proper observance.

At 1:40 p. m. all members of the G. A. R. will report at the foot of Cemetery avenue, near Forest Hill, and march to the cemetery, where at 2 o'clock the ritual memorial services of the G. A. R. will be performed under the direction of C. T. Clement, commander of Culver post. All graves of veterans of the civil war will be decorated by committees from the G. A. R. The Women's Relief corps, Ladies of the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans, and the Spanish-American volunteers are invited to participate in this service.

The firing squad will be furnished by the Spanish-American volunteers. The buglers will be Fred R. Lowe and Wesley McCauley.

For the benefit of those going to the cemetery in the afternoon, the street car company will institute a 10-minute car service from and after 12 o'clock, and it is urged by the committee that as many as can take the early cars and thereby prevent a congestion of traffic later on.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S GIFT.

Minneapolis Journal: Emperor William is going to present us with a statue of Frederick the Great. Fred was quite a soldier in his time, but his fame rests chiefly upon the fact that he was an ancestor of the present emperor of the Germans.

Springfield Republican: It is a very interesting gift which the kaiser now makes to the American people in the form of a bronze statue of Frederick the Great, to be erected in the city of Washington. Frederick himself never could have anticipated it. President Roosevelt's acceptance of the gift is gracious and satisfactory in its expression that the statute will be considered an evidence of friendly relations between the two countries. Now a statue of George Washington should be raised in Berlin.

Chicago Chronicle: The king monument business was tried on American soil a few years ago. The attempt was a failure. Every similar attempt is foredoomed to failure. The American spirit will tolerate neither kings nor kings' monuments nor monuments to agents of kings. Maudlin sentimentality erected a monument a few years ago to a king's spy. One quiet night the American spirit chipped its shoulder off. The maudlin sentimentalists repaired the hurt. On another quiet night the American spirit placed a charge of powder at its base. There was not enough of the kingly resemblance left to repair. This, it is candid to predict, will be the inevitable fate of any kingly monument placed on American soil. We are through with kings and all their works and pomps.

Indianapolis News: Emperor William returns to the subject with great grace and appositeness. He begs to present to the citizens of this country a statue of Frederick the Great, to be placed in Washington as a lasting sign of the intimate relations that have been successfully fostered and developed between the two great nations of Germany and America. Frederick the Great, the emperor recalls, maintained a friendly attitude towards the American republic, and the example set by the great king the emperor means to follow. Frederick the Great was really one of the few men that deserve the title. He was great. It is said that President Roosevelt has determined on a place near the new war college as the location of the statue. A fitter place could not be chosen. Frederick the Great was preeminently a great warrior, though he was great in other phases of his character. The value of the gift, however, is a recognition of Prince Henry's visit and the consequences of it. It sets a good example for general imitation. Nations might turn aside at times thus to mark a recognition of one another.

Happiness and Spring.

St. Louis Republic: With the races under brilliant headway, college and professional baseball fairly started on a prosperous season, the summer gardens about to open and spring vegetables beginning to come in, the person who can't be happy these days is a subject either for our tenderest pity or justified censure. If in reasonably good health and only the most moderate circumstances, it is a sin not to be happy at such a time. Also is it inconceivable why anyone should resist the soft allurements to holiday happines which the early vernal days invariably hold out to us. Wise folks are not guilty of such error. They gratefully grasp every opportunity for happiness. They defer sorrowing, but never defer rejoicing. If you miss a chance for grieving you are the gainer. If of your own violition you miss a chance for jubilating—oh, the folly of such a loss!

Where Will Legislatures Stop?

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: The British house of lords has rejected one of J. Pierpont Morgan's proposed underground railroads in London—an astounding exhibition of parliamentary nerve.

Great Clattering to Be Expected.

Chicago Journal: No wonder Bill Mason is making a lot of noise as he is chased down the road. Look at the size of the can.

A Summer Tourists' Attraction.

Portland Oregonian: We begin to suspect that J. P. Morgan got up the coronation just to make business for his steamship lines.

Speculating on Causes.

Chicago Chronicle: According to the commercial agencies the unseasonable moisture and low temperatures have unfavorably affected business this spring. It would be strange if they hadn't. The man with a cold in his head and lumbago in his back may be a budding Napoleon of finance, but he will devote more thought to mustard plasters and hot foot baths than to colossal business projects.

Accurate Treatment of Men's Diseases.

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

I guess at nothing. My understanding of men's diseases is so sufficient that I have no need to resort to guess work. To men's diseases alone I have devoted my entire attention for many years. I have closely studied them in every possible phase and complication. I believe there is no case that I cannot accurately diagnose. My diagnosis is the foundation of my treatment. It determines the course to pursue. As the cure progresses I carefully note developments and vary the remedies accordingly. I employ original and distinctive methods of treatment, but they are not set methods. They are pliable to meet the conditions in individual cases, and their use calls for the most delicate prescribing. That they are correct, scientific and rational methods is conclusively proven by the cures they produce.

"WEAKNESS"

That disorder commonly known as "weakness," has for years and generations baffled the efforts of physicians, yet to this very day a majority of doctors are attempting to overcome it by methods that have been in constant use and that have constantly failed for half a century. They dose the system with powerful stimulants and tonics calculated to restore nervous forces or strength that is not and never has been lacking, with a result that the functions are temporarily excited to the positive detriment of the patient. Weakness, we will call it such for convenience just now, is only a symptom resulting from a chronically swollen and inflamed prostate gland, and is curable by local treatment only. Either early dissipation or some improperly treated contracted disease is responsible for the inflammation in most instances, though accidental injury, strain, etc., may produce the same result. I have permanently cured thousands of cases of prematureness, loss of power, which demonstrates the absolute accuracy of my understanding and treatment of the disorder. In years I have not met with a single failure, and I have entire confidence in my ability to cure all cases that come to me for treatment other than that which I have perfected can completely and permanently restore strength and vigor.

VARICOCELE

Many men afflicted with varicocele are endangering their general health, their manly power and even life itself by allowing the disorder to remain uncured. Varicocele results from partial paralysis of the delicate nerve fibres that have a part in controlling local circulation of the blood. The muscular coating of the veins being deprived of nervous communication and control become inactive, weaken and relax. The blood vessels expand from the pressure within, the circulation in the parts become sluggish, and frequently stagnant pools form in little nooks and pockets that constantly enlarge as the relaxation continues. The possibility exists that clots may form in these stagnant pools and then pass out into the general circulation. Should one find lodgment in the valve of the heart the result might be instant death, or should it be carried to the brain, general paralysis will follow.

I guarantee to cure varicocele in one week by a method that involves no cutting or ligature, or caustic. No other physician employs a like method, and so thorough is my work that there need not be the slightest fear of a relapse into the old condition. Those who have been long afflicted with varicocele will never realize the injury it has caused until they feel the vim, energy and buoyancy of spirts that a complete cure will bring.

CONTRACTED DISORDERS

To but partially cure a contracted disease is almost as dangerous as to allow it to go untreated. Unless every particle of infection and inflammation is removed, the probability exists that the disease will gradually work its way into the general system. All greater is the danger of the prostate gland becoming chronically inflammed, which always brings partial or complete loss of power. Perhaps 25 per cent of the cases of so-called "weakness" are a direct result of some improperly treated disease. During the past five years I have treated over 6500 cases of contracted disorders and have effected an absolutely thorough and safe cure in each instance. There have been no relapses or undesirable developments whatever and my patients have been cured in less time than other and less thorough forms of treatment require in producing even doubtful results.

STRICTURE

My treatment for stricture removes the necessity for surgical operations, even in severe cases of long standing. I do no cutting or dilating. No other physician employs my methods of overcoming this disorder, so the service I offer you is original and distinctive. Do not give up hope because others have failed. I will cure you and the cure will be a prompt and painless one. My treatment dissolves the stricture and permanently removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, subdues all inflammation, relieves all irritation or congestion that may exist in the kidneys or bladder, reduces enlargement of the prostate gland and restores to health and tone all organs affected by the disease.

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON

I permanently cure this most hideous of all blood diseases. I employ harmless, blood cleansing remedies that positively drive the very last taint of virus from the system, and every symptom vanishes to appear no more.

Constipated Old Age

Isn't it too bad that so many people, when they get old, get cranky and rickety and mean, and don't feel right toward themselves or anybody else; yet it need not be so.

"Cascarets make me feel so light-hearted and lively, that though I have seen three score and three, a few more scores I yet may see."—James S. Miller, Villa Park, Cal.

"For many years I have been troubled with constipation. I used one 25c and two 50c boxes of Cascarets and they have effected a permanent cure. Since my discharge from the army in 1865, I have never before found a lasting remedy."—H. J. McGwern, 949 Chapline Street, Wheeling, W. Va.

"I was troubled with something that baffled the skill of physicians for 35 years; I used five boxes of Cascarets and am in better health than ever before."—C. C. Redick, Chase City, Va.

"Six month's ago I took Cascarets for constipation contracted during the War of the Rebellion. The result is wonderful and I advise all old soldiers to try them."—Jas. Putman, late Capt 33rd Ill., Haney, Wis.

"I was feeling bad, losing flesh, had dull headache, cold feet, and couldn't sleep well. I took Cascarets, and in four weeks gained 15 pounds. Am feeling fine now."—A. B. Story, veteran Mexican and Civil Wars, Epworth, Ia.

"I have been using Cascarets for some time for constipation, and their greatest benefit has been to cure me of asthma. I am in my 86th year and had been suffering with asthma for years."—T. M. White, Bob Lee, Georgia.

All old people's muscles get weak and flabby, and it's the same with the muscular walls of their intestines as with the muscles of their arms. When the bowels grow weak, the old folks get constipated, bilious, sick, helpless, irritable, and that's the chief cause of their death. Old folks should take Cascarets Candy Cathartic bowel tonic, keep their liver lively, their bowels regular and strong, and live to be a hundred.

If They're Burrows Shoes They're Proper.

You have a mistaken idea if you are under the impression that our prices are high. While high grades are naturally associated with high prices, such is not the case here. In other words, your money buys more value here — more correctness — more durability — more exclusiveness than it will buy elsewhere.

The propinquity of summer must have turned your thoughts to footwear adapted for hot weather wear.

Our distinctive styles in Oxfords will appeal to you —the handsome Colonials in patent kid, velour calf and patent leather, with long tongue, large bows— the lovely creations with high heels.

You'll admire them because they are different from those shown elsewhere.

Special attention is called to the new Oxfords for wear while playing "Ping-Pong"—specially adapted —allowing free play to those muscles which are taxed most.

We also invite the attention of young ladies and gentlemen preparing for commencement and graduation exercises to the handsomest line of footwear for such occasions ever shown in Duluth.

For June weddings we especially well prepared, as we are showing all of the new and approved forms to complete the trousseaux.

All the newest designs in footwear for out-of-door sports. New golf and tennis shoes and Oxfords are here—smart styles that bear the unmistakable mark of their ultra-stylishness — styles that you will look in vain for elsewhere — exclusive with us.

Fashionable Footwear.

Duluth musicians took a conspicuous part in the state musical teachers' convention at St. Paul this week, and acquitted themselves with much credit. The finest musichns in the state took part. The Beethoven trio, consisting of Mrs. Marie Geist-Erd, Frederick G. Bradbury and Gerard Tonning, gave a number at one of the concerts, and the Dispatch said of it:

"A trio of Duluth instrumentalists, at the conclusion of an over-long program, contrived to hold and to revive the waning attention with a trio by Arensuy. Gerard Tonning plays the piano as if he had always known how and as if it were somehow his natural speech. His playing is as full of poetry as are his compositions, and both speak of a nature full of music. Mrs. Marie Geist-Erd, 'cellist, and Fred G. Bradbury completed the trio. Both are able musicians, and both understand the requirements of ensemble playing."

Mr. Tonning was the only state composer represented at the convention, and was therefore a prominent figure.

TEMPERANCE MEETING.

Second of the Series to Be Held Sunday.

The second union temperance meeting in the series being held this year under the auspices of the Scandinavian churches of the city will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Swedish M. E. church, corner of Twentieth avenue west and Third street. The program has been slightly changed from that already published, some of those who were to take part, not being able to attend.

Professor C. A. Heath, the colored singer, who has delighted Duluth audiences with his singing, will render several selections. John Hurtig will read a poem entitled "Legalized Temptation." The same subject will be discussed in addresses by Rev. N. B. Thvedt and Editor John L. Erickson, of the Superior Tidende.

The committee appointed at the last union meeting will report some plan for discussian on the subject of establishing a workingmen's club. This discussion will be a special feature of the meeting. The meeting will close with the reading of an original poem by Frank Londeen.

The tank will be built on a new design, the side walls being curved in toward the center to prevent the bulging that is usual in structures of the kind, when full of grain. Wright Bros., of West Superior, are driving the piling for the foundations.

HOPEFUL.

Friendly Filipino Thinks End of Insurrection at Hand.

San Francisco, May 24.—Felipe Buencamino, formerly a member of Aguinaldo's camp, but now loyal to the American cause, who is now here from Manila in an interview, said:

"In the Philippines the conditions at present are very hopeful for the termination of the insurrection with the capture of Gen. Lukben and the surrender of Gen. Malvar. The first was due to Gen. Smith, the second to Gen. Bell and both the wise and humanitarian policy of Gen. Chaffee. Political peace is assured and now with the assistance of Governor Taft we shall move onward toward moral peace."

While in the city Senor Bunecamina will be the guest of Gen. Hughes at the Casino club.

VALUABLE TAPESTRY.

Presented By Mr. Morgan to King Edward.

New York, May 24.—A curious detail of the coronation preparation has been revealed at the South Kensington museum, says a Tribune dispatch from London. J. Pierpont Morgan is said to have presented to the king a large tapestry for which he paid $500,000. This tapestry will be used for decorative effect in the abbey at the coronation service. If this information be accurate it is a Spanish tapestry about twelve feet square with crimsons and blues of exceptional beauty and richness, and a great deal of gold thread is woven with the colors. The tapestry is now in the museum. No one is allowed to see it.

THE DAKOTAS.

Denver Man Caught Robbing a Store at Deadwood.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Deadwood—J. F. Canwile's confectionery and tobacco store was robbed by Fred Miller, who is now in the county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury. Miller was caught redhanded. Policeman Elward met him at 5 o'clock a. m., carrying a quantity of goods, including a lot of writing material bearing Canwile's imprint. Miller was taken back to the store, and the policeman found just outside the door a pail of jewelry that had been taken from one of the show cases. In a cellar near by a lot of tobacco was found. The store was robbed of about $325 worth of goods, the greater portion of which has been recovered. Miller arrived in Deadwood Tuesday night from Denver.

Vermillion—The plum crop in Clay county will not be as large as was indicated at the opening of spring. The cool weather during the time the trees were in blossom served as a blight to the fruit, and while the crop will be far from a failure it will not be as large as expected. Apples are a good crop, as expected. In strawberries this county will make a bigger showing than ever this year. The berries are jumping along at a rapid rate and will be on the market in about a week.

Clay county will in the near future be crossed by two lines of electric railroad, one on the east and the other on the west side of the county. The franchise has been accepted by the petitioners, C. W. Trent and H. E. Vaughn. The promoters are given two years in which to get started. Recently they made a trip through the county and found the farmers very enthusiastic, promises of land and patronage being freely given.

Armour—L. E. Kellogg, an old and respected citizen, died of quick consumption. He was 63 years of age and was among the pioneer settlers of Douglas county.

Sioux Falls—As the result of a mass meeting of citizens, Sioux Falls will retain the Norwegian Lutheran college which the citizens of Albert Lea, Minn., had decided to ask the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran synod, soon to meet at Minneapolis, to remove to that place. Sioux Falls people have decided to contribute $10,000 for the enlargement of the college.

Dell Rapids—Because land is more valuable for crops than for ball grounds and race track purposes the track here will have to be abandoned.

Rapid City—Seth Bullock, supervisor of the Black Hills forest reserve, recommends that a department of forestry be established at the state school of mines.

Sioux Falls—The 14-year-old son of W. L. Wallis, postmaster at Riverside, was arrested on a charge of sending an objectionable letter through the mails. He gave bonds.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Rev. D. G. Colp, of the Plymouth Congregational church, has submitted his resignation to become effective Sept. 15. He will spend two years in the Chicago university, studying for a higher degree. He has been here about three years and is one of the most popular and successful pastors of the city.

Bismarck—Judge Cowan scored two old men, one of whom had been in the country fourteen and the other sixteen years and neither of whom had learned the English language. They wished to take out their papers so they could file on claims, but Judge Cowan refused them the privilege.

Jamestown—John Sebold, of Melville, was committed to the asylum. It appears he has been hounded by creditors and worried about the matter to such an extent that his mind was affected.

Benjamin Kuch, the 8-year-old lad who disappeared from his home southwest of this city, was found eight days after his disappearance at the home of a farmer near Kensal, fifty miles from his own home. He rode the distance alone and is none the worse.

WILL STOP AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, May 24.—The University of California track team which has been making an extended trip in the East, has accepted Coach Staggs offer of a dual meet with the University of Chicago and will stop at Chicago on the way back to the Pacific coast for a contest on June 7. By the request of California the meet will consist of only thirteen events instead of the usual fourteen, the throwing of the discus being omitted.

LAST "TAP DAY."

New York, May 24.—"Tap day," on which the three senior societies select their candidates from the junior class, probably has been observed for the last time on the Yale campus, says a World special from New Haven. Treasurer Tyler, who has charge of the university grounds, has sent word to one of the senior societies to that erect. The action was taken because it damages the campus grass and gives the affair unwarrantable official color. A vigorous protest from the students is expected.

ISRAELITE ALLIANCE.

New York, May 24.—The Israelite alliance of America will hold its first public meeting in this city tomorrow. The object of the alliance is stated to be to create a spirit of universal religious toleration and civil and political equality.

By-Laws of the Business Men's Club of West End.

A special meeting of the Business Men's club at the West End was held at Normanna hall at the corner of Twentieth avenue west and Superior street, last evening. The greater part of the evening was taken up in the discussion of the by-laws, which were prepared by a committee of which R. D. Haven was the chairman. The by-laws were adopted and the club is now fully organized.

There were a number of applications to be presented for membership, but owing to other business these went over until the next meeting.

The club has engaged permanent quarters in the Normanna building. A large front room on the second floor of the building has been rented for a year and this will be fitted up appropriately for club headquarters. Weekly meetings of the club will be held for the discussion of matters of interest to the members and special meetings will be held at any time, on call of the president. The next meeting of the club will be held Friday evening of next week. By that time the business matters of the club will have been satisfactorily adjusted and an outline of the campaign for the coming year will be made.

Joseph Naughton's Trial.

The case against Joseph S. Naughton, one of the Douglas county supervisors, will come up in West Superior June 9. Mr. Naughton, who is well known on this side of the bay, is charged with forgery and his absence from West Superior during the time that the authorities were looking for him occasioned no small sensation last year. It is alleged that he signed the name of Wes Jones to a fraudulent county order. The question that is to be fought out in court is whether such a signing is a forgery. The defense will claim that it is not and the entire case is said to hinge on the legal interpretation of the word.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Started Out Weak and Lower But Firmed Up.

Trading In Futures Was Almost Lifeless on the Duluth Board.

Flax Business Very Light and Cash Seed Strong.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 24.—The wheat market started out weak and lower this morning, their being quite a bearish sentiment in the market. The cables were weak and the crop experts were claiming the winter wheat crop will exceed 400,000,000 bus ,while the government bureau's estimate of last year's crop indicated an increase of 70,000,000 bus over the early reports. Later the market turned stronger on a good export demand at the seaboard and without much trading advanced to the close, which was but little changed from yesterday.

The Liverpool market closed ¾-⅞d lower. The seaboard reported 92 loads of wheat taken for export.

Primary receipts of wheat were 258,000 bus; last year, 495,000 bus. Shipments, 322,000 bus; last year, 886,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 389,000 bus. July corn in the Chicago market advanced ⅝c, and oats ½c. Primary receipts of corn were 248,000 bus; last year, 476,000 bus. Shipments, 245,000 bus; last year, 372,000 bus. Clearances were 900 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 125 cars, and at Chicago, 7, a total of 132 cars, against 114 last week, and 200 last year.

Wheat on the Duluth floor refused to awaken to any more life than has characterized it all week. The opening was 1c off at 71⅞c. It sold at 71⅞c at 9:35, at 71¾-⅞c at 10:50, and then advanced closing at a shade lower than yesterday at 71⅞-⅝c. Chicago closed a shade higher and Minneapolis ⅛c lower.

Cash sales were but a few cars. July price was offered for No. 1 northern, 2 3c under for No. 2 and 3½c under for No. 3.

Flax trading was very light. Cash seed was strong, selling up to $1.77 and closing at $1.76¾. September was slightly weaker early, but closed ⅛c up. October declined ¾c. September oats declined 1c and rye was 1c stronger.

Following are the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat: Cash—No. 1 hard, 77¼c; No. 1 northern, 74½c; No. 2 northern, 72½c; No. 2 spring, 71c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 77¼c; No. 1 northern, 71½c; May, 74¾c; July, 71½-⅝c; September, 70c. Manitoba—No. 1 northern, cash, 73½c; May, 73½c; No. 1 northern, 71c. Oats, cash, 44¾c; September, 29¾c. Rye, 56½c. Flax, cash, $1.76½; to arrive, $1.76¾. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market here opened weak. The increase in the government estimate of last year's crop induced a good deal of realizing. Later, however, the trade was more disposed to modify their feelings in regard to the report. The second judgment is that the increase is more relative than positive. The department is manifestly trying to harmonize the basis of its estimate with the basis of the census bureau. If they originally underestimated this crop they have by the same process of figuring been underestimating previous crops. It naturally follows from this that if the production has been underestimated consumption has been underestimated also.

The market towards the close turned stendier on this conception and also on the report of good export demand at the seaboard, with large clearances for the day. The weather continues in the main favorable for the crop. The Southwest reports increased farmers' deliveries. Some sources in the Northwest also indicate increased movement. The closing was on the whole strong.

Corn—The government report increased its estimate of the total crop to 1,500,000,000 bus. The effect of this on the market early was the same as wheat. There was some selling pressure at the opening, but later the market turned strong. Speculative operations continue on very moderate scale here and the movement is so small as to have little if any effect in prices otherwise. There is no change in the local situation.

Corn—The market is very quiet and steady. There is still some uncovered short interest in May and the local operator to whom these deliveries are due controls the cash price and is in complete control of the situation. We see no object therefore for standing out on short sales for this month.

• • •

Snow's Crop Report: While rains since May 1 have served to put the surface soil in good condition throughout the corn belt, there is still a serious moisture deficiency for the season in all important districts. From March 1 to date the rainfall in the corn belt averages from less than half up to 80 per cent normal. The crop is now in good shape and making rapid growth on a much enlarged acreage, but the sub-soil is dry from the Ohio valley westward and crop results will depend upon frequent and well distributed rainfall during the next six weeks. Wheat promises are fully maintained, and the crop is now heading as far north as Central Illinois, with favorable conditions during the period of filling and ripening; the harvest should exceed 400,000,000 bus. The spring wheat is acreage shortened by an excess of moisture in the Red River valley, but this is partially offset by increased seeding in other sections. Crops are making good growth. Oats are improving moderately and there is good growth and a good crop promised.

• • •

Harris, Gates & Co.: If the government figures on the yield seem larger because put in line with the census, it must be remembered that the census of 1900 showed an average of 5¼ bus per capita eaten by our own people. This would absorb over 400,000,000 bus of the last crop. Seeding of 50,000,000 acres in round numbers would require 60,000,000 bus more. We have already exported over 200,000,000 bus and fed 90,-000,000 to 75,000,000 bus. About 15,000,000 bus is used in manufactures and other ways. However, we have already distributed the entire crop and are now living off the reserves from former crops.

• • •

N. H. Perrin, Chicago: The government's final figures of the crops of 1901 are beyond the fondest hopes of the most radical bear and undoubtedly will have at least a temporarily depressing feature on all cereals. The weakness will be likely to be more pronounced because of light outside trade. The question to decide now is whether the grain is still in farmers' hands or has been fed. It is as much of a guess as ever. As a matter of fact, it is ancient history anyway and will probably be so looked upon.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: The government makes more increase over its previous estimate of wheat, corn and oats than had been expected. We consider, however, that as it is in the main not absolutely an increase but only a relative one, it is not so important. The department is simply changing its basis of estimate to harmonize more closely with the estimate of the census bureau.

Harris, Gates & Co.: A comparison of the two sets of government report figures on corn this year makes their unreliability apparent. Their first figures made the acreage for 1901, 82,821,000 acres; yield, 1,-359,351,000 bus yield, while in the report of May 23 they give the acreage as 91,349,928 acres, and yield 1,522,510,801 bus. They add 9,500,000 acres to their former report and show the yield to be a fraction over 16 bus, but the acreage running over a series of years in their reports, indicated a yield of about 25 bus to the acre. So to sum it up, their figures indicate about half a crop, making proper allowance for errors in acreage. If they fell down 2,500,000 this year, the probabilities are their figures are unreliable.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, May 24.—Wheat: The government report, issued last evening, giving the final figures on the last crop 35,000,000 bus was generally considered bearish, although it simply confirmed the estimates of private statisticians. However, it caused a weak opening on which local shorts took advantage to cover freely. Their buying absorbed the offerings and later in the day prices rallied off reported large exports business at the seaboard and in sympathy with the strength in coarse grains. The market closed fairly firm, ⅛c higher than yesterday. Foreign markets were generally weak. Liverpool closed ¾d lower for the day. Continental markets were also lower. Broomhall predicts the world's shipments in July will be about 9,000,000 bus. He expects some increase in the quantity on passage. Cash demand here was rather quiet and Minneapolis millers reported flour demand very poor with some of the mills closing there. The weather abroad continues favorable for the growing crop and in this county all that could be desired, and as long as these conditions continue we think prices will go lower, but would advise selling only on the hard spots. Estimated receipts for Monday covering forty-eight hours, 25 cars.

Corn—The government report issued last evening giving final figures on the last crop, 1,522,000,000 bus, was considered bearish and caused rather free selling by local bears, in fact they sold too freely and got short. On the decline there was good buying by the bull party and shortly before the end of the session when early sellers turned buyers they found little for sale. Prices sharply rallied and the market closed firm, ⅜c higher than last night. Foreign markets were generally quiet. Liverpool closed ¼d lower for the day. Country offerings were fairly liberal and with good weather we look for large receipts, but not much before next month. Cash demand was good. Weather throughout the corn belt generally favorable to the growing crop. There is a very large concentrated holding of both July and September by strong people, which makes it a dangerous proposition to sell short, as they might at any time give the market a severe twist. Estimated receipts for Monday, covering 48 hours, 90 cars.

There was a fairly good trade in oats today and the market after opening easier in sympathy with wheat, later rallied on good buying and closed practically unchanged from last night for July and September. There was very little doing in the May option. Country offerings were moderate, cash demand was good. The weather generally favorable for the growing crop. The final figures on last crop as given by the government were put at 736,000,000 bus, but has no effect on prices. Estimated receipts for Monday, covering forty-eight hours, 215 cars.

Provisions opened fair. Although the hog market was lower. Brokers bid up the lard early, but very little business resulted and the market closed dull with small gains for the day. Yesterday's queer market had the effect today in keeping all classes out of the market and we had the dullest day of the season. Receipts of hogs were lighter than expected, but bad roads and delayed transportation facilities were probably the cause. Estimated hogs for Monday, 37,000, and for next week, 170,000.

The total sales were 232,900 shares.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Bache to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market conditions at the end of this week are vastly different in tone from those which prevailed on Monday, at that time the coal strike, the monetary situation and to a considerable extent the crop outlook were deterring factors. As regards the first named, feeling is better, based on the belief that the strike will be of short duration. Money rates ceased to be heavy purchases by the European account and the large decrease in loans and increases in reserves. Abundant rains in the crop districts have contributed largely to the bullish feeling. To add still these encouraging conditions comes the almost certain belief of a speedy cessation of hostilities in South Africa and thus we have experienced a reversal of the market's tendency from the early part of this week with indications of a further enhancement of values in the immediate future. On the appearance of the bank statement which was exceedingly favorable renewed activity set in and the market closes very strong with railway stocks at the best figures and with special features, Canadian Pacific, Colorado Fuel, the Fuller issues and the tractions.

• • •

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley: Stocks were very strong yesterday, but prices did not seem able to get above Thursday tops. It is quite natural for the market to hesitate. The coal strike and poor weather may both be settled quickly or they may not. Reports are contradictory. I am not in favor of selling short, however, but rather think best play is to buy on moderate reactions or on a scale and be satisfied with two or three points profit, or else buy and put away for six months without temporary fluctuations. Given a favorable strike settlement and good summer crops and we will have a bull campaign within the next few months, but it will be ill advised for the Chicago crowd to force this upward movement as they tried to do six weeks ago. The market ought naturally to remain in a state of equilibrium around the present level for some little time, what might be called a "sneaking bull market," until the general advance starts.

Union Pacific, Atchison, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio and T. C. & I are stocks which can be traded in profitable and safely. Pan Handle and International Power are inactive stocks likely to have big advances perhaps tomorrow, perhaps several months hence. I advise buying on a scale down and take profits on a scale up.

• • •

Dick to B. E. Baker: The market is daily more professional. There is buying of Atchison based on good crop prospects. The Gates crowd is working St. Paul. Strike news is unfavorable and we are told there may be serious complications. Money is very easy and gold exports in the near future are probable. I think the market should be sold on strong days.

Waldorf to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Reactionists, among whom are many sold out bulls, are disappointed tonight because the market did not get a setback of at least a point in the first half of the day. The fact is stocks are offered so sparingly that when good news comes in they are easily bid up. The good news today consisted chiefly of crop reports and the week's movement in money. Some estimates received from the West indicate a 5-point improvement in the condition of winter wheat as compared with the average condition on May 1. The big interests attach great importance to this phase of the situation, and aver that it points to a crop well above the average for the past dozen years. The element ignores entirely the coal strike, believing that contrary to the general anticipation the trouble will be settled when least expected and it must be admitted that despite the warlike aspect of matters, there are well informed Eastern speculators who hold the same opinion based evidently on information not available to the public. The strength of high-priced coal stocks and the present absorption of Reading common by banking interests are looked on as indications favorable to an early termination of the strike, without serious loss to the companies or material gain by the men.

Among the railroad stocks on which great hopes are built, Union Pacific is perhaps the most conspicuous. Though it is not generally known there are good grounds for the statement that J. P. Morgan has been accumulating these shares. It might be added that Union Pacific is also one of the stocks specified by Keene, when on the eve of his departure for Europe and in conversation with personal friends, he expressed the opinion that conditions were all right.

Walker to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was strong and active and there was good buying in the whole list. All the grangers were well bought and specialties were advanced. The bank statement was good and traders covered shorts. The market continues strong until the close, which was at the best and with general good feeling.

• • •

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: I cannot advise buying anything until after a reaction. Prices may go much higher, but they should have some reaction before doing so. If good crops are general and money continues easy we may look for a big bull market next fall and winter. However, now I don't think we will have more than a 1 or 2 point advance at the most, and I would not advise buying for a few days. Sell short on this rally as previously advised in these letters.

• • •

Harris, Gates & Co.: I think we are going to run into a bull market in stocks. I think Union Pacific and St. Paul should be bought. D. & R. G. preferred is very cheap at this price. It is a 5 per cent stock selling at 99 and it will always 5 per cent I think. I am a great bull on it. I believe it is perfectly safe and if you buy a little, think you will make a profit on it.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—John Stanton says: "There is every reason to believe that the price of refined copper will go considerably higher. Consumption is very heavy and production has not increased to any appreciable extent. Much of the large surplus which was held in this country six months ago has been shipped abroad. The mills are working to their utmost capacity and many customers are anxious to know where the supply is coming from if consumption and production continue in the present ratio."

Hayden Stone & Co. to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Mohawk continues to be persistently bought and has made the biggest advance of the day reaching 43. We believe it is going to be the best of all those lake mines. U. S. Mines also is continually being absorbed by purchases for some lake account. The rest of the list was quiet, but firm. Untided Copper certificates will be issued on June 2.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—The coppers remained dull but firm. There was good buying of Mohawk and we look to see it sell higher. The orders evidently came from New York. John Stanton and other copper experts continue to talk higher prices for the metal on continuance of heavy consumption. We look to see the coppers all gradually work higher and advise their purchase.

• • •

S. B. Dickinson to W. H. Laidley & Co.—The Engineering and Mining Journal today will report that the copper market continues to improve all round. Advances are comparatively slow but continuous. The heavy consumption keeps large on the other side is improving. The price shows improvement and should improve still more. Lake copper is being quoted at 12¾c, electrolytic ingots bars at 12⅝c. Castings of copper which are in special demand at 12¾.

• • •

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.—The National Copper Trade Journal in its current issue says that recent estimates that the lake copper production this year would increase 50,000,000 pounds are excessive. It believes it will be over 370,000,000 pounds and perhaps not that.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 24.—Close, money on call nominal; no loans; prime mercantile paper, 4½@5 per cent; sterling exchange steady with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86¾@4.87¼ for demand and at $4.84¼@4½ for sixty days; posted rates, $4.85½ and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.83¾@4.84⅞. NEWS OF THE LAKES

Manager and Chief Engineer of Tug Company Man Tug.

Brought Out Tug Excelsior to Release the Steamer Leland.

Though Licensed Tugmen, They Will Not Operate Tugs Further.

The local tug company got out another tug this morning, but it was only temporarily, and it was manned by Capt. H. G. Inman, manager of the company, and M. Ryan, chief engineer. The tug Excelsion was put out this morning to release the steamer Leland, which had been aground up the bay for three days. The Wisconsin and other tugs had been working ineffectually, so Capt. Inman got out the Excelsior, and with the assistance of the tug Wisconsin, released the steamer, Then the Excelsior was replaced in the slip.

Both Capt. Inman and M. Ryan are licensed men and practical tug men, but the company has not asked them to take out tugs, and they do not intend to do so except in extreme cases like the one that brought them out this morning. The company has licensed men as managers and chief engineers in other ports, but it has asked none of them to take out tugs.

MAY BE CHICORA.

Whaleback Pig Stuck on Wreck In Lake Michigan.

It may be the wreck of the Chicora that lies off Glencoe, Lake Michigan, with a whaleback barge stuck on it.

Vesselmen who have been on the scene say they think it is the hull of the long-lost Chicora, found in an unexpected manner and by an unintended spot.

The whaleback barge 202, which was in tow of the whaleback steamer Colgate Hoyt, is still lodged on the wreck which it was fouled Wednesday.

Capt. William Summerville and Mate Grafshaw, both of the 202, and Capt. Robert Brooks of the Colgate Hoyt say they believe it is the wreck of the Chicora that holds the barge prisoner.

When the barge struck the wreck a mast was raised out of the water, but it soon disappeared again, as if the wreck had been rolled over. From the appearance of the mast, which indicated a vessel of the character of the Chicora, the vesselmen were inclined to think it was indeed the ill-fated Graham & Morton liner.

The barge still sticks on the wreck. When it is hauled off an investigation will be made to ascertain what big steamer is lying on the bottom of Lake Michigan two and a half miles off Glencoe.

The Chicora was lost in a terrific winter storm in 1895, while returning from Milwaukee to St. Joseph. There were thirty-three persons aboard and all went down. Some bits of wreckage were found along the east shore from South Haven to St. Joseph. Other fragments of the Chicora were found on the west shore not far from Glencoe.

After the Chicora left Milwaukee on its last trip some persons saw a black figure like that of a steamer off South Haven as night was falling in the storm. It was believed that this was the foundered Chicora, drifting before it was engulfed.

Only one passenger was on the boat. The bodies of the victims were never recovered, although an unidentified body picked up the following summer near Whiting, Ind., was believed to be one of the lost crew.

Efforts were made for months to locate the wreck. The lake along the coast shore was dragged and divers were employed.

TRAVERS' DIRECTORY.

The fourth edition of Travers' Marine Directory is out, and as usual it is complete, convenient and neat. It includes the names of practically all of the vessels sailing the lakes, with owners, masters and engineers. It is neatly mound in vest pocket shape, and it is a great convenience to all interested in lake marine.

PRESIDENT McCARDLE COMING.

Grand President McCardle of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association will arrive in Duluth tomorrow or Monday. He will meet with Zenith lodge, the local organization, at its regular daily meeting Monday afternoon in the Sumter block, and he is expected to lay the situation in the tug strike before the local tugmen at that time.

HARD WORK FOR CARGOES.

Chicago, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—It was only by the hardest kind of work that vessel agents succeeded in getting cargoes of grain today. Rates were nominally unchanged at 1¼ cents for corn.

SAIL AWAY LIGHT.

Cleveland, May 24.—Coal trade is in bad shape on account of scarcity of cars and shippers are unable to take care of tonnage under charter. A half dozen vessels that were sent to Toledo to load were pulled out yesterday and sent up without cargoes, as there was no coal in sight. About the same number of boats are still waiting. There is no improvement in the dock situation and ore carriers are being hung up all around. The freight market is in fact the same condition as it has been all the week.

Many Opportunities For Those Who Would Buy, Sell, Exchange or Rent Any Kind of Real Estate Are Offered in The Herald Today

IMPORTANT!

Read carefully and consider well what in time may prove the most valuable opportunity of your life.

THE ARIZONA-UTAH PARAFFINE OIL CO. Incorporated under the laws of the territory of Arizona, capital stock 1,500,000 shares at the par value of $1.00 per share, of this stock 492,000 shares have been set aside by said company for developement purposes only. The points of the Arizona law are:

First—It makes by statue the stock absolutely non-assessable and whatever price is paid for the stock constitutes the full paid value.

Second—Stockholders are not liable for the company debts. The company only being liable for its debts. The company owns 2800 acres of land in the heart of the Green River Oil Fields in Utah which has been carefully selected by Mr. J. A. C. Freund, the manager of the company, who is an expert on oil lands, and who has spent twelve years in all the important oil fields in the country.

The Utah oil fields have passed the experimental stage—three wells will be shipping oil as soon as a pipe line is constructed, estimates to furnish forty barrels each per day of the finest lubricating oil, worth from $6.00 to $8.00 per barrel.

The officers of the company are men of high standing and responsibility.

I have personally examined the lands of the company and from indications and oil seepages of a very strong character surrounding the same on all sides I am confident that oil is underlying the land. 150,000 shares of the treasury stock has been placed in my hands for sale at TEN CENTS PER SHARE, and I am now ready to receive subscriptions on same. Prospectus and order blanks will be mailed upon application. All remittances should be made payable to the Merchants Bank of Duluth. They have consented to act as trustee and all stock will be delivered through them.

REALTY MARKET SHOWS ACTIVITY

Number of Large Deals Reported Pending and Fair Volume of Business Done---Progress of Building Operations.

There is considerable pending in the way of large deals, and two trades of good proportions were closed during the week just closed. There has been a fair volume of business in the genuine weather that prevailed most of abl weather that prevailed most of the time, and the fact that tax time is at hand. Considerable new business is in sight, and during the two fine days of the week a renewal of general inquiry is reported to have taken place. The chief transactions that have been made public during the week are the sale of 100 feet of frontage on Lake avenue slip at $300 per front foot, and the Norton house at about $10,000.

• • •

A very important general factor in the market is the announcement that the local officers of the steel corporation constituent companies are prominently connected with the Zenith Furnace company, which has purchased the West Duluth blast furnace, and within three or four days of the purchase were receiving materials preparatory to placing the furnace in blast. This is taken to indicate not only that the purchase of the furnace means business in a way that has not been proved in former operations at the furnace, but that the real parties behind the furnace is the steel corporation itself.

All over the city active building progresses rapidly. The immense plant of the Northwestern Manufacturing company on St. Croix avenue is ready for the installation of machinery, and the St. Louis hotel addition will be completed June 1st and 15th according to contract. The laying of brick on the walls of the new seven-story Patrick & Co. wholesale dry goods building at Fifth avenue west and Commerce street was begun. The Kelly-How seven-story hardware building just opposite is progressing finely.

At Rice's point the Northern Pacific began the filling in of its yard and dock property on the west side of the point and west of there. It will spend $500,000 in this dock work this summer. All its dock property is to be cribbed and filled to the dock line, and the rest of the land brought up to grade. It is understood that just west of Rice's point the railroad is to build a merchandise warehouse and the Philadelphia & Reading Coal company is preparing to build a large coal dock.

• • •

The largest sale of the week was that of lots 5 and 6, Transfer division, which adjoin on the south the property of the Marshall-Wells Hardware company. It has 100 feet frontage on Lake avenue slip and Lake avenue, and is 160 feet deep, with the Northern Pacific railway track running through the middle of it, parallel with the slip. The purchaser is W. W. Billson, who buys for investment, and is understood to be willing to lease for a number of years. The former owner was the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company.

The last deal of property in this immediate location was that by which the Marshall-Wells interests, some two or three years ago, acquired the site for its large wholesale house.

There has been a material advance in the price of all kinds of property here since that time, so that the comparison is not a fair one, except to show the improvement that has taken place since that time in high class dock property. The Marshall-Wells deal is said to have been made on an average basis of $205 a front foot. The Connecticut Mutual sold its 200 feet to the Marshall-Wells people for $225 per foot. One 100 feet was picked up, it is understood, as low as $180 and another at $190.

It is considered by many that Mr. Billson paid a fair price for his property. By that it is intended to convey the idea that he got his money's worth and perhaps a little more, considering the present basis of values throughout the city. It is predicted by many that the property will sell for much more money if it changes hands again.

• • •

Another sizeable transfer of the week was that of the J. W. Norton home at Twelfth avenue east and Superior street to Percy M. Shaw, Jr. The consideration named in the deed is $10,000, and the stamps affixed to the instrument indicate the same figure. It is intimated on one hand, however, that while the consideration was in this neighborhood, it was not $10,000. On the other hand, it is recalled that George St. Clair recently paid $11,500 for a similar frontage immediately adjoining the Norton house, and it was not a corner lot, though the improvement is probably a more expensive one.

• • •

The week with the architects has been more active for commissions for outside work than for city work. Some new business has been placed, but it is not ready for announcement. John J. Wagenstein will prepare plans for a two-story brick store and office building for E. F. Sweeney and J. H. Pearce, to be built at Hibbing. The building will be of pressed brick and with all modern accommodations. It will be 75 by 67 feet in size. The ground floor will be designed for three stores, and the second story will be cut up into a lodge room and offices.

Another outside commission of Mr. Wangenstein's is a modern frame residence for F. P. Sheldon, a Grand Rapids banker, to be built at that city. It will have hot water heat and all modern conveniences.

• • •

Palmer, Hall & Hunt awarded a contract this week to James Quigley for the erection of a stone and stucco barn and carriage house for George C. Stone, to cost about $5000.

• • •

Stryker, Manley & Buck report a better inquiry at the close of the week, with the following deals closed, among others: One residence to Dulutht party, $1700; house and lot on Second avenue East to a Duluth party, $1700; lot on Third street between Third and Fourth avenues, $2500; two lots on East Second street, near Twenty-second avenue east, $1100 each.

• • •

George H. Crosby & Co.: We have had a relatively dull week, but have closed the following deals: To M. J. Flynn, 1009 East Third street, improved, $2500; lot at Third street and Tenth avenue west, to Joseph DiMarco, $775; to A. M. Marshall, two lots in Harrison division, near his residence, $1100; twenty acres on Lester river, about a mile and a half up the stream, to C. D. Richards; lot on Jefferson street, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second avenues east, for improvement; house and lot at 1007 East Third street, to Charles Whitmore, $2500.

• • •

C. P. Craig reports a continuation of the gradual but steady movement in Duluth Heights property. The sales are chiefly homes on an easy payment basis.

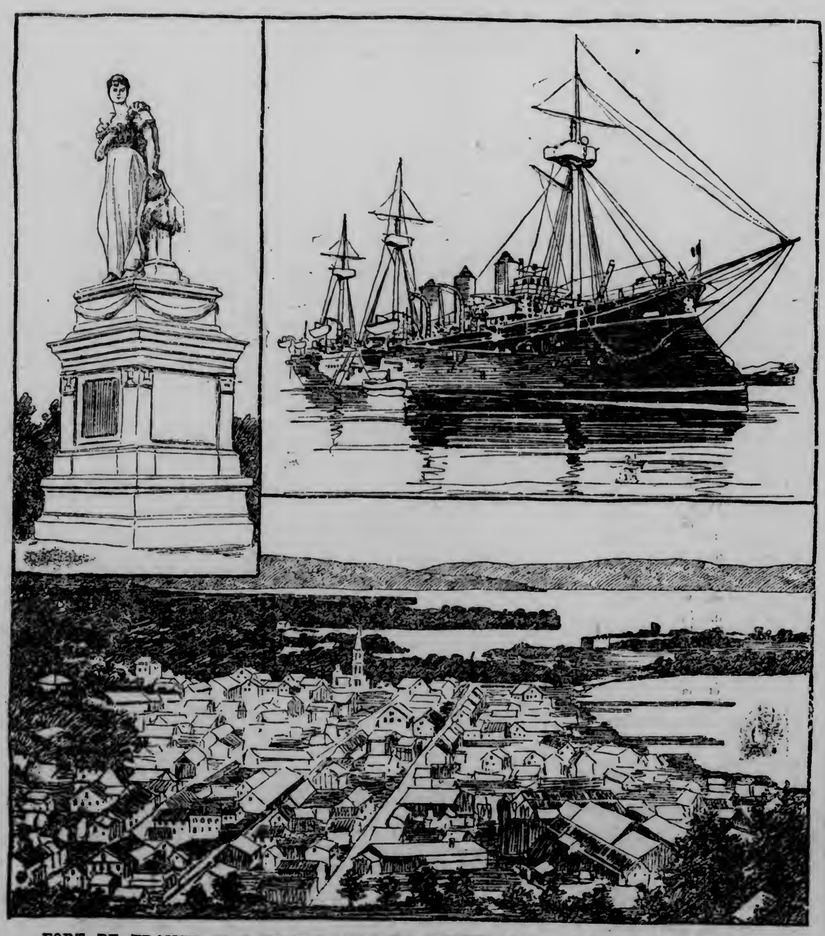
NINE MILES OF CHAMPAGNE.

When the czar was on his recent visit to France he had the felicity of riding nine miles between two stacks of champagne bottles six feet high, says Beverages. This experience fell to his majesty in the vaults of Pommery and Greno. Each gallery in the vaults is marked with a name. The names are those of the greatest towns in the world, and there are hundreds of galleries, for the vaults contain 12,000,000 bottles of champagne, some of them nearly 100 feet down in the bowels of the earth. The vaults occupy 180 acres and are built in an old chalk quarry outside of Rheims, near the Church of St. Remi. There are 450 hands employed down in the vaults, of whom some fifty are women, whose work consists in the most part in labeling the bottles and twisting the wires for the corks. Each hand employed quaffs a tumblerful of Pommery before descending into the cold, electricity lighted vaults, where the work is done, and also reserves two bottles of good red wine per day, so that it is not altogether a bad game.



FORT DE FRANCE, THE FRENCH CRUISER SUCHET AND STATUE OF JOSEPHINE.

AT WEST DULUTH

Charles S. Greeves has returned from an extended visit at his farms in North Dakota. Mr. Greeves says, regarding the crop outlook for the coming season:

"The outlook in the Red River valley is very discouraging. We looked for a good crop year, but the season set in with almost continuous rains, following the heavy snowfall and all the farms are practically flooded. There has been some little seeding done, but that has been accomplised only in the high places. All the lower lands are seas of mud and the farmers have not been able to put in their wheat. With dry weather from now on it would be some time before the ground would be dry enough for wheat.

"That which makes the situation even more discouraging to the Red River valley farmers is the fact that this is the fourth consecutive season that the crops of the valley have failed. We stood for one or two losses without a murmur, but when it comes to four seasons in succession the farmers get blue. Last season a large number of farmers lost everything they had and this season will witness the finish of a still larger number that have been able to keep their heads above water for the past three years in spite of reverses.

"Wheat crops cannot be raised on wet ground. The sod is too mucky and will not absorb the moisture. Too much water has a tendency to make the ground to harden and bake, thus preventing the wheat from thriving."

Mr. Greeves says he has not yet formed an estimate of the amount of damage that has been done to his crop prospects this year, but it will be a large amount. Last season he had 1,800 acres under wheat.

THE ALUMNI BANQUET.

The Irving School Alumni association has in years past established for itself an enviable reputation in the matter of annual banquets and its affairs are looked forward to with a great deal of interest by those belonging to the association. The annual banquet held at the school building last evening proved no exception to the previous successful events and the attendance was about 400. Letters of regret were sent by a number of the out of town members.

The entertainment opened last evening with a literary and musical program. Selections were rendered by a quartet and William Anderson sang several solos. Little Miss Leila Sparks delighted all with her recitation. William Coughlan gave a very interesting exhibition of his ventriloquistic powers and recited. The election of officers, which followed the program, resulted as follows: President, William Anderson; vice president, Grace Keeler; secretary, Marie Tims; treasurer, Reginald Graham; sergeant at arms, George Dunleavy.

George Gilbert, the retiring president, acted as toastmaster at the banquet and he filled the position admirably. His remarks were appropriate and well received. Mrs. Ely, a former principal of the school, responded to the toast, "The Irving Alumni;" Miss Dwyer, eighth grade teacher at the school, responded to the topic, "The Graduating Class," and Erasmus Kreidler responded to "The Representative of the Graduating Class of the Duluth Central High School for 1902."

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

A memorial sermon will be preached by Rev. W. E. Loomis at the Asbury M. E. church Sunday morning at 10:20 o'clock. All soldiers of the civil war are invited to attend. Preaching at 8 o'clock in the evening, and Epworth league at 7 o'clock. Sunday school at 11:15 o'clock in the morning.

The music at the St. James Catholic church will be exceptionally entertaining Sunday morning. Flaaten's orchestra being in attendance.

C. G. Denton will preach at the Westminster Presbyterian church at 10:30 o'clock Sunday omrning, and M. T. Tohrborn will preach in the evening at 8 o'clock.

The lumber steamer Leland was released shortly after 10 o'clock this morning by two tugs that pulled the steamer stern first out of the mud. The boat has been stuck in the mud, out of the channel, since Thursday evening. She proceeded to one of the docks to load lumber.

The funeral of Miss Jennie Dass will be held from the Asbury M. E. church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, instead of 1:30 o'clock. The sermon will be preached by Rev. W. E. Loomis, the pastor. Interment will be made at Oneota cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Robert L. Cochrane was held from the family residence at 2 o'clock this afternoon and the interment was at Forest Hill cemetery. Mr. Seaton, father of the decedent, arrived this morning from his home in Potosi, Wis., and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Seaton, of Chicago, Mrs. Cochrane's brother and sister-in-law, were here to attend the funeral.

The men of the Swedish Lutheran church will give a "gubbfest" at Gilley's hall this evening. It will be a free entertainment and open to all.

The carriage that was found attached yesterday morning to the horse belonging to David McGibbon, belongs to P. Gilley. Adolphus Blundon and Frank Lonsway, who were arrested for taking the horse, confessed to the deed, claiming that they merely wanted a ride. The police are assured that the young men had nothing to do with the chicken robbery.

Teams from Sitting Bull tribe and Wa-ke-me-wup tribe of Redmen had a seven-up contest last evening, and the West Duluth team won by a narrow margin.

O. J. Simonds is down from Scanlon for a short visit.

Mrs. Katherine Summers, aged 75 years, died yesterday at her home on Sixty-first avenue west. The funeral will take place Sunday morning from the St. James church, and interment will be made in Calvary cemetery.

There was a merry time this afternoon about the store of Lauermann, the popular shoe dealer, when Mr. Lauerman turned loose among about 500 boys an equal number of whistles. In short order every boy was blowing hard for Lauermann, and it took the efforts of the police department to keep the sidewalk open. The noise caused many people to believe that the Ironton plant and all other industrial plants at this end of the city had started up.

The West Duluth butter store and milk depot will be open Sunday morning from 8:30 to 9:30 to accommodate those desiring milk and cream.

OLD STONE COFFIN.

George Joerdens, of Joseph Joerdens & Sons, Paca and Camden streets, made a strange discovery recently. While rummaging in an unused storeroom he came across a stone coffin of antique design and construction, and from inscriptions on the coffin it appears to be nearly a century old, says the Baltimore American. undertakers for nearly half a century. Pasted inside of the lid of the casket was a circular bearing date 1806. It sets forth in English type the merits of that style of casket. It also states that the casket was of English make and was a sample of those produced by a casket-making firm in London. The printing on the circular is almost illegible.

The base of the casket is of a very peculiar shape, and is made entirely of stone. The lid is detachable, but fits closely into the body of the coffin. This is also of stone and is fastened by means of screws. The only portion of the casket not of stone is a small aperture in the lid, which is covered by glass. This was intended to give a glimpse of the face of the corpse. The coffin is about four feet in length, one foot wide, weighs over 1000 pounds and has six handles hewn out of the side. When found it was in a perfect state of preservation and retained much of its original polish. It is doubtful if such a coffin as this exists at present, as coffins of such a type have not been used for seventy-five years, and never were used to any great extent. The lining of the casket is of a material which has not been used for half a century.

How the casket came to be in the storeroom is not known. It is supposed, however, that it was purchased by some person who formerly occupied the site. An old man who was employed by an undertaker who formerly was in business at that place said that he had seen the same casket thirty years ago.

SIX TO TURN BRIDGE.

Six of the softest Tammany sinecures that have ever come to public attention have been unearthed in the bridge department, says the New York Tribune.

Ever since the consolidation six bridge tenders have been drawing a salary of $766.50 a year each, a total of $4599, for turning a small wooden bridge which spans Newton creek at Jackson avenue, Flushing, three time a day.

Previous to the consolidation the work was let out by contract to William Sands, who keeps a small saloon and fishing station near the bridge. Sands received $450 a year for turning the bridge whenever a schooner passed up or down the creek. This was not often. About two months prior to consolidation the supervisors of Flushing and Newton put their heads together. As the contract with Sands expired about that time, they saw a chance to provide comfortable berths for a few of their friends at the expense of the city of New York. So they appointed as bridge tenders at $600 a year four of their Democratic followers.

The new bridge tenders were ushered into the greater New York with consolidation and were not disturbed by the Tammany administration. In fact, the Tammany administration built on the foundation laid by its rural friends in Queens and added two more bridge tenders at $599 a year. One of the original appointees was William Sands. He had been turning the bridge single handed for $180 a year and received $600 and five assistants under the new arrangement.

Later the Democratic administration decided that these bridge tenders ought to wear uniforms and increased the salaries of the sextet to $766.50 a year each to enable them to pay for the clothes.

Oration By Lodge.

Eloquent Speech By the Junior Senator From Massachusetts At the Unveiling of the Rochambeau Statue.

Washington, May 24.—Following was the speech delivered by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the orator of the day, at the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue today:

Statecraft has a synical maxim that there is no such thing as gratitude between nations. If we must accept this as true of those practical dealings when sentiment comes into hopeless collision with self-interest we may at least say that no nation really great will ever hesitate to make public acknowledgment of its obligations to others in the past. The new world of North America has had a long and close connection with the people of France. At the very dawn of the sixteenth century Breton fishermen had followed in the track of the Cabats and were plying their dangerous trade off the coast of New Foundland. Thirty years later Cartier was in the St. Lawrence laying the foundation of New France by the mighty river of the North. Then the century had just passed its meridian, the Huguenots came to Florida and the great name of Coligny links itself with our history as the inspirer of distant expeditions to the untrodden shores of America, even when France was torn with the wars of religion. It is a dark and splendid story, well nigh forgotten now, which comes up to us out of that dim past touched with the glory of the admiral of France. There in the old books we can read of Ribault and Laudonniere and their comrades, of their daring and intelligence and of the settlements they founded. Then come Menendez and his Spaniards, the surprise and slaughter of the French massacred for their religion and then a few years later De Gourgues swoops down upon the Spanish forts and the Spaniards in turn drench the sands with their blood and swing on gibbets to remind all men of the passing of the avenger. Thus driven from the South the French still held their grip on the heritage of Cartier. Champlain gave his name to the great lake of New England, where rival nations were one day to fight for dominion. French missionaries died for their faith among the red men of New York. Pere Marquette explored the West and the gallant La Salle bore the lilies of France from the source to the mouth of the Mississippi. The French names mark the passing of the French discoverers from Montreal to St. Louis and from St. Louis to New Orleans. And while the "Roi Soleil" was raising his frowning fortress on the banks of the St. Lawrence, dispatching Auvergnats and Normans and Bretons to settle Canada and tracing his explorers across the continent, some others of his best subjects, driven forth into the world by revoked edicts and certain things called dragonnades, were bringing their wit and quick intelligence to strengthen and upbuild the English colonies which were growing up not at all in the orderly way dear to the heart of a grand monarch, but in a rude, vigorous, scrambling independent fashion after the manner of races who found nations and establish states.

Presently it appeared that there was not room enough even in the vast wilderness of North America for the rival powers of France and England. A few shots fired by sundry Virginians under the command of George Washington, whose name, springing forth suddenly from the back woods, was then first heard in two continents, began a stubborn war which ended only with the fall of the French power and the triumph of England and the English colonies.

A NEW STATUS.

Thus was a new situation created in English colonies and after the surrender of Burgoyne at Suratoga the treaty of alliance was signed and France entered into war with Great Britain. The French government aided us with money and with men, by land and by sea, but the decisive force was that which landed at Newport in the long July days of 1780.

To that brave well-officered, highly disciplined army we raise a monument today by placing here in the nation's capital the statue of its commander. For their service and for his own we owe him a debt of gratitude, for which we should here make lasting acknowledgment, one which will stand unchanged beneath the sunshine and the rain long after the words we speak shall have been forgotten.

This statue is the counterfeit presentment of the gallant figure of a gallant gentleman. Born in 1725 of noble family, a native of Vendome, Joan Baptiste Donatien de Vismur, Comte de Rochambeau had just passed his 55th birthday when he landed at Newport. His career had been long and distinguished. His honors and his rank in the army had been won in the field, not in the antechambers of Versailles. In an age when the greatest nobleman of France thought it no shame to seek advancement from royal mistresses by whose whims ministers rose and fell and the policies of state were decided, Rochambeau in time of peace turned from the court to his regiment and his estates. He had shared in all the campaigns of France from the time when his elder brother's death had taken him from the church in which he was about to become a priest and placed him in the army. At the siege of Namur he earned the rank of colonel by the surprise of an outpost which led to the surrender of the town. He was twice wounded at the head of his regiment at the battle of Laufelds. He captured the enemy's magazines at the siege of Naestricht and won the Cross of St. Louis leading the assault upon the forces of Minorca. He fought the Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick and captured the fortress of Regenesteln in 1757. At Crefeld he sustained for a long time the attack of the Prussian army, he took a leading part in the battle of Minden and was again wounded at Kloster Camp. After the peace Rochambeau was often consulted by ministers, but never would take office. At last in March, 1780, he was made lieutenant general and sent with the French army to America.

A DARK HOUR.

He reached the United States at a dark hour for the American cause. The first fervor of the resistance had cooled, the active fighting had subsided in the North, congress had grown feeble and inert, government finance both dragged heavily and it seemed as if the revolution, so successful in the field would founder upon the rocks of political and executive incapacity. Washington and the army in the midst of almost unparalleled difficulties alone kept the cause alive. The coming of Rochambeau and his army was a great good fortune and yet its first result was to induce further relaxation of effort on the part of congress. Washington, realizing all the event meant, opened correspondence at once with Rochambeau, but it was not until September that he was able to meet the French Commander in person at Hartford. It was a great relief to the heavily burdened general to meet such a man as Rochambeau and yet even then as he turned back with lightened heart and lifted hopes the news of Arnold's treason smote him on his arrival at West Point. The Summer had gone and nothing had been done. Then Rochambeau was unwilling to move without further reinforcements and Washington was struggling desperately to wring from a hesitating congress and from reluctant states the men, money and supplies without which success, the great opportunity which had now come was not to pass away unused. So the winter wore on and spring came and in May Washington and Rochambeau were again in consultation. Washington was determined to strike a fatal blow somewhere. He considered Florida and the scheme of taking the British under Rawdon in the rear; he thought of Virginia where Cornwallis, forced northward by Green's strategem was established with his army; long and earnestly he looked at New York, the chief seat of British powder. Rochambeau showed his military intelligence by leaning strongly to Virginia. But the one vital condition was still lacking. Washington knew that he must command the sea if only for a month at the point he was to deliver the decisive blow. So the day's slipped by, the summer waned and then of a sudden the great condition sprang into life. De Grasse in the West Indies was at last as great as Rochambeau, appeared in the Chesapeake with his fleet. No longer was there room for doubt. Cornwallis in Virginia was clearly now the quarry for allied forces.

Time forbids me to tell the brilliant story of that campaign of the manner in which De Barras was induced to bring his squadron from the North; of the adroitness with which Clinton was deceived in New York; of the skill and rapidity with which the French and American armies were hurried from New York to the Chesapeake and thence to Yorktown. The crash of the golden moment so longed for by Washington when he could unite both land and sea power had at last arrived. The Grasse was master of the bay. The English fleet was sent

Gen. Eagan's Kingdom

Given a Title to 2,500,000 Acres of Land In Old Mexico—Battle For It Long and Fierce.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 24.—Retired from the army service in the shadow of "embalmed beef," Gen. Charles P. Eagan, the commissary general of the United States army, has won a kingdom or its equivalent in value, of something more than 2,250,000 acres in Western Mexico.

For nearly a year Gen. Eagan, backed by Alvinza Hayward and Charles D. Lane, millionaires and mining magnates of California, has battled desperately for the possession of the immense acreage to which he has just secured a clear title. His opponent in the fight was William C. Greene, a one time Arizona prospector, now the operator of the copper fields at Cananea, the "Copper King of Arizona" and the cleverest man who ever turned a deal for mining stock.

With pistols and rifles, cowboys and Mexican troops, the fight has truly been a border melodrama, and when a few days ago the Mexican federal court rendered a decision upholding Gen. Eagan's right to the land, it ended what might easily have become a tragedy of large proportions, with annoying international complications.

Almost immediately after Gen. Eagan's court-martial the general came to the far West, and there was but a brief interval until he was involved in a harder fight, if less bloody than any of his army career.

Vast fields of coal were found in Sonora, within the boundaries of the Johnson land grant. W. C. Greene and Gen. Eagan were at once in the field and each claimed priority of discovery. Eagan, backed by Hayward and Lane, rushed machinery and workmen to the place and claimed title to the mineral under a purchase from the state of Sonora. Greene based his claims upon having bought the interests of Carlos Johnson, owner of the soil, under the original Spanish grant. In connection with the Pacific Coast Coal company, a corporation formed for the purpose, and with Allan C. Bernard and George Mitchell, Green also put up machinery, and in addition began the construction of a railroad to tap the coal fields. All this time, however, a bitter fight was being waged between the disputants in and out of the Mexican courts.

The confused mineral laws of that country made the fight which followed one of the worst of many that have made the history of the Johnson grant remarkable. In 1852 the state of Sonora declared that it had the power to make grants of mineral without reference to the ownership of the soil. In the following year the federal government decided that the various states had no power to make grants, and declared the owner of the ground to be also the owner of any mineral that lay hidden beneath the surface. Gen. Eagan and his backers purchased from the state of Sonora the mineral rights of the Johnson claims, paying the sum of $28,000. Greene secured the Johnson title under the federal decision, and then the fight commenced in real earnest.

The Greene faction secured possession first. Eagan promptly went into the courts of the district and had Greene's emissaries declared trespassers. The Arizona man retaliated by a similar move from another court, and the Eagan party was forced to retire from the disputed fields. By this time both sides had machinery on the ground, prepared to rush development. Greene's expense for the first item was at the start $40,000. He also commenced to survey for a railroad to run from Naco, Ariz., to La Cananea, then to San Marcial, where the Johnson land is situated, and thence to the Mexican coast at Guaymas, a distance of 300 miles.

Eagan went to Guaymas and secured the backing of the local judge, the perfect of the district and the presidente of the town, Carlos Johnson and F. C. Fenner, mining experts for Greene, and their cohorts in possession of the lands, were hauled into court, and with them out of the way, the Eagan outfit, with armed Mexican laborers, retook possession.

But this by no means ended the trouble. A band of Greene's cowboys was dispatched to the scene, and after an all-night ride, drove off Eagan's followers, while a diplomat from the Green camp was persuading the judge that the caper magnate was the sole and rightful owner of the land and all beneath. All went smoothly for Greene for a little time, but about a week later the tide turned the other way. In some manner Eagan interested the federal government of Mexico in the fight and upon representation being made that the peace and dignity of the state were being disturbed, government troops were sent to San Marcial. According to advices from Mexico they reinstated the Eagan party on the Johnson grant, and then, after some more "diplomacy," ousted the Taganites and restored the representatives of Greene.

Then Johnson and Fenner were gathered in by the Mexican forces, who found them away from their friends, and carried them off to jail at Guaymas. The arrest of Johnson and Fenner was an unexpected move by the Greene-Lane-Egan contingent and since then the Greene faction has been content to wait the action of the court, although it is reported that a recent attack by Mexican bands upon Eagan and his party was backed by Greene's men, and it is a matter of history in Northern Mexico that Gen. Eagan has been challenged to fight a duel by Col. W. P. Harlow, of Nogales, one of Greene's attorneys.

Talks With Senators Wellington and Spooner, Sir Henry Strong and Thomas J. Creamer.

Washington, May 22.—I asked Senator Wellington during the week what kind of a man was Senator Money, of Mississippi.

"A man of advanced age, a hot temper and almost blind. He once replied to a speech of mine in temper but he came up afterward and did himself justice."

Discussing presidents he had known, Mr. Wellington said:

"Several of them were so neglectful of ceremony that the office was a source of misery to them. They never knew the forms of society. Gen. Arthur seems to have been the readiest in etiquette. Harrison, while he was an individual of real quality, had the worst manners I ever beheld. I was taken to see him by McComas, my present colleague, as a candidate for the office of sub-treasurer at Baltimore. He looked at me in my delegation and observed: 'Well, Mr. Wellington, I suppose I shall have to appoint you?' I looked at him a moment and walked out, but was chased up and brought back. The incident must have been effective, for the next time I saw Harrison he was almost courteous."

Sir Henry Strong, chief justice of Canada, was talking with Senator Spooner a few days past, when the latter said:

"My father was a highly equipped lawyer till he was half-way past seventy, when rising in court one day he found that the whole case had departed from his mind. The court adjourned. He then recovered the case and argued it perfectly. But when it was done he said: 'My son, I shall never go into court again. That was an admonition that my lawyer days are over."

"How do you prepare your speeches in the senate?" I asked Mr. Spooner.

"I do not prepare any form or matter, at all, except to consider what I may say. My apprenticeship at the bar made the digestion of an argument purely a mental operation."

Sir Henry Strong, aged 76, and thirty-three years on the Canadian supreme bench, surprised all who met him here by his minute knowledge of American personal history. He is a great lover of American fiction. He knew Cleveland at Buffalo when he was a slender young man. He said:

"Some people like to visit Stratford-on-Avon and other resorts. To me the associations of Washington city are interesting above those of any other places on the earth. Its play of the private, gilding into the public character, has been my study for years. But the public men are too busy in the present and their miscellaneous reading is now neglected."

Sir Henry said he did not admire Conklin, Blaine nor Sumner, but regarded Hamilton Fish as a high type of public man, and President Grant as a kind hearted, considerate, great soldier.

The Hon. Thomas J. Creamer, who was a congressman right after the war, but is only 60 years old, said yesterday:

"Since I was in congress, under Blaine, the change in the rules of the house is so marked that I see no chance for anybody to be an individual. It is all cut and dried. Perhaps the effect is right, but the floor seems to belong only to the chairmen of committees."

"Are the Democrats considering anybody for the presidency?"

"There is better harmony on that subject than there has been for years, a disposition to do the best and not to nurse favoritisms. I hear Gorman talked about more than anybody."

"Have the Democrats any leader in congress?" and

"Hardly. There is a real sensitiveness to letting anybody appear to be the leader, especially among the Southern Democrats. Another thing I noticed is the social coterie, which goes out to dinner parties and receptions. It has become a distinct set and looks askance at the talent which is not swallow tailed. That I have never observed until now."

Mr. Creamer added: "When I was in congres in the '70s I was the only Democrat, except Eldridge of Wisconsin, to support the improvement of Washington, under Shepherd. I can see no reason to regret it. Washington is a real advertisement to the world of our civilization. It makes an instant impression on all foreigners."

"Do you know President Roosevelt well?" I asked Mr. Creamer.

"Yes. I was at Albany when he was governor and met him much there. Before that I knew him as a young leader of the legislature; original, hardy, very useful to the whole society. All our other governors, even Flower, did not want to hear anything; they were restless under instruction and did most of the talking themselves. But Roosevelt is a good listener. He is perfectly brave and perfectly honest. But he is not adroit, though sincere; he is simple as a child, blunt as a Hollander. Roosevelt has no factions to smooth together; he is too American for that. He believes the people are not round about; that a right instinct is better than smooth policy. He has no concealments, no underground passages, and for a president at 44 has been, in a few months, a strong, young figure."

I spent a whole day with Bret Harte in Washington a little while before he left here for a final residence in Europe, and took him over the city.

He was not a serious man, nor much impressed with the newest things we are seeing. He was something of a masquerader, slightly satirical, not as impressive as his compositions.

That which I respected Harte most for was leading his own life to the end and not another's life, and withdrawing himself from the unsteady support of the American news public, which exacts a conformity to its peevish surveillance. Old Walter Scott was devlied out of all patience by American tourists intruding into Abbotsford as if they would carry off a piece of him. This Lockhart relates. The disease of Donnelly setting up Bacon for Shakespeare and calling Shakespeare a drunken actor, was typical of our war on an impersonality. I occasionally meet an old intemperate poet in New York who at the mention of the name of Poe at once calls him a thief and tells some old yarn about his selling Poe a manuscript. Poe avoided populnes; Harte expatriated himself. In 1871 I went to California and was regaled with attacks upon both Harte and Clemens from writers, who were enraged that both had escaped to a wider fame. The publishers of the Overland Monthly, however, spoke of Harte as a careful man to improve others' manuscripts by minute revision.

Harte hated business and callers. I went to see him in the consulate at Glasgow, and found him fled or shut up somewhere. He was attacked by Richardson and Kerr, the Burns autograph dealers, as no gentleman, because he would not come to a Fourth of July dinner and speak. Both Bayard Taylor and Edmund Yates describe the infliction of an American lecturing tour where the man who is to use his voice at night must converse all day with preachers and beadles as if he were a music box with a mystery in him.

Harte told me a tale which, I suspect, was a plot for one of his projected tales, practiced on me. He said he had a liason with an army officer's wife in California who afterward married a rich man and assailed his tale. "The Luck of Roaring Camp," as grossly immoral and demanded that society should cast him out. Joe Lawrence published the anonymous attack, and it was so malignant that Harte complained to Lawrence. "That is not a man, Harte," said Lawrence, "but a woman, and I will show her to you tonight at a fair where she keeps a religious charity stand." As Harte approached this stand his old female contrere was indicated. She looked battle at him. He saw that it was the malignity of a remembered falsity, high hypocrisy on the virtuous survival.

I thought the legend was artistic. Actors like to be pawed over; authors live in the cocoon.

Fables By George Ade

The Modern Fable of the Red Letter Night at Smartweed Junction.

Copyright, 1902, by R. H. Russell.)

Once there was an undersized Town that had the Corn-Fields sneaking up on all sides of it, trying to break over the Corporation Line. People approaching the Town from the North could not see it because there was a Row of Willow Trees in the Way.

Here in this comatose Settlement lived a Family named Pilkins. The Pilkinses were all the Eggs in Smartweed. They owned a big General Store catty-cornered from the Court House. It was well konwn that they sent to Chicago for their Clothes and ate Ice Cream in the Winter Time. The Pilkins Girls had been away to a Convent to have their Voices sandpapered and fitted to a piano, and they came back with the first Gibson Shirt Waist seen in those Parts. Most of the Girls south of the Tracks were just getting wise to the Russian Blouse.

Along in May the Pilkins Family made its annual play to set the Prairies on fire. Every Adult in Town, except those who had Jail Records, received an Engraved Invitation to come up to the Pilkins House and take a peek at High Life. Within three days you couldn't buy a Yard of Wide Ribbon in any Store, and every Second Man in Mink Patterson's Barber Shop asked for a Hair-Cut. The R. S. V. P. down in one Corner of the Bid had some of the Brethren guessing for a while. There was no need of putting that on. It was an immortal Cinch that every one would turn out, if he had to be moved in on a cot. About the only Entertainments they had in Smartweed Junction were Uncle Tom under a Tent and the Indian Medicine Troupe. Therefore, nobody was going to pass up the Pilkins Jamboree, for there was to be an imported Orchestra, costing $75, and Meals provided, and the City Caterer was to bring his own Waiters.

Everybody went home early that Day so as to take a good thorough Scouring before getting into their Other Clothes. At Dusk they began wending their Way toward the Pilkins Place, all looking a little worried and apprehensive. They were sorted out at the Front Door and led into Dressing Rooms, pegged out along the Walls, fed on Macaroons and treated to large Bunches of Bach Music. Every half hour or so somebody would say something and that would be a Cue for the others to shift their Feet.

The Punch-Bowl got the Cold Eye until it was learned that the Dye-Stuff was Aniline and not Rum, and then they stood around and dipped in until they were blue under the Ears.

About 11 o'clock the Japanese Lanterns began to burn up and a large number of People whose Feet were hurting them could be seen quietly Ducking. The Home Paper said it was the Event of the Season.

The Modern Fable of What They Had Laid Out For Their Vacation.

A Man who had three weeks of Vacation coming to him began to get busy with an Atlas about April 1. He and his Wife figured that by keeping on the Jump they could do Niagara, Thousand Islands, Atlantic City, the Mammoth Cave and cover the Great Lakes.

On April 10 they decided to charter a House Boat and float down the Mississippi.

On April 20 he heard of a Cheap Excursion to California with a stop-over Privilege at every Station and they began to read up on Salt Lake and Yellowstone.

On May 1 she flashed a Prospectus of a Northern Lake Resort where Boats and Minnows were free and Nature was ever smiling.

Ten days later she vetoed the Mountain Trip because she had got next to a Nantucket Establishment where Family Board was $6 a Week, with the use of a Horse.

On June 1 a friend showed him how by making two Changes and hiring a Canoe he could penetrate the Deep Woods where the Foot of Man had never Trod and the Black Bass came to the surface and begged to be taken out.

On June 15 he and Wifey packed up and did the annual hike up to Uncle Foster's Place in Brown County, where they ate with the Hired Hand and had Greens three times a Day. There were no Screens on the Windows, but by climbing a Hill they could get a lovely View of the Pike that ran over to the County Seat.

The Young Man, whose Name was Otis, removed the Gaff from his quivering Bosom and began to lay Plans to humble his Pride. After placing his Milk Route in the Hands of a Reliable Agent, he went up to the city and began to take lessons on the Horn. He practiced until he was able to crawl inside of a big Oom-Pah and eat all of the Low Notes in the Blue Book. The Hard Part of a Sousa March was Pie for him. He could close his Eyes and run up the Scale and then down again until he struck the Newfoundland Growl coming at the end of "Rocked in the Cradle."

Then he went back and joined the Silver Cornet Band. On Decoration Day he was up at the Head of the Line, just behind the Grand Marshal with the Red Sash and he carried a Tuby that looked like the Entrance to a Cave. His Uniform was fancy enough for a Colonel on the Governor's Staff.

When he swept down Main Street scaring all the Horses and causing the Window panes to rattle, every one along the Line of March who knew Ote was proud of himself.

Sophy saw him and got ready to do a little Hedging. After the Parade when he was in the Bon-Ton Candy Kitchen, with a handkerchief around his Neck, ordering up Strawberry Soda, then Sophy broke through the Circle of Admirers and bade him Welcome. Otis gave her a cruel look and pretended that he did not remember her Name.

That evening she saw him pass the House three times with the Tuby on one Arm and a red-headed Milliner on the other.

Great Plants Recently Put In Operation In the Far West For the Long Distance Transmission of Electric Power.

Because of the fact there was no necessity for its use, a vast amount of energy locked up in the mighty rivers of the Northwest has been going to waste for countless ages. Now that thriving towns, cities, mining camps, etc., with constantly increasing needs for electrical power and light, are springing up and growing everywhere, this energy is, to some extent, being taken advantage of. In that great section of the country are two of the most remarkable electrical power plants in the world. One is that at Snoqualmie Falls, Wash., which furnishes a most varied service, including electric traction, mill and factory power and illumination for Seattle, Tacoma, Everett and other Puget sound cities. This plant is noted for its unique power station, which is cut out of the solid rock 270 feet down from the river bank of the fall. Twelve miles north of Helena, Mont., on the stream from which it takes its name, is the plant of the Missouri River Power company, which holds the record for the heaviest transmission of electrical power in the world. The transmission line, sixty-five miles long, crosses the main range of the Rocky mountains at an altitude of 7200 feet, conveying 12,000 horse-power to Butte for use in the famous copper mining camp there, and to Helena for its street car service, the smelters and mills, and for lighting the city. There is one transmission of electric power in the United States, near San Francisco, that is longer, but the plant is not yet completed, and the amount of power is not nearly so great as that of the Missouri River Power company.

The waterfall from which the Snoqualmie falls plant secures the power necessary for the generation of the great amount of current needed to turn the wheels of travel and industry and to light the cities of the sound is in the foothills of the Cascade mountains, twenty-five miles from Seattle, where the main office is located, and thirty-five miles from Tacoma and Everett. Snoqualmie falls, the natural beauty of which is unsurpassed, is in the midst of a forest. It has a vertical drop of 270 feet, which is 70 feet higher than the Chemical building, the tallest in St. Louis. Snoqualmie falls has an available energy of from 300,00 to 100,000 horse-power. While Niagara falls has a drop of only 153 feet, the volume of water that passes over it is greater, producing an available 3,000,000 horse-power. Of this, only 50,000 horse-power is used by the Niagara plant. The Snoqualmie falls plant at present only utilizes about 15,000 horse-power, but in the near future twice that will be used. A watershed, having an area of 500 square miles, where the rainfall averages from 90 to 150 inches a year, is drained by the Snoqualmie river, which is formed by three forks that flow together three miles above the fall. At its summit the fall is 600 feet above the sea level, while the watershed reaches 8000 feet higher, extending above the perpetual snow line, so that even in the dry weather of August and September the river has an unceasing supply of water. At its lowest stage the flow over the fall is about 1000 cubic feet per second, increasing to over 10,000 cubic feet per second at flood time.

One great advantage this plant has over that of Niagara falls is that the water in the Snoqualmie river never freezes during the winter, and neither floating ice nor anchor ice have to be contended with. It was at first proposed to build the power house near the base of the fall, but this idea was abandoned because of the clouds of spray that keeps everything thereabouts damp, added to the disadvantage of a coating of ice during the very coldest weather. The water wheels and machinery are operated in the underground chambers cut out of the solid rock. Owing to the great drop of the fall, a notable thing in itself, no long flume or pipe line is required to develop the necessary head of water, which is used there to drive impulse wheels on horizontal shafts instead of turbines on vertical shafts as at Niagara falls.

The plant of the Snoqualmie Falls Power company, which has been in operation since 1898, has become too small for the rapidly growing business interests of the Puget sound country and plans have been perfected for the increase of its capacity. A recent dispatch stated that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways were contemplating the use of electrical power from Snoqualmie falls for the propulsion of the trains running between Seattle, Tacoma and Portland and the summits of the Cascade mountains and through the numerous tunnels on their heights. As the plant now stands it represents an investment of $1,000,000, while the entire cost of the contemplated improvement will be in the neighborhood of $400,000. The intake, a rectangular chamber about 60 feet long and nearly as wide, is protected from the debris of the river by a timber grating, which keeps out floating logs and trees.

Near the intake a shaft 10 by 27 feet was sunk in the bed of the river. It was cut out of the solid rock 270 feet down to the level of the river below the fall. Near the bottom of this shaft is a power house, or machinery room, a chamber 200 feet in length, 40 feet wide and 30 feet high, with the floor at the elevation of high water below the fall. Here the water wheels and generators are installed. Under the chambers is the tailrace, a tunnel also dug out of the solid rock. It is 12 feet wide and 24 feet high. The rock out of which the tunnels and chambers are cut is basaltic, hard and non-absorbent.

The penstock, which carries the water through the tunnel to the chamber below, is a steel pipe 7½ feet in diameter. It passes through a concrete roof, which keeps the shaft water tight. Two hundred and fifty feet down the penstock reaches the chamber, where it connects with a horizontal cylindrical receiver resting on a rock bench 12 feet high and extending almost the entire length of the machine room. The large penstock and receiver weigh 225 tons, and the weight of the water column in the penstock is 340 tons. Extending from four points along the side of the receiver are 4-foot branches, each of which is fitted with a great valve weighing 23,000 pounds. These valves are said to be the largest in the world operated under such high pressure. A smaller branch from the receiver connects motors operating the exciters. Four electric generators, each driven by a Doble water-power motor of 2200 horsepower, make up the main generating plant. Each motor consists of a shaft carrying six jet wheels, with two nozzles throwing streams of 3⅝ inches in diameter to each wheel. These streams are delivered with a head of 253 feet against the wheels, whose particular feature is in the peculiar form of the buckets. Thirteen of these buckets are attached to each of the wheels, which are keyed on to the main shaft in two groups of three each.

The mighty volume of water directed against these wheels turns the shaft that extends through the generators. Each wheel unit weighs 100,000 pounds, in addition to the weight of the water in the distributing receiver. The tail race directly below receives the waste water as it drops from the wheels. Another tangential water wheel, 7 feet in diameter, operates the elevator that makes the chamber readily accessible to the employes, and facilitates the handling of supplies. The four generators of 1500 kilowatt capacity, each weighing 100,000 pounds and standing 14½ feet high, are of the revolving armature type. They deliver a three-phase current at 1000 volts, 7200 alternations.

The system of the Missouri River Power company includes two complete lines on parallel poles, each having three large cables of copper. Nearly 1,000,000 pounds of copper wire is strung on the 1000 poles covering the sixty-five miles. These cables are carried on heavy glass insulators, nine inches in diameter, and made in two pieces—A special design of the chief engineer, M. L. Gerry, Jr., of the Missouri River Power company. The actual horse-power delivered at Butte is 6000, and the estimated percentage of loss at full load will not exceed 7 per cent, a very low estimate under the circumstances. The current is carried at a voltage of 50,000.

This is the first time that such a great amount of power has been carried for such a long distance over the mountains in a climate where snow and ice are prevalent during long periods of the year at this high elevation. The line is protected against lightning by newly-designed lightning arresters and by the use of static interrupters. As a still further protection and prevention of the interruption of the service there is a complete telephone line strung four feet below the wires carrying the high voltage current. The patrolmen employed by the company can connect with this telephone line at any point by climbing the poles and attaching an instrument. A curious feature of the telephone line is that, notwithstanding it is carried only four feet below the high-voltage current, the service is perfect, even better than the lines of the telephone companies.

The power is generated by the water of America Needed Money

Rochambeau Was Entertained and Then "Touched" By Morris—An Incident of the Government's Hard Times In the Revolution.

Washington, May 24.—The dedication of the Rochambeau monument here today in the presence of the nation's official French guests, recalls a piquant story not recorded in the popular histories. It illustrates the truly loveable character of Rochambeau apart from his military virtues displayed in our revolution and demonstrating the unfailing sincerity of his devotion to the American cause. Robert Morris, of Philadelphia, merchant prince and financier of the revolution, whose heroic sacrifices in that capacity were cheerfully made and uncomplainingly borne even to the extent of pecuniary ruin and personal abasement, shares with Rochambeau the honors of the story.

As soon as Gen. Rochambeau had received word from Admiral de Grasse, then in the West Indies, that the latter would shortly sail with his fleet from the Chesapeake to co-operate with the allied armies against the British, Washington made haste to concert with Rochambeau the fortunate campaign against Cornwallis in Virginia, which was fated to decide the destinies of the new world. Rochambeau made a juncture with Washington, then encamped at Dobbs' Ferry, on the Hudson, in Westchester county, N. Y., and the two kept up the appearance of a design to attack the enemy's stronghold at New York. Two days before breaking up camp on the Hudson, Washington, April 17, 1781, wrote a dispatch to Robert Morris in Philadelphia, informing him confidentially of the new plan, and urged him to look out for provisions and for boats to transport the troops south from the head of the Elk, the northernmost arm of the Chesapeak, adding, above all, that it would be necessary for the success of the expedition to give a month's pay in specie to the American troops under Gen. Lincoln, in order to reconcile them to the Southern service and put them in fighting humor.

It was on Aug. 19 that the allied troops left the Hudson, and, falling off through Hackensack and Newark to keep up the idea of a meditated attack upon Staten Island, N. Y., made their way rapidly across New Jersey. At Chatham, in Morris county, N. J., the allies passed quickly to Trenton, and then to Philadelphia Aug. 30, where the citizens turned out to welcome them. A review was held and the troops were inspected in detail by the continental congress. That evening Morris, as the most opulent citizen and head of the so-called "treasury," entertained Rochambeau and Washington, with their principal officers, at an elaborate dinner at his house, Rochambeau, of course, receiving most particular honor and attention. The ships in the harbor put out into the Delaware, midstream, and fired repeated salutes, while toast after toast was drunk to the military genius at Morris' board. The first toast was "The United States," the second "His Most Christian Majesty" (King Louis XVI), the third "His Catholic Majesty" (the Spanish king allied with Louis XVI against Great Britain), "The Allied Armies," "Count de Grasse's Speedy Arrival," and so on to the end. Rochambeau was delighted with Morris' hospitality.

Washington remained in Philadelphia until the morning of Sept. 5, repeatedly urging Morris verbally to procure the money, and Rochambeau remained until noon that day, their troops having gone ahead. Both before the arrival of those officers and during their stay Morris, deeply impressed with the urgent necessity of furnishing the "douceur," has literally moved heaven and earth to produce it, but in vain. He would gladly have advanced it out of his own strong box, but alas, that was empty, and he already exhausted all his visible resources in equipping this expedition, having paid out $12,000 cash of his own funds and issued notes against his private fortune to the amount of $1,400,000; and besides, it was hard money, not paper, that was now needed. He knew not where to turn to get it. However, two days after dinner at his house he bethought him in his extremity of Rochambeau, his recent guest.

To him he went and consulted thereto by the sheer urgency of the case, and repressing his own sense of humiliation at his errand by invoking his patriotism, he fairly "touched" the general, his late guest for a loan of the needed sum. He explained that Washington absolutely required 20,000 hard dollars to pacify his troops, and pledged himself, in the event the French war chest could spare it, to restore it at any date named. Rochambeau listened with the utmost kindness, and begged Morris to meet him when convenient at the home of the French minister, the Chevalier Caesar Anne de la Luzerne, then resident in Philadelphia. Morris accordingly called on him there on the morning of Sept. 5. Luzerne and Gen. Chastellux, Rochambeau's chief of staff, were present at the interview. After canvassing the subject, they all assured him of their strong desire to oblige, but explained that, to their great regret, their treasure chest was not well filled just then on account of the drains upon it. They had money on the way from France, lately landed at Boston, but it would take several weeks to get it; and although they confidently expected money also from the fleet of de Grasse, that could not be available until it arrived. Fully comprehending and sympathizing in Morris' predicament, however, and manifesting the sincerest inclination to be gracious, they finally suggested that he go down to Chester and overtake the intendent and treasurer of the French army, who that morning had gone on before, and promised if practicable they would turn to it that these officers should furnish the money he required.

Taking with him, therefore, Gouvernor Morris, his assistant in the office of finance on account of his fluency in the French tongue, Morris had a pair of riding horses saddled and the two set out on horseback at 5 o'clock in the afternoon for Chester, down the Delaware. On the way he received a message from Washington announcing the joyful news of de Grasse's safe arrival in the Chesapeake on Aug. 30, six days before. This gave him infinite satisfaction on general principles, but particularly because he foresaw it would enable the French treasurer to make the loan desired. That evening at Chester, Rochambeau, who had just arrived, readily, even gladly, agreed to have his treasurer furnish the money at the Head of the Elk. Morris engaged to replace the sum on Oct. 1 next following.

Early on the morning of Sept. 6 Morris set out from Chester to return to Philadelphia, but did not reach the city until noon, having encountered on the road the rear guard of the French army, with their artillery and baggage. On his arrival he at once dispatched Philip Audibert, deputy paymaster general, to the Head of the Elk with a note to Rochambeau, and with orders to receive the money promised from the French treasurer and to pay it to the American troops, agreeably to instructions given him in writing. In his note to Rochambeau Morris repeated: "I will take care that the money be replaced at the time agreed upon."

It was paid over to Audibert by the French treasurer, and by Audibert disbursed among the soldiers, to their unspeakable gratification. But unfortunately there was not enough to go around, and Morris was compelled a few days later to supply the deficiency from funds intended for other pressing objects. And when the first of October approached, the date set for the return of the money borrowed, he found himself unable without great inconvenience to keep his promise of repayment. But in his own characteristic way he bravely looked the situation in the face, and consulted the French minister, the Chevalier Luzerne, about it. That nobleman, perceiving the condition and being convinced that the French military chest was not in immediate need of cash, gallantly undertook to assure Rochambeau officially that the transaction would be made good beyond peradventure, and considerately suggested to Morris that in the meantime he might delay payment until the arrival of American funds from France when he would be "flush." This lifted a load from Morris' mind; yet as a conscientious stickler for forme he failed not to write Rochambeau a full explanation, renewing his pledge to replace the loan. It is gratifying to know that he was able on Nov. 15 following to repay more than one-half the amount, and the remainder subsequently to Rochambeau's order.

This $20,000 was perhaps the most hardly-raised, the most troublesome and withal the most notable sum of all the millions that passed through Morris' hands for the prosecution of the American revolution, and historically it was probably the most important sum of its size ever raised in that struggle, considering what it helped to accomplish. In that very year, 1781, France had agreed to supply, and was supplying us with $4,000,000 to continue the war, and from the year 1776 until 1782 she expended in our behalf, all told, the stupendous sum for that day of $280,000,000 in clothing, arming, equipping and paying our armies as well as her own forces in America, and in maintaining her fleets incidental to the American service. De Grasse, with his twenty-eight ships of the line, defeated and drove off Admiral Graves; de Barras with his fourteen ships arrived safe from Newport to increase the strength of the English sea power and ward off any attempted interference; Cornwallis with his 7000 troops and 100 sailors, completely encompassed by the French army under Rochambeau and the American army under Washington, found that the position he had chosen, while excellent for an army with a superior sea power to protect it, was a veritable snare when deprived of that advantage. The whole force of the besieged, numbering 8000 men, with 2000 negro slaves, 160 vessels great and small, 74 guns and twenty-four colors, was surrendered to the allied victors of France and America, and the independence of the United States was achieved.

tered and divided. Clinton slumbered in New York and Cornwallis with some 5000 men was in Yorktown with the united French and American armies drawn close about him. Fast followed the siege, nearer came the enclosing lines, Lauzun dashed back Tarleton's cavalry at the very beginning and every British sortie from that moment was repulsed. Day by day the parallels were pushed forward and at last Washington declared the advanced British redoubts practical for assault. The French, under Viomenil, the grenadiers of Gatinois the regiment of Gatinois and Deux-Ponts stormed one and here the most famous of the French regiments recovered from their king the proud motto of "Augergne sans tache." The other redoubt was assigned to the Americans under Lafayette, led by Alexander Hamilton and John Laurens. Both assaults, brilliantly delivered, were successful and the American lines included the ground which had been so gallantly won. A desperate sortie under Col. Abraham completely repulsed, a vain attempt to escape by water and then all was over. On Oct. 18 Cornwallis surrendered and on the following day the British filed out and laid down their arms, passing between the ordered lines of the French drawn up under the lilies and the ranks of the Americans standing beneath the thirteen stars fixed on that day in the firmament of nations. The American revolution had been fought out and the new people had won.

HIS FINE QUALITIES.

Through all these events, through all the months of weary waiting, through the weeks of rapid march and the carrying days of siege and battle there shine out very brightly the fine qualities of the French general. Nothing is more difficult than the management in war of allied forces. Here there was never a jar. Rochambeau was large minded enough to understand the greatness of Washington, to realize the height of mind and the power of character which invested the American leader with a dignity beyond aught that royal birth or kingly title could confer. No small jealousies marred their intercourse. They wrought together for a common cause and the long experience, the thorough training, the keen military intelligence, the wisdom and honest purpose of Rochambeau were all freely given to the American general and his commander. Honor and gratitude then to Rochambeau for what he did for us and gratitude and honor likewise to De Grasse and De Barras for the spirit with which they upheld and sustained both Washington and Rochambeau.

But there is something more in the story than this; something of deeper interest than the plans of statesmen to humble a successful foe and take a tardy revenge for past defeats, something more profound than the grasping of a young people at a friendly hand to draw them forth from the stormy waters of a desperate war for liberty. Look again on those men gathered under the white wings in the mellow October sunlight. The pride of victory is in their hearts for they have done well for France; they have even avenged the loss of Canada. The world smiles upon them as the British pass by and pile their arms. Happily for them they cannot read the future. They do not even grasp the meaning of the war they have helped to bring to an end. They cannot interpret—

"Time's dark events"

"Charging like causeless clouds across the sky."

But their future is our past and we know their destinies. There is Rochambeau himself, chief figure among the French. He will go home to added honors, he will take part presently in the movement for reform and will receive baton. Then a torrent of blood flows. Others of his rank will fly across the frontier but he is made of sterner stuff. He will retire to his estates be dragged to prison, will be barely saved from the guillotine by the Ninth Thermidor and will live on to receive the compliments of the greatest soldier of modern times and will die full of years and honors. There is Lafayette. For him an Austrian prison is waiting. There is Viomenil, who from a new government a marshal's commanded the force which took the redoubt. He will die in hiding, wounded in defense of the king's palace against the of August. There is Damas wounded at the Yorktown redoubt. In a few years he will be a fugitive and an exile fighting onset of a maddened people on the 10th against France. There is Lameth, wounded also at the redoubt. For him too the future holds a prison and a long exile. There is Lauzun, type of the ancient regime, the victor over Tarlton's horse, the bearer of the brave news to Versailles; he too will stay by France and his end will be the guillotine. The prophet who should have foretold such fates as these for that gallant company would have been laughed to scorn. From all men did disaster seem more distant than from these brave gentlemen of France on that October morning and yet the future held for them exile, prison and the guillotine. And it was all inevitable for the American revolution not only made a new nation, but it was the beginning of a world-wide movement. There was something stronger than government, or ministers, than kings or politics which brought the French to America.

LAFAYETTE'S FAME.

Across the square there stands the statue of Lafayette. He brought no army like Rochambeau; no fleet like De Grasse. He came by no command of his king. Yet has he always been nearer to the hearts of Americans than any man not of their own people. The reason is not far to seek. He came of his own accord and brought with him the sympathy of France. He represented the new spirit of a new time, the aspirations, the hope, the visions which had come out of the intellectual revolution wrought by Voltaire, Rousseau and the Encyclopedistes. Purposes of state, calculations of chances, selfish desires might guide the French government, but Lafayette was the living embodiment of the sympathy of the French people for the cause of the United States. He came because he loved the cause and had faith in it and so the American people gave faith and love to him. And this impalpable spirit of the time stirring strongly but blindly in France, was even then more powerful than monarchs or cabinets or coalitions. In America it passed for the first time from the world of speculation to the world of action. There in the new country, on the edge of the yet unconquered continent theory became practice and doctrines lived as facts. There a people had risen up declaring that they were weary of kings, had fought their own battle for their own hand and won. The democratic movement had begun.

From America it passed across the sea saying to all men that what had been done in the new land could be done likewise in the old.

The army of Rochambeau flushed with victory bore back the message with them and it fell upon listening ears. France had helped us to liberty and independence and we had shown her how both were they, too, evoked and handed Europe, won. The force which we had summoned, blind to the deeper meanings of the American war, went to pieces in dull surprise before the onset of a people armed, the makers of a revolution in which thrones tottered, privilege and feudalism went down to ruin and the ancient boundaries of kings faded from the map. The lilies which floated so triumphantly in the Virginian air gave way to the American colors which French armies carried in triumph from Paris to Moscow and from the Baltic to the Nile, wiping out forever the petty tyrannies which sold men to fight in quarrels not their own and clearing the ground for the larger liberty and the united nations of today. The United States with independence achieved passed out of the network of European politics in which for a century and a half the American colonies had been entangled, but the influence and example of the American revolution were felt throughout the civilization of the West.

We unveil this statue in honor of a brave soldier who fought by the side of Washington. We place it here to keep his memory fresh in remembrance and as a monument of our gratitude to France. But let us not forget that we also commemorate here the men who first led in arms the democratic movement which, during a century of conflict, has advanced the cause of freedom and popular government throughout the world of Western civilization.

CLEVER INDIAN GAMBLER.

"There may be citizens in Deadwood who remember Buck Joseph," said the man with the taper fingers as he permitted a smile to lurk for a moment around the corners of his mouth. "Buck was a full-blooded Sioux Indian, but he had traded a couple or two in his time. One of 'em was now to play poker and another was how to play the best hand. He was early on the ground at Deadwood and he was a winner from the start. There were some pretty slick gamblers hanging out there in the old days. They believed in helping Lady Luck in a good deal more in fingering the cards. None of them had Buck Joseph's sleight of hand, however. They tried him on that and again and then worked all the arts known to the profession, but he was still ahead of the game. As a last resort they sent over to Abilene, Kan., for me. I'm not going to say what I was doing over there, but the boys who knew me best were willing to bet two to one that I downed Buck at his own game.

"When I reached Deadwood," continued the narrator, "I had $80 in cash with me. Old Lo came up smiling with an equal amount, and we got down for an all-day tea party. I started out as square as a dot, depending on luck alone, and I had lost $50 before I made a change. Then I went in for nothing less than flushes and inside of an hour I got my money back. Buck knew I was beating him at his own game and he hid for me. On one of his deals he got four aces and I knew it. I got king, queen and jack of diamonds and it was $20 to come in.

"I drew a long breath and shipped and drew two cards to his one. My heart thumped as I found a ten and nine of diamonds in my hand—a straight flush. Of course Buck knew there was only one hand higher than his, and he came for me with bets of $50. If I had friends to back me from and so had I, and when he finally called we had $1,000 in cash on the table, and he had three ponies, two squaws and five papooses up against my watch and pin. He was getting ready to yell when I showed my hand. His yell died away and he sat there like a statue for a minutes. Then he slowly rose up, gathered his blanket around him, and as he walked out of the place, he said:

"'Humph! Heap smart white man—heap ass Injun'"

WANT INDIAN BRIDES.

In Indian Territory among the five civilized tribes many white men are now seeking wives. These Indians are rich, having received land and money on deposit in the Unifer States treasury. The mixed blood women are beautiful, strikingly so, and some of them are well-educated. Hence the desire of white men to marry them, says the Wichita correspondent of the New York Sun.

It is not true that every railroad station has a bevy of beautiful young Indian maidens are waiting patiently for the arrival of good looking pale faces who will woo and win them. But it is true that in every hamlet there are good-looking young women of wealth, education and ambition who can be persuaded to marry white men. The white man as a catch is regarded as distinctly "in it."

Just as the impecunious noblemen from abroad marry into rich families of the East so white men seek Indian girls as wives. The girl has a dowry all her own, a headright that cannot be taken away from her under any circumstances. This headright entitles her to share all of the benefits of the tribe. If the head men of the council secure a payment from the government she gets a share. If the white man who has married her insists upon it, he may also get a share. All of his children have equal rights with the fullest of the full bloods.

The dowry of these Indian girls varies. Five thousand dollars is not too large an average. Some get twice that amount.

While the Cherokees are the poorest they have the prettiest lot of young women, and are likewise the farthest advanced.

While the white husbands have nothing to complain of in the way of money matters or social or political influence in the tribes they sometimes find their home life not all that was planned. Some women who have been married for their money and know of it are prone to remind their husbands of this during family quarrels. That is a frequent cause of trouble between these couples.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT

Chicago Tribune: A committee on the revision of a church creed can do more work and less revising than any similar body of which we have any knowledge.

Chicago Record-Herald: A Cleveland preacher has discovered that the recently developed love for sports here in America is a sign of degeneracy. Down with the muddled oafs!

Washington Post: A proposition to introduce a vested choir has split a Philadelphia Methodist church in twain. It is a very easy matter to guess which way the younger members of the congregation went.

Boston Transcript: With the vivid description of the cloud of fire descending on the Lesser Antilles fresh in mind, it requires no great amount of imagination to encompass the horrors of the old-fashioned orthodox judgment day.

Minneapolis Journal: Governor Taft's mission to the Filipinos is sensible and proper in every way, and it is humiliating that the administration should feel it necessary to explain its errand in apologetic terms. We are living in the twentieth century, but superstition is not dead.

Chicago Chronicle: Another somewhat well known clergyman who has ceased to believe or to teach the tenets of the creed to which he is a nominal subscriber is going to put his church to the trouble of a heresy trial instead of acting like an honest man and severing his connections voluntarily. The wonder grows that a man should wait to be kicked out of an organization whose dogmas he rejects and whose teachings he ridicules, and the worst of it is that it seems to be true almost entirely of preachers. The layman who undergoes a change of religious faith does not wait to be told to quit. He seeks another communion, or none at all, and that is the end of it. The clergyman alone has to be served with a writ of ejectment.

ARIZONA'S BIG JAGUAR

Was Smoked Out of Cave and Killed.

A jaguar which had been killing cattle and horses for years in Arizona and viciously attacking cowboys, has at last been slain after an exciting battle between man and beast. It has been brought to Tucson by Jeano and Tomas Garcia, hunters, writes the Tucson, Arizona, correspondent of the San Francisco Examiner.

Cattlemen and cowboys, when they heard of the killing of the strange beast, which had spread terror wherever it has appeared in their mountains, hastened to town to see it, and thousands of people have viewed the monster animal. It is unlike anything ever seen in Arizona, and oldtimers have agreed that the animal came into the mountains from Mexico or Texas.

It measures seven feet and nine inches from the tip of its nose to the end of the short, stocky tail.

Its head measures two feet and three and one-half inches in circumference, and around the neck it measures eighteen inches.

To show the great strength of its shoulders and arms nineteen inches of tape were required to circle the forearm.

The track made by the animal is seven inches wide, larger than the biggest horse that roams the ranges of the Southwest.

Garcia at first thought it was a leopard, but students of natural history here says it is a jaguar, or "North American tiger." It is one of the most perfectly marked animals of the tiger family imaginable, its body bearing the dark spots which look as though they might have been stamped there by the imprint of the animal's own foot. The hair is fine, soft and silky, richly colored from a dark gray upon the lower and unexposed portions of the body to a soft, pale yellow on the back, head and sides.

The presence of the animal has been known for the last thirteen years. It was first seen by Charlie Brown and his son Will while they were hunting in the Rincon mountains. It was seen at that time at the very place Garcia killed it, more than a dozen years later, near Soldier Cabin, about eighteen miles northeast of Tucson. There is a large cave in the Rincon mountains at that point, and it was in this cave that the jaguar had made its headquarters all these years.

Mariano Samaniego, a rancher in the Catalina mountains, came to see the animal this afternoon. He says it is the same creature which has frequently been seen in the mountains, and whose tracks hunters have followed unsuccessfully for years.

About six years ago Mr. Samaniego was gathering his cattle and put thirty calves into a corral that had followed their mothers in during the round-up. In the night this animal came down from his mountain cave and killed every calf, sucking the blood and leaving the lifeless bodies piled in a heap in the corral.

It was known that mountain lions had not done the work, for they would have taken the bodies away to the mountains, and the tracks which the cowpunchers found leading to the corral were shaped differently and were much larger than any mountain lion they had ever seen. When Mr. Samaniego saw the animal in Tucson today he at once recognized the foot as the one which had made its mark of blood in his corral in the Catalinas.

Old-time hunters who have seen the beast say it is 30 years old, and men who have hunted the tiger in Africa say they never saw such a large beast and one so powerfully built as this one.

Garcia and his son brought the jaguar to town. They have been hunting lion and bear for Billy Brown, and had with them his fine pack of hounds, which was led by Nellie, the best trailer in the Southwest.

Nellie had a record of sixty mountain lions, or cougars, as they are often called. She had successfully trailed and brought to death at the hands of hunters twenty bear, and during her years on the trail she never knew what fear meant. She had never been defeated, although she had engaged wild animals in many a fierce fight to death.

Sunday morning the Garcias came on the track of the strange beast Nellie led the pack upon. They followed the hounds for miles, and at 6 o'clock Saturday evening they saw one of the dogs running toward them, and when they saw it was Nellie they knew something was wrong, for Nellie never before ran from the biggest lion or bear she ever met in the mountains. A moment later a four-footed monster bounded over the rocks and with one tap of the round paw sent the hound twenty feet with its head crushed by the force of the blow.

They found that the hounds had come upon the animal and made the attack. Nellie saw one of her best fighters killed outright, another knocked down the mountain and a third crushed and torn to pieces. Left alone with a fierce animal fifty times her size and 1000 times more powerful, Nellie turned tail and ran toward the approaching hunters, but did not reach them in time to save her life.

The animal, quick as a flash, turned when it had killed Nellie, and made its way to a cave so swiftly that the hunters were unable to shoot before its body had disappeared. Garcia and his son, trained trappers and as brave as the animals they hunt, stood at the mouth of the cave waiting for the tiger to come out.

The walls of the cave echoed the roar of the beast all night long.

The men built a fire so that they might see to shoot in case the animal came out of the cave. The fire was built a few feet from the cave. They had a double purpose in the fire—one to afford light to shoot by and the other to fill the cave with smoke and bring the beast out.

All night long they waited, and the roar and cries of the animal could be heard for miles about. James remained on guard, and his son gathered wood to keep the fire burning brightly.

The cries of the animal seemed to come from the furthermost recesses of the cave, as though it were trying to find relief from the smoke. It remained there several hours, but finally the cries showed that the animal was nervously prowling about and was gradually getting closer to the mouth of the cave.

Garcia called to his son to stand on one side and watch closely, and the old hunter of a hundred victories stood almost in front of the opening. There was a tearing, rumbling scraping sound as though a cannon ball was being shot from the cave, and with a flash of two fiery eyes the great animal shot forth, springing toward Garcia. But the latter was fired as the animal plunged forward, the ball striking in the head. The beast turned in the air and fell into the fire almost at the feet of the old hunter. The father fired just as the animal was regaining its feet, and it was the shot which killed the beast and ended the struggle which was full of peril for the hunter's every minute of that long night's vigil.

Garcia has had some desperate encounters with wild animals in Southern Arizona. A year ago he came upon a cave in the mountains, near tracks having led him up to it. He fired a shot into the cave, there was a growl from a bear, a few groans, and Garcia believed he had killed the animal. He entered the cave, which was very dark, but by the light of an ocatillo which he burned and used as a candle the hunter saw a great bear lying wounded at the further end of the cave. He made his way to the bear and with his knife ended his life.

As he was trying to drag the big animal out he was attacked by the mate of the dead animal and a hand-to-hand fight took place. Garcia dropped the torch and in the darkness wrestled and fought with the fierce animal. Unfortunately he had left his rifle outside and had only his knife to fight with. The shining eyes of the bear in the darkness of the cave afforded his only means of knowing where the animal was. Garcia struck at the eyes with his knife and filled the animal with blood and pain. With his eyes cut out and a great gash in his throat, the big bear fell to the floor of the cave and Garcia made his way to the opening to find that his clothes had been torn to shreds and his body was bleeding from several ugly wounds. From the mouth of the cave he killed the bear with the aid of a the aid of a lighted ocatillo.

SHE HELD HER PLACE.

At a crowded theatrical performance in the provinces recently a very strong-minded lady, annoyed at the hugeness of the hats in front which smelled her enjoyment, left her seat and took up her seat in the gangway, says Tid-Bits. The attendant followed and told her it was forbidden to stand in the gangway. The lady took not the slightest notice, upon which the officer went on to say:

"Madam, if you don't go I shall have to remove you."

"Touch me if you dare," replied the intrepid lady, glaring at him. "Just put a finger on me and I'll call out 'Fire!'"

The attendant looked round at the crowded house and left the lady mistress of the situation.

Students and teachers are now busily preparing for the closing of school. June 6 is the day of closing, but the last two or three days of the week are filled with closing exercises. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered at the High School Assembly hall Sunday evening, June 1, by Rev. Alexander Milne. The class exercises will be held Wednesday evening, and the commencement exercises Friday evening June 6.

These programs promise to be particularly good, and in accordance with the class' usual way of doing things they are in some respects original.

The class night exercises, which deal with the amusing and mirth-provoking side of high school life, have some especially funny and original numbers. "The Dreffie Bogie Man" song, which will be sung by Miss Esther Searle, supported by the class, is very funny, as is the song which Frank Fee, Fred Johnston and George Suffel will delight the audience with. The "Tell Me, Pretty Maiden," of the "Floradora" double sextet, which made such a hit at the annual senior dramatic and musical entertainment a few weeks ago, will be repeated.

The class history, prophecy, and last will and testament, given by three young ladies of the class, are calculated to provoke a smile on the lips of the most austere.

As usual the school song, "Triumphales," closes both of the programs. Some new class songs, arranged purposely for the occasion by A. F. M. Custance, will have a place on both programs, too.

The commencement night program consists of essays and addresses by the honor pupils, with musical and other numbers interspersed to relieve the pressure of so much that is didactic.

The essays and speeches are by those who have maintained the highest standing during their four years in the school, and are supposed to be an index of the quality of the work which Duluth high school students are capable of doing along literary and oratorical lines.

The entire musical parts of both programs have been under the direction of A. F. M. Custance, and much of the music is of his composition.

MEETING BRAINERD.

High School Team Playing That Town Today.

The baseball men are waging war with the team of the Brainerd high school out at the driving park this afternoon. The Brainerd men arrived here this morning in fine fettle and well prepared for the struggle this afternoon.

The local boys are equally well prepared and confidently expect to rub it all over the Brainerd men. A good game will certainly be played.

Some one suggested that Brainerd was only a little farming village, whereat one of the local wags concocted the following yell to give the Brainerd men when they come out on the field to play this afternoon:

"Hay seed, straw seed, pumpkin, squash.
Brainerd, Brainerd, yes, by gosh."

However, the men from Brainerd are expected to give the local boys a good game.

The local boys have several more games to play. They go to Brainerd next Saturday, and later it is expected that they will meet the St. Paul Central high school.

DEBATE WITH SUPERIOR.

Juniors of Duluth and Superior Schools Meet.

The juniors of the Duluth high school and the same class of the Blaine high school of Superior met in debate at the Blaine high school yesterday afternoon.

The question was: "Resolved that the railways of the country should be under the management of the federal government." The juniors have been working on this subject for some time and they had the matter well in hand. The Superior people were equally well prepared and a thoroughly excellent debate was the rsult. Thre was no decision rendered, so that the supremacy of the two schools in as far as their junior classes are exponents of merit was not decided. A good crowd of Superior students heard the debate. A number of students from the Duluth school went over to support their team.

The freshman-sophomore oratorical contest will be held in the high school assembly hall next Wednesday evening. The two classes are well prepared to wage a ferocious forensic battle for supremacy. The event is expected to be every bit as interesting as the contest which took place between the senior and junior classes some months ago.

Teams composed of two boys and two girls from each class will take part. The addresses will deal with various subjects suitable for oratorical treatment. They are to be original with each speaker and will be judged both for excellence in composition and delivery.

Incidental music will be placed on the program. This will consist of selections by the Young Ladies' Glee club of the high school, a new organization which consists of about twenty or more of the musically inclined young women of the sophomore and freshman classes, and songs by a male quartet.

Mr. Thomas, who is arranging the matter, hopes to have a large crowd out to hear the contest.

GIRLS AT BASKET BALL.

Juniors and Sophomores to Meet Tuesday.

Sundry little ripples of excitement perturbed the equanimity of the basketball playing girls of the sophomore and junior classes during last week. Tuesday afternoon their long expected match game will take place. Great preparations are being made for the event. It certainly will be a success---and with not a boy there.

Stella Upton, Katie Watterworth, Genevive Washburn, Helen Steele and Xenia Woolman or Grace Staples are said to compose the junior team. The sophomore team consists of Cecelia Oppel, Susan Thompson, Jessie Ames, Violet Robinson and Marie Fredrick.

The event will certainly be an interesting one and if the reports of the young men and the girls are to be relied upon, it will be a good one from the standpoint of basketball. The young women have been practicing regularly to get in good form and it is said that they play a good game.

Notes of the Week.

The seniors held their last class spread of the year at Harmonie hall, Lester Park, last evening. A large crowd of seniors and juniors, whom the seniors had invited to attend, enjoyed an excellent evening. There were good things to eat and dancing to good music.

The juniors held their last class meeting of the year Wednesday afternoon. The final touches were put to the junior-senior reception arrangements, and the class business was closed for the year. At the next meeting, which will be held at the opening of school next year, the class officers will be elected for another year.

* * *

Orders have been taken during the week for the high school caps. They are to be red skull caps with the letters D. H. S. on the front of them. They are rather diminutive—supposed to be worn well back on the head and directly over the left ear.

* * *

All intention of giving the track team anything further to do has been given up. Only three men who made the team are up in their studies, so that it will be impossible for the team to compete in the interscholastic meet at Minneapolis or elsewhere.

Little Truth In Story of Combine With Calumet & Hecla.

District Is Now Over-Run With Unemployed Workingmen.

Houghton, Mich., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The recent improvement in the market price of Lake copper is giving much encouragement to certain of the local mines that have been hard hit by the drop in the price of the metal to 11 cents. Eight years ago all of the active lake mines were making a little money with copper selling at 9 cents, but the advanced wages and higher costs in every department of production have increased the cost of makng copper by 2 to 3 cents per pound, and in consequence 11 cents per pound for the metal is rather more disastrous to the lake mines than was 9 cents in 1894. Inasmuch as cost of production has increased on a corresponding scale in the Western fields, it is not likely that the world will be able to buy its copper for an average price under 13 to 14 cents, for any great length of time. Just how long copper will linger under 13 cents depends upon how long it takes the consumers to assimilate the over-production of the past two years.

Eastern newspaper stories that the Amalgamated, Rothschild, Calumet & Hecla and Heinze interests have "got together" are entitled to no more credence than the rumors of similar purport that have been set afloat every two or three months for the past two years. The Rothschilds control nearly as large a production as the Amalgamated, and while they are not averse to seeing a higher price for copper are not likely to be used as catspaws for the Amalgamated. The Calumet & Hecla people are absolutely and unalterably opposed to combinations of every kind. They figure that the market will run itself with a greater degree of safety than can be afforded by the "regulation" of any pool or corporation. The Calumet & Hecla people are not averse to talking matters over with other producers. The management wants to get as high a price for its product as is warranted by actual conditions—and no higher. The Calumet & Hecla is not in any pool and will enter none. All future stories to a contrary effect may be set down as fabrications. Mr. Heinze has floated his United Copper company, and by so doing has, apparently, paved the way for an ultimate settlement of the copper war that has been raging in Montana for some years past, as it will be mainly the easier to deal with a corporation having its stock on the market than a close corporation such as the Montana Ore Purchasing company was. The outcome of the Montana fight is as yet unseen, but Mr. Heinze's latest step is in the direction of an ultimate settlement.

At the present time the copper district of Michigan is over-run with unemployed workingmen. Times have been very good in the lake district for several years past, and an immense amount of work has been done. Wages have been high, ruling at $2 per day for common labor, with mechanics drawing pay accordingly. This has made the copper country a mecca for laboring men, and at present there are more of them in the district than can find employment, despite the large amount of railroad and construction work under way this season.

It is rumored locally that the Osceola will soon reduce forces. The Osceola company is now practically at an end of the heavy construction work undertaken three years ago, and will begin reaping the reward. The policy of the Osceola management in declaring dividends not earned is a censurable one, but the outlay made for development of new shafts and new equipment on surface was a necessary one, and fully warranted by the requirements of the mine. With two fine mines opened on the Kearsage lode, the situation of the Osceola is a good one at present, but it would not be good were the company dependent upon the mines opened and worked a few years ago. The Tamarack Junior is a mere scram ,with its end in sight, and the Osceola proper is not a rich property. The future of the Osceola company depends on the Kearsarge rather than on the older workings.

Richard Cocking, of the Quincy, has succeeded Thomas Treverrow as mining captain at the Adventure. Work on the new mill is well along, and the mine is extensively opened, so that the Adventure should start production under favorable circumstances.

The Mass mine—so-named some half century ago, from the unusual frequence of heavy copper—continues to secure large quantities of mass copper, the product in this form running from twenty to thirty-five tons per week. The strike of the employes lasted but a few days, and did not materially decrease production.

The possibility of a strike of coal miners in the bituminous fields is worrying the mine managers. It now takes 1,000,000 tons of coal per annum to run the copper mines of the lake district, and this coal must be secured during the season of navigation. It might be brought by all-rail routes, in a case of great emergency, but the expense would be a terrific drain on the resources of the mines. Several of the mines aim to carry a year's surplus supply of coal, but this is not possible in all cases. The Quincy has a very short coal supply on hand, owing to the building of new coal wharves at Mason. These are just completed, and will be stocked with coal as soon as may be.

The Calumet & Heckley, under the management of James MacNaughton, is turning out the largest production of refined copper in its history, and is doing it with a much smaller force of men than was employed two years ago. The list of sinecures and supernumeraries has been cut very deeply, and more work is required of each man than formerly. A new and improved timber-car is in successful use at several shafts, and will be introduced at others. A self-dumping skip is to be swung under each cage in the Red Jacket vertical shaft, and between the cage-skips and timber-cars a wonderful saving in time will be effected, leading to greatly increased daily hoisting capacity. Mr. MacNaughton is fully justifying the wisdom of the company's Eastern management in placing him in charge. Not the least remarkable feature of his administration is the fact that he has managed to retain the confidence and liking of the company's 5000 employes while increasing the work done per man and stopping a multitude of small leaks.

Thomas B. Dunstan, of Hancock, is in a precarious condition, in Chicago, and his recovery is very doubtful. Descended from a long line of Cornish mining captains, the influence of heredity proved so strong that Governor Dunstan rejuvenated the Adventure and Victoria mines, both of which are promising properties, in addition to conducting a very large law practice nd taking a prominent part in the councils of the Republican party of Michigan.

The Trimountain will start a new shaft—No. 4—next week. When the new shaft is safely through the drift, and descending smoothly in solid rock, another new shaft will be started. In view of the manifold troubles attendant upon the sinking of a sand-shaft, the management is wise not to try two such jobs at once. Like a boil, or a felon, one sand-shaft at a time is an ample sufficiency.

Excavations for the new stamp mill of the Phoenix are completed.

Surveys preliminary to the development of the water power at Glenn Falls are being made. The Victoria company will secure sufficient power to operate its entire machinery plant, for mine and mill. While the power can be developed very cheaply, the equipment will be of the best, and the buildings will be of stone and fire-proof, as the entire operation of the mine will be dependent upon the electric power station.

The connection of the new No. 5 Tamarack shaft with No. 2, to the southward, adds to the safety of operation of the new shaft, and also aids in ventilating No. 5—a matter of importance, as this is the deepest shaft in the world, and very hot in the bottom levels.

FIRST WOMAN

To Cross the Andes Is Miss Andissner of Austria.

New York, May 24.—Miss Maris Andissner, who has ascended mountains in many climes, is now at the Hotel Belvidere recounting her experience in crossing the Andes. She says as far as she knows the feat never has been accomplished by another woman.

Miss Andissner is from Salzburg, Austria. She is fond of traveling, and for many years has spent much of her time in visiting picturesque points in the world. She recently made a tour of the world, and after a brief rest started for the Argentine Republic. She has climbed part way up Mount Everest. To her the Alps were mere hillocks and many of the mountains commonly regarded as of great altitude did not impress her as being anything more than gentle slopes.

By going across the Andes Miss Andissner hoped to save time. The journey across the mountains could be accomplished in five days, while the voyage around Cape Horn from Buenos Ayres to Valpraiso would require at least a fortnight. She went through the Uspellata Pass. The journey was accomplished by railway train, by wagon, on mule back and often by climbing.

All Miss Andissner's companions advised her not to attempt the arduous journey. It is the custom of South Americans to send their families by sea rather than to cross the mountains, and frequently journeys have been made by the way of New York in order to escape the perils of the Southern Cordilleras. Miss Andissner was not dismayed.

She was fatigued when she finished the journey, and she says that while she is proud of the achievement she does not desire to repeat it. The start was made from Mendoza, in the Argentine republic. The first halt was made at a height of 3200 yards, where there are hot baths.

The traveler says that the scene was one of great beauty, and that she beheld a landscape of many colors stretching out before her and above her. There was a hotel at the height of 4500 yards, where she rested for a time. Here there were mines rich in gold and silver and copper. Above was the mountain, which reached a height of 5000 yards.

Miss Andissner passed near Mount Aconcagua, one of the highest mountains in the world, which rises to a height of more than 6000 yards.

"It was too far for me to climb," she said, "and I had no wish to excel the attempt of an English traveler, who got part way up and was obliged to come down. Even at this point two of the young men of the party were overcome with faintness and had to be taken back. The air was so rare that it was difficult to breathe. I was able, however, to make the journey."

WHITE HOUSE PARTIES OFF.

Mrs. Roosevelt Goes to Oyster Bay June 9.

Washington, May 24.—Considerable disappointment is felt that Mrs. Roosevelt has decided to give no more garden parties during this season. It has been her intention to remain in Washington until the adjournment of congress made it possible for the president to accompany her to Oyster Bay. During the interim she proposed to give a weekly outdoor fete.

Many circumstances have combined to cause a change of program. The most important of these is the long and severe strain of the past season. All this week Mrs. Roosevelt has been busily engaged in attending the fetes incident to the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue. A few days ago she announced that with the close of these entertainments the social program would be concluded.

On June 9 Mrs. Roosevelt Miss Alice and all the children will go to Oyster Bay. The trip will be made on the Dolphin, and it is likely that the president will accompany his family and remain with them for at least a day or two.

Miss Ditha Luce

Miss Ditha Luce
President of Rose Lodge, No. 18, Order of Chosen Friends, Detroit, Mich.

"I want to tell you how thankful I am that I took the advice of my friends and tried your Wine of Cardui, after the best medical skill failed to alleviate my sufferings from suppressed and painful menstruation which I had suffered with for years. But relief came soon after taking your medicine and I continued taking it until I hardly realized when the menstrual period came. Every woman who is troubled as I was should certainly give it a trial and I am sure that she will soon be convinced of its efficacy."

WOMEN as a rule appreciate advice and are more apt to follow wise counsel than men are.

No woman could fail to be thankful to anyone who would go to her and tell her how to be well. In fact, she would regard that person as a friend indeed. The friends who took Wine of Cardui to Miss Ditha Luce, of 213 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich., can justly be called "good Samaritans" because they raised Miss Luce from the discouragement and despondency of terrible suffering. She thanks them from the bottom of her heart and is determined to pay the debt she owes to her friends and to Wine of Cardui by trying to help every other woman who suffers as she did. Any woman can do good by letting her suffering friends know of this great remedy for women. You can tell them that over 1,000,000 suffering women have secured health and happiness and that thousands of these cured women have written letters just like Miss Luce's letter. After trying to secure relief by other treatments and securing health by taking Wine of Cardui, Miss Luce is competent to advise other suffering women, and this she does in the simple straightforward words:

"Every woman who is troubled as I was should certainly give it a trial and I am sure that she will soon be convinced of its efficacy."

She means that every woman who is suffering the pains of irregular and painful menstruation may secure permanent relief by taking Wine of Cardui. This great medicine regulates menstruation and makes that function a health-giving relief instead of a harrowing torture. Bearing-down pains are quickly relieved in nine out of ten cases by Wine of Cardui. Ovarian troubles vanish when it is used. All these ailments with those dreadful accompanying weakening drains come from one cause and Wine of Cardui removes that cause and lets Nature build up the weakened parts without interruption.

Mrs. Eunice Smith, of Baldwyn, Miss., says:

"I have used two bottles of your wonderful medicine, Wine of Cardui, and it has done me more good than anything else I have ever tried. I am going to get all my friends to take it."

Mandia Adams, of Cordele, Georgia, writes:

"I have been using your Wine of Cardui and have felt very much benefited by its use so I take pleasure in writing you about it. I also recommend it to my friends who suffer female troubles."

If you go to your druggist today and secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui you will begin to feel better within a week. With the plain words of these honest women before you can you want for a greater inducement to give Wine of Cardui a fair trial?

MOST BRUTAL

Little Boy Made to Breathe Foul Sewer Gas.

Atlanta, Ga., May 24.—Forced by five young boys to breathe sewer gas and held by them under slimy sewer filth until he swallowed some of the poison is the story of little Colin McDougall told just before he closed his eyes in eternal sleep, of the inhuman treatment that caused his death.

Colin was the 6-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. McDougall, who reside at the corner of Little and Woodson streets, and it has developed that his death was due to abuse and torture inflicted on him by five older boys.

The boys implicated all reside in the immediate neighborhood.

The immediate cause of the death of little Colin was, it is said, sewer gas poisoning. According to statements he was forced to go into the mouth of the big Connally street sewer, about three blocks from his home; was beaten with rocks or some other weapon; was then forced under the filthy water and held there until he had swallowed some of the deadly poison and was afterwards ridden on a rail in the foul sewer. He was then allowed to go, but was threatened with death by his assailants if he informed on them.

Three hours before his death the little fellow realizing that his assailants could do him no further harm, Colin called his parents, his three brothers and one or two friends to his bedside and made a dying declaration. He told in detail the horrible story and made known the names of the guilty parties.

The heartbroken father then began to investigate and has found evidence corroborating every detail of his child's dying statement.

On the day of the assault Colin and several playmates were rollicking about the premises when there appeared five boys ranging in age from 10 to 12 years. They approached Colin and by some means induced him to go with them. They took him to the mouth of the big sewer, it is charged, and there ensued a series of brutal acts of which it would seem boys of that tender age would be incapable. According to the evidence obtained the child was forced into the sewer and the abuses enumerated heaped on him. The boys were not satisfied with making him walk up into the sewer through a stream of filth, but rode him on a rail and heaped blows on his little body.

Frightened by the threats of his tormentors the child hurried back to his home, but did not breathe a word of his experience. In the meantime the sewer poison was getting in its work on the child's system and Thursday he became seriously ill. A physician was summoned, but a diagnosis of the case failed to reveal the true facts. The condition of the patient was puzzling and the disease was pronounced of a most unusual type. In the meantime he grew rapidly worse and medical science seemed unable to cope with the trouble.

Finally the illness reached such a serious stage that another physician was called in. After a more complete examination of all the symptoms the two physicians decided that the trouble was caused by sewer gas poisoning. An examination was then made of the body and on it were discovered numbers of bruises. It then became apparent that the child had been brutally treated.

REVOKED.

Orders Which Gave Miles Power Are Countermanded.

Washington, May 24.—The president has revoked the old executive order of Aug. 29, 1901, by which the lieutenant general commanding the army (Gen. Miles) and the adjutant general (Gen. Corbin) in turn, are to assume the duties of secretary of war in the absence of the secretary and assistant secretary.

The president's order of revocation leaves the department without a head in the event of the absence of the secretary and assistant secretary, unless such head is specifically designated on each occasion. Both the secretary and assistant secretary were absent yesterday, but Secretary Root before he left issued a special order designating his chief clerk, John C. Schofield to "sign requisitions upon the treasury and other papers requiring my signature during my temporary absence from Washington on the 23rd of May, 1902, and until my return or until the return of the assistant secretary of war."

It is presumed that similar special orders will be made designating Mr. Schofield to perform these duties whenever the secretary and assistant secretary are absent in the future.

Secretary Root has issued an order which revives an old order of Jan. 18, 1886, providing that in the absence of the head of a bureau the senior officer of the department or corps, on duty in the bureau, shall assume temporary charge.

The significance of the order lies in the limitation "on duty." Under the application of this limitation, the officer on duty outside of the bureau could assume charge as does Col. Ward, of Gen. Miles' headquarters in the case of the adjutant general's office, but Gen. Corbin's duties would ordinarily be assumed by Col. Carter.

NOVELTIES IN TARTAN

Furore For Hats In Combinations of Dark Blue and Dark Green.

An Enormous Demand Has Resulted For Wings, Birds, Aigrette and Paradise In One of the Two Colors.

New York, May 22.—The Paris letter of the Millinery Trade Review says this promises to be a record season. Since the commencement there has been an uninterrupted succession of novelties, and those who would keep in the very front rank of fashion have had to spend money lavishly. Doubtless they have been all the more tempted to do this as spring has been very backward this year, and it has been impossible, as yet, to inaugurate light costumes. Parisians reckon by the almanac, not by the temperature, where millinery is concerned, and will sport quite summer-like hats with wintery toilets after lent.

Last month it was the reed and grass hats that were all the vogue, but in the short space of time that has intervened since our last issue, a novelty has been launched that has thrown these into the shade. At the present writing there is a perfect furore for hats in combinations of dark blue and light green. It is only a few weeks ago that one of the wholesale houses placed on the market straw hats made of coarse braids of bright drab-blue straw, pleated with vivid metallic green, and wings for trimming were also blue and green. Tartan hats, they were called. In a few days the city was flooded with them.

Of course the first houses were not going to follow suit. The tucked arrangement might be all very well for morning and country wear, and, moreover, the combination of this particular blue and green was voted too crude by milliners of taste. Still, the idea itself was a good one, and susceptible to being improved upon. While maintaining the parrot shade of green, by deepening the blue, a much more tasteful effect was obtained. In its later developments it therefore becomes a peacock harmony, although the name of "Tartan" has so far been retained, as well as the original style of trimming. This has resulted in an enormous demand for wings, to which have been added birds, aigrette and paradise in one of the two colors, rather than in combinations of the two. Some milliners build up the same harmony with flowers, but certainly plumage is much more suitable. The following will show what is being done in this line by the best houses.

To begin with here is one of Mme. Reboux's models. It is a small tricorne in the Louis XV. style; that is to say, bent sharply in a vertical line at the three corners and with the brim driving up between. The hat itself is fine sewn straw of a very deep navy tone, and the up-turned brim is faced with deep green paillasson braids. Against the sides, their tips pointing downwards, are placed two peacock-blue wings, and about the crown is draped a piece of navy blue tulle.

A large plateau hat lifted from the brow in front and fluted at the back, made of fancy chip braids of a metallic green (but not so bright as would be a glazed straw) has for trimming four elongated deep blue wings, two of which are fastened flat on the outside of the brim on the right, and the two others flat on the underside of the brim.

A similar shaped hat, built up of broad, dark blue chip braids, bordered with a single row of bright green paillason, rests in front on a cachepeigne of green velvet, and is trimmed outside, quite on the edge of the brim, with two bright green paradise falls secured by sapphire cabochons.

The next is smaller. It has a large flat crown of peacock-blue straw, on which is set a pair of wings to match, and a rolled brim, the under side of which is faced with coarse chip braids of a bright green, divided by folds of lisse to match. A second pair of wings, rather smaller, is fastened at the side, against the brim.

A medium-sized hat in green chrysanthemum straw is turned up at the side, where a green bird is placed, the tail feathers of which are long and tipped with deep blue.

Bright green velvet ribbon is worked in and out of the edge of another hat in dark blue straw, draped round the crown with dark blue tulle. Fine blue wings, with a few green feathers introduced into the points, form a cachepeigne behind.

The only really appropriate flower for the blue and green combination is the bluet or blue cornflower. It is used to trim hats of green reed or green chrysanthemum straw, and also mixed with grasses to deck blue straw. White flowers, such as elder, lily-of-the-valley or small roses mixed with a good deal of green, wreath some green straw hats into the trimming of which a single blue couteau, a rosette of blue velvet ribbon, or a pair of blue cabochons is introduced. These, however, can hardly come under the head of blue and green combinations.

The special harmony in the idea is the harmonizing of a bright medium green with a deep blue. When turquoise or rather light blue is substituted for the latter, it loses all its eccentricity. That combinations of light blue and moderately light green will be fashionable, is evident. Among the models showing this arrangement may be noted some of the new floral hats in which the flowers are used only as a trimming mounted on a transparent tulle shape.

One of these, a turban hat in sky-blue tulle has the top of the low crown and the rolled border of the brim covered with clustered sprays of forget-me-nots. Another of somewhat larger size consists of a turban brim composed of pale blue hydrangea blooms and their leaves laid on to a shape covered with shirred tulle of moss-green tone, the base of the crown bound round with bands of green and blue velvet.

The much-favored shade of metallic green is also combined with white other than flowers. Carried out in straw and plumage, this combination may be ranked as the second important innovation of the month. In some models the green predominates, in others the white.

The latter is the case in a large turban hat made of course white chip braids, the brim of which is faced by three large braids of green straw divided by folds of white china silk repeated round the edge. Outside, on the crown, are two very elongated wings lying side by side. One of these wings is bright green and the other white. Outside the brim on the left is an ornament in cut steel in the form of spread wings, and a little further back are two green wings arranged so that the tips point downward behind the ear.

Green, on the other hand, predominates in a large plateau hat made of fancy chip of this color, mounted on a circular band of green velvet. Gummed around the edge of the shape are two rows of white confetti stamped out of stiffened white satin, and through the crown are stuck two broad couteaux, one white, one green.

In other models we have the same green combined with black. The underside of an amazon hat in rice straw is bright green, the upper side black.

SHOWING THE NEW LACE DRAPING.

Among the very latest conceits of Dame Fashion are the low flat hats draped with black thread lace, carrying us back to the fashion plates of the early fifties. Our photograph shows one of the prettiest of them. The hat itself is of lace with touches of black moire silk and a large pearl ornament. The summer girl is charming in these soft shadowy laces. From James McCreery & Co.

is fastened on the slant of the brim behind, from which hang festoons of the ribbon.

At the same time, red continues a favorite color, especially for straws and for poppies, and they are shown in a variety of shades of crimson and cerise. A capeline, fluted at the back, so as to form a sort of cabriolet and made of fancy crimson chip, is trimmed in an original way with tiny bunches of cherries tied up short with two or three leaves, and bunches of green almonds. Thees are inserted into the interstices of the straw rougd the edge of the brim and underneath where the hat rests is a coronet of deep crimson velvet, matching the darkest of the cherries.

For sailor shapes of the ordinary sort, red straw will divide favor with dark blue. Some sailor shape swith flat topped crowns drawn in at the base figure among the new models of a more dressy order. One of these is made of burnt straw. The crown is tied round with crimson velvet ribbon, and a garland of bright cerise poppies rests on the brim. A similar shape is made of wide braids of white lace straw interwoven with white and black comete. This is also trimmed with a garland of crimson poppies.

Something of a Spanish style of hat obtains with some milliners. The principal features of this is the fall of black chantilly lace and the arrangement of red and pink flowers in two large clusters placed symmetrically on each side of the crown. The brim is, moreover, rolled equally on both sides, but not against the crown, as is the amazon. One of these is in drawn black tulle, and is draped about with wide black lace, which falls over the ears at the sides and still lower at the back. Large bunches of red geranium trim the outside, and two others almost equally large are placed under the brim behind, where they are veiled by the lace.

Another is in fancy straw of a china pink shade. This is draped about with a long black scarf fastened on either side of the front by pins, the heads of which, as large balls, are composed of an immense number of triangular jet spangles strung together by the points. Outside are clusters of shaded pink azalia, and two bunches of the same nestle behind the ears on each side of the knotted scarf ends.

Several of the latest models are trimmed with ostrich. A large capeline in black rice simply trimmed outside with a band of black velvet, has two white Amazons fastened by a large steel cabochon underneath the brim, which is turned up over the left brow. Another broad-brimmed hat turned up in front has an Amazon fastened to the right side sweeping round the edge of the brim. It presents a somewhat curious combination of color, the straw being in deep tonel manila with a broad band of darkest navy (almost black) on the outer edge of the brim; the feather, white for the most part, has portions of it shaded down from white to darkest blue through gray; a band of moss-green velvet encircles the crown, the front rests on a cachepeigne of the same, and the feather is fastened by a velvet rosette.

With all this striving after daring harmonies and rather stagey effects, the delicate pompadour combinations which held so large a place in the program at the commencement of the season, promise to be in high favor for dressy summer hats, to be worn with costumes of muslin and other thin materials. There is a flat hat with the brim fluted down at the back, made of hairbraids of palest blue ribbon brocaded with a pompadour floral pattern and pink, lemon-colored and palest blue carnations. The ribbon, which is extremely wide, is draped across the left of the hat, one end of it caught under the brim on the left in front, and the other arranged in two pendant loops at the back. The flowers lie across the right side of the hat.

Among the other models of a delicate hue is a turban hat made of pure white hip braids, trimmed with a narrow garland of forget-me-not leaves and flowers, sewn on the braids in a spiral all over the crown from its center, and also over the brim and facing of the underside. This hat slants down at the back, and behind the left ear are two white wings set point downward.

THOBURN

Continues His Testimony Before Senate Philippine Committee.

Washington, May 24.—Bishop Thoburn continued his testimony before the Philippine committee of the senate yesterday. He was examined about various phases of the situation, especially as to the rights of the United States to dominate the islands. He said in reply to one question that chaos would result if England were to withdraw from India. England has advanced civilization in the far East. Hong Kong and other places were made great points of commerce. Hong Kong was, he said, better governed than Chicago, and human life was safer there. He said that the United States had more rights in the Philippines than it had over the American Indians, because the islands were acquired by treaty. He was asked whether he thought strong countries had the right to subjugate weaker ones and said the question did not apply to the United States and the Philippines, because the islands were acquired by treaty.

The committee refused to call as witnesses senators and members who had visited the islands.

A DASHING CONTINENTAL.

WOMAN'S POWER

Perfection of Form, Feature, and Mind Render Women All-Powerful. Health, However, the Greatest Charm.

Woman's greatest gift is the power to inspire admiration, respect, and love. There is a beauty in health which is more attractive to men than mere regularity of features.

The snap and spirit which health gives to the eye, the movement, and the speech are full of magnetism.

Sickly women can't understand this.

They only know that they are miserable, and their efforts to be attractive are languid and weak.

Woman's influence in the world is limited by her strength, and the strength of health is real strength.

It brings with it beauty and grace and loveliness of disposition.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study. If she would be all she may, she must guard well against the signs of ill health.

Regular and painless menstruation is absolutely necessary.

The help which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gives to women who are attacked by any disorder of the feminine organism is real, permanent help. It cures all weaknesses of the organs and makes it possible for women to retain their health and beauty to maturity.

Mrs. Pinkham advises women who are ill free of cost. Address her at Lynn, Mass. Thousands owe their health to her.

A Boston Woman's Experience.

— "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: —I feel very grateful to you for the benefit I derived from your kind advice and remedies. I was troubled with a complication of female troubles, had ovaritis, painful and irregular menstruation, leucorrhœa, nervousness and weakness. I had no appetite and could not sleep nights. The least exertion would cause shortness of breath and dull pains in my hips and side. The doctors all advised me to have an operation and have one of my ovaries removed, but this I could not bear to think of. I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking the first bottle I was much improved. It renewed my appetite, health and strength. I continued taking it, also your Blood Purifier and Sanative Wash until entirely cured of all my troubles. The pains have never returned and my health is splendid. Your remedies have been a boon to me and I am sure many a woman owes her life to them." — MARIE WEBB, 356 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass. (March 15, 1901.)

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such hosts of grateful friends. Remember this when you go to buy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

$5000 REWARD. — We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letter is not genuine, or was published before obtaining the writer's special permission. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

IOWA FLOOD.

Additional Particulars of the Disaster at Decorah.

La Crosse, May 24.—George W. Kidder, a traveling salesman, with headquarters in this city, has returned from the flood stricken Decorah, Iowa, district. He says that the storm is the worst in the history of the town, three lives being lost and many narrow escapes being recorded. The water came all in a rush, there having been a cloudburst a few miles north of there. Decorah is located in a valley, and the water rushed onto the town at a terrific speed. Some of the farmers tried to save their cattle, one aged man being drowned in an attempt to get to his barn to save some chickens. Another man went out into his yard, and when he started the water came only to his ankles. A few minutes later there came such a torrent that he was nearly covered by the water. He grabbed the handle of a pump in the yard and managed to save his life. Mr. Kidder says that scores of fine residences were washed from their foundations and carried several rods away. In one house a barber lived with his invalid wife and three children. The torrent of water carried off the house, and he climbed out of a second-story window, clutched a floating tree and climbed onto it. His house finally caught about three blocks from its foundation, and he, by manipulating the tree to which he was clinging, managed to get to a window in the second story and, bringing his family out of the house, kept them on the tree until aid reached them. Mr. Kidder says that many other people had narrow escapes from being drowned. The property loss, which will be very heavy, cannot be estimated at this hour. The railroads are washed out for seven or eight miles in all directions. Telegraphic and telephone communication are entirely cut off.

STORM AT PRAIRIE DU SAC.

Prairie Du Sac, Wis., May 23.—A severe wind and electrical storm passed over this place at midnight. Telephone and electric wires were burned out and winter wheat and rye was badly damaged. Trees were blown down and farm buildings were unroofed. A schoolhouse in the district of Sauk Prairie was lifted by the wind and carried twenty rods into a field.

Norris & Rowe's Big Trained Animal Shows to Appear In Duluth.

Will Exhibit Here on Monday and Tuesday—King Dramatic Company at the Lyceum All the Week.

Norris & Rowe's big trained animal shows will exhibit in Duluth for two days, Monday and Tuesday next, giving two performances at 2 and 8 p. m., at the corner of London road and Thirteenth avenue east. The aggregation is the largest of its kind in America, and the performance which is given entirely by animals is decidedly of a novel character. Almost every act accomplished by human performers in a circus is successfully imitated by this wonderful aggregation of animal actors. Some of the principal features of the shows are the trained elephants, seals, camels, goats, lions, mirth-provoking monkeys, and the pretty ponies that have delighted thousands during past years in all the principal cities of the United States and Canada. A grand free street parade will be given at 11 o'clock on the morning of the exhibition, at which time the entire company of over 300 animals will be seen all decked out in their gorgeous trappings.

The latest additions to the Norris & Rowe shows is a pair of beautiful Siberian camels which were shipped from the Hagenback Zoo, Hamburg, Germany. These grotesque creatures which recall many recollections of Arabian romances, are fast becoming extant and in a short time these "children of the desert," so often mentioned in the Bible, will be a thing of the past. A camel has a peculiar means of defense. While his feet are sometimes brought into use with more telling effect than that of a Kansas mule, his chief mode of defense is a fluid which they emit from their mouths. It is formed from a continual chewing of a cud which is mixed with the gastric juices of the stomach, and this matter is blown upon their adversaries. The odor is so offensive that a continuation of it from the camel eventually wins for him a battle.

Signs of summer are becoming more in evidence every day, chiefly in the absence of a large number of well-known theatrical faces, that disappear from the Rialto for a few days to return with expressions that are tired, careworn, but unduly happy. In almost every instance this is due to the fact that these theatrical lights have been making use of a few of their spare hours for the putting into shape of the extensive grounds, generally 40 by 100, which surround their country homes. Elmhurst, the principal theatrical colony near New York, has been filled with scenes for the past week that would delight any New York audience. John T. Kelly is the chief gardner out there, and takes a lively interest not only in his own grass plot, but in those of his stage neighbors. Kelly tried hard to get George K. Fortescue to settle in Elmhurst, but the lightweight champion of comic opera made up his mind that it was too quiet, and has bought a house in Bay Ridge, a section whose only drawback is the fact that one has to ride through Brooklyn to get there.

If Robson and Crane could have reproduced at their benefit on Thursday afternoon the scene that took place during a rehearsal on Wednesday, they would have made even a greater hit than they did in their revival of "The Henrietta." It was at this rehearsal that the veterans came together on the stage for the first time in years, and almost as soon as they had clasped hands they became as boys again. When the serious work they had in hand was completed, Crane, turning to his old partner, said: "Let's do some of the old business over again." The lisping youth was agreeable, and the pair started in greatly to the delight of the rest of the company and the favored few in the orchestra chairs to give parts of their old plays, principally "The Two Dromios." To see them in citizen's clothes in the old attitudes and speaking the old lines made every one present roar with laughter. Each worked hard, and neither had much difficulty in remembering his lines. When they had finished Robson, wiping the perspiration from his forehead, turned to Crane and said: "Senator, we could do that with one rehearsal." A lengthy conference followed over in a corner, and many of those present would not be surprised if the old comrades should appear in partnership very soon.

Dupring these warm afternoons a favorite section of the Theatrical Business Men's club is Forty-first street, in the rear room, on the second floor, the windows of which command an inspiring view of the Forty-second street excavations, and a back yard summer garden which is not yet in commission. Inside are a couple of tables entirely given up to the playing of penuchie at $1 a corner. One interested group of players the other day contained Will McConnell, the business manager for Amelia Bingham, while his adversaries were Ed Rosenbaum, manager of the Casino, and Franklin Bien, the lawyer, who is also president of the George W. Lederer Amusement company. The battle between them was waxing fast and furious, when Lee Arthur, the playwright, drifted in and, unInvited, proceeded to make comments that got the players all tangled up. Pretty soon Arthur remarked: "Do you know, I wrote my first play when I was only 10 years old?"

"That so?" retorted McConnell. "And it was the best thing you ever did. No one ever had nerve enough to put it on the stage."

Whiting Allen, at present in general charge of the publicity department for James W. Bailey, will be a very busy man during the week beginning May 26. On that day the circus will open in Brooklyn, and Buffalo Bill in Harlem, some eighteen miles distance. Allen will be obliged to divide his time almost equally between these shows, stopping en route at the Bailey offices in the St. James building, on Broadway. Allen will probably go to Europe in the autumn on a special mission for Mr. Bailey.

• • •

The moving of Buffalo Bill to Harlem is an experiment which may result in the building there of an enormous Hippodrome. Madison Square Garden is by no means a satisfactory place for the Bailey exhibitions as that manager desires, and it has been a cherished idea of his for some years to have a permanent home in this city, larger than anything as yet attempted. He finds that people all over the city are willing to travel up town to see the Wild West it is not unlikely that ground will be broken for the new building early next spring.

• • •

David Warfield got back to town and expressed himself as highly delighted with the result of his tour in "The Auctioneer." Business has been so satisfactory that a new play will not be attempted for some time to come, and Warfield will return to this city next season for a run in that play at the Republic.

• • •

Before George Tyler sailed for Europe he had practically completed arrangements for his production of "The Eternal City," in which Miss Viola Allen is to appear next season. This will be by long odds the most elaborate production Liebler and company has yet attempted. E. J. Morgan is to appear as David Rossi. E. M. Holland as Pope, and Frederick de Bellville as Baron Bonelli, and the supporting company will be in thorough keeping with the strength of these principals. Eugene W. Presbrey will stage the production and the scenery and costumes will be magnificent.

• • •

The arrival of Miss Shay at the Waldorf with her father and mother was followed by her beginning rehearsals the next morning at 10 o'clock at the Grand opera house. Since then she has been devoting her entire attention to preparing for her debut in this city, which has been set for Monday next. Miss Shay has been treated with marked consideration by the papers in town and the auspices for her initial appearance are particularly bright.

• • •

James O'Neill, having put his foot down firmly on any more "Monte Cristo" for some time to come, has obtained a new play for next season. As a matter of fact, he has three plays on hand, one by an English and the other by American authors, but his choice has fallen upon the work of Miss Harriet Ford, who dramatized "A Gentleman of France" for Kyrle Bellew. Her play is a Russian melodrama of intense interest and very strong situations. So well impressed is Mr. O'Neill with the manuscript now ready for him that he enthusiastically declares it will be one of the best plays he has ever had.

Hurry orders came by cable to "Joe" Humphreys to hurry over to London and prepare to bring "Ulysses" back to America. Manager Charles Frohman has obtained the exclusive rights to Stephen Philips' drama and will produce it here in the fall. It is rumored that Maude Adams is to have this play, although it is understood that Mr. Frohman has not yet abandoned hope of inducing Mrs. James Brown Potter to repeat her London performance here.

• • •

When Harry B. Smith meets George B. Hobart, then comes the tug of war. They are joint authors of "The Wild Rose," so Hobart says, and apparently the facts bear out his decision. Smith says Hobart had nothing to do with the case, and that in a moment of perhaps ill-considered generosity he urged Manager Lederer to put Hobart's name on the program. If Smith had known how things were to turn out he would not for anything have been so philanthropic; to this Hobart retorted that this was the first time in a long theatrical career that Smith had ever been accused of giving anything to anybody, and that anyhow all Smith did was to take the Hobart ideas and put them on the stage. The co-authors only speak now in the most Arctic terms, and a lawsuit over royalties is in the near future. Meanwhile all Broadway is wondering, timidly, of course, but still wondering, why in the midst of this quarreling neither author remembers that it was a rank outsider who was responsible for the real hit of the show, the song, "Nancy Brown," that Marie Cahill sings.

• • •

As a matter of fact, it is Miss Cahill who is the real star of the show. Lederer got her to sign a contract with him some months ago that gives him the exclusive rights to her services for some years to come. He had no other part for her, and asked her to take her present role, while Irene Bentley was billed as the leading figure. Miss Cahill consented, and as one of the first-nighters remarked, "put Bentley out of the business at the first jump." So great has been her success that a new play will be found for her this summer, and as soon as she can be spared from "The Wild Rose" she will be sent forth as a star on her own account.

So Madge Lessing is coming back to dear old America, to be a real live star on this side of the water. Time was, in the good, old Koster & Bial days, when Miss Lessing was more than delighted to have a chance to dance all by herself for four minutes. It took her no longer than that to make a hit, and soon she was on Broadway playing at the Casino with a dash that made her a great favorite. She was not satisfied with the opportunities given her under the Lederer management, and transferred her services to Francis Wilson when Lulu Glaser left that able comedian's side. Miss Lessing then bounced over to London and for weeks took the English capital by storm. At least this is what the reports cabled and written by Manager George McClellan indicated. Apparently right in the midst of her triumph she disappeared, and was next heard of at continental music halls, where it was soon whispered her success was not as great as her friends here could wish. Since then the cables have been strangely silent about her doings, until the present announcement that she will appear here under the direction of Senator Reynolds.

Miss May Irwin's familiar face was unexpectedly seen on Broadway last week. She had closed her season a little ahead of time, and said it was due to the fact that she was thoroughly tired out and needed a rest. She gave all the members of the company two weeks' salary in advance. "Now for a long rest," she said, with a weary smile. Miss Irwin sails for Europe next month.

• • •

Whether it be joke or whether it be serious, Miss Ethel Barrymoe is reported to have "leanings" toward tragedy—real tragedy of the Hamlet-Ophelia pattern. As Miss Barrymore is now beyond reach she cannot deny the story unless she has a special Marconi long-distance machine at her disposal. It is said that she intends to have a conference with that well-known tragedian, William Gillette, and see if she cannot persuade him to play Hamlet to her Ophelia.

Although it is somewhat early it might be well at this time to have a brief resume of the changes proposed for next season. Louis Mann and Clara Lipman will part for the first time in many years. Mann will lead a company of his own, as will his wife, Miss Lipman; Sam Bernard will star under the direction of George W. Lederer; "Joe" Coyne will head a company for Frank Perley, William Gould will make a good play by George V. Hobart; Marie Dressler will try her hand in light musical comedy, Mabelle Gilman will star for the Sire brothers, Frank Doane will try to fill the place left vacant by Roland Reed, DeWolf Hopper leaves Weber and Fields to star again; Macklyn Arbuckle than anything as yet attempted. Cohen finds that people all over the city are willing to travel up town to see the Wild West it is not unlikely that ground will be broken for the new building early next spring.

Elsie De Wolfe, before setting sail for "dear old Lunnon," coyly made two confessions. The first is that she wants to be Lady Teazle in the "School for Scandal." After delicately calling attention to a diamond brooch which members of her company had presented to her, she said: "It's my ambition to play tragedy, but that part of Lady Teazle is just too sweet for anything—I mean, I feel it is entirely suited to such talents as I may possess. Indeed, I have decided to revive the play with my own money. It won't make a bit of difference whether anyone comes to see me or not. I shall pay the bills, and that's all there is about it." Miss De Wolfe's second unburdening of her soul was on the subject of kissing—stage kissing, of course. "I have always been kissed on the cheek," she said severely, and then she added, reflectively, "on the stage. The public never knew it. I am proud of this distinction, and besides, passionate kissing interferes with acting. You know" (confidingly) "I have never been in love with the actor playing opposite me." (I was forced to express my sympathy and respect for her confidence in a look.) "When they gave me that brooch John Mason made such a pretty speech that I just had to kiss the company all around."

The announcement is made that Joseph Jefferson, Jr., and William Jefferson, sons of the famous "Rip," will blossom forth as stars in fall weather. The former will appear as Bob Acres in "The Rivals," while his brother will do Sir Lucius O'Trigger. Apparently ambition has not died out of the Jefferson family.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

Marie Dressler is ill.

Joe Welch is to star in "The Marriage Broker" next season.

John Drew will continue to present "The Second in Command" next season.

John E. Kellerd produced a new play "Tatterly," at Bridgeport, recently.

Augustus Thomas is prominent is a political fight that is agitating New Rochelle just now.

The membership of the English Music Hall Artists' Railway association is now within fifty of the 700 mark.

A dramatization by Hal Reid of the "Old Sleuth" stories will be produced next season by Hurtig & Seamon, with Hal Stephens as star.

Richard Mansfield announces that he will play Brutus in his next season's revival of "Julius Caesar." He says that he also contemplates reviving "Timon of Athens."

A. H. Canby will start for Australia, whither he again takes Jean Gherardy, the 'celloist, and other famous performers, for the season's tour in the Antipodes.

Nance O'Neil has reached Alexandria, Egypt, on her round-the-world tour, and proceeds thence to London, where her season at the Lyceum theater will begin Sept. 1.

David Belasco is going abroad shortly to superintend the London production of "The Wife," which Charles Wyndham is going to produce. Mr. Belasco has localized the play to London.

Clyde Fitch is in Paris, suffering from nervous prostration, arising from overwork. He is going to a health resort in the north of Italy. He has lost a good deal of flesh and is looking extremely ill.

Kirke La Shelle has bought Augustus Thomas' "The Love of the Miller." Mr. La Shelle has bought also "For Love of a Lady," by Edwin Barron, formerly a dramatic critic in Chicago; "O Kiku San," a drama of modern Washington diplomatic circles, by A. R. Hovey, and "Comrades at Arms," by Eugene Walters.

The scale of human importance in connection with the business end of a theater is well known, and runs about this way: Sole proprietor, proprietor, lessee, manager, acting manager, etc. Now a gentleman in North Shields announces that he sole proprietor of the Borough theater, there, and adds, in brackets (also owner of the site), which is a site better than merely being the proprietor, sole or otherwise.

Mrs. Fiske will appear next fall as Mary Magdalene, in a drama of that name, which she will present at the Manhattan theater, New York. It will be a version of the play of Paul Heyse, a noted German playwright. No attempt will be made to present the Christ himself, but his tragedy will be mirrored in scenes which will represent events attending his mission to Jerusalem and his crucifixion. Lionel Vale has made the American version. Mrs. Fiske will also present next season an American comedy by George C. Hazleton, Jr.

"Pickwick," Charles Klein's musical comedy, in which De Wolf Hopper is to become a star again next season, will be produced in the autumn and will be seen in New York at the Herald Square in January. Mr. Klein is understood to have selected for his libretto a number of the most amusing incidents in the papers, Snodgrass Winkle, the Wellers, the lady of the curl-papers, Mrs. Bardell, and the seminary girls are all to appear. The music is said to be particularly character-istic, and is written in the English pastoral style.

A Quart Baby.

Now and again there is an item in the newspapers concerning the birth of a puny baby so small that a quart cup holds it comfortably. If the article told all the facts it would probably tell also of a mother who in weakness and misery had looked forward to the baby's advent with shrinking and fear.

To have fine, healthy children the mother must be healthy, and it is the common testimony of mothers that the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription not only promotes the mother's health but also gives her strength to give her child.

"Favorite Prescription" accomplishes these results by tranquilizing the nerves, promoting a healthy appetite, and giving refreshing sleep. It increases physical vigor and gives great muscular elasticity, so that the baby's advent is practically painless. It is the best of tonics for nursing mothers.

"I gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. J. W. G. Stephens, of Mila, Northumberland County, Va. "Before my third little boy was born I took six bottles. He is the finest child and has been from birth, and I suffered very much less than I ever did before. I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use the 'Favorite Prescription.'"

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription" does so to gain the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

PERFORMING ELEPHANTS

With Norris & Rowe's Trained Animal Show, Appearing In Duluth Monday and Tuesday.

AT THE LYCEUM.

Much anticipation is already shown over the visit of the King Dramatic company at the Lyceum next week. The fact that stirring and famous plays as a 'Ward of France,' "The Cherry Pickers," "Cumberland, '61," "The Bondman," "The Power of the Press" and "The Cotton King" are to be presented is an announcement that carries more than ordinary importance to an engagement of this kind. No similar attraction has ever attempted a repertoire as pretentious as this or one that involves so great a care in the general mounting of the plays. The complete scenic effects are provided for each and every production and no local scenery is used from the opening to the closing bill.

The company, numbering eighteen people, headed by Lon Beasley and Miss Lillian Mae Crawford is said to be unusually clever and thoroughly competent to properly handle the fine line of plays announced for the engagement here. A special ticket entitling any lady to admission free, if accompanied by one paid reserved ticket has been issued for Monday evening.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Lederer Secures the Casino Through Sire Brothers.

New York, May 24.—George W. Lederer is to return to the Casino in charge of that playhouse for the Sire Bros. Much rumor to this effect has spread over Broadway ever since the Sires won their suit against the Shuberts for the possession of the house. Of course, the battle is not ended yet, but the Sires are in possession for a year at least, and perhaps as much longer as they will care to remain. The Schuberts are now obliged to use the Bixby estate, which owns the theater, for the return of some $30,000, which these managers deposited in advance, so confident were they that they would be able to produce "A Chinese Honeymoon" there this month. It was Lederer's testimony chiefly that won the first victory for the Sires, and peace having been restored between them Lederer is to take hold of the Casino and put on a musical comedy as soon as he can whip one into shape. "The Wild Rose" is doing so well at the Knickerbocker that its run there will not be disturbed under any circumstances. Lederer has a couple of his own particular brand of A Bunch of Items Concerning Affairs In Philippines.

Manila, May 24.—The United States commission has made English the official language of the courts, customs service and court of appeals.

Cholera is lessening here. There have been only eight cases in twenty-four hours. One of those was on boar the United States transport Hancock and delays her departure for another five days.

Gen. Loyd Wheaton received a great ovation as he boarded the United State transport Sherman today on his way home. The sailing of the steamer, however, was delayed by a typhoon.

A civil government will be inaugurated in Batangas province July 4. The step could be immediately taken, so far as pacification of that part of the island is concerned, but some details need perfecting.

The industrial conditions are improving rapidly. Crops have been planted throughout Batangas, which will mature in August.

Other provinces report a marked diminution of ladronism, especially in Leyte and Cavite provinces, where the Ladrones had chiefly flourished heretofore.

RAMBLING KATIE WON.

TWO HARBORS.

Two Harbors, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The worst wind storm in the history of the village struck town about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and was almost a tornado, the wind blowing eighty-seven miles per hour. Signs were torn off buildings, the flag pole at the Fourth avenue school building torn down, about every loose board or article about town was lifted and carried away, and one new building in the east addition was moved from its foundation a few feet. The main part of the storm passed over the harbor and to the south of the docks, and it is miraculous that no damage was done to the docks or shipping. As it was the steamer Mabel Bradshaw parted one line with which she was fastened to the dock, and swinging around barely missed crushing the tug B. F. Bruce against the lumber dock. Had it not been for the steamer, which was struck instead, but not damaged, the tug would have received the full force of the blow. The flag mast on the government weather signal tower at the docks was bent away over from the force of the wind, and where the center of the storm passed along the railroad track south of the docks, trees were uprooted and about a mile of fence was torn down. Luckily no one was injured. The storm did not last ten minutes, though a heavy wind had been blowing all day.

VIRGINIA.

Virginia, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Gustafson, a Swede-Finn, was found dead in the rear of Andrew Sandstrom's saloon on Chestnut street, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Deputy Coroner Christopher was summoned, and he thought an inquest was necessary and a jury was subpoenaed. This body met at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the saloon and had the remains taken to Mosberg's morgue for inspection. Dr. Graham was summoned and a rigid examination was held and the jury adjourned to the office of the coroner, where testimony of several witnesses was heard. Andrew Sandstrom, the saloon keeper, had know him several years and stated that deceased came from the Northern Lumber company's camps near Mountain Iron, about two weeks ago and had $52 with him, which sum had been spent in a short time. In trying to "brace up" deceased became restless and complained of not getting sleep and commenced taking some sort of powders for that purpose which he purchased. Wednesday he secured some more powders and went to bed feeling very ill and his friends became alarmed. One of his friends went to bed with him to watch him, but he, too, was drunk and in the morning awoke to find his partner cold in death. The jury acted upon Dr. Miller's testimony and returned a verdict to the effect that Gustafson died of acute alcoholic poisoning and also of not receiving necessary care for a case of his kind. The jury also offered a resolution in regard to saloon keepers dealing with men in a drunken condition more carefully and that after they have all their money and become ill they should at least give them some medical attention. The approaching convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, which will be held in Rochester June 9 and 10, promises to be one of the largest and most important labor gatherings ever held in the Northwest.

During the past year the federation has enjoyed a growth in new organization that reflects credit on the old officers that are seeking re-election.

Sixty new unions have organized in the state since the last convention, and many of them among the strongest, despite their youth.

Duluth furnishes five of these new unions. When the state convention met in Mankato last June there was not a union in that town, but this year nine Mankato unions will be represented in the state convention. St. Cloud had two unions a year ago six at present. A year ago Rochester had but two unions, and now there are five.

Brainerd, however, has been the banner field of organization during the past year. From one union last June unionism has grown to eight, and now the machinists' helpers, tinners and blacksmiths of Brainerd are organizing.

The Federated Trades' assembly elected delegates to the state convention last night. Those chosen were Henry Dworschak, of the Typographical union; Henry Perault, of the Cigarmakers' union; J. W. Richardson, of the Carpenters' union; Gordon O'Neil, of the Longshoremen's union, and Victor Johnson, of the Retail Clerks union.

The preliminary discussion to this election wound up in a heated argument between the two delegates from the Longshoremen's union and Arthur A. Fider, the financial secretary of the assembly.

Mr. Fider became very much wrought up and at the end of the meeting he walked up to the president's desk with his books, remarking that he was out of the organization for good.

Like everything nowadays there is politics in the selection of officers for the State Federation. M. E. Neary, the present president and a very able and popular officer, is being opposed by a certain Minneapolis faction that is pledged to Phillip Carlin. This crowd is seeking to swing in more support by making a deal with St. Paul for the office of secretary and treasurer, now held by William E. McEwen, of this city.

The Duluth delegation will stand by McEwen to a man, and it may do so with pride, for if ever energetic and efficient services entitled a man to renewed conventions honors the rule certainly applies in the case of Mr. McEwen.

• • •

Arthur Moore has been elected delegate to the Trades' assembly from the Building Trades' council.

• • •

The Fargo building trades' unions have requested all union labor men of Duluth and Minnesota to steer clear of that city until present difficulties are adjusted.

• • •

The Retail Clerks' union has found necessary to again inaugurate the picket system for two down town stores that decline to observe the early closing rules.

• • •

Edward Jenson, of the Steamfitters' union, has been chosen a delegate to the Trades' assembly.

• • •

The sheet metal workers will give a benefit dance at Lester Park on June 3. This is for Israel Pierce, now in ill-health in New Mexico. Mr. Pierce was stormerly vice president of the Trades' assembly and one of the most enthusiastic organization workers Duluth has ever produced.

• • •

Gust Olson, formerly president of the assembly, was in the city during the week on a sad mission. He was called over from Calumet to bury his father.

• • •

The banquet of the Typographical union last Sunday afternoon will be the talk of those that attended for months to come. It was one of the finest spreads and entertainments that has occurred in Duluth for many days.

• • •

Frank Howard is now one of the popular delegates in the assembly. He hails from the Lake Seamen's union.

• • •

Joseph Glockle, who died last Monday was the first tinner in Duluth to grant the eight-hour day. He is survived by three sons that are all prominent in union labor circles. One is a tug fireman, another a tinner and the oldest is secretary of the plumbers' union.

The Zenith City Telephone Linemen won a quick strike for eight hours on Wednesday. It did not even take them eight hours to win the point. The reduction of time was one hour.

Miss Minnie Maghan, daughter of Samuel Maghan, vice president of the Plasterers' union, is to be married next Tuesday evening to John L. McLean, treasurer of the Tug Firemen's union.

The strike of the molders is settled and the men are back in all the shops, including the Clyde, where a settlement seemed impossible. The unions get $3 for nine hours.

LABOR NOTES.

Pittsburg police want 20 per cent increase.

Rochester had a union label display last week.

St. Paul's Building exchange refuse to recognize the Building Trades' council.

Denver lumbermen are on strike and a tie-up of the building trades may result.

Kensington, Pa., carpet workers are about to strike for higher wages.

New York plumbers and gas fitters will receive $4.25 a day, commencing July 1.

The corner-stone of Brooklyn's new Labor Lyceum will be laid on Decoration day.

Toronto, Can., bakers compromised their strike on 25 cents per hour and a 10-hour day.

E. E. Schmitz, the labor mayor of San Francisco, says he is not a candidate for governor.

Pittsburg's May day strike is said to have cancelled $24,000 000 of proposed new building operations.

Strikers on the great lakes have chartered boats and will operate them on the co-operative plan.

The Cleveland iron molders secured an increase of 15 per cent in their wages by the recent strike.

Pulpmakers and laborers throughout the country, numbering 4000, have secured an increase of 5 per cent.

A strike is on in the electrical bulb factories whose employes are members of the American Flint Glass Workers' union.

The Continental Tobacco company, of St. Louis, has given notice to its 6000 factory employes in St. Louis of a 10 per cent increase of wages.

Los Angeles, Cal., union labor men will nominate candidates for city offices in the December election. The street car men are organizing there.

Efforts are being made to induce congress to pass a bill establishing a government type foundry. International Typographical union is reported to be taking the initiative in the matter.

There are in Toledo, Ohio nearly 2100 laborers out of work because of strikes and lockouts, but in most cases because of a refusal on the part of local capital to grant demands for higher wages made upon them.

In Detroit, which is admitted to be the best organized city in the country so far as street car men are concerned, the men at the present time are asking for an increase in wages from 21 cents an hour to 25 cents. The companies have offered 22½ cents. The matter has been submitted to arbitration, and there is no possibility of a strike.

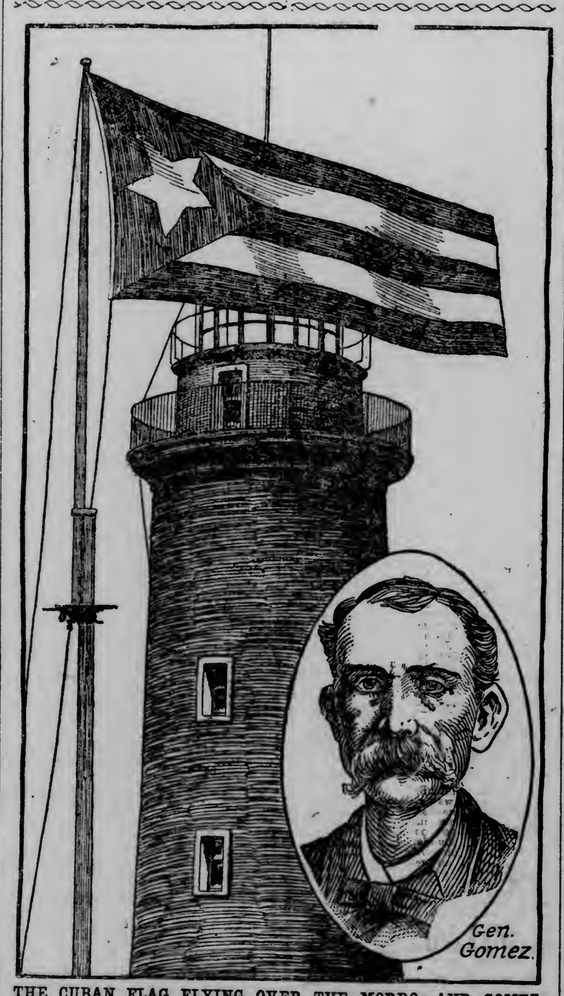
The machinists are congratulating themselves on the fact that their demand on the Canadian Pacific railway has resulted in a substantial increase in the wages of machinists from end to end of the system, without the necessity of having to go out on strike for it, as was feared a couple of weeks ago they would have to do. The increase is from 10 to 15 per cent.

One of the measures submitted to the attention of the Massachusetts legislature is a bill to establish an 'industrial court.' It is designed to set up a court, composed of fair-minded and impartial men, authorized to investigate all the facts relating to an industrial dispute and to decide what shall be the minimum workday in accordance with tests definitely stated. Labor and capital sall be regarded as partners in production.

The Central Federated Union of Manhattan, N. Y., instructed its law committee to report on the feasibility of making a test case under the alien labor clause of the state law in the court of appeals with a view of obtaining a reversal of decisions in the lower courts to the effect that the labor law was unconstitutional in demanding preference for citizens over aliens upon public works. It is said the appeal is to be based upon the assumption of the state being superior to the treaty making power of the federal government.

In Cleveland a clause in the latest franchise granted requires that in case of dispute the company shall select two men, the employes two, and the mayor of the city shall act as the fifth member of a board to arbitrate all differences. Another clause provides that the men shall not work more than ten hours in fourteen, out of every twenty-four. This rule abolishes the "swing runs," as the men are assured that they will have at least ten hours to themselves at a stretch every day instead of having two or three or five hours off for rest at one time.

The trustees of the John Hopkins university announce that a citizen of Baltimore has given a sum of money to the university, to be devoted to a systematic investigation of the history, activities and influence of labor organizations in the United States. The sum of $500 is given for the immediate purchase by the university library of additional books, journals and reports relating to this subject. The further sum of $1,000 is made available to meet the expenses incident to carrying on the inquiry for the next academic year. The investigation will be conducted by the economic seminary, under the direction of Dr. J. H. Hollander, associate professor of finance. It will begin in October, 1902, and extend over such period of time as may be warranted by the extent of the inquiry and the definiteness of the results attained.



THE CUBAN FLAG FLYING OVER THE MORRO, AND GOMEZ, THE MAN WHO RAISED IT.

To see the flag of Cuba libre flying over Morro Castle, Havana, has long been one of the strong ambitions of the Cuban people, and this ambition, after years of fighting, famine and suffering, has at last been realized. General Maximo Gomez, the man who sent it aloft, is Cuba's greatest living military hero.

Trolly Car Kidneys.

Trolly cars are hard on the kidneys.

The delicate little filters of the blood were never intended to stand so much jarring and jolting—

It's little wonder they rebel---

Little wonder that business men and women who ride much in street cars are constantly having trouble with their backs.

Little wonder that bad backs have come to be almost a universal complaint.

Yet bad backs can be cured---every form of kidney trouble down to the last stages of Bright's Disease can be cured.

Is being cured every day right here in Duluth by

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Want proof of it? What better could there be than the testimony of Duluth men and women? Hundreds of them here who have been cured—men and women whose straightforward statements carry conviction with them—Read what this man says:

Mr. J. H. Tomlin, of 240 First street west, conductor on the Duluth street railway, says: "For two years I suffered severely from kidney complaint. Towards the last I got so bad that very frequently I was obliged to lay off for days at a time and my back and loins were so painful that I could not work. The kidney secretions were very frequently distressing and annoying. I could not find a comfortable position to rest in at night, was constantly changing position and in the morning rose thoroughly worn out. The jar of the car, to which I attributed the trouble, at times affected me so that I could hardly stand it. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended, I procured a box at W. A. Abbett's drug store and began to use them. I commenced to improve right away, and in a short time I felt as well as ever and from that until now, several months ago, I have worked steadily and not had a single symptom of my old trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale at all Drug Stores. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

WHY? IS ELECTRIC LIGHT BEST

Because it is healthy, clean, pure and brilliant.

HEALTHY— It has no odor. Professor Thompson states that one cubic foot of gas consumes as much oxygen as four adults.

CLEAN— It causes no discoloration of furnishings and decorations in homes.

SAFE— As electric bell work, no danger of suffocation.

CHEAP— By using a little care in turning off lights when not in use it is cheaper than any other illuminant.

Jeffries and Fitzsimmons Will Fight At San Francisco on July 4—Fitz a Favorite With Many.

Old Fitz and Jeff are signed at last
To meet in fistic battle.
Oh, let us hope that this will bring
An end to all their prattle.
When they are in the ring, engaged
In making jaw bones rattle,
Their mouths will be too full of gloves
For further guff and tattle.

The downfall of Frank Erne, of Buffalo, before Joe Gans, of Baltimore, at Fort Erie last Monday night gives America its first colored lightweight champion and a champion who won his spurs in the quickest time on record in his division.

While the result of the battle did not cause much surprise, its sudden termination did, and, as is generally the case in fights of such short duration, it gave the defeated man and his friends the opportunity to attribute the defeat to a lucky or "fluke" punch.

There may have been a certain element of luck in the blow that defeated Frank, but only in the fact Joe landed it so early in the fray. When they put up their hands for battle their object was to win as quickly as possible, and as the quickest route to victory was by way of the point of the jaw, they both naturally tried to reach that important destination as quickly as possible, and Gans reached it first. Perhaps he was fortunate in locating the knockout spot before the battle had progressed two minutes. If so, it was the only lucky thing about his victory.

Erne's defeat is to be deplored, not so much because he was beaten by a colored man and that colored man happened to be Joe Gans, as because Gans is under the management of Al Herford, to whom he is like clay in the hands of a potter.

Personally, the new lightweight champion is a nice, gentlemanly fellow, but the man who coaches him to victory or defeat is one under suspicion by the boxing public. There is no denying the fact Joe is a good fighter, probably the best in his class, and under other management, despite his color, would be an honor to the profession. But now comes the question from critics: "Will his manager, now that he is champion, permit him to fight to retain his title regardless of anything else, or will he bring him into more disrepute by compelling him to toss fights for the money that can be gained thereby?"

The upsetting of Erne removed from the lightweight throne the brightest and probably the most intelligent champion American ever has had, and the pity of it is he did not retire a champion.

It's the old, old story of fighting just once too often. Erne, though still in his prime, is not the man physically he was several years ago. A life of idleness, dove-tailed with beatings from Terry McGovern and "Rube" Ferns, robbed him of considerable speed, stamina and vitality. His ring career in the last two years showed inactivity. His record at that time shows the following five contests:

Beaten by Terry McGovern, 3 rounds.
Draw, six rounds, with Tom Couhig.
Beaten by "Rube" Ferns, 9 rounds.
Beat Curley Supples, 5 rounds.
Decision over Gus Gardner, 6 rounds.

This is not much of a record for a champion. True, he fought McGovern below the lightweight limit and Ferns above it, but in each case reports had him strong and fit to fight for a king's ransom.

Supples, whom Erne knocked out in five rounds, was put away by Otto Sieloff in one, and Gardner was beaten to a standstill recently by Eddie Cain in Philadelphia. Gans, on the other hand, engaged in eighteen battles in the same length of time, and gave away weight in the majority of these fights. His only defeat was at the hands of Terry McGovern, a defeat that may deprive him from ever engaging in a public contest in Chicago.

Gans' victory over Erne gives America two colored champions, Joe Wolcott being the other. From present indications they will remain on top for some time to come. This does not speak well for the white pugilists, who outnumber their colored brethren at least twenty to one. But what can be done in the matter? If the whites cannot become proficient enough to beat the blacks, the latter must not only be tolerated but acknowledged the better men.

• • •

A traveling man who witnessed the fight between Joe Gans and Frank Erne at Fort Erie tells of a funny incident that came off during the progress of the mill. In one part of the hall a bunch of colored men from Buffalo were perched up on the top tier of the circus seats rooting for the Baltimore darky. Everytime Gans would strike a blow the whole crowd would let out a howl. One fellow was so excited that he could not restrain himself, and he followed up Gans' maneuvers by making similar movements with his own body. When Gans ducked, down would go the fellow's head, and a right or left-hand blow by Gans would bring the same movement from the admirer of Herford's champion on the circus seats. Finally Gans made a wild swing at Erne and the saddle-colored rooter on the seats attempted the same move. He unconsciously let go his right hand and hit another colored man alongside of him, causing the whole section of seats to fall. The Darktown contingent went down in a heap and alighted on their heads, and of course no damage was done, but before the darkies could get back to their seats Gans had knocked out Erne and the spectators were fighting their way to the exits.

George H. Ketcham has decided to campaign Cresceus (2:02¼), the world's champion trotter, through Cuba next winter, and thus the Cubans are to have their first practical illustration of the delights which Americans find in the speedy harness horse. Cresceus is at present making a season in the stud at Mr. Ketcham's farm at Toledo. At its conclusion he will be sent on an exhibition tour and will at some period in the campaign make an effort to lower his present record and reach the two-minute mark. On the Cuban trip the great stallion will be accompanied by a corps of press agents, and it is believed that notwithstanding the fact that there are no nice tracks worthy of the name on the hot little island, the Cubans can be sufficiently interested to cause them to give up their dollars merrily to see the son of the old "king of the homestretch" step miles on the straightaway.

"How happened it that you gave the name Bad News to such a good-looking colt?" was asked of Hal Woodford at Latonia a day or two ago, anent the nomenclature of his 2-year-old son of Flying Dutchman and Black Sleeves.

"Well, I asked that question of my sister, who selected the name, and she told me that she had no knowledge of anything that could travel faster than bad news. Hence the name," replied the genial Kentuckian, adding, "and I hope the colt makes good."

Now that Joe Gans has jumped into prominence, it can be expected that his picture will appear in the colored supplement of some papers.

Andrew M. O'Dea, coach of the university of Wisconsin, who should be given credit for bringing the naval department of the university to the front, and who is today recognized as one of the leading coaches of the world, writes regarding his charges as follows:

"The crews at Madison are rowing in exceptionally good form for this time of the year, but unfortunately we are experiencing one of the worst weather visitations that we have had in my experience here. We have had only one warm day so far, and the men do not limber up on cold, raw days. We have four crews at work, 'varsity and second crew, freshman and second freshman. The crews are at the present time evenly matched. The second 'varsity at times shows superiority in spurts, but in the longer rows the superior blade work and time of the 'varsity boat tells. We have, however, an exceptionally good lot of varsity material to select from, and it is necessary to change the men almost daily in order to discover the most suitable men for respective positions.

"This will be done until I am fully satisfied that the best men have been selected. The freshmen are rowing strongly and promise to develop into a first-class junior crew. They average in their present order 163 pounds, which is far above the freshman average. The 'varsity crew average 170 pounds, which is much heavier than any other previous crew that has represented Wisconsin. Of course, when the weather warms up and the boys harden they will lose a little, and possibly will average in the neighborhood of 165 pounds, but at that it will still be the heaviest 'varsity crew we have yet sent to the starter's flag.

"In order to be successful in any branch, it is positively necessary to have funds to carry one's ideas into execution. These trips are generally made from funds subscribed, and I am sorry to state that a subscription list is far from being filled, and from the present outlook it will be necessary to borrow funds with which to take the 'varsity crew East. The outlook for the freshmen going is at the present time discouraging. Then the smaller colleges, such as Syracuse and Georgetown, can support 'varsity and freshmen crews, also fours, doubles and singles, with no encouragement to speak of in the way of performances, it is certainly strange that a university like Wisconsin should not be able to support at least two crews.

"Wisconsin's aquatic sports need about $3500 per year, and in comparison with our Eastern brothers, it is certainly a trifling amount. It would be a different matter if it were an experiment. The crews have always delivered the goods, and the oarsmen certainly deserve the support. One can hardly expect the men to get out and work with nothing tangible in view, and if the support shows a falling off, then assuredly we must expect a corresponding decline in oarsmanship."

It is to be hoped that matters in the financial line will brighten at Madison.

William H. Rothwell, better known to the sporting world as "Young Corbett," gained the decision over "Kid" Broad at Denver last night at the end of a fast and furious fight. Broad put up a very good fight and in the ninth round had Corbett groggy, but the Denver lad came back strong and finished the round fresh. At no time was there any time lost, both men being willing to lead and force the fighting whenever necessary. The fight last night was the third time this pair had met. The contest was for half the gross receipts, 75 per cent of which goes to the winner and 25 to the loser, and the featherweight championship of the world.

The first fight between these men was on March 22, 1901, when Broad scored a clean knockout in the fourth round. On July 26, 1901, Corbett gained the decision over Broad in a 10-round fight, the former showing a decided superiority.

Last night the boys said they were in fine form. Both men fight in much the same style, and are always anxious to "mix" at close range. They were weighed at 125 pounds at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The betting was 2 to 1 on Corbett.

The Colorado A. C. arena seats 3000 people, and there were at least 4000 persons present, every inch of standing room being taken.

DIXON ARRAIGNED.

Boston, May 23.—Dixon, who struck Voonan, was arraigned on a charge of manslaughter in the first degree. Sol Sandler, Bernard Saxe, Thomas Flaherty and James O'Brien, the seconds of the two men, were also arraigned, the charge against each being manslaughter in the second degree. Bail in the case of each man was fixed at $300 and June 6 was set for a hearing.

Rods Are Out Again

The Proper Outfit For the Bass — Points About Taking This Fish In Lakes In the Woods.

The fires of spring have warmed the chill lake waters, and the bass which have been nosing in the bank shallows, chasing shiners and wondering when simmer would be here, have sought the darker water at the roots of the lily pads and the wild rice, which is reaching upward from the ooze beneath to burst into plumes and seedings in wild duck time, says the New York Sun.

The angler all through winter took down his rod once a week and rubbed its joints with chamois. He put it together in late April and went out for a cast or two, finding an indifferent success. Now, however, the sun shines steadily, the birds are mating, the woods are changing the yellowish green of the first leaves to the darker green of full growth and until the ice forms again the season and the riches thereof are his.

Only the wilder parts of the country are now well worth fishing, and a typical American lake, whether it be in New York or Minnesota, will have certain features. Its water will be deep and clear and cool. Its watergrowths will extend thirty, fifty, 100 feet from the banks and will run riot in the shallows bays.

Pines, firs, larches, spruces, hemlocks and maples will grow down to it. Grouse will come shyly to its edge to drink. The branches of its forests will be vocal with hundreds of differing birds which have sought it from the South and will live by it until increasing cold warns them South again.

Over its smooth surface will float and roll and break into liquid showers the wondrous hymn of the hermit thrush, soaring from some dark brake. At midday, when winged singers are hushed, its quiet is so deep that a paddle slapped upon it echoes to its further end.

The shadows of the trees make arabesques upon it. Further out it is one great blue glaring jewel and against its beaches the tiny waves lip murmurously.

The man with the water glass leaning over from his boat peers and sees far down shining sands and pebbles, above which the fish dart or pass slowly, their forked tails flapping loafingly, or hang poised with no motion save in the swelling and subsiding gills.

The lunch will be wrapped in a newspaper a week old, which tells in flaring headlines that a man has been murdered, or another has committed suicide, or a bank has stopped payment, or a great commercial combination has been formed, but the man, albeit, he wears glasses before he should and is somewhat hollow of chest, cares nothing for these things. Instead he looks between his legs to see that the minnows are living in their narrow quarters and marking afar off a half acre of lily pads which seem promising, he goes softly toward them, thinking of fins, not finances.

If his boat is properly built it will have a flat bottom and rounding sides and its beam will be not less than forty inches. As it should be light, it will be short and will have a stumpy look.

There is not much more speed in a craft of this kind than in a telegraph pole, but the man on the lake does not want speed. What he does want is comfort, flotation and above all, steadiness. There is many an open space eighty feet within the pads to which a standing man may cast and a crank boat is worse than no boat.

Transversely of its center should run a couple of planks one side to side, forming a water-tight box with a lid to it, and inside of this box four or five auger holes should be bored through the boat's bottom, which may be stopped with corks when no fishing is being done. In this box should be put the minnows or frogs; if frogs there should be chips in it, or small bits of planking upon which they may sit.

Fresh water comes in constantly through the holes and minnows will live as long in the box as in the lake, if they be fed. For convenience and for prolonging life it beats all of the bucket devices revised, though some of these are intricate and costly.

An Ohio man has patented this year a tall tin bucket with the usual perforated top. Up its side, connecting with reservoir at its bottom, runs an air pump. Air may be pumped into the reservoir and will creep upward into the water for hours, thus keeping the minnows alive, but still the bucket is not equal to the water box in the boat's center, which is perfect so long as boat fishing is done.

There are many anglers who do not trouble themselves about minnows, frogs, grasshoppers, helgramites, crawfish and such things, and they take fish, too, but not so many nor so good ones as the men who use live bait whenever they can get it and work hard for it. Even a strip of salt pork beats the bare spoon on nine days out of ten.

The bass is often fooled by the whirling bit of metal, but frequently, also, it comes close enough to distinguish the fraud and goes on about its business. In general it may be said that spoons are good, and used in conjunction with some sort of live bait are better, but all limitations of food are hardly worth the space they occupy in the fishing box.

Phantom minnows, spinning devils, rubber frogs, papier-machie helgramites and crawfish all belong in this category. They are good for the manufacturers and the pleasant folks who run the sporting goods shops, but for nobody else.

Particularly at this season the bass wants a sure enough something to eat, and all through May and the forehalf of June there will be nothing better than the genuine deep-water minnow—not the top-water, which is small mushy and flabby and dies quickly. Furthermore, bass have sense enough to know that a top-water has no business five feet under the surface, and suspects its presence there. Indeed, it is remarkable how soon and thoroughly bass in much-fished waters will earn to distinguish between the genuine and the false.

That deep-water minnow is best which has a dash of red along its sides. It is stronger and fleeter than its companions and will live longer. Some men hook it through the lips, some through the tail, which latter is an excellent way to drown it quickly, but the best way in which to hook it is through the skin and flesh under the back fin, taking care not to injure the vertebrae.

Such a minnow so hooked will stand a good many casts before it dies, and even afterward it will be of service if it is reeled in quickly after striking the water. Later on, when the dog days are here, frogs are the best of bass bait. Indeed the frog is natural bass food, and will take more fish, season in and out, than any other form of bait.

Fishing appliances have cheapened much of late years. Split bamboo hand-assembled rods, ranging in price from $25 to $100, are now only for the fancifully wealthy or incurably extravagant. They are good rods, of course, none better, but rods of much less cost will give as much satisfaction and do as good service and last as long.

In the matter of reels there is a diversity of opinion. These beautiful articles have come ordinarily to be valued by the number of jewels in them, just as the works of a watch are valued. Indeed, a reel costing from $50 to $75 is nearly as delicate as a watch.

As to its serviceability, that is another question. It will do good work, of course, but no better than a $10 reel made by an honest and competent man. There is a sense of satisfaction in owning an expensive reel as there is satisfaction in owning a costly and ornate watch or shotgun, but only in giving this sense of satisfaction is it superior to the cheaper article.

A reel should be strong, should be quadruple multiplying, should run with the minimum of friction and should have a wide spindle. When these qualities are embodied in it—and they are all to be had in the $10 article—there is nothing more to be gained, whether it contains one ruby or fifty.

No reel will do good work unless it is kept in condition, and to do this it is necessary to remove the cap and give it a drop of oil when the day's work is ended. There are reels on the market by several makers which are nickel-plated, white-handled, wide-spindled, quadruple multiplying, half-checked and dragged, and run as freely as possible. They cost from $3.50 to $4, and, so far as a season's work or two seasons' work is concerned, are as good as anything that ever came out of Kentucky at any price whatever. They are not, of course, so durable as the finer reels.

For a bait-casting outfit there is nothing better than a six-foot steel rod of proper pliability, one of these reels, any one of the standard silk lines and a spoon or sinker of sufficient weight. With them the average angler is able to get a distance of a hundred feet, and and that is far enough. With it a man in a boat may fish a circle of water sixty-five yards in diameter.

Some men incline to casting rods eight feet long, and some shorten their rods to five feet, but these are extremes not to be recommended. From six to six and a half feet is a good medium.

The longer the rod is the more force an angler gets into his cast, and the longer it is the more difficult it is to handle and the more apt it is to break. This ought, rod, reel, line, spoon, hooks and sinkers, may be had in any city for a ten-dollar bill, and a lover of fish and nature should get $1000 worth of pleasure out of it.

In a lake which contains many lilies, flags, much wild rice or subsurface growths, the so-called weedless hook is a necessity. There is no hook which is genuinely weedless, but that which bears the adjective will not become entangled one-half so often as the ordinary kind.

For bass lurking among pads or rice of a still spring afternoon there is no more deadly lure than a No. 3 spoon from which the gang of three hooks has been removed and in its place a weedless hook substituted upon which a minnow is impaled. The bass, seeing this lure as it is rapidly reeled in, believes that there are two minnows, one chasing the other, and strikes at them impartially. To the bass either purser or fugitive will taste equally well, and whichever it strikes at it will find the hook.

Some anglers have complained that the weedless hook is not so sure of action as the common pattern, and this in a measure is true, but the difference is not sufficient to offset the advantages of the weedless implement. Indeed, with it many waters are practicable which are impossible to the hook whose barb is not guarded.

There have been books written telling the man in the boat how to cast bait, but there never was a book equal to one-half hour of practice. This is even more true of fly casting.

Any man who has the tools can use his backyard for a ground and pick up a great deal before going to the lake, though he cannot learn to cast away from the water any more than he can learn to swim. It is enough to say that only the forearm and wrist should be greatly used, the upper part of the arm being almost motionless. Only practice will bring the proper pressure of the thumb upon the line, which grows to be instinctive, or mechanical, though the best of casters will occasionally overrun and get their silk into a snarl.

The experienced man in the boat, floating twenty yards out from the edge of the lily pads and sufficiently expert to have confidence in himself and avoid vexatious tangles, will cast and cast again, reeling in swiftly or slowly as fancy dictates, and always permitting his bait to sink well down before starting it upon its journey boatward. When a strike is made he will keep a tight line until his prey is in the dipping net.

The sun sinks and the shadows of the trees lengthen until they reach far out upon the lake. A kingfisher in white and blue flits by with sharp, grating cry. Near to the pads there is a swirl as a great muskallonge rises, rolls lazily over and sinks.

There is a shimmering of white May insects all about. As the dusk draws on a chill strikes through the stout fishing coat. A heavy swish-swish in the air makes him glance upward to see a huge blue heron, with outcurved neck and angular wings, go lumbering past.

Then, as he turns the blunt prow campward and bends to the short heavy oars, a sharp whistle marks the flight of a teal, a black ball shooting by in the darkening twilight.

HARNESSING THE WATERS

the Missouri river, which has been raised by a dam, giving a 37-foot head. A curious thing about the power from this artificial dam is that it is better and more efficient than power from another point in the same stream, where there is a natural fall. The dam has made a lake seven miles in length, covering more than 5000 acres. This storage of water prevents the forming of another ice, which at times during the intense cold weather almost stops the flow of the stream at other points. When the cold snaps come this lake is frozen over and flushboards are used to raise the normal level of the water. The water flowing under the covering of ice does not form anchor ice, and the immense amount stored behind the dam allows over the penstocks when the anchor ice is forming in the headwaters and lessening the regular flow, so that the full efficiency of the stream is maintained at all times.

At the dam there is an immense foreay, one wal lof which is the wall of the poyer house. Through this wall are immense gateways afford access to the penstocks, in which are the water wheels, placed horizontally, and some distance above the discharge. The dynamos that generate the power are directly coupled to the wheels and are 1200 horse-power. There are ten of these dynamos and wheels.

Among the consumers that are supplied at Butte are the Colorado copper smelter, Butte and Boston smelter and mines, Anaconda mine, the Boston and Montana mine, Senator W. A. Clark's mines, and several others. In Helena 4000 horsepower is being used by the street car lines, electric power plants, the big smelter of the American Smelting and Refining company, the Helena and Livingston Mining and Reduction company, and the large new gold mill of the Big Indian Go... Mining company.

DUN'S REVIEW

Situation In Anthracite Coal Region Is More Serious.

New York, May 24.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Many minor labor controversies have been settled, but the situation in the anthracite coal region has assumed a more serious aspect. Railway earnings remain satisfactory, gaining 6.1 per cent over last year for May and 15.4 per cent over 1900.

No change is reported in the iron and steel situation, former conditions merely becoming intensified by the threatened decrease in supplies of fuel and the labor controversies in certain branches of the industry.

The railways are seeking rails, rolling stock and other equipment, while contractors require much structural material.

Slight concessions are now obtainable in some lines of footwear, although the market as a rule is fairly steady, but dull. Leather is firmly held, especially desirable weights advancing, while domestic packers' hides again made a definite gain.

Print cloths are quiet at last week's decline. Quiet conditions have prevailed in the cereal markets, with only a moderate volume of option transactions and fractional changes in quotation. Exports of wheat, including flour, were only 3,885,568 bushels during the past week from all ports of the United States, against 5,525,130 bushels in the corresponding week last year. Small receipts of corn amounting to only 1,263,188 bus for the week, against 3,667,500 a year ago, held the spot price at about 70 cents.

Dispatches from correspondents of R. G. Dun & Co. indicate satisfactory progress with the new corn crop and a material increase in acreage.

Failures for the week numbered 192 in the United States against 180 last year and 12 in Canada against 22 last year.

NO INJUSTICE

Has Been Done to the Three Lopez Brothers.

Washington, May 24.—The senate committee on the Philippines yesterday made public a petition presented by Miss Clemencia Lopez, a sister of Sixto Lopez, to the president for the release of three of her brothers in the province of Batangas, who have been taken into custody by Gen. Bell and sent to the island of Talim, where, she says, they are undergoing great hardships. Miss Lopez is in Boston and her petition is dated there, under date of March 15 last.

The president's position in the matter is made known through the following note through Secretary Cortelyou to Miss Mabel Bayard Waring, of Boston, under date of April 23:

"The president has received your note of the 22nd inst. and begs me to assure you that he has gone carefully with the war department over the matter of which you write, having been in correspondence with the authorities at Manila and in consultation with Governor Taft here, and that he does not think anything can properly be done. He will see Secretary Root on his return from Cuba, but there appears to be a consensus of opinion that no injustice was done."

JURY FREES SCHEMERS

Salter, Et Al. Cleared of Ballot-Box Stuffing.

They Ran Away Two Years Ago to Avoid a Trial.

Philadelphia, May 26.—Samuel Salter, Joseph D. Rogers, Clarence Messer, Harry McCabe and James T. Sheehan, who were indicted on the charge of ballot box stuffing in connection with the election of Nov. 7, 1899, were found not guilty by a jury in Quarters sessions court today. The jury retired at midnight Saturday night. It was testified that these men entered into a conspiracy with Salter to substitute strangers for the legal election officers in one of the precincts of Salter's ward, and to stuff the ballot box of that division with 215 fraudulent ballots; to return false election reports, and to commit offenses of a similar nature in other wards. George Kirkland, who joined the alleged repeaters at the instance of a local daily newspaper, exposed the alleged conspiracy.

Warrants were issued for the arrest of the five men who, after entering bail, fled from the state and remained in hiding for two years. They returned a few weeks ago and surrendered themselves.

At the time of the alleged crime Salter was deputy coroner of this city; Rodgers was a lieutenant of capitol police in Washington, and Messrs. McCabe and Sheehan held federal positions in Washington.

CREW DESERTED VESSEL

Men on the Dauntless Became Frightened on Trip to Martinique and Left the Sloop at Dominica.

New York, May 26.—The sloop Dauntless, which, under command of Capt. Blake, carried supplies provided by the governor of this island for the sufferers in Martinique, has returned here, says a Herald dispatch from St. Kitts, B. W. I. The crew of the Dauntless became frightened on the voyage, refusing to go on, and deserted the sloop at Dominica. This delayed the relief expedition, but the Dauntless obtained a new crew at Dominica, and finally went on to her destination.

On the passage southward, Capt. Blake says Mount Pelee was seen blazing grandly at intervals of about a quarter of an hour. Its eruptions were accompanied by awful sounds, resembling deep thunder. Pebbles and volcanic debris rained constantly upon the deck of the Dauntless.

When the Dauntless passed St. Pierre on the voyage northward the city's ruins were burning fiercely, but the volcano was quiet.

The island has been swept by a fearful thunder storm.

ASSEMBLY NEARLY OVER

But Little Remains For the Presbyterians to Do Before Ending Conference, Although That Little Is Important.

New York, May 26.—Little remains to be done in the Presbyterian general assembly, but that little is of great importance not only to the members of this assembly, but to those who shall be elected next year and to the million communicants who may be called on for an additional cent to pay for the extra expense in case the members decide to go to Los Angeles. For the Portland, Ore., assembly, ten years ago, the assessment was 7 cents for each communicant. As the meetings have since been held for the most part east of Chicago, it was decided to reduce the assessment to 5 cents. If it should be decided today to raise the amount to what it was previous to the Portland meeting it would not be a great hardship on any individual, but the extra penny or two collected in this way would prevent a deficit. California has tried for many years to have the assembly decide to come there, but so far its invitations have all been declined. Its representatives feel that it would be a good thing for Presbyterianism in California and a good thing for the church in the East.

This afternoon the commissioners will enjoy a sail up the Hudson. Unless an adjournment shall have been reached by noon, which seems improbable, an evening session probably will be held.

WARREN IS DEFENDED

Unknown Writer Says That the Abandonment of Spion Kop Was a Great Surprise to Gen. Warren.

Newk York, May 26.—An important book is published today says a Tribune dispatch from London in reference to Sir Charles Warren's action at Spion Kop. The author conceals his identity under the pseudonym of "Defender," but it is understood that he expresses Sir Charles Warren's own views with regard to that famous battle. It will be remembered that the government was still withholding some documents bearing upon his operations and that those which were published, if considered by themselves, gave a totally incorrect view of the matter, and one which reflected seriously on his military reputation. The writer points out that the Boers considered Spion Kop the key to the situation in Natal and that had it been held, Ladysmith presumably would have been won. His contention, therefore, is that blame for the failure should not be cast upon Sir Charles Warren, who ordered the situation to be taken, but on Col. Thorneycroft, who abandoned it without sufficient reason and without consulting him. The writer says the gist of all information is to make it clear that Spion Kop was the key to the position, dominating the country and that no one was more astonished at its unauthorized abandonment that Gen. Warren, except the Boers themselves.

WILL FOUND IN VEST POCKET

New York, May 26.—A will supposed to have been left by A. J. McIntosh, late president of the Chicopee National bank, and which has been missing since the banker's death, has been found in a vest pocket at his apartments. The document was somewhat crumpled, but perfectly legible.

THIRD ATTEMPT SUCCESSFUL

Eau Claire, Wis., May 26.—Henry J. Leinenkugel, who became insane suddenly and was taken into custody Saturday, made two attempts at suicide by hanging in the county jail that night, and a third attempt early Sunday morning by cutting an artery with the edge of a cuspidore. He was committed to the Mendota asylum, and Under Sheriff Christer started with Leinenkugel for the Mendota asylum on the noon train, but Mr. Leinenkugel died on the train before it reached Camp Douglas. Deceased was a cigar manufacturer, about 40 years old, and unmarried.

ANGRY MOB

Chased Indiscreet Provincial Policeman Out of Fernie.

Fernie, B. C., May 26.—Chased by an angry mob of 500 miners and citizens, William Stevens, a provincial policeman, lost no time in placing himself outside the town limits. Stevens incensed the miners by stating that he wished 250 more miners had been killed in the explosion Thursday night last.

Careful and conservative checking of information from all sources now leads to the placing of the number of killed by the explosion at the Crow's Nest Coal company's mines at 151, and up to midnight last night but fifty bodies had been recovered. It is expected that many more bodies will be recovered during the night.

NEW IDOL.

New York Chinamen Christen His New Joss House.

New York, May 26.—Smouldering joss sticks and offerings of pigs and chickens, brought by half the population of Chinatown, have christened the gorgeous Oriental home of Queng Gung, a new idol, fresh from China, of the Nin Yung clan. The new jess house is in Moss street, and is magnificently furnished in honor of the new god. The Chinese circle, which will kowtow before Queng Gung, is composed of half the Chinamen in New York, and is said to be the strongest in the United States.

STRUCK BY CAR.

Mrs. Alex Gaston Seriously Injured at Harvey.

Chicago, May 26.—Within 100 feet of her home in Harvey, Mrs. Alex H. Gaston, the aged mother of Lucy Page Gaston has been knocked unconscious by a fast moving electric car and her right hip seriously injured. Her physicians also fear internal injuries.

Mrs. Gaston's influence has encouraged her daughter in the many years the latter has been engaged in her anti-cigarette work. Edward Page Gaston, who is now in London as the European manager for a book publishing house, is a son.

LEE CAPTURED.

Unrequited Love Was Cause of the Killing.

Atlanta, Ga., May 26.—Millard Lee, who shot and killed Miss Lilla Suttles in a church at Ben Hill, Ga., yesterday, was captured today near Austel, Ga., and placed in the Atlanta jail. He says he killed Miss Suttles because his love was unrequited.

PASSED DEAD WHALE.

Evidently Been Killed By Volcanic Disturbance.

New York, May 26.—Another steamship, the Coya, which passed through clouds of volcanic dust from Mount Pelee, has arrived in port. One of the officers said: "Fifty miles from St. Lucia and right south of Barbadoes we passed on the evening of the 8th, a large dead whale, around which hundreds of Mother Carey's chickens were hovering. The whale was seventy feet long.

"The Coya was one hour in passing through the wreckage and smoke off St. Pierre, but the flashes of fire could be seen distinctly when we were sixty miles away."

DEATH IN WORST FORMS

Trip on St. Vincent Island Disclosed a Terrible Condition of Affairs---People Had No Warning of Danger.

New York, May 26.—A cablegram to the Herald from Port of Spain, Trinidad, says: Conditions in the stricken district of the Island of St. Vincent are almost beyond description. I have just returned from a visit to Georgetown and the ruined country around it, where it was quickly found that the explosions of the Soufriere were at least as violent as those of Mount Pelee in Martinique. That the destruction of human life was not so great as at St. Pierre was due only to the fact that no large city was near Soufriere.

Nineteen shocks of earthquake were felt at Wallibou on Saturday, May 3, and at other places the ground appeared to be oscillating almost continually. The crater showed signs on the morning of April 27 of having awakened from its long slumber, and by 3 o'clock in the afternoon a column of heavy smoke with a jet of lurid flame was seen to issue from the summit of the mountain. That jet of flame with its sinister looking column of funeral smoke was the death warrant of 2000 human beings, doomed to perish miserably within a few hours.

It is almost impossible to convey in writing any idea of the desolate appearance of the country beyond the 15-mile post; that is fifteen miles from Kingstown and seven from Georgetown. The whole place looked as if millions of barrels of cement had been emptied over the land, covering every inch of ground with a coat of dismal gray. As we proceeded I noticed that the small stones scattered about were of larger size and that the bed of dust became thicker until we reached Georgetown, where the streets were covered to a depth of three feet. The roofs of the thatched huts, unable to bear the weight of volcanic dust cast upon them, had in many cases caved in, while the trees were burnt and bare of leaves, imparting a dreary appearance to the landscape.

Death was everywhere—death in its worst form. From under the shop at Rabaka two corpses were dragged while we were passing by. As we went along the mounds were pointed out to us which contained 10, 20, 30, 50 or more bodies. In one shop 40 persons had taken refuge and all had perished. Singularly enough, a little girl was rescued from under the flooring of this shop. We were unable to get close to Turnema on account of the intolerable stench which emanated from the place, where every living thing had perished on that awful Wednesday afternoon.

If the scene of desolation and death outside of Georgetown was appalling, that of anguish and suffering in the hospitals was heartrending. Lying on the ground, close together, was a mass of suffering beings, writhing and moaning. Now and again a wail would be heard of "Oh, God, help us!" "Oh, Lord, deliver us!" Then would arise in agonizing tones the harrowing chant: "Oh, God help us!" "Oh, Lord, deliver us!"

Many of these poor wretches, mad with pain, would try to raise on their mutilated hands and feet, and as they tumbled about their fell over others, who shrieked with agony when their burned limbs were touched.

STUDYING THE VOLCANO

Mount Pelee Is Examined From Sea and Land--- Scientists' Opinions Are Divided as to Future Violent Outbursts.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, Sunday, May 25, 6 p. m.—The United States cruiser Cincinnati arrived here from St. Lucia yesterday. The steamer Luckenbach arrived this morning and left at once for Porto Rico. The steamer Fonnelle reached here at 9 o'clock this morning, with 150 tons of supplies from the chamber of commerce of New York and other citizens. Among her passengers are W. H. Corwin, who was specially named by President Roosevelt as secretary of the various bodies in the United States contributing for the relief of the sufferers; Professor Angelo Heilprin and other scientists. Mr. Corwin and Capt. Scott, brother of Chief Officer Scott, of the Roraima, were presented to Governor L'Huerre and the French delegates today. The steamer Topaze has been placed at the disposition of Mr. Corwin to visit St. Vincent. Her cargo will be discharged Monday.

Capt. Scott visited the survivors of the steamship Roraima at the hospitals today.

Professor Robert T. Hill, the eminent geologist, with his party has chartered a steamer, and is carefully studying the volcano from the sea. George Kennan, with a land party is examining the northern part of the island.

Mount Pelee was fairly quiet yesterday, although there was a big eruption of ashes, which covered the extreme north of the island. The new crater is active.

Mr. Corwin has investigated the method employed in the distribution of supplies and has informed Governor L'Huerre that he considers it excellent. It is expected official notification will be issued that sufficient supplies have been received.

Most of the refugees who have come into Fort de France have deserted the town for points further south, as terror still possesses everyone and Fort de France is believed to be doomed. All business is suspended, as the amount of supplies received has killed sales.

The French delegates, Admiral Servan and the citizens are unanimous in expressions of gratitude for the genuine friendship of the American people, which has been manifested by the swiftness with which great quantities of supplies have been furnished and forwarded and the character of the delegates in charge of them.

Fort de France looks deserted. Nearly 2000 persons have gone to the islands of Guadeloupe, Dominica and St. Lucia, and as many more are trying to get away, the simple object of all minds is to escape from the island. The scientists are divided in opinion as to whether or not, new and more violent outbursts are to be expected. A majority of them think volcanic energy will be displayed for a long time, but that no further loss of life will occur, as there are no large places left to be destroyed.

Admiral Servan today called upon United States Consul Ayme to express to him his high appreciation of what the United States has done for the victims of the disaster.

For two days heavy rains have fallen.

New York, May 26.—E. O. Hovey, assistant curator of the American museum of natural history, who went to Martinique on the cruiser Dixie to examine the volcanic phenomena cables the Herald from Castries, St. Lucia:

"St. Pierre can only be compared with Pompeii. The devastation and desolation are even worse.

"It is evident that a tornado of suffocating gas wrecked the buildings, asphyxiated the people, fire then completing the ruin. This coincides with the statement that was made that asphyxiation of the people occurred before the burning. The same tornado drove the ashes in the roadstead to the bottom of the sea, or burned them before they could escape. This comes the nearest to be a sheet of flame than anything heretofore reported from any volcano.

"Mud was formed in two ways—by the mixture in the atmosphere of dust and condensed steam, and by cloudbursts on the upper dust covered slopes of the cone washing down vast quantities of fine, light dust.

"No flow of lava has apparently attended the eruption as yet, the purely explosive eruptions thus far apparently bringing no molten material to the surface. There is no change in the coast line from Fort de France to St. Pierre.

"The great emission of suffocating gas and the typical cloudburst errosion, with the resulting streams of mud, are among the new features which Pelee has added to the scientific knowledge of volcanoes."

NO LONGER ANY DOUBT

Peace In South Africa Will Soon Be Proclaimed.

Announcement Is Only a Matter of Hours.

London, May 26.—Those persons expecting a definite announcement regarding peace in South Africa on the reassembling of parliament this afternoon were disappointed, as the government leader in the house of commons, A. J. Balfour, declined to "make any forecast" as to when the government would be able to make a statement. Better informed people did not anticipate that the government would be in a position today to give out anything of importance in this connection, but possibly after tomorrow's cabinet meeting Mr. Balfour may be able to communicate the eagerly awaited news.

Although Mr. Balfour declined to commit himself publicly, there is no doubt whatever in government circles that a definite proclamation of peace is only a question of hours.

MUST HAVE PATIENCE

Head of Methodist Missions at Manila Says That American Soldiers Are Doing a Great Work In the Philippines.

Chicago, May 26.—"The opinion seems to prevail in this country that the Philippine islands are in a state of warfare and chaos, but four-fifths of the land surface of those islands is as well under peace as Kentucky," said Rev. Homer C. Stuntz, head of the Methodist missions of Manila, last night at the First Methodist church of Evanston. Rev. Mr. Stuntz was making the address at the annual anniversary exercises of the Missionary society of Garret Biblical institute.

"There have been cruelties on both sides," he continued, "but cruelties are a mere incident in a war carried on by human beings, not all of whom have attained entire sanctification. But there has never been more humanity shown than in that very war, and in the hospitals the Filipino wounded are treated just like our own.

"It has been said the army first sent to the islands was composed of drunkards. That same drunken army in one and a half years set free 10,000,000 of people from ecclesiastical and political slavery which had been endured for 400 years.

"In the name of goodness I would ask you to have patience with our men in the Philippines. I have all confidence in the world in the Taft commission. Aguinaldo himself has told me if he had known the American people would do for the Filipinos what they have done, nothing could have induced him to fire a gun or lift a finger against them."

EVADES CUBAN ISSUE

Platform Prepared For Republican Convention In Ohio Will Endorse National Administration In General Terms.

Cleveland, May 26.—Many delegates and visitors to the Republican state convention, which meets here tomorrow, have already arrived in the city.

Senator Hanna remained at his residence today, but will be at his headquarters at the Hollenden tonight and hereafter. The visiting congressmen spent the day at the suburban residence of Congressman Beidler. Chairman Dick and Secretary Malloy were with the local committee, and the candidates opened the reception headquarters. It is understood that a platform has been prepared by the Ohio senators and congressmen, which has been submitted to some delegates. It is said to endorse the national administration strongly, in general terms, without specifications, on Cuban reciprocity and some other questions. The Philippines policy is unequivocally endorsed, with a special expression of confidence in Governor General Taft.

There is no opposition to the renomination of the secretary of state, Laylin, for a second term.

Among the candidates for the other three nominations are Supreme Judge W. B. Crew, McConnellsville; Joseph M. Wood, Athens; George L. Phillips, Cleveland; A. N. Summers, Springfield; W. O. Henderson, Columbus; Myron A. Norris, Youngstown; W. S. Savage, Wellington, and J. L. Burrows, Painesville.

Food and dairy commissioner—Andrew G. Comings, Oberlin; Fred W. Herbst, Columbus; Horace Aukeney, Xenia; Herman H. Herghegger, Cincinnati; M. M. Bridge, Columbus; Lynas B. Kauffman, Columbus; Edward R. Tyler, Fremont; Edward Batt, Cleveland.

Board of public works—Frank J. McCollioch, Bellefontaine; William Kirtley, Defiance; W. J. McLean, Sidney; John O'Connor, Dayton.

MINERS LEAVING FAST

The Exodus of Mine Workers From the Schuylkill Region Continues, Some of the Towns Being Almost Depopulated.

Pottsville, Pa., May 26.—Since the inauguration of the strike in the anthracite coal region there has been a continuous exodus of mine workers from the Schuylkill district. Many of the miners have taken their families with them, their intention being to locate permanently in other fields. Most of the departing mine workers are foreigners, but many English-speaking strikers are among the number.

Since the suspension two dozen English-speaking families have left Frackville. Buck Mountain has been practically deserted and New Philadelphia is being rapidly depopulated.

It is estimated that over 2000 mine workers have left Shenandoah and vicinity.

The engineers, pumpmen and firemen in this section will meet here Wednesday to take action upon the order affecting them issued by National President Mitchell. The sentiment is strongly in favor of enforcing the demand for eight hours at present wages. Two independent operators have granted it.

MISSISSIPPI RISING RAPIDLY

St. Paul, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The river rose six inches Saturday night, due to the heavy rains in the Upper Mississippi valley. Last evening the river was still rising, but Local Forecaster Lyons looks for no serious results. Said he last evening: "The gauge now reads at 7.5 feet, or several feet below the danger mark. The floods of the past few weeks have been responsible for the rapid rise, but unless we have a cloudburst, or exceptionally heavy rain, there is no immediate danger of a flood."

The rain so far this month is slightly above normal. There has been 3.92 inches of precipitation, against the average normal rainfall of 3.40 inches for the entire month. Last year there was but 1.64 inches of precipitation during May.

Campaign of Hon. Jesse L. Jellison Is Now On.

Hon. Jesse L. Jellison, of Cohasset, opened his congressional campaign at Grand Rapids Friday night.

The weather was not good, and either because of that or because the people of Grand Rapids are not alive to their opportunities, or because the do not appreciate a good thing, or because they are not enthusiastic on the subject of canals, there was not a large audience.

Mr. Jellison spoke on the issues of the campaign as he sees them. He was introduced by ex-Senator C. C. McCarthy, who has lately ceased being a congressional candidate himself, and who, therefore, was a most fitting person to introduce the gentleman who is willing to go to congress from the Eighth district to work in the interests of canals.

From Mr. Jellison's speech, as reported in the Grand Rapids Herald-Review, it appears that the canal connecting the great lakes with the ocean is not the only canal that he wishes to work for. He is also an enthusiast on the subject of the Nicaraguan canal. He spent some time talking of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, which he said was a stumbling block to the completion of the canal. He will remove this obstacle if he is sent to congress, according to his promises to the Grand Rapids audience.

Incidentally he gave Cuba and the Philippines some attention during the course of his speech. Above all things, even above being an advocate of canals, he is a rock-ribbed Republican.

Having thus started his campaign, Mr. Jellison proposes to keep it going. He will make addresses in his own behalf through the Eighth district.

CANADA'S ORE

Prof. Van Hise Reports on Lake Superior Iron Ores.

Professor C. R. Van Hise, whose work on the Mesaba range is considered standard geology on the subject, has made a report to the United States geological survey on the subject of Canadian deposits of iron ore on Lake Superior. The subject is of peculiar interest in Duluth just now, because the Oliver Iron Mining company and other large interests are exploring the Atikokan range for iron. Professor Van Hise says:

"While it may be possible that on account of glacial erosion the product of high-grade ore in Canada may be less than in the districts of similar size and geological position on the United States side of the boundary, it cannot be doubted that in the future important quantities of iron ore will be exploited in the Canadian Lake Superior region. Doubtless, also, this exploitation would have been begun many years ago were it not for the duty which ores mined in Canada must pay when entering the United States."

The Vermilion iron-bearing series has been traced to Hunters island. Thence these rocks have been mapped by the Canadian survey as extending first in a northeasterly and then in an easterly direction to the Kaministiqua river, and thence eartward to the Keneenawan rocks west of Lake Nipigon. Another great belt of iron-bearing rocks with various ramifications has been traced by the Canadian survey from Rainy lake eastward to the Canadian Pacific railway and to Lac des Mille Lacs. In this belt occurs the so-called Atikokan range, in which large deposits of iron ore are said to outcrop. East and north of the east half of Lake Superior various areas of iron-bearing rocks are also found. One or more belts are said to extend east from Lake Nipigon. A belt is found adjacent to the Black and Pic rivers. Several belts of iron-bearing formation have been found in the Michipicoton district.

"At the present time the only one of these districts which is an ore producer is the Michipicoton. While this district has not been connected areally and structurally with any other area in the Lake Superior region, the likeness in the character of its rocks and its succession to the Vermilion district leaves little doubt that the two districts are in most essential points parallel. In the Michipicoton district the basement rock is a greenstone, showing the ellipsoidal structure on the great scale so characteristic of the Ely green stone of the Vermilion district. It contains substantially all the varieties of material in the iron formation of the Vermilion district, and in addition great quantities of pyritic quartz rock. On the bluff back of the Helen mine and at many other places iron carbonate as containing 19 to 37 per cent of metallic iron. These abundant cherty carbonates leave little doubt that the ferruginous cherts, ferruginous slates, jaspers and iron ores have mainly developed from a carbonate as the original rock, precisely as in the various districts south of Lake Superior. However, it is clear that the pyrite of the carbonates and the pyritic rocks have also made contributions. At the present time the iron formation has been developed only at the Helen mine. Here a good body of high grade hematite has been shown by stripping to extend in considerable areas to the rock surface. In 1901, the first year of shipment, 62,000 tons were shipped."

MEMORIAL SERVICES

Members of G. A. R. Attend First Presbyterian Church Sunday.

Sermon By Rev. H. B. Sutherland of Lakeside Church.

Americanship Citizenship Its Cost and the Duty It Implies.

Yesterday was Memorial Sunday and in accordance with their annual custom the members of the Grand Army of the Republic attended divine service in a body. This year their service was held at the First Presbyterian church and the sermon was delivered by Rev. H. B. Sutherland, pastor of the Lakeside Presbyterian church.

Attending the service were four organizations, the Ladies of the G. A. R., the Women's Relief Corps, and Culver and Gorman posts of the Grand Army of the Republic. They occupied seats reserved for them in the body of the church.

The church was handsomely decorated with bunting, flags and flowers. The music was very fine and was featured with patriotic music.

Rev. Mr. Sutherland took for his text, Acts xxii and xxiii: "With a great sum obtained I this citizenship"

In opening he referred to some of the great wars of history, remarkable for various features, but said that beside the civil war in this nation they were as a whole, all the other wars pale into insignificance—it was the mightiest conflict that has ever shaken this earth with the shock of battle.

The first thought in connection with this war that he discussed was its tremendous cost, or stated in another way the enormous price paid for liberty and freedom. Things that are worth having always cost.

"It is this thought that we wish to hold for a little while—the cost of our citizenship, of our free institutions, of our heritage, of our Christian civilization. I do not, however, intend to enter into a review of the forces and elements flowing together in the inception, growth and progress of our American citizenship. That would take us back to Calvary. I wish we might be so impressed with its enormous cost that no man would treat his citizenship lightly.

"Today we are to consider briefly that great struggle to preserve and perpetuate the Union, with its cost, its message to us. Civilization is a tree nourished not by rain or snow, but by the tears and blood of patriots and prophets of yesterday.' How it costs to maintain war! Yet, out of the throes of war have come our priceless civilization and citizenship.

"For the last four years there have come into the harbors of both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, ships laden with unusual freightage. There was one especially that came into one of our Atlantic coast cities, still fresh in our memories. The whole nation gave to it a sad welcome, a warm, hearty, patriotic, but mourning welcome. That cargo was a nation's dead, more than 600, brought back from the islands of the sea for burial. O what a sacrifice! Some insist that it was too great, but such has been war. And it is from such planting that nations have been born into liberty. Sow the seed of a nation's dead and reap the harvest of liberty and Christianity. There is no other way as yet. The cost seems enormous especially when the blood of the prime and the manhood of the nation is spilled. But as of the individual, so of the nation, death is the way to life, and sacrifice is the way to liberty, peace and power. Sow the seed of noble, heroic lives and sacrificing deaths and reap a nation of liberty, freedom and home. The price of our national unity lies buried beneath the sod of Arlington heights, and in graves marked unknown and in the scars and wounds of the thinning ranks of the G. A. R."

The speaker also paid a tribute to the "silent sufferers," the devoted wives, mothers and sisters.

The next thought considered was the tremendous price of peace or the price paid for the preservation, perpetuation and extension of liberty. Having paid such a great price for our citizenship, what are you going to do with it? This is an appeal to our patriotism and that patriotism which is of the highest sort. Let all swear patriotism to their country and if vengeance and hatred are to be sworn let it be against traitors and such men and nations as would seek to destroy our free institutions, our liberty and truth and righteousness.

"We belong to our country as we belong to our own mother. But the inspiring note in our present day patriotism, and that which distinguishes it from that of the Spartan and the Roman, is that it recognizes that our first duty is to God and our second to country, or better still, that by serving God we best serve our country and home; that times of peace call as loudly for men as times of war, and the hero of the battlefield is distanced and eclipsed only by the heroes in the triumphs of peace and righteousness.

"Intelligence, virtue, morality and religion were the abiding elements that entered into our national life and character and they are still the distinguishing feature of our nation's life. Whatever the old world may say of our nation, and whatever they may claim for themselves of advantage over us, it is certainly true that millions of their people see under our stars and stripes, opportunities for education, freedom and happiness and religion enjoyed nowhere else under the sun. To no other land in 200 years has the tide of immigration been so strong as to free America."

Continuing, the speaker said, that while the stranger is welcomed he must show allegiance to our flag and all that it symbolizes, he must be God-fearing and law-abiding. Liberty, righteousness and truth are the types of American patriotism, the Christianity that has caused the country to expand and plant its flag over the oppressed.

"Veterans of the civil war, you cannot afford to trifle with American citizenship. However honorably and well you served your country, so long as you live there are great victories to be won. Forget not that at the end of life you will have nothing to regret for what you endured in the establishment of truth and righteousness in the earth. This requires even greater courage and broader patriotism. A true citizen is greater than a true soldier. A nation is great only as it creates and embodies heroic life. Righteousness exalteth a nation, it is our mission and by this our mission is world-wide.

"As citizens of this Christian nation, with her churches and schools, make much of your right of franchise and vote only for men who respect the Christian religion, be, therefore, a voter, a patriot and a Christian.

"We have seen pictured every year that throng that went forth in '61 with colors flying. We have seen pictured that throng that returned in '65 with colors still flying, scarred but proud, dusty in garb, saa at heart because so many of their comrades had been left behind. Every year since the ranks have been steadily depleted by those dropping away until only a few remain. It will not be many years until you will have reached the last arch in the span. To change the figure a little, your mustering will soon come. You found your soldier life harder than you expected. Can you say the same of your life as a citizen? The discipline of life is rigid and severe, if you have been a true citizen have not its rewards been more glorious than you believed?

"I wish to include all soldiers present in the final remark: In that final hour when the multitudes of mankind shall pass before the throne we shall be present. We may not have been known to the world, but we trust we have been recognized by the captain of the Lord's hosts. The soldiers' discipline may have been severe, but it taught us to walk erect, to obey orders. After we are mustered out we shall be privileged to sit down by the river of life. There we shall know the secret of the compaign and the spiritual victories and the glory of our commander. We shall then sit down with the worthy of all ages, the veterans of all the wars against evil and the enemies of God, in that enduring unending peace which is the fruit of victory and the life of the kingdom of God."

Until He Found the Right Food.

What a hades some people go through because their food does not supply the right kind of nourishment to the body. Take the following for example:

A gentleman in Baltimore says: "About two years ago I began to experience a peculiar depression occasionally, with pains in the back part of my head and down along the spine. Gradually my eyesight began to fail and my memory grew poor. A general nervousness set in. I used all the will power I could command to help myself, but was forced to give up a good position and seek the advice of the family doctor. He said neurasthenia and sent me to a great nerve specialist. So for four months I was massaged and dosed with medicine, but all to no benefit; then I went to New York and consulted Dr. ——. He sent me to another great specialist, and he in turn sent me to —— sanitarium, where I stayed for a long time.

"It was the same old story. I was dosed with medicine and massaged and bathed. Finally I left there and went to another specialist, who told me I would only live a few months. This rather frightened me, and I placed myself under Dr. ——. He said the stomach was at fault, and probably I had not been given the right kind of food.

"He put me on a certain line of treatment and insisted that I use three or four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts each meal. I was under his care for several months. I steadily improved, until now I am fully restored to both mental and bodily vigor.

"He explained to me that Grape-Nuts contains a goodly portion of phosphate of potash, a nerve and brain food, and that the food being partially digested, the system could make use of it easily. At any rate I got well, and both the doctor and myself know that Grape-Nuts made it possible.

"I sincerely believe that practically all of our nervous troubles are caused by imperfect nourishment. It was fortunate for me that I could get such a food as Grape-Nuts. You can use this letter, but don't publish my name, please." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

HUMBERTS IN GOTHAM

The New York Police Seeking Two Swindlers From Paris.

They Secured Over Eight Million Dollars By Big Fraud.

French Consul Thinks Them Too Clever For the Detectives.

New York, May 26.—Frederic Humbert and his wife, the leaders of the band of conspirators that secured over $8,000,000 by fraud in Paris, are declared by the police to be either in this city or on their way here. All necessary papers have been secured to procure their arrest. All authorities are on the watch, and it is promised that clever as are the two they will not be able to elude the sleuths of Gotham.

The arrest at Hoboken of a man wanted in Paris for a big swindle was at first believed to have a bearing on the Humbert case, but it was proved that he was no way involved. However, it is expected that the Humberts will be in custody here before many days have passed.

M. Edmond Bruwaert, the French consul general in this city, has received from the Paris courts copies of the warrant for the arrest of the Humberts.

"We received a statement from Liverpool," said M. Bruwaert, "that they had been seen in that city last Saturday and that they were supposed to have sailed that day for some foreign country.

"Now, whether the country to which they are in flight, if they are on the run, is the United States, Argentina, or some country in the Orient, no one knows. We are on the lookout for them.

"It is a wonderful case, and when you consider the ingenuity and smartness of the principals, it is an easy thing to surmise that they will make the best possible use of what time they may have in which to make their escape.

"As for the descriptions of the Humberts and the D'Aurignacs, I have received from Paris photographs and descriptions of them, which, if followed, will certainly lead to their detection if they land on American soil."

The description referred to by M. Bruwaert is an elaborate affair, giving a full description of the Humberts and D'Aurignacs, on the side of each particular description being pasted a photograph of the person referred to. The description in part reads as follows:

"M. Frederic Humbert—Apparently about 40 years of age; medium height; chestnut colored hair and mustache, tinged with gray; pale complexion; grayish blue eyes; slender hands; wears eyeglass or monocle; speaks English, German and French fluently, and Spanish a little."

The photograph of M. Humbert indicates that he is a man of wiry build with a sad face. In the picture he is reclining in a chair, leaning forward, with his face cast down, in the manner sometimes adopted by poets when they pose for their pictures.

"Mme. Therese Humbert—Stout, plain visage, dull complexion, black, projecting eyes, hands plump and delicate, fingers long, medium height, brown hair, speaks with south of France accent."

The picture of Mme. Humbert shows her to be a woman with a rather strong face.

The photograph of Mlle. Eva Humbert shows a slender girl of probably 20 years, with a sad face, the features of which are not so marked or prominent as in the case of Mme. Humbert. Her description says that she has excellent teeth, is tall, with a pale complexion, blonde hair, and long, slender feet.

Marie Pauline D'Aurignac is described as a woman of 35 years with good teeth, black eyes, brown hair, and five feet two inches in height.

Romain D'Aurignac is five feet five inches in height, of a dark, swarthy complexion, heavy mustache, full face, stout, and speaks French and Spanish fluently.

Emilo D'Aurignac is five feet eight inches in height, dark hair tinged with gray, slightly bald, and of a fresh complexion.

The details of the Humbert case are so astounding as to seem utterly impossible; and yet every word is true. The heroine of it is Madam Frederic Humbert, the wife of M. Frederic Humbert, advocate of the court of appeal, ex-deputy for the department of the Seine-et-Marne, and son of the late M. Humbert, minister of justice in the Freycinet cabinet, president of the cour des comptes, and vice president of the senate. Madame Humbert before her marriage was Mlle. Therese d'Aurignac, and comes from the neighborhood of Toulouse.

Some twenty years ago the news spread that Mme. Humbert had succeeded to a fortune estimated at $20,000,000. This was left to her, it was alleged, by an American, Reboré Henry Crawford, who died at a date that was never precisely given, but probably between 1878 and 1883. In a country which all investigations of the French tribunals could never discover. By a will dated Sept. 6, 1877, he left his whole fortune to Mlle. Therese d'Aurignac, who, by that time, had become Mme. Therese Humbert. She was just about to enjoy this good fortune when she one day received the visit of two men—Messrs. Henry and Robert Crawford. They informed her that they were the nephews of R. H. Crawford, and produced a will also dated Nice, Sept. 6, 1877, the same day as the will instituting Mme. Humbert universal legatee. It ran as follows:

"This is my testament. I desire that after my death all I possess shall be divided into three equal parts, one-third for Marie d'Aurignac, one-third to my nephew Henry Crawford, and one-third to my nephew Robert Crawford, under condition that these latter place in France a capital sufficient to produce a life annuity for Therese d'Aurignac of 30,000 francs a month.

"(1) R. CRAWFORD.

"Nice Sept. 6, 1877."

The brothers Crawford, however, showed themselves generous. They informed Mme. Humbert that they each possessed a fortune of $30,000,000 or $100,000,000. They, therefore, did not desire any money. What they wished to do was to carry out the last wishes of their uncle, which was to unite the families of Crawford and d'Aurignac, her sister. Mme. Humbert drew their attention to the fact that she was only a school girl.

"That does not matter," replied the brothers Crawford; "we are in no hurry. We will wait. Meanwhile we will appoint you guardian of the fortune. You will invest it in French rentes. From the revenues of this you will each year take the $73,000, which comes to you in any case; the remainder, capital and accumulated interest, will be the dowry of your sister on her marriage."

This arrangement was agreed to. An immense safe was bought, and in it was placed, in envelopes sealed with the seal of the Crawfords, the whole fortune of $20,000,000. This safe was placed in Mme. Humbert's mansion at 65 Avenue de la Grande Armee, being built into the wall of the room adjoining her bedroom.

When Mlle. d'Aurignac reached her majority she showed no inclination to marry either of the Crawfords. The latter entered into a compromise in regard to the fortune, but afterwards refused to carry it out. This was the starting point of litigation.

The case has been fought in every tribunal in France, from the court of first instance up to the courts of cassation. Dozens of eminent lawyers have been engaged on either side, and "stamped paper" has been flying in showers. But, like all wars, this ---- required money.

By the deed instructing her with the custody of the fortune, Mme. Humbert could not touch a penny of it without forfeiting all her rights to it. She and her husband therefore began to borrow on the security of the $20,000,000 incased in the mysterious safe; and year after year their debts accumulated, till now they stand at over $8,000,000. No one ever saw the brothers Crawford. Recently the ever-increasing swarm of creditors of the Humberts began to get impatient. One brought suit and finally the court ordered the safe opened. When the notaries arrived, the Humberts had gone and the safe was locked. Workmen were sent for and the safe broken open, when it was found to be empty.

BIBLES.

Their Distribution In Philippines Reported By Society Agent.

New York, May 26.—The American Bible society has received from its agent in the Philippines, Rev. Jay C. Goodrich, his annual report on the situation in the islands, inclusive of the circulation of the bible. He says:

"It was no child's task that confronted either the civil or military authorities here. When the Spanish government officials withdrew, those who had shaped affairs remained behind. Shaken loose by the revolution, still this system clung and must be considered, conciliated and dealt with before those who have suffered much and protested long can be benefited.

"A union of the Protestant churches in the archipelago was effected for the purpose of utilizing the missionary forces to the best and greatest advantages by the division of the field and the open discussion of all questions of common interest.

"The Evangelist union of the islands was chosen as the name and a committee was appointed which succeeded in effecting a division of the field so that for at least three years there shall be practically no overlapping of the different missions.

"We are in receipts of the first gospel to be translated into the language of the Cebuan group of the Visayan islands. Chaplain John Randolph, of the United States army, with the assistance of competent native helpers, has with the utmost care translated and thoroughly revised this important manuscript which has been presented to the society without cost by the chaplain and dedicated to the Mississippi conference of the M. E. church, south.

"Printing for the Bible society has been done in Japan. The total number of volumes published is 71,000. Last year we reported the sale and gift of 10,873 copies."

BRIGHT NEW QUARTERS.

Enterprising Firm Moves Into New Store.

The Zenith Tea & Coffee company, formerly at 109 East Superior street, on Saturday moved into their new quarters at 8 Lake avenue south. For some time past the firm has found their former place of business entirely too small to accommodate their increased trade, the business, owing to the liberal and up-to-date methods employed, having more than doubled within the last year.

The new establishment is bright and roomy and has been fitted out very attractively. The firm handles only first class teas, coffees, flavoring extracts, baking powders, etc., and carry constantly on hand a splendid assortment and desirable premiums. A special feature is made of enlarged portraits, each purchaser to the amount of $3.50 being entitled to a portrait free of charge. That this liberal offer is appreciated by patrons is shown by the fact that there are about 200 proofs in the store at the present time awaiting inspection before the pictures are finished. There are also about 300 finished portraits which the owners are invited to see before delivery. A general invitation is extended by the firm to the public to visit and inspect the new premises during the present opening week.

Think It a Fake.

If there is such a person as Mrs. Thomas McNamara in Duluth the police are anxious to know her present address.

In a bottle found on the north shore, above Two Harbors, a note was discovered which indicates that her son has committed suicide because a certain Annie would not marry him.

The police are inclined to believe the note a fake. Every summer a dozen or more bottles turn up in this manner.

FRED STEVEN'S DEATH.

The Republican County Committee Passes Resolutions.

The St. Louis county Republican committee met this noon at the office of E. P. Towne and passed the following resolution upon the death of the late G. Fred Stevens:

"Whereas, in the providence of Almighty God, He has seen fit to take from our midst G. Fred Stevens, a member of our committee, one esteemed by us for his great kindness and unfailing courtesy under all conditions, genial and companionable, wise in counsel, energetic in action, his services to the party and to this committee were of much value;

Be it therefore resolved, that we deeply mourn his loss, and extend to his bereaved family our most sincere sympathy."

EXCURSION.

Many People Coming to Duluth From Baptist Convention.

A large number of people who have been attending the Baptist meetings at St. Paul from all over the country will arrive in Duluth Wednesday morning to see the sights at the head of lake navigation and on the iron ranges.

A special train over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway has been tendered by the management of the road, which will take the visitors to the Mesaba range the same day. It is expected that two days at least will be spent here by the party.

It is said that several thousand Baptists have been attending the denominational meetings at St. Paul. Man yof these of course come from state or nearby points, and may not feel so much interest in seeing sights near home. Nobody seems to have a very definite idea just now of just how many will come here.

ODD WEATHER

Almost Every Kind Offered Sunday---Parks Are Popular.

The head of the lakes was treated to all the varied kinds of weather yesterday, except a snow and hail storm. The day started in with a stiff northeast wind and fog, with rain. During the day the wind gradually got around into the southwest, the fog lifted, and it was delightfully warm and bright for the greater part of the afternoon. A thunder storm from the southwest was followed by a veering of the wind into the northwest, and about sundown Lake Superior presented a spectacle that is not often witnessed. A dense fog rose over the lake to a height of several hundred feet and closed in on the harbor, the fog horn blowing regularly, while the rest of the city was bathed in the rays of the setting sun. By 8 o'clock, however, the fog had settled over the hills also, the air being so completely saturated with moisture as to give the sensation of a misty rain.

Although the season is not yet really open at Lester Park, there was an immense crowd at this popular resort yesterday afternoon. From noon until after 4 o'clock every car eastbound was crowded with people headed for the park. Numerous complaints were made because the park has not been opened, the people claiming that the season is far enough advanced, and further delay is wholly unnecessary.

SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Action Against Street Railway For Death of Geo. Poulain.

Rachael Millerd Wants a House Moved Off Her Lot.

L. E. Ewing Must Appear In Duluth Match Company Suit.

George Poulain was run down by a street car while riding on a bicycle on Superior street and Seventh avenue west, Sept. 28, 1901, and almost instantly killed.

A suit against the Duluth-Superior Traction company, brought to recover $5000 damages for Poulain's orphaned 4-year-old son has been begun in district court by Alfred Marcotte, administrator of Poulain's estate.

The complaint, which was filed this morning in the office of the clerk of the district court, states that Poulain was riding a bicycle across Superior street, at Seventh avenue west, on the day of the accident. The company was repairing its tracks, and had a board laid across the place where the paving was torn up. It is claimed that when Poulain crossed one of the boards had been removed, and he was thrown in front of a street car and killed. It is alleged that the car was running from thirty to thirty-five miles an hour, that no gong or other alarm was given, and that the motorman was incompetent.

The company has filed an answer claiming that the accident was due to the negligence of Poulain in running in front of a moving car. Alexander Marshall and H. H. Hawkins are attorneys for the plaintiff and Greene & Wood appear for the company.

TRESPASSING HOUSE.

One Slides Over on to Adjoining Lot.

Rachael Millerd is engaged, with the assistance of her attorney, H. B. Fryberger, in attempting to have the district court make somebody else's house move over and get off her lot on East Fourth street.

She owns lot 18, East Fourth street, Duluth proper, First division, and she began a suit in district court some time ago against John Swendy and other tenants of the trespassing house to have them get off her property. Anna Wood owns the building, but no service was made upon her in the suit, and she does not appear. The plaintiff claims that some years ago the house was built on the adjoining lot, and that it was built right down to the lot line. It was built on piles, and it is claimed that it has been steadily shoving itself further over until now a part of it is on the plaintiff's lot.

The case was taken up this morning before Judge Dibell and a jury, and it was still on trial at noon. Francis W. Sullivan is the defendants' attorney.

In Judge Ensign's room the case of William Clark against John Fraser was given to the jury, which was still out this afternoon. In the case of Mary F. McComber against the city of Duluth, the attorneys this morning were arguing a motion made by City Attorney Mitchell to direct a verdict for the city, on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove a case. The testimony was all in Friday afternoon.

THE SERVICE STANDS.

Judge Dibell Decides Claim of Levi L. Ewing.

Judge Dibell has refused to set aside the service of summons upon Levi E. Ewing in the cases brought by the Duluth Match company, one against him personally and the other against he and others.

The suits were begun in district court Feb. 15, and were removed to the United States court. At the last term of the United States court they were remanded again to the district court.

Ewing objected to the service of summons and asked to have it set aside, because in the summons, dated Feb. 13, it was stated that the complaint was on file in the office of the clerk of district court, when as a matter of fact it was not filed until Feb. 15. On this account he refused to appear, except to apply to have the service set aside, which proceeding failed.

CAR SMASHED WAGON.

Butcher's Wagon and Car Damage Each Other.

One of Nick Witt's delivery wagons, driven by Frank Burke, was struck by an east-bound street car shortly before 8 o'clock this morning. Mr. Burke had his face bruised, the horses were badly scratched up and the wagon was nearly demolished. The front end of the car was also damaged, the windows being broken. The rig was standing in front of Mr. Witt's place of business near Lake avenue. A Lakeside car, west-bound, had just passed, and the driver swung in behind to cross the track, not seeing the car approaching from the other direction. The motorman did not see the rig as it was behind the large car, and struck it before he had time to operate the brakes.

Insane Squaw Man.

John Dagel, a squaw man of Tower, was examined in the probate court Saturday afternoon and adjudged insane.

He imagined that somebody had poisoned Lake Vermilion. He claimed to have seen some men throwing something through a hole in the ice, and he thought that must have been the poison. He claimed also that they had poisoned his well. He dug some more, and they poisoned them as fast as he could make them. Besides, they threw poison in a sack of flour in his house.

He was taken to the asylum at Fergus Falls Saturday night.

WILL GET THE PLACE

Governor Van Sant Says He Will Appoint Mrs. Stevens.

To Succeed Her Late Husband as Surveyor General.

Other Candidates Prompt In Withdrawing In Her Favor.

Mrs. G. Fred Stevens will succeed her deceased husband as surveyor general of logs and lumber. She will be the first woman in the United States to hold such a position. A special dispatch to The Herald from St. Paul this afternoon states that Governor Van Sant said today that he would appoint her to fill out the unexpired term of her late husband. She will hold the office until January next.

In announcing his intention to make the appointment, Governor Van Sant said:

"The people of Duluth seem to think the proper think would be to allow Mrs. Stevens to enjoy the emoluments of the office for the remainder of the term, and I do not think, under the circumstances, that even those who are to be candidates for the place can or will seriously object to that arrangement.

"As to the duties of the office, Mrs. Stevens can discharge them properly, and no interests will suffer. The men in the department are all placed, and the work will go on as it has before."

Several of the gentlemen who were reported to be seeking appointment as successor to the late G. Fred Stevens, have been around today to state that they are not in any sense candidates for that office. J. E. Cooley, who was reported to be a candidate, said this afternoon that he is not an applicant for the office, and that he would be glad to see the position remain in the family of the late incumbent. N. B. Morrison also said this morning that he is not a candidate for the place. He says he was approached by some Republicans and asked to be a candidate, and replied that, if the faction of the party to which he belonged united on him, he would consent to be a candidate. He says that at a meeting Saturday evening it developed that there was a movement to give the office to Mrs. G. Fred Stevens, and he at once withdrew.

A FINE SHOW.

Norris & Rowe's Trained Animals Showing In Duluth.

The street parade, given by Norris & Rowe's big trained animal show, which took place at 11:30 o'clock this morning, proved an attraction that brought out hundreds of people. It was a splendid pageant. In the line were over seventy beautiful ponies that drew the band wagon, fancy chariots, cages of animals and the miniature equipment of a fire department. There were elephants that waddled solemnly along holding each other by the tails, camels, cages of monkeys and numerous interesting animals. Toward the close of the procession came Zuza's band, comprised of clowns, whose music on their battered instruments was more noisy than musical.

The afternoon performance began at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon and drew a large attendance. The ponies were very interesting, and their military drill was a remarkable exhibition. The monkeys and dogs kept all amused. The performing baby elephants did all sorts of funny tricks, standing on their heads, walking on hind, then on front feet, playing in a band. The seals gave an astonishing exhibition of animal intelligence, going through their various maneuvers with the precision of trained athletes. There was a billygoat that walked a tight wire and rode on a pony's back, a baboon that turned handsprings on a pony's back, numerous funny clowns. The performance was brought to a close with an exciting Lilliputian hippodrome race.

The performance will be repeated this evening at 8 o'clock, and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The show is at Thirteenth avenue east and London road.

Steamboat Mortgage.

A mortgage amounting to $100,000, running from the Duluth Steamship company to the Detroit Trust company, and covering the new steeel steamship Sultana, has been filed at the united States custom office. The paper is dated April 15. The mortgage is given to cover the bond issue by which the money was raised to build the boat, ten of the bonds maturing each year after 1902.

Several days ago a draft of $500 was sent to Cornelius Bliss, of New York, who was appointed to receive all funds, and today another draft for the balance was sent.

MUST BE STOPPED.

Automobilists Object to Repeated Attacks By Boys.

New York, May 26.—Automobilists of this city, stirred to action by the attack of a mob of boys on Banker E. R. Thomas, have decided, at the Automobile club, that efforts must be made to cause the arrest of boys who amuse themselves by hurling missiles at them. They declare that, in certain sections of the city, nearly every owner of a machine has within the past two months been subjected to attack.

James Pollack, who was arrested as the leader in the attack on the Thomas party, was sentenced to three months in the Catholic reformatory.

ARE ANXIOUS.

West Duluth Impatient at Delay In Water Plant Negotiations.

Anxious inquiries are being made about the delay in the West Duluth water plant negotiations.

Property owners in West Duluth and those owning property in that part of the city are anxious to see the deal go through so that the system can be improved with gas mains.

Delay on the part of the city officers, however, is caused by the fact that they desire a thorough examination of the plant they are about to purchase, and also by the fact that the city engineer's office is not quite ready to report its latest detailed estimates on the exact cost of duplicating the system.

Enough of these figures is known, however, to sow that the $140,000 offer which the Duluth Water & Light company has practically agreed to accept, is a reasonable price to pay and there seems to be a general sentiment among citizens that the negotiations should be pushed as rapidly as possible.

One man owning considerable property in West Duluth has been at the city hall several times lately making anxious inquiries as to the progress of the negotiations.

"I fear," said he, "that this proposition will be allowed to drop again. It will be poor economy for the city to put off the purchase any longer. The sum of $140,000 with $15,000 off for water rates is exceptionally low for such a system.

"I am informed at the offices of the water and light board that the pipe in the West Duluth system is the very highest grade. In that case it will never be cheaper than it is today. Prices of pipe are constantly tending upward and in a few years they will have to pay a much larger price if we do not take up the present offer.

"There is no question in my mind, but the municipal ownership of the West Duluth plant will increase the value of property out there. The working people will be enabled to enjoy the low fuel rates of the gas plant the same as those in other parts of the city."

INDIAN BILL

Will Be Signed, President's Objections Having Been Met.

Washington, May 26.—President Roosevelt today informed a number of people who called upon him that he would sign the Indian appropriation bill. Some of the objections he had to it had been met by separate legislation. There is still another provision which he insists on being corrected and that is the one which gives the exclusive right to the Florence Mining company to prospect for one year all the mineral lands in the Uintah reservation. It is understood that a bill will be at once introduced in both houses of congress repealing this provision, which, if it passes, will have the effect of allowing the general public to explore the land and establish claims.

BIG STRIKE

In Denver to Secure an Eight-Hour Day.

Denver, May 26.—Five thousand union men employed in the building trades went on strike today, causing practically a total stoppage of building operations in this city. The strike was inaugurated by order of the building trades' council for the purpose of aiding the woodworkers in their efforts to secure an 8-hour day. The woodworkers have been on strike for the past two weeks. Their demand for an 8-hour day was granted at the smaller mills, but the owners of the large mills insist upon nine hours' work a day.

French Party Gets Excellent View of Big Cataract.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 26.—The members of the French mission, who participated in the ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the statue of Count de Rochambeau at Washington, arrived at Niagara Falls this morning. Besides the members of the mission and the families of Lafayette and Rochambeau, there are in the party Ambassador Cambon, Mme. Cambon and members of the staff of the French embassy, and the president's commission. Carriages were awaiting the arrival of the train, and ten minutes after it reached here the members of the party started for a carriage drive to the points of interest about the falls. The sun was shining brightly, and the cataract was seen to the best advantage. All the members of the party thoroughly enjoyed the scenery. They touched on English soil for a short time when the carriages crossed the bridge, and viewed the falls from the Canadian side. More than two hours were spent in sightseeing, when the party returned to the station and luncheon was served on board the train. This afternoon the party will go through the gorge on a special train to Lewiston and return. At 4 p. m. they will leave for West Point on a special train.

THE DAKOTAS.

Two Persons Killed By Lightning In North Dakota.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—On Thomas Tibbal's farm, near Mapes, the barn was struck by lightning and burned, one horse was cremated and Fred Weaver, an employe, and a resident of Lakota, was instantly killed by the discharge. Weaver had come in from the field to escape the storm, and was standing in the barnyard when the lightning flashed. A companion was about ten feet away and was not injured. He says that Weaver jumped straight into the air several feet and fell dead. At Maza the Methodist church was struck and burned. At Niagara Larson's windmill was demolished, and chimneys were blown down and considerable minor damage was done. At Forest river Harry Brennan was killed by lightning. He had been in the field and had come in to get out of the storm. He had got to within about ten feet of the barn when he was struck and was instantly killed. He was but ten years old and was a very popular lad.

Fargo—A man who has been identified as Peter Shangsathn was found dead on the platform of a warehouse near the river. There is no apparent evidence of foul play, but the coroner is investigating. The dead man was a laborer and had been in Fargo but a short time. His home is said to have been at Comstock, Minn.

Some months ago Carl Carlson, a young man, was arrested on the charge of stealing a horse. He hired a rig from a local livery stable and had his girl come from Crookston. They drove to Mapleton, where the horse was sold and the girl was sent to Grand Forks. Carlson was arrested and convicted, but seems to be weak-minded and is undergoing an examination before the insanity board. His mother is here from Bottineau and friends from Wheatland. He may escape the penitentiary and get into an asylum.

Grafton—Word has been received of a shooting at Auburn, eight miles north. Sidney Brantson, a lad, had taken a new 22-rifle out for the purpose of shooting gophers, and a young man named John Jorgenson accompanied him. After returning a cartridge, which had not been used, was snapped several times without exploding. The rifle was still in the hands of the lad and was directed toward Jorgenson, when it was again snapped. This time the cartridge exploded and the ball entered Jorgensen's abdomen. Drs. Glaspel and Moeller, of this city, were summoned. The young man is alive and resting easily, but it is hardly expected that he can recover.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Rapid City—The commissioner of the general land office has reversed the findings of the local office in the case against O. L. Cooper, of Rapid City, proceedings in disbarment. The charges were preferred by Charles W. Greene, special agent of the land office, who alleged that Cooper had practiced fraud in connection with homestead entries, that he had perjured himself and had threatened a government official. The local land office officials recommended that Cooper be disbarred.

Sioux Falls—The South Dakota Bankers' association, at its annual meeting at Huron, passed resolutions declaring against the branch banking system and against asset currency, popularly known as "bank money." What is more remarkable, the resolutions passed unanimously. The bankers said they did not favor a banking system that would make it easy for a handful of men in New York to control the currency of the United States. They opposed asset currency for the reason that obviously the security for some of the currency issued by 10,000 or 12,000 banks in the United States must be of questionable value.

Spearfish—George Brownfield, of Buelah, Wyo., is being tried at Sundance for the murder of John Vaughn. Vaughn was a stock man, of Crook county, Wyo., and disappeared mysteriously last August. Suspicion pointed to Brownfield, with whom Vaughn was last seen.

NOW HAVE ENOUGH

Logging Interests Willing to Have the Rain Cease.

Is Bothering Them In Getting Summer Operations Underway.

Demand For White Pine Continues as Good as Ever.

Some of the Northern Minnesota logging concerns that a few weeks ago were wishing for rain are now more than willing that there should be a cessation of the rainfall in the district, at least long enough for them to get summer logging operations under way. The only localities where summer logging has been started to any advantage are in the sandy sections of Northern Wisconsin. There are said to be few Northern Minnesota summer camps started for the reason that the ground is well saturated and most of the logging planned was on the lower lands.

All anxiety is past regarding sufficiency of water in the logging streams for driving. The St. Croix river, in its lower course, is said to be about 6 feet higher than the low water mark this spring. The Tabor Lumber company, of Keokuk, Iowa, that last season contracted for rail shipments of logs from Northern Minnesota, is driving about 40,000,000 feet down the St. Croix. Two of the Muscatine Lumber companies have about 15,000,000 feet contracted for to go down the river in Muscatine, Iowa. William Sauntry has already started 15,000,000 feet down the river.

The log crop of the St. Croix river and its tributaries for the winter of 1901-1902 is estimated at about 220,000,000 feet. This amount is about the same as the cut of the previous season. The Wisconsin loggers started in early last winter to put in a large amount, but the early break-up this spring prevented them from realizing their expectations. It is estimated, conservatively, that the cut of next winter will not be over 175,000,000 feet. Predictions for the following season's cut are for 150,000,000 feet and 75,000,000 feet for 1904. Lumbermen say that the end of logging on the St. Croix is in sight, there not being more than 500,000,000 feet of white pine in the territory at the outside. Already they are talking about railroading log supplies to Stillwater to keep the mills running.

There is a sort of familiar tune in that song, to the manufacturers in the Duluth district.

Conditions are most satisfactory regarding the local milling situation. Every mill along the harbor front is well started into its season's cut. Seven of the mills are running day and night to their full capacity, and the rest are running days only.

Nolan Bros. & Laird, of St. Paul, have started up their mill at St. Louis station, about 69 miles from Duluth, and will saw day and night during the season. The company is receiving a continuous supply of logs and the drouth that was experienced in the northern part of the state did not interfere with the company's operations. The product of the mill is shipped out by rail.

The big Brooks-Scanlon mill at Scanlon, Minn., resumed night operations last Monday. The work of ballasting the road is proceeding nicely, although there still remains many miles of track that is in urgent need of attention of this nature. The arrival of a large quantity of logs by the water route has enabled the mill to start operations to its full capacity some weeks earlier than was expected.

It is estimated that nearly 200,000 settlers have been sent into Northwestern Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas this year. The settlers have bought great tracts of cut-over timber lands. The immigration is said to be of an excellent class, comprised of intelligent and industrious people with more money to start with than foreign immigrants. This is believed to mean a continued large business for the lumbermen of Minnesota and Wisconsin, also for the Pacific coast lumbermen, whose lumber productions will come eastward this year in a greater volume than ever before.

The demand for white pine during the week just closed has showed no marked change from that of the past several weeks. Manufacturers are still trying to fill orders and the retailers are calling for stocks that they cannot get. There is said to be a slight lull in building, where the lumbers are busy getting in their crops and because the recent hard rains have put the roads in bad condition for hauling. The recent advance in certain grades of white pine has not, it is declaimed, had any effect in shutting off the trade. The local market is not of the liveliest, by any means, but this is not accountable to lack of demand, but rather to lack of stocks. Shipments from the head of the lakes are being pushed forward steadily and are being absorbed by the retailers and consumers as fast as they arrive at the lower lake ports and are unloaded. Practically all the stock at the lakes mills has been sold subject to delivery as soon as possible and there are plenty of purchasers in sight for the remainder.

MAY ASK IT.

Duluth Commercial Travelers May Go After State Convention.

June 12 the commercial travelers of the state will hold their annual convention in Minneapolis. Duluth always cuts a large figure in this organization and expects to be prominent at the meeting this year.

A large delegation will go from this city and it is probable that the Third regiment band will be taken along.

The Duluth men may decide to ask that the convention next year be held at Duluth. Two years ago it was held here and it was by all odds the most valuable convention that Duluth ever had from a business standpoint. The traveling men, too, were delighted with their stay here and are said to be ready and anxious to come again.

If the local men are assured of sufficient support from the citizens at large they will go after the convention at Minneapolis in a vigorous way.

Would Locate Parker.

West Superior politicians are trying to figure out what office ex-Mayor Parker will go after during the fall campaign. Divers ambitions are credited to Mr. Parker, but not even his friends seem to know definitely what he will ask for. Rumor has coupled his name with the office of state senator, lieutenant governor on the La Follette band wagon, and clerk of court. The latter office is counted one of the best in Douglas county, from a financial standpoint, and W. H. Locke, who has held it for the past three years, will be a candidate for renomination.

WILL CLOSE.

Stores of the City Will Observe Memorial Day.

The stores of Duluth will generally observe Memorial day by closing throughout the day. All of the larger stores are certain to be closed.

This means that the day will be more generally observed in the city than ever before.

A RESERVE.

A. D. Thomson and Others Buy Ox Creek on South Shore.

Ox creek, the ideal trout stream on the south shore, has been bought up as a private preserve. The principal purchasers are A. D. Thomson, of this city; William Sauntry, the Stillwater lumberman, the latter's son-in-law and a Stillwater physician. Mr. Thomson is said to have the largest holdings. The intention is to stock the stream with trout, police the preserve and keep it for the use of friends of the owners. It is said that Mr. Thomson's purchase embraces over 1560 acres, and that the lands bought in order to acquire ownership to both sides of the stream, have cost him about $10,000.

Ox creek empties into the St. Croix about six miles south of Brule, in Douglas county, Wis. It runs in the same general direction as the older-fished and more famous trout stream, the Brule. It is considered to be the most ideal stream for trout and brouting, that exists in this country. The creek is about 25 or 30 feet wide for the most part. It runs between banks 9 to 12 feet high, well wooded with heavy timber, which affords fine shade for the stream, but the growth is exceptionally free from underbrush, the bane of the fly-fishers life. The banks can be easily descended or ascended. The country through which the stream runs is of sandy soil, and the bed is pebbly, rather than bouldery, which makes for ideal wading conditions. It is solely and par-excellence a wading stream.

Near the mouth is an enlargement that partakes of the nature of a marsh. It is from just above this marsh that Mr. Thomson began the acquisition of lands along the banks of the stream. He started making deals for the property fully a year ago. Many owners had to be dealt with, for the stream ran through a length of perhaps four miles. Finally all was bought but the holdings of Mr. Sauntry and his friends. Mr. Sauntry had a feeling of admiration for the stream also, and he could not be induced to let go of his holdings, so Mr. Thomson formed an alliance with him to maintain the stream as a preserve as far up as Ox lake. This is said to have all the requirements of an ideal trout lake. Just at present pickerel have multiplied a great deal, and measures will probably be taken to rid the waters of them. Like the creek below the lake will be stocked with trout and other sporty fish.

It is quite likely that all of the parties concerned in the purchase of the preserve will erect large cottages along its banks. It is easily accessible by railway and has never been used as a logging stream, which was originally the fault of the south shore Brule. The banks of the latter stream are now said to be so crowded with cottages and clubhouses that a brook trout now needs have great hardihood to show his head at many points of the river.

A few miles to the west of the head of Ox creek is Island lake, which has become the property of the McCormicks, of Chicago, the harvester people. The owners have improved the place with a lodge, and every spring numerous members of the family and their friends come up for trout fishing, and in the fall make another trip after deer.

THE EAGLES

To Attend National Convention at Minneapolis Next Week.

Duluth and Superior Eagles will go to the national convention of the order in Minneapolis next week in force and in brilliant attire.

The convention begins Tuesday, June 3, and it will last three days. Duluth will send over 100 members, and Superior will send about 150. Both delegations will be uniformed, and will march in the parade that will be given.

Duluth Eagles will wear gray trousers, negligee shirts, fedora straw hats and belts, and the Superior members will be decked out in silk hats, Prince Albert coats and canes. The Duluth delegation will have special cars over the Northern Pacific, and the Superior crowd will go down over the Eastern Minnesota.

TEMPERANCE MEETING

Editor Erickssn of Superior Tidende Speaks.

Professor C. A. Heath, of Philadelphia, gave several charming selections at yesterday's union temperance meeting at the First Swedish M. E. church that were very pleasing to the audience. He has a fine voice and uses it to great advantage. The number, "Mollie and the Baby," was especially fine.

The feature of the program was the address by Editor Erickson, of the Tidende, of West Superior. Rev. Mr. Thvedt, of this city, gave a few short remarks and introduced Editor Erickson.

"Legalized Temptation" was the subject of this address, and it was very instructive and received with much attention. He dwelt on the destructive results of the American saloon and said the institution was a disgrace to modern civilization. Those that hold up the saloon are not the drunkards, but the prominent citizen who can take a glass at times and leave it. Personal liberty must be respected, but the government is to protect the weaker against the stronger. The saloons break down the weak that cannot resist the great temptation. Our government is for protecting our people from wrong. Now, let us talk sensibly to our prominent citizen, to consider the damage the saloon does to home and land and solicit their influence to stop this infamous traffic by them abstaining from the use of strong drink, thus setting a good example for others and practicing the principles that laws should be enacted to protect the weak ones."

There was some discussion of the question of establishing a workingmen's club, the idea being to have a place where young men could be invited to spend their spare time and be under good influences. On motion of Rev. Anderson the question was referred to the various churches for their consideration. A poem composed by John Hurtig was read and at the close of the program Frank E. Londeen recited several temperance verses written by himself.

Teamsters' Union.

Another meeting of the Team Owners' union, recently organized, was held yesterday afternoon in Kalamazoo hall. The membership has increased to fifty and the charter from the Teamsters' international organization is expected every day.

The Team Owners' union and the Team Drivers' union are two distinct and separate organizations, although affiliated with the same international body, which has headquarters in Detroit.

MORRIS BILL

May Not Be Passed at Present Session of Congress.

Washington, May 26.—The indications are that Judge Morris, of Duluth, will be able to spend the greater part of his time during the remainder of his term in congress watching for a chance to pass his bill relating to the timber on the Chippewa Indian land of Minnesota. The measure has been on public calendar for a number of weeks, but no prospects are in sight to give Judge Morris confidence that the bill can be passed.

The bill cannot come up except by unanimous consent, and there is so much controversy over the provision of the bill relating to the manner in which bids for the proposed sale of the timber are to be received there is little doubt that objections would be made to the consideration of the measure in its present form. A plan is under consideration of the measure for taking up the bill, under a general agreement, which would cut off the possibility of a single objection defeating the measure. The whole difficulty is over the provision inserted by the committee on Indian affairs for sealed bids in the disposal of the timber.

Some of the members want the old system of open competitive bids considered. It is believed that the plan adopted by the committee would be acceptable to a majority of the members of the house if the measure could be brought to a vote, but so long as there are differences of opinion upon this or any other feature of the bill, it could not be considered so long as a single objection to the consideration of the bill is sufficient.

On the other hand, some of the members for the West insist that unless the sealed bid plan is adopted the bill cannot be passed.

All the healing, balsamic virtues of the Norway pine are concentrated in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, nature's own remedy for coughs and colds.

Compensating Works at Sault Maintain Lake Levels.

Sault Ste. Marie—The work on the compensating works known as the "dam at the rapids," which has been carried on for over a year, has been suspended for the reason it now meets present requirements. The structure built is damming the water so much that the extra drainage of the lakes by the canals is counteracted. It is now a complete dam as far out as the end of the second span of the international railway bridge. Some time in the future, when a new power canal is built, the compensating works may be further extended. They have been commenced so that they can, if necessary, be extended across the rapids and are unusually strong.

Hancock—After several weeks of agony, death has relieved the sufferings of Jerry Palmer, of Alpena, who, with both feet amputated, had been lingering in St. Joseph's hospital in this city. During a rain storm at Alpena on the last day of February Palmer took refuge in a box car standing in the railroad yards. The car was partially loaded with hay and the man fell asleep. During his nap the car was sealed and started on the long journey to Dollar Bay, this county, reaching there on the sixth day. In all this time Palmer had nothing to eat, and as the weather was bitterly cold his sufferings were terrible. He was found unconscious and with both feet and hands frozen when the car was opened. The hands were saved, but it was necessary to amputate the feet. Palmer was 30 years of age.

Calumet—While it is known that extensive gambling is being carried on by the Oriental population here, the authorities have so far been baffled in their efforts to discover sufficient evidence or to catch the Chinamen actually engaged at the game. Entrance has been forced at several places recently, but the celestials have always managed to get the cards and stakes out of sight, and explained that some celebration was responsible for the assemblage. Not only money, but the laundries themselves have figured as stakes, and it is not denied by the Chinamen that one shop has changed owners three times as a result of gambling.

Marquette—Damages in the sum of $1200 have been secured against an inmate of the penitentiary here by Mrs. Annie E. Rogers, a young and pretty widow of Muskegon. The defendant was Albert Radley, who, in throwing a bottle through the window of a Muskegon restaurant, struck and injured the plaintiff.

Extensive experiments in the culture of sugar beets are to be made in the upper peninsula this season. A large amount of seed has been distributed by officials of the state department farm at Chatham. The establishment of beet sugar factories next year is predicted.

St. Louis, May 26.—James J. Hill, president of the Northern Securities company, who has been inspecting the Burlington terminals here, left at 8:30 a. m. for St. Paul.

With reference to the Wall street report that efforts were being made looking to a compromise of the so-called merger suit, Mr. Hill said: "There is nothing whatever in that. We are content to leave that matter for the courts to decide. We have confidence in the courts and are satisfied that the case will be fairly decided. We own the property and no one can take it from us."

MAY GO TO HIS WIDOW

Mrs. G. Fred Stevens May Get Her Husband's State Office.

Legality of the Appointment Must First Be Determined.

Funeral Sunday Afternoon Very Large---Gov. Van Sant Present.

The plan of appointing the widow to fill out the unexpired term of the late G. Fred Stevens as surveyor general of logs and lumber is meeting with general approval among politicians, and it is very probable that if Governor Van Sant finds that it can be done legally he will make the appointment.

This will shut out all of the hasty gentlemen who began their campaigns to succeed Mr. Stevens almost as soon as his death was announced. It is said that some of them were out working for the place before noon on the day that Mr. Stevens passed away, and there is a great deal of ill-feeling against them on that account.

One prominent Republican politican whose word would have much weight with the governor said Saturday afternoon that he would ask the governor to thrown out of consideration immediately every application that came in before Mr. Stevens' funeral.

Some of the would-be successors of Mr. Stevens who were out Friday working for the appointment received rather chilly treatment when they approached Mr. Stevens' friends, and that included pretty nearly everybody that it would do any good to approach. Many indignant remarks were made, and some pretty hot ones were made direct to the office seekers.

The general desire seems to be that if it can be done in any way the emoluments of the office for the remainder of the term should go to Mrs. Stevens, and strong representations along that line have been made to the governor.

"It is a question," said the governor in his parlor at the Spalding a short time before he left to take a late train for St. Paul, "if Mrs. Stevens can legally be appointed to the office. I shall find this out as soon as possible. There seems to be a very strong feeling here among lumbermen, the friends of Mr. Stevens and others that Mrs. Stevens shall continue to enjoy the office until the expiration of the term for which her husband was appointed. It was the intention, of course, that Mr. Stevens should hold the office for that period. The remainder of the term is very short, ending with the calendar year."

Saturday evening the Republican politicians known as Van Sant men congregated around the Spalding lobby and in public places and discussed the expressions of sentiment that had been caused by the active appearance of candidates for the office. Many of Mr. Stevens' friends had given notice of protest against the haste shown by the anubition of several Republicans to secure the appointment to his office. The Van Sant men compared notes on this sentiment and seemed to conclude that it was quite general. A party of them was on hand at the Spalding very early yesterday forenoon to present his view of the situation and urge the appointment of Mrs. Stevens, directly or indirectly, if the governor could see his way clear.

Governor Van Sant arrived on an early morning train yesterday from St. Paul. All day, while he was not at church or at the Stevens funeral, Republicans of the class known as Van Sant workers thronged the hotel lobby or passed to or from Parlor I, which the governor always occupies if he can get it when he comes to Duluth. Aside from the political opinion he obtained on the subject, it was quite evident that the executive was anxious to and did get at general sentiment on the subject.

The office held by Mr. Stevens was that of surveyor general for the Fifth district of the state, with jurisdiction over the waters flowing into Lake Superior and all waters in St. Louis county, with exception of the Little Fork. The purpose is to afford in chief the means for obtaining an equitable measurement or scale of the timber cut from state lands. It has become a general custom, however, in the sale of timber cut from other lands to stipulate that the measurement shall be made by state scale, which means that the surveyor general's office shall furnish a deputy for that purpose. This office also files legal records pertaining to logging, private marks on logs, etc. It is a fee office, and is said to pay a large sum in the aggregate each year, for logging operations in the territory under its jurisdiction are just now at the top notch. It has always been the custom, it is said, however, to make the office pay large tribute to the campaign fund of the republican state organization, which has reduced the net earnings quite materially.

Speaking of Mr. Stevens' death last night Governor Van Sant said: "Mr. Stevens was a fine fellow, and his administration of the office seemed to have given general satisfaction, for not a single criticism has been filed against him. It was a great shock to me to learn of his death. My acquaintance with him began with my activity in state politics, and I had consequently known him quite well for a number of years."

Governor Van Sant said that he might take action on the matter today in St. Paul.

Among the candidates for the appointment as surveyor general were J. E. Cooley and N. B. Morrison, though it is understood that several others were after it.

The governor said that the last stone on the new capital building had been laid, the tower completed, and that only the arrival of a little delayed structural steel prevented the full completion of the roof. It is the intention, he added, to get that steam plan installed this summer so that the interior can be finished during the winter months.

"Prosperity seems to smile on Minnesota again this year," continued the governor. "From all parts of the state except small parts of the Red River valley come promising reports of the prospects for bountiful crops."

HUNDREDS PAY TRIBUTE.

Funeral of G. Fred Stevens Is Very Large.

Last tributes to the memory of G. Fred Stevens were paid by hundreds of sorrowing friends yesterday.

The body lay in state at the residence, 1507 Jefferson street, from 10 o'clock in the morning until noon.

During that time a steady stream of personal friends of the deceased passed in and out of the home.

The funeral service was held there at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and it was one of the most largely attended ever held in Duluth.

The floral tributes were numerous, some artistically massive and all very beautiful. The casket was surrounded with hundreds of white roses. Among the especially attractive floral designs were those presented by the Duluth lodge of Elks, the Modern Samaritans, the Northwestern Lumber Dealers' association and the lumber shippers and inspectors of Duluth.

Dr. S. P. Long, pastor of First Methodist church, pronounced an eloquent eulogy on Mr. Stevens' character and life. Among those that attended the funeral were Governor Van Sant, Joseph G. Miller, of the railroad and warehouse commission, and Mayor Hugo.

The pall bearers were: Fred J. Voss, C. R. Ash, J. W. Reynolds, J. D. Howard, N. B. McNulty and A. E. McManus.

The lodge of Elks, of which Mr. Stevens was one of the most popular members, attended the service in a body. The lodge acted as an escort of honor to the Forest Hill cemetery, where it conducted special memorial services, using the impressive ritual of the order.

During the service the name of the deceased was called by the secretary of the lodge and then each of the 150 members present stepped forward placing an ivy leaf and a sprig of aramanth on the casket, saying "Peace be with you." The ivy and aramanth denote the love and charity of the order.

In regard to the death of Mr. Stevens the official board of the First Methodist church adopted the following resolutions, at a meeting held on Saturday evening:

"Resolved, that the official board of the First Methodist Episcopal church notes with sadness the passing of Brother G. Fred Stevens, and extends the profound sympathy of its members to the stricken wife, friends and relatives of deceased, and commend them to the care and healing of the God of all grace and consolation. In the dark and troubled hours of human history God is ever mindful of his own and will secure them a blissful reunion in His abiding kingdom.

A SHUT OUT.

High School Team Does Not Allow Brainerd to Score.

The high school baseball team defeated the team of the Brainerd high school by a score of 9 to 0 at the Driving park on Saturday afternoon.

The game was an interesting one, and for the first few innings very exciting, though the fielding of both teams was ragged at times. Not a man reached the rubber during the first four innings. Then Brainerd got three men on bases by the help of two singles and numerous errors by the Duluth fielders, but before a score could be landed Cummings would strike enough men out to retire the side or the fielders would take a brace and stop the running.

Tache, the Brainerd pitcher who graced the slab for the first five innings, is a little wonder. They say that he is only 16 years old, but he plays with the speed and judgment of a veteran. For the five innings that he was in the game he held down the Duluth men to one hit—and that a one-bagger. In the fifth, however, the already bad support of the men behind him gave way. They couldn't field anything. Two little hits were made off of him in the excitement and these, coupled with countless errors by the out and infields, gave Duluth six runs and the game.

Disgusted by the support given him Tache quit the game and his place was taken by Boyle. The new man gave several free passes to first and allowed a hit, so Duluth got two more scores in the sixth.

Cummings meanwhile warmed up to his usual form and had the Brainerd men fanning in quick succession. They were unable to score through the entire game, though Boyle was just barely caught on an attempted steal home from third.

Duluth added one in the seventh, making the score 9 to 0, but was unable to score in the eighth.

Score by innings:

Duluth ..... 0 0 0 0 0 6 2 1 0 *—9
Brainerd ..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0

The Brainerd men played a gentlemanly game. They brought an umpire along with them, who displayed no favoritism; and Dave Paddock, who umpired for the Duluth boys, won their admiration by his excellent judgment. There wasn't a bad decision during the game, nor was there any kicking on the umpires, for which the crowd was duly thankful.

The Duluth boys go to Brainerd next Saturday. They hope to win again, though, perhaps, the Brainerd men will play a better game on their own grounds.

Before the game Saturday the hammer throw which could not be pulled off at the field meet the week before was held. Granzow '03 won the event, 96 feet 7 inches. Arthur Mallet got second with 93 feet to his credit.

It's folly to suffer from that horrible plague of the night, itching piles. Doan's Ointment cures quickly and permanently. At any drug store, 50 cents.

VISITORS ARE DINED

Handsome Banquet Given For Copper Country Business Men.

Program of Toasts, Music and Many Good Things.

Pleasing Addresses By E. L. Millar, J. Adam Bede and Others.

The copper country visitors left Duluth for home on their special train at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. It was a self-satisfied party. Everybody was glad he came, and was not at all backward about saying so. The sentiment of all Duluth people who came in contact with the Michiganders seemed to be that the visit had gone far toward making a closer and more lasting social, as well as business, acquaintance between the two sections.

The banquet at the Spalding hotel Saturday night was attended by about 300. Provision had been made for more of the guests of honor, whose ranks were added to somewhat by yesterday's train. The speakers of the evening, introduced by Toastmaster Washburn, were, for the visitors: John McLenna, of Hancock; Charles H. Kelsey, of Houghton, and John Holman, of Calumet. The Duluthians who responded to toasts in behalf of Duluth were: E. L. Millar, whose address was the principal one of the evening in point of tersely, happily and convincingly put facts about the commerce of Duluth, and J. Adam Bede and Mayor Hugo, who, against his wishes, was called upon to speed the parting guests.

Burning rolls of fragrant tobacco offered up their incense to the lofty ceiling of the Spalding dining room as Toastmaster Washburn began to explain that the false and misleading reports the papers had been printing about his ability as an orator and humorist were quite unwarranted. So serious was Mr. Washburn in behalf of his own modesty that he evidently was determined to make a presentation of the law to the court, rather than to speak of the facts in a more popular style for the jury. He got to the jury later, however, in a manner that made his presentation of the various parts of the program not the least delightful feature of the evening.

Mr. Washburn spoke of the gladness of the people of Duluth that the visitors were here, and expressed the earnest hope that they might come again and often.

John N. McLennan, who was introduced as the first spokesman of the visitors, said that when his people reached Duluth they had come firm in the Pauline faith that evidence was to be shown them of Duluth's capacity as a host. Now, he declared, the visitors had seen the evidence. He had claimed credit on arrival for the weather that they had brought with them, but he wished expressly to disclaim that they had brought any of the brand that had prevailed on Saturday. Mr. McLennan said the visitors could not have had a more cordial reception, or more generous entertainment than they had received in Duluth, which had shown its ability to fulfill every demand that might be made upon it as a host, and he believed would do so in a commercial way.

P. Doran had to sing three tenor solos about "Just Dropping it in the Bowl," "The Man that Threw the Brick at McCarthy," and other things, before the crowd would let him retire, and then the concession was not at all unanimous.

E. L. Millar was introduced as a man who had been elsewhere than Duluth, and he said he recalled that he had spent one day in the copper country, a day that had been rendered memorable to him because he had been shown so many altitudinous points in the topography of Houghton and Hancock. The Almighty had created the heaven and the earth, he said, and then He set up the copper country, and then Duluth. "And this is about all we care to know about it," he added.

Mr. Millar, in regretting the fog that obscured the visitors' view from the Boulevard drive, took occasion to paint a word picture of what they would have seen. This half-fanciful phrasing of work-a-day things and occurrences evoked much applause. With this as provocation, Mr. Miller passed on to some brief allusions to the growth of Duluth in a commercial way. His facts were clothed in new form and driven home with homely illustration and amusing story. He spoke of the increase in the number of commercial travelers for Duluth houses to 273 of the "brightest and keenest, most lively and most loyal trade getters in this land." Duluth jobbers, he said, were always looking upward and onward, always reaching out for new fields and new friends. The commercial interests of Duluth thanked the business men of the copper country for their past consideration, and invited an increasing continuance for the future.

"Come often," he said, "stay as long as you like and above all do not forget us."

Mr. Holman, of Calumet, and Mr. Cheadle then briefly voiced their thanks for the entertainment afforded, and C. H. Kelsey, editor of the Houghton Mining Gazette, was introduced as a newspaper man who never failed when all else did.

Mr. Kelsey said that the newspaper men of the upper peninsula had been so busy writing speeches for other people for so many years that they had neglected the art themselves. He had been greatly interested in the prophecies of Duluth that he had heard, but he was inclined to believe from what Mr. Millar had said that that future had already arrived. The people of the copper country were proud of their section. It was by nature the richest part of that rock-ribbed and mineral-muscled state. Houghton county was assessed as the second richest county in the Wolverine commonwealth. Concluding, Mr. Kelsey said he was glad to apostrophize "blessed be the tie that binds." He would drink to Duluth, the South Shore road and the copper country, "may their prosperity be one and indivisible."

Several selections by a double quartet under direction of Jens Flaaten pleased the guests very much, and then J. Adam Bede was introduced by Mr. Washburn with a humorous allusion to his congressional candidacy. He said that Mr. Bede was particularly interested just now in his subject for the evening, "Love One Another,' especially in its application to the voters of the district.

Mr. Bede dilated upon the desirability of loving one another. He declared that he had long worked in that behalf, and admitted that sometimes 'you have to kick people to make them love one another." He linked the refreshments of the evening with the weather in the philosophic remark that "one swallow does not make a summer here." He spoke of the profit and satisfaction that were to be gained through the application of "love one another" in trade. Two hardware houses had been found, he said to bring more business here than one; so they had concluded to get along in peace and happiness. Two wholesale groceries had had the same experience, and now another had come into the charmed circle. "They have learned to stop hating themselves," he said, and to cultivate the interest of their customers individually. Speaking of his candidacy for congress, Mr. Bede said his plan had been to just go along and vaccinate the voters, so the "next fellow's talk wouldn't take."

"Duluth will grow on you," said Mr. Bede to the visitors. "You'll have to come back to appreciate it. What you see here now is only a skeleton of what the future is to bring us."

He made the prophecy in speaking of the necessity of developing closer trade relations with Canada that "in twenty-five years the No. 1 hard wheat will be raised in Canada instead of the United States." The farming country around Duluth was sure to be more productive in earning power to the acre than the Red River valley, because the things that could be raised on this soil were needed right at home. "Let us love one another, join hands and go and do this thing of building up our cities according to the possibilities that await us here," concluded Mr. Bede.

Some clever character impersonations by R. H. Cox, a flute solo by A. Hoelscher, a recitation by Tom Will, and a brief godspeed by Mayor Hugo concluded the evening. Mr. Hugo reiterated the hope expressed in his address of welcome that this would be the precursor of many more visits of the kind, which would develop a closer friendship and a bond of sympathy that would result in both working together for common interests.

The Pay of Letter Carriers.

As an illustration of the results that may be accomplished by persistent and thorough work, it is reported from Washington that the petitions that have been filed in the house asking congress to pass a bill increasing the pay of letter carriers were exceeded only by those calling for favorable action on the scheme to build warships at the navy yards. Despite this tremendous outside influence it is very doubtful if the measure will be passed. It may not even be considered by the postoffice committee. Chairman Loud of the postoffice committee, has been fairly bombarded with letters asking him to pass the bill. But up to this time all these demands have been ignored. A hearing was given to some of the advocates of one of the pending bills by the postoffice committee some time ago, but after listening to the arguments in favor of the measure, the committee let the matter drop. Chairman Loud said in relation to the prospects of the passage of one of the bills for the carriers, that it was impossible for him to say, that he did not know what the committee thought of the proposition, and that he did not know whether or not any of the bills for this purpose would be taken up at this session. It is very apparent that Chairman Loud is opposed to the scheme to increase the pay of letter carriers, and it is said that he believes that they are better paid than the men of the railway mail service. One of the members of the postoffice committee is circulating a petition among the other members of the committee, asking the chairman to call a special meeting to take up one of the pending bills. It is known that this move is being frowned upon by several of the influential members of the committee. Chairman Loud says that the postoffice department has not committed itself in regard to any of the propositions looking to the increase of the salaries of the carriers. It is believed that unless the administration takes up the matter and decides to make a party measure of the scheme, nothing whatever will be done by congress.

Education Test For Immigrants.

It is possible that an educational feature will be incorporated in the immigration bill when it becomes a law.

An amendment to this effect has passed the house and with many in the senate favorable to it, there seems to be a pretty fair chance of its enactment into law. This proposal has always been turned down heretofore and its passage is a good deal of a surprise. If it becomes a law it will mean much additional work for the treasury department and doubtless require an increase of force in the inspection department. The treasury department now does a good deal of deporting of other immigrants than Chinese, if discovered to have crossed the border or otherwise slipped into the country without submitting to the statutory tests, and to have had the purpose, in so doing, of evading the law. Suspects in such cases have now to be arrested on a warrant sworn out before a court of competent jurisdiction. If such a law as is aimed at were enacted, this formality would not need to be observed. Arrests and deportations could be made in pursuance of treasury regulations. Enforcement would be pretty difficult, nevertheless. The evidence that a person is diseased or a pauper, or has come into the country under contract can be collected without much difficulty. His bodily condition is liable to attract attention in one case, his police record in another, and his occupation in a third; but how is an able-bodied, industrious, law-abiding self supporting man to be picked out by his appearance as unable to read, if he has the shrewdness to avoid those situations which are likely to put his powers to the test? A considerable increase of force in the inspection and examining departments of immigration will be made necessary if this legislation goes through, and the appropriation will have to be correspondingly enlarged. It would be well worth the additional expense, however. With the educational restriction in force a great many undesirable immigrants would be excluded and the country would be much better off.

A STRIKING ADDRESS.

The most striking addition to Oriental trade literature is the recent address of William M. Bunker before the United States house committee on irrigation. Mr. Bunker discussed the inter-dependence of irrigation and the Oriental trade, and demonstrated the inevitable absorption, by the Orientals, of any possible food-stuff surplus of the far West. He said the Oriental demand for American food-stuffs is steadily increasing; the Orientals, in several localities, prefer flour to rice, and the increased tonnage in the trade between the Pacific coast and the Orient will develop an immense market for our food-stuffs. With this unlimited market at our western doors, any increased food-stuff output resulting through the reclamation of the arid lands, will be actively absorbed.

Having visited and crossed Asia as the representative of the chamber of commerce of San Francisco, in order to personally study the Oriental market, and that he might gauge the influence of the trans-Siberian railway on Pacific coast interests. Mr. Bunker is thoroughly equipped for the discussion of his vital subject. His commercial story is more than interesting and instructive—it is tremendously suggestive. It mirrors, with obvious fidelity, a situation that hitherto has been only imperfectly seen. After grasping the facts and figures of Mr. Bunker's argument, and noting the actual increase in Pacific ocean tonnage, even the most casual observer must realize that the surplus food-stuffs of the far West will naturally and necessarily represent a large portion of the freight forwarded to the Orient. Mr. Bunker presents a vivid picture of the marvelous possibilities of American trade on the Pacific, and shows that irrigation will contribute largely thereto. Incidentally, Mr. Bunker shows how fuel oil is cheapening Pacific ocean transportation.

DECLINE OF THE SURPLUS.

It looks now as though the annual surplus of the treasury would be reduced to $75,000,000, a figure of ample proportions for all probable purposes. Several reasons are given to explain why the surplus promises to drop off this year in the face of apparently favorable conditions. The first is that the wiping out of the war taxes will be felt by that time. In fact, the treasury is already affected by the lopping off of these revenues, although the entire part of the law has not yet gone into effect. The treasury is losing at the rate of $60,000,000 a year from the operation of the repeal of the stamp taxes alone, and when the tax is taken off of beer and tobacco the total loss is apt to be considerably more than was estimated by the treasury officials.

When the senate wiped out the last of the war taxes, it did so on the understanding that the bill would take off about $70,000,000 of revenues. If the reports of the first month under the operation of the new law can be taken as a criterion, the reduction in the revenues will be way beyond $70,000,000 when all the provisions of the act are in force. For instance, the internal revenue receipts for the month of April, 1901, were $26,941,579.52. In April of this year, when the stamp taxes had been repealed, the receipts were $21,937,699.46, a falling off of more than $5,000,000, or at the rate of $60,000,000 a year. Beginning with July 1 the more important reduction in the tax on beer and tobacco will go into effect. The beer tax will drop to $1 a barrel from $1.60 a barrel, and tobacco will be taxed at the rate of 6 cents a pound. The receipts from beer are now running along at about the rate of $80,000,000 a year, so that the lowering of the tax will take off about $25,000,000. If this be added to the decline of $60,000,000 from the documentary and other taxes, it will make the total for the year something like $80,000,000 or $90,000,000. Of course, the greatest falling off in internal revenue receipts at this time is noted in Schedule A, which relates to documentary stamps.

By a special provision of the recent law tea is to be placed on the free list on and after Jan. 1. The duty at present is 10 cents a pound, having been imposed as a war measure. It is considered high enough to cause many importers to hold up shipments in order to get advantage of the new law in January. There has been a pronounced falling off in the customs receipts from tea, and this will continue until January next. This is an item that must be taken into consideration in estimating the probable surplus on July 1. In view of the facts above represented, treasury officials are saying that the surplus at the close of the current fiscal years will not amount to more than $75,000,000, and it may be less.

The ill effects of a huge surplus were apparent in the contraction of the currency last year, which, however, was overcome by the purchase of bonds. A fat treasury is a good thing, but there is a limit, and it is pleasing to know that by the repeal of war taxes the amount will be reduced to a reasonable figure.

The Salt Lake Herald declares that 100 converts to Mormonism were baptized in Ohio in 1901, over 200 in Pennsylvania, and over 1300 in the Southern states. This does not look like progress. And an interesting fact is that Mormons are never reconverted to their old faith or lack of faith. Once a Mormon always a Mormon. In 1870 Utah contained 88,374 inhabitants, of whom 80,000 were Mormons. In 1890 the population was 276,740, 220,000 being Mormons. There are now more than 300,000 adherents of the strange feith in the United States. As a missionary religion Mormonism is worth studying. Whatever may be its vices, it certainly has the virtue of pushing, aggressive life.

The last monthly report of the Massachusetts board of health shows an examination of eighty-five drug samples, and thirty-five, or 41.1 per cent, were either adulterated or not up to standard. Among the samples found under standard were: Chloroform, lime water, olive oil, oil lemon, precipitated sulphur, phosphate of soda, tincture iodine and laudanum. The board prosecuted Arthur J. Connor, of Boston, for selling quinine pills which contained only 70 per cent of the amount of quinine stated on the label.

Some of the Eastern papers are again talking of ex-Czar Reed for the Republican nomination for the presidency and various stories are being told regarding his career as speaker. It is related that once, when he had declared a motion by Representative Springer to adjourn out of order, the Illinois congressman indignantly asked: "When will a motion to adjourn be in order?" To which the speaker replied, in his cynical drawl: "It will be in order at the proper time."

"I hope it is unnecessary for me to say that no one in the country can be more anxious than I am to discover and punish every instance of barbarity by our troops in the Philippines." Thus writes President Roosevelt in answer to an address of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts. Evidently the president means what he says. His actions have proven it, as is shown by his prompt order to courtmartial Gen. "Jake" Smith.

What does the present Republican congress intend to do with regard to legislation regulating the trusts that raise the prices of the necessaries of life? By the record of the present congress will the Republican party be judged in the coming campaign. Fair promises will not be acceptable. The people want action—and they want it now.

A good story comes from Kansas. Some friend of the family sent a notice to the Abilene Reflector saying that an "8-lb boy" had been born to Mrs. Blank. All the editor could make out of it was that the "8-th boy" had been born to Mrs. Blank, and thus he printed it. And the Blanks, who had been married but one year, have been raising cain about it ever since.

A curious example of political wrongheadedness is the organization in England of the Industrial Freedom league. The purpose is to fight public ownership of public utilities. So far as England is concerned, this looks much like locking the stable door after the horse is stolen. The movement toward municipal ownership is so strong that resistance is hardly practical.

The Chicago Chronicle in an outburst of indignation says: "If a census could be taken it would undoubtedly show that there are in this city more snarling, yelping, dangerous curs than inhabit the city of Constantinople, which is notorious for its canine population."

A COQUETTE.

I am never in doubt of her goodness,
I am always afraid of her mood,
I am never quite sure of her temper,
For wilfulness runs in her blood.
She is sweet with the sweetness of springtime—
A tear and a smile in an hour—
Yet I ask not release from her slightest caprice,
My love with the face of a flower.

My love with the grace of a lily
That sways on its slender fair stem,
My love with the bloom of the rosebud
White pearls in my life's diadem!
You may cau her coquette if it please you,
Enchanting, if shy, or if bold,
Is my darling, my winsome wee lassie,
Whose birthdays are three, when all told.

Cinch of the Coal Barons.

Chicago Chronicle: Let no one believe that the coal barons are worrying over the situation. For every dollar they are losing by the strike they will exact two from the consumer when they see fit to resume operations. In the meantime they are turning an honest dollar by "rigging" the stock market.

"How can he be dangerous? He seldom bothers anybody after that except the undertaker."

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: "What's this small space on the map near your state marked 'R. I.?' inquired the foreigner.

"That," replied the facetious New Yorker, "should be R. I. P., but the place is so small there was no room for the 'P.'"

Washington Star: "Do you like poetry?"

"Yes, indeed," answered Mrs. Cumrox. "Prose always looks to me as if they were crowding their words together because they were trying to economize on paper. Poetry looks much lavisher and elegant."

Atlanta Constitution: "That ain't law," said the attorney to the Billville justice.

Philadelphia Press: "How about the plans for your new house; have they been drawn up to suit you yet?"

"Well, no; but they suit my wife."

"How many rooms is it to have?"

"I don't know. The architect's busy now trying to figure out how many rooms he can build around the twenty-four big closets my wife demands."

BOAST AND PRACTICE.

Unity: Henry M. Simmons in his paper before the Western Unitarian conference last week gave forth no uncertain sound concerning the contradictions between the Christian boast and the Christian practice. He said:

Men say that Christ was 'Very God,' but we need not obey him. His commands about property are infallible; but if you keep them the very church will call you a fool. His commands about brotherhood are Divine; but if you apply them to our dealings with other nations the very clergy will denounce you as a traitor. They say he ordered us to love our enemies, but we may loot them. He bade us offer the cheek to those who smite us, but we may bombard and blow into shreds those who have not smitten us. He ordered us to forgive the offender four hundred and ninety times, but we must not forgive those who are only defending their own land and families. So we send a great army into foreign lands where it has no more right to be than a Russian army has in Illinois; we brand as "rebels" those who try to protect their wives and daughters against it; we torture them with the "water cure," burn their towns, butcher their children "above the age of 10," and then, if there are any left, we shall send missionaries to teach them how we adore the Christ who forbade all these crimes and died to prevent them. I, too, have kept Good Friday every day for the last four years; not for Christ's brief crucifixion by ancient unbelievers, but for his continual crucifixion by Christendom itself; not for a harmless burial from which he rose right away, but for this infinitely sadder burial from which he has not risen yet, and from which there is so little sign that the church even wants him to rise.

Rewards of Hard Luck.

Washington Post: Perhaps the beef trust will explain its English prices by making liberal use of the sympathy idea. England has been having hard luck of late.

LULLABY.

Hushed is the house now, and silent the drum;
Stilled is the tin bugle's ringing;
Steadfastly, softly the Sand Man has come;
Silenced the wild thrush's singing;
But sweeter than song of the sweetest-voiced bird
The soft good-night song of a mother is heard:
Lullaby, laddie!
Lullaby, dear!
Sleep, little sweetheart, for mother is near!
The birdies all sleep in their nests up on high;
The stars and the moon are on guard in the sky;
Lullaby, laddie dear!
Hush! Lullaby!

The maimed woolen dog lies at rest on the floor
Where the Noah's ark travelers are scattered;
The train is derailed and wrecked there by the door,
Its gay-painted coaches all battered;
And silence o'er all, for the world is at rest;
Just the low mother voice to the child on her breast;
Lullaby, laddie!
Hush, little dear!
Sleep, weary playmate, for mother is here!
The birdies, too, rest in their cradles on high;
The stars and the moon keep their watch in the sky;
Lullaby, laddie dear!
Hush! Lullaby!

A Patriot Overlooked.

Chicago Chronicle: We fail to discover in the plan of policy mapped out by President Palma of Cuba and provision for the employment at the highest salary of that grand old patriot Maximo Gomez. As it is pretty well understood, however, that Maximo received a comfortable sum from the United States government upon condition that he would refrain from stirring up the "army of liberation" to rebellion against the American provisional government, he will probably be able to live in moderate comfort until his services are desired by some other band of patriots striking for freedom. There will be quite a cold snap in Cuba when Maximo overlooks his financial interests.

Promotion In the Navy.

Louisville Courier Journal: There is a sentiment in some quarters in favor of a provision in the naval appropriation bill for the promotion of warrant officers to commissioned rank. This sentiment is sound, and ought to be strong enough to accomplish its object. The present snobbish regulations against such promotions are unworthy of a democracy.

Spain's Retiring Queen.

Baltimore American: The most pathetic figure of the hour is that of the queen regent of Spain. After a regency which has seen many troubles and not a few storms, in which the colonial importance of Spain has been wiped out, she leaves the throne to the care of a boy when it is surrounded by dangers within and without, at a time when the most careful and experienced guide is needed to handle the reins of government. She has given an example of motherly devotion which the whole world appreciates, but which has not been able to avert all cause for the motherly anxiety which must still follow the advent to power of the young king.

When Man Proposes

By Angela Morgan.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

Philip Andrews had fully decided to propose. It was during business hours, in the very midst of the hum and buzz of the office, that this resolve came to him.

With Andrews resolve meant execution. Whenever he could fashion his thoughts into a fixed purpose the carrying out of the purpose was inevitable.

And so, having absolutely made up his mind, he felt suddenly conscious of a mighty relief. The relief developed into buoyant enthusiasm, as, with the day's progress, he conceived radiantly definite ideas concerning the wording of the proposal itself.

Andrews had now such an exalted sense of security that he wondered at his former doubts and tremors with regard to Miss Lansing. What a fool he had been to hesitate so long!

Pshaw! The thing would be easy enough.

On next Tuesday evening when he should call he would present the matter to her clearly, calmly and with the admirable self-poise which had somehow become a natural possession since he decided upon his course.

On Wednesday he attributed the nervous action of his heart to the fact that his breakfast had disagreed with him.

On Thursday he told himself that the unseasonably warm wave with its dusty accompaniment of sultry wind was responsible for his dry mouth and feverish pulse.

He struggled manfully through dinner that evening and after it was over went up to his room with a splendid assumption of bravery to get out his clothes preparatory to dressing.

It might have been wiser had he gone to the barber on this occasion instead of trying to shave himself. But as he was desperately resolute not to recognize the fact that his nerves were shaky he proceeded to apply lather and razor with his accustomed confidence. Several small but unsightly gashes rewarded his attempts.

Neither swearing nor court plaster availed much to improve his appearance. But Andrews, now submerged, was determined to carry out his resolution. There were some compensations. His cravat set exceedingly well and a white vest was always becoming.

It was rather late when he mounted the steps of Miss Lansing's home and rang the bell.

At the sound of the electric peal an unaccountable trembling seized his knees and a most unfriendly perspiration threatened the immaculate suffness of his collar.

As the maid admitted him he heard at once the sound of laughter and chat in the room beyond. There were other callers!

A wave of relief, for which he hated himself the next moment, rushed over Andrews. Strength returned once more to his shaking limbs.

Miss Lansing, bewildering in a new frock of some fluffy, inexplicable materiau, floated into the hall with a sweetly pleasant greeting.

The saving consciousness of those other presences was by sustained Andrews. He felt a wonderful sense of self-possession as he removed his overcoat. He even trusted himself to meet fully the sparkling glance of her wide, violet eyes. Clara Lansing's eyes had somehow always daunted him. But just now he was superior to any such tremors or uncertainties. He mentally congratulated himself on this victory.

Miss Lansing's voice in a smooth undertone recalled him. "You've come just in time to hear Celeste sing once more before she goes. Fred Knowles is here and will play for her. I made them wait till you came. They can't stay but a few minutes longer."

Andrews felt the ague coming on again and braced himself by desperately setting his teeth.

He had a chance to compose himself thoroughly while Celeste sang and Fren Knowles played. Apparently they had forgotten their other engagement. Song after song she sang and then Fred unfortunately recollected several instrumental selections. Would they never take it into their heads to go?

Andrews began to feel a distinct resentment. He had come here on a special mission tonight. The idea of two conceited musicians frustrating his plans!

The longer he stayed the more furious did his resolution become. He would propose to Clara Lansing tonight though all the powers of the universe combined to prevent him!

Just as he reached this decision Celeste and Fred rose to go. Andrews' heart beats became suddenly suffocating.

Miss Lansing accompanied her friends into the hall, where they all stood chatting and laughing their goodbyes.

Andrews, on his lonely divan, heard the outer door close at last. Then the returning rustle of Clara's dress sounded through the hall. His head swam.

She came in singing and sat down near him.

His resolve recreated precipitately to such remote perspective as to be a mere vanishing point in the distance.

He raised his eyes heroically and met the tantalizing blue of hers. The vanishing point dissolved ignominiously into space.

It was too late now to ever think of such a thing. Next time would be more propitious, no doubt.

Despising himself heartily, yet unable to combat the helplessness that had seized him, Andrews rose to go.

"Must you——?"

"Yes; it is very late."

Mentally consigning himself to unnamable regions, loathing his miserable cowardice, he slowly and heavily drew on his overcoat.

"Good night."

"Good night."

He opened the door upon a moonlight-flooded vestibule.

"Oh!" she cried impulsively, "isn't it beautiful? Think what we have missed by staying indoors!"

He turned and looked at her. Was the moon alone responsible for the transformation? The teasing blue eyes had melted into a marvelous sweetness. The witching face was upturned to his. She looked so child-like, so altogether adorable.

Andrews will never be able to explain just how it happened. His arms went suddenly about her of their own accord. Miracle of miracles! She did not resist.

In the ecstacy of the moment his carefully planned speech was entirely forgotten. However, as Clara Lansing seemed to understand perfectly without words, he made no effort to recall it.

GIRL KILLED.

Young Man Commits Murder In a Georgia Church.

Atlanta, Ga., May 26.—Five or six hundred men are searching the country adjacent to this city for Millard Lee, 20 years old, the son of a well-to-do farmer, who Sunday shot and killed Miss Lilla Suttle, a young woman of 19, at Wesley chapel, Mount Gilead camp grounds, miles from Atlanta.

Just as the minister had finished the benediction and before any of the worshippers had left the church, Lee, who was sitting behind Miss Suttle, leaned forward and fired at her. The first ball entered her back, but no vital part was reached and an instant later Lee fired again, killing the girl instantly. While the churchgoers stood astonished Lee backed out of the door and started for the woods. On the way he met a man named Chindress to whom he confessed the murder and asked Chindress to take the revolver and kill him. Chindress paid no attention to the young man and passed on.

Lee went next to his father's house, where he again told the story of his tragedy and securing $100, started away. As soon as the worshippers at the chapel realized what had happened they made an endeavor to capture the assailant but he had escaped. Several posses were soon organized and a call sent in for bloodhounds. Dr. John Suttle, father of the murdered girl, heads one of the posses while his son directs another.

Miss Suttle had refused Lee's attentions, it is said, because she considered herself above him socially.

AT THE HOTELS

Manager Butchart said this morning that he did not expect to be able to use the first two floors of the new addition to the St. Louis before June 10 or 15. The work is well along, and the contractor agrees to be out by the middle of next week, but Mr. Butchart says so many little things occur at the last moment to delay the completion of the new hotel property that he has become conservative. The interior painting remains to be done, and baths and lights in the new rooms are all still to be connected up.

R. R. Goodell, of Houghton, is at the Spalding. Mr. Goodell represents the English interests that own a large part of Isle Royale, and is here to close the sale of the log club house at Washington Harbor to George C. Howe, George G. Barnum and others, and also to close some other deals for cottage cites. He said this morning that three or four cottages for Duluth parties were already building at Washington Harbor.

"I have also a deal for a site for a summer resort hotel at Rock Harbor, a very picturesque harbor on the southeast side of Isle Royale, facing Upper Michigan. The intending builder of this hotel is a Rock Island, Ill., man, who is not in any way connected with the hay fever association. Capt. Singer tells me he has made arrangements for the building of a hotel at Washington Harbor, and it begins to seem as if we had at last made a fair start toward having Isle Royale's claims as a summer resort appreciated in a fair degree."

J. M. Finkbone, a Chicago real estate man, is stopping at the McKay. He thinks of locating in Duluth.

Frank B. Cox, a Utica, N. Y., traveling man, carries enough baggage to wardrobe a theater stock company, if it were all costumes. He pays excess baggage on twelve trunks of samples. He is a guest at the St. Louis.

C. W. Bunn, general counsel of the Northern Pacific road for many years, came up from St. Paul this morning. He is at the Spalding.

Joseph Bourassan, a Baraga, Mich., lumberman, is at the McKay.

At the Spalding today are A. Scelig, Milwaukee; T. T. French, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; D. H. Syme and wife, Greenwood, Wis.; Max Reichelman, St. Louis; G. A. W. Dodge, Boston; C. H. Cook, Minneapolis; E. M. Kidder, Chicago; H. E. Whaley, St. Paul, and Frank H. Frear, Minneapolis.

Recent arrivals at the McKay include: D. J. Murphy, St. Paul; Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Brown, St. Paul; N. H. Yale, Minneapolis; Elizabeth Wheelwright and Lillian Mae Crawford, King Dramatic company; A. Hallam, Vermillion, S. D.; A. F. Macdonald, Hancock; Albert Robert, New York, and John Stephenson, Two Harbors.

LEFT FORTUNE

To a Rooster---Curious Will of Portuguese Woman.

London, May 26.—A wealthy woman of the name of Silva, who died recently in Lisbon, Portugal, left her entire property to a rooster. The woman was a firm believer in the transmigration of souls. She imagined that the soul of her dead husband had entered the body of the rooster, therefore she caused a special fowl house to be built for the bird, and ordered the servants to pay particular attention to their master's wants. She was extremely jealous of the hens, and whenever one of them was found coquetting with Pedro, as the cock was called, its neck was wrung. The disgust of the relatives when the old lady's will was disclosed was great, and a lawsuit would have followed if one of the heirs had not adopted the simple expedient of having the wealthy fowl killed, and thus becoming the next in succession.

FOREST FIRES RAGE.

Salida, Col., May 26.—The worst forest fires in the history of the mountains of the continental divide are raging in the collegiate range and the Sangre De Cristo. The fires can be seen from this city. The water supply and grazing grounds will be materially injured and the loss of timber will aggregate a vast sum.

DISAPPROVED

Is Finding of Court Martial In Waller Case.

Manila, May 26.—The official findings of the court-martial which tried Maj. L. W. T. Waller and Lieut. John A. Day, of the marine corps, for executing natives of the island of Samar without trial, have been made public. The reviewing authority of the court has expressed its disapproval of the court's finds in both cases.

Referring to the case of Maj. Waller, the reviewing authority says: "The sending of the natives in question to their death partook more of unlawful retaliation than a justifiable act of war. In justice to the American military service the findings of acquittal demand that they shall not meet with unqualified approval.

"The marines in Samar underwent great suffering before their rescue, and their officers, from their sick beds, voiced the revengeful anger of the men, who felt ashamed to Maj. Waller advising that the stevedores be killed. Maj. Waller received this message while he was sick, prostrate from a fever, suffering acute pain of body due to exposure and his exertions in behalf of his men, and mental anguish concerning their fate which had long been in doubt. Maj. Waller was at the time in telephonic communication with Gen. Smith, who commanded the American forces in Samar, but he deliberately chose not to consult Gen. Smith regarding his contemplated action, and, rather than forego the execution of his unrestrained will, he assumed the power the laws of war and the customs of the service confer upon commanding officers only in time of war.

"Giving heed to the mental attitude of Maj. Waller, as much of the findings of the court as are to the effect that Maj. Waller is not guilty of murder are approved. But the reviewing authority is at a loss to understand why the court did not find against Maj. Waller in the minor offense. With the exception noted, the acquittal, as it appears in the record of the proceedings, is disapproved."

Referring to the case of Lieut. Day, the reviewing authority says:

"The accused knew that for three weeks Maj. Waller had undergone a test of his mental and physical endurance such as few men are called upon to suffer.

"While fully conceding the grave responsibility assumed by a subordinate officer in wilfully disobeying an order of his commanding officer, still, the weighty reasons related with which Lieut. Dal was acquainted, so tainted Maj. Waller's order that Lieut. Day should have been prompted to positive disobedience. An officer must be conscientiously regardful of the unquestioned legality of his agency in taking the lives of his fellow men. Above and beyond all personal considerations, officers must guard the name and honor of the country. Had Lieut. Day been actuated by such considerations, he would probably have prevented one of the most regrettable incidents in the annals of the military service of the United States."

MYSTERIOUS

Shooting of David Hill, Wealthy Real Estate Owner.

Chicago, May 26.—Daniel Hill, a wealthy real estate owner of Morris, Ill., and partner in the firm of George H. Phillips company on the Chicago board of trade, was shot and seriously wounded early yesterday as he lay in bed at his residence, 797 Monroe street. Six shots were fired, three taking effect, one behind the left ear, one entering his nose and the other shattering his right arm. Considerable mystery surrounds the shooting. According to Mrs. Hill, she and her husband were asleep when Mr. Hill was awakened by the forcing of a lock on the bedroom door. He reached for his revolver, but before he could use it three men rushed into the room and fired at him. The first shot awoke Mrs. Hill and she rushed to the window and shouted for help. The police responded in a few minutes, but in the meantime the supposed burglars had made their escape.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Filbridge, West Cornwell, Conn.

A RAVING MANIAC

Back to Asylum Where He Was Superintendent.

Kankakee, Ill., May 26.—Dr. Emett Enos, formerly superintendent of the hospital for the insane here, has become a raving maniac. He is guarded by three trained attendants, and the physicians in consultation over his case believe the hospital he formerly directed will be the best place for him in the future.

When Dr. Enos resigned last February to take up practice at his home in Herscher, near here, he discussed his case with his assistants, foretold exactly what would develop, and said that he feared that there was no hope for his recovery, so, under the circumstances, he thought he had best leave the hospital and take up less burdensome duties.

Dr. Enos' mother, who is a resident of Chicago, is with her son, and it is supposed arrangements are being made for his commitment as an insane patient to the hospital where he formerly acted as chief of medical staff. Dr. Enos is 35 years old and a graduate of Rush Medical college.

Burns, cuts and other wounds often become troublesome sores. Even where delay has aggravated such injuries De-Witt's Witch Hazel Salve effects a cure. Cures all skin diseases. Piles yield to it at once. Max Wirth.

Parents' Responsibility Great

It is the right of every child to be well born, and to the parents it must look for health and happiness. How inconceivably great is the parents' responsibility, and how important that no taint of disease is left in the blood to be transmitted to the helpless child, entailing the most pitiable suffering, and marking its little body with offensive sores and eruptions, catarrh of the nose and throat, weak eyes, glandular swellings, brittle bones, white swelling and deformity.

How can parents look upon such little sufferers and not reproach themselves for bringing so much misery into the world? If you have any disease lurking in your system, how can you expect well developed, healthy children? Cleanse your own blood and build up your health, and you have not only enlarged your capacity for the enjoyment of the pleasures of life, but have discharged a duty all parents owe to posterity, and made mankind healthier and happier.

There is no remedy that so surely reaches deep-seated, stubborn blood troubles as S. S. S. It searches out even hereditary poisons, and removes every taint from the blood, and builds up the general health. If weaklings are growing up around you, right the wrong by putting them on a course of S. S. S. at once. It is a purely vegetable medicine, harmless in its effects, and can be taken by both old and young without fear of any bad results.

LYNCHED BY A MOB

Murderer of William Grow Hanged to a Bridge.

Was Taken From Paris Jail After Some Difficulty.

Murderer Made a Full Confession Before His Death.

Paris, Mo., May 26.—Abe Wiltherup, a white man, the murderer of William Grow, who was killed last month, was taken from the Paris jail at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, marched to the bridge on the north edge of the town and hanged by a mob of more than 100 men who rode quietly into town at midnight.

The mob went at once to the jail and were held back for more than an hour by Sheriff James W. Clark and Deputies Martin Clark and Polk Masterson, who stood before the entrance to the jail stockade and threatened to shoot the first man who attempted to force an entrance. The mob remained in front of the jail for nearly two hours parlying with the officers and finally marched away. The officers remained on guard, but believed the mob had disbanded. About 2 o'clock several men approached and engaged the sheriff and his deputies in conversation. Then suddenly, before the officers could defend themselves, they were seized, disarmed and carried away. The mob then quickly reappeared surrounded the jail and with sledge hammers battered down the big iron doors. James B. Whitecotton, state representative, rushed into the jail as soon as the doors gave way and made a stirring appeal to the mob to desist and allow the law to take its course. The leaders wavered for a moment and became quiet, and would probably have spared the prisoner's life, but for the piteous cries of vengeance sent up by those in the rear. Mr. Whitecotton was swept aside and in a few minutes Wiltherup was secured. The prisoner made no resistance and in reply to questions confessed his guilt. The father and brother of the victim were in the mob and assisted in escorting the man to the bridge a quarter of a mile away. At the bridge Wiltherup's feet were tied by the brother of the murdered man, while the senior Grow adjusted the rope around his neck, and pushed him off the structure. Wiltherup's neck was broken by the fall. His death was almost instantaneous.

This work done, the mob left the body hanging and dispersed quickly and quietly.

Coroner Johnson cut the body down this morning.

Wiltherup before his death made a full confession. He said the killing which took place four weeks ago, was the result of a quarrel over a piece of land the two men were farming together. Wiltherup attack Grow one night as he lay abed, splitting his head open with a hatchet. He then hauled the body to the Salt river and dumped it in. Wiltherup was 55 years old, and Grow only 21.

"GENIE" BASHFORD.

Actress Is Again In the Matrimonial Harness.

Cincinnati, May 26.—Eugenia Bashford, a pretty Cincinnati girl whose grandfather was a Methodist minister and lived on Dayton street here for years, is reported in the Eastern papers to have again taken unto herself a husband. In fact, if the rumor is true, Miss Bashford has taken back her former hubby, who deserted her some time ago and secured a divorce in Utah. The young man is Harold Tonken, the son of a millionaire manufacturer of Oswego, N. Y. At the time of the first marriage "Genie" Bashford, as she was known here in the days that her striking beauty and soulful eyes used to play havoc with susceptible admirers on Fourth street of a bright sunny afternoon, was a member of the chorus at Weber and Fields. The marriage was a secret one, but young Tonken's parents took him immediately in charge, and there was some talk of a suit for damages being filed by "Genie," but nothing ever came of it.

Of late the former Mrs. Tonken, Jr., has been playing the part of the beautiful bride in Lafayette's illusion, "The Lion's Bride." According to report young Tonken saw his wife in this act in Philadelphia recently and met her after the show. The old love came over them again, and they are said to have secretly repaired to the parsonage and for the second time became man and wife. The young couple returned to gay Gotham, and young Tonken went home to break the news. It is said that there was a scene, and that the wealthy father of the young man has cut him off entirely, and threatens to disinherit him.

"Genie" Bashford, before she went East and became a chorus girl, was well known here, being one of the most stunning girls in the daily promenade on the down-town streets. She has had other marital experience, as she was the divorced wife of a popular young salesman living in Avondale before she went on the stage.

THREATS MADE

Against a Judge If He Sentenced a Man.

Elizabeth, W. Va., May 26.—A sensational feature of this term of court was brought out by Judge Tavener in rendering his opinion on the motion to quash the venire facias and discharge the jury in the case of Samuel Sheppard, sentenced to be hanged. An anonymous letter was picked up in front of the courthouse, directed to Judge Tavener. This letter was referred to by his honor from the bench and created a stir when it was read in open court. The correspondent threatened that if Judge Tavener did not give Sheppard a chance for his life he might be placed in the condemned man's shoes. Tavener was wrathy and made a public statement that his decisions could not be influenced by any threats.

FOR REVENGE

Politician Shoots Sister-in-Law and Suicides.

Chicago, May 26.—Because his wife had sought the protection of her relatives, Nels Johnson, a North Side politician, yesterday shot and fatally wounded Mrs. C. J. Gullacksen, his sister-in-law, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. The shooting was the outcome of the separation of Johnson and his wife, after a married life of nineteen years. Several years ago Johnson became interested in politics, and since then he has refused to work. Last week his home was sold by the sheriff, and Mrs. Johnson went to her sister's house to live. Johnson blamed Mrs. Gullacksen for the separation, and while intoxicated, and in a fit of revenge, tried to kill her.

BUNCH OF BILLS

Picked Up By a Boy In a Field.

Columbus, Ohio, May 25.—The contractor who is making the grade for the new Market street railway is anxious to lay his hands on a small boy. When the plow turned over some earth on a field between Deshler and Germania streets, a tin box, rusty with age, was thrown out. A youngster picked it up out of curiosity, and when he saw within it a big wad of bills, he suddenly disappeared. The men who caught a glimpse of the contents of the box say that there was no less than $1000 in it.

TORNADO IN SOUTH

Union, South Carolina Visited By a Furious Wind.

Six Persons Lost Their Lives and Many Injured.

Houses Were Smashed Into Kindling Wood By Gale.

Union, S. C., May 26.—Six persons were killed and several injured by a tornado which swept over this section of the state yesterday afternoon. The dead:

MISS SALLIE HART, of Union.
MISS ANNIE LAWSON, of Union.
MRS. MAXEY SIMMS, of Union.
VERA SIMMS.
MISS LAWSON, killed at Jonesboro.
One unknown.

Injured: Maxey Simms, broken fingers. Lee Simms, badly cut on head and internally injured. William Mabrey, fractured shoulder and bruised. Mrs. Mabrey, bruised. Two children of Mrs. Mabrey, slightly.

The storm came from the north. It seems there was also one from the southwest and that both met in the vicinity. The storm from the north was preceded by a heavy rain and with what appeared to be a dark mass of clouds about 100 yards wide which moved forward with great speed. One wing of the storm passed along Main street and blew in several store fronts, doing much damage to stocks.

Knitting Mill Hill, south of the town, caught the full force of the tornado, which blew down the school house and two residences there, converting them into kindling wood. The occupants ran from one of the houses before it went to pieces and took refuge in another near-by, but this house also was crushed to splinters. In this house Misses Sallie Hart and Annie Lawson were instantly killed, Mrs. Maxie Simms died in an hour, and her daughter, Vera, died about 9 o'clock. Maxey Simms escaped with broken fingers. Lee Simms received several cuts on the head from falling timbers and was internally injured.

Mr. Mabrey sustained a fractured shoulder and his leg was badly burned by a stove falling on him. He was also internally injured and may die. Mrs. Lee Simms received a bad but not fatal cut on the head. Mrs. Mabrey and her two other children escaped with slight injuries.

... took some time to get the victims from the debris.

WOMAN

Helped Whip the Man Who Had Grosely Insulted Her.

Paris, Ky., May 26.—A street encounter with highly sensational features took place in front of the East Tennessee Telephone company's office on Main street. The principals involved were Foster Berry, head operator, and Olie Steele, brother of Brice and Wallace Steele, the well-known horsemen. In the afternoon Steele called up Miss Margaret Merritt, night operator, and in course of the conversation made some remarks of a rather insulting nature.

Miss Merritt called Mr. Berry's attention to the nature of the remarks. Berry informed Steele that such conduct toward the lady operators would not be tolerated, and cut him off the line. Steele angrily threatened to do up Berry. Shortly after this Berry left the exchange and went up to Mitchell's grocery. As his return Steele came from across the street, and, meeting Berry at the entrance, struck him in the face with a heavy stick. Berry defended himself as best he could. Miss Merritt, hearing the struggle, seized a heavy monkey wrench and went to Berry's assistance.

In the melee she struck Steele a heavy blow in the face, crying out: "Kill the brute!" The screams of the operators and the noise of the fracas attracted an immense crowd. The parties were separated and went to drug stores for repairs. Berry received a severe cut over the eye, while Steele was likewise disfigured. Steele was placed under a $100 bond, with Brice Steele and W. T. Brooks as bondsmen. The affair created intense excitement and indignation.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Allie Petty, living near Arcola, Mo., shot Mrs. Friend and her daugher and then himself. Each woman was shot twice. The mother may recover, but the girl and Petty will die. Mrs. Friend had objected to Petty's attentions to her daughter.

Lorenzo Faulkner, aged 30 years, a railroad engineer, shot and killed his wife Sunday at Ogden, Utah, and then killed himself. Faulkner's wife had left him some months ago and returned to the home of her parents.

Three hundred persons were dining on the great iron pier at Rockaway Beach Sunday night when a steel girder snapped in two, causing the floor of the dining room to give way and precipitating the diners to the beach a dozen feet below. Several were severely bruised and one woman internally injured. The 20,000 persons on the board walk and in the pavilions were thrown into a panic, but no more serious results occurred.

The Detroit Tribune says: President Kilfoyl, of the Cleveland baseball team, called up James McNamara by telephone Sunday and had a long talk with him concerning La Joie. The big Frenchman has agreed to sign with Cleveland and is expected to get in on the game at Washington Monday or Tuesday. La Joie is to have a four-year contract with Cleveland.

OPPOSED

To Giving the President an Honorary Degree.

Boston, Mass., May 26.—It looks now as though President Roosevelt may not be honored with an LL.D. degree by Harvard university, his alma mater. The overseers of the university are a body of men whose leanings are for the greater part anti-imperialistic, and it is an open secret that the proposal to give the president an honorary degree has stirred up a veritable hornet's nest. Just the same kind of a dispute is on as was waged last year when it was proposed to place the name of President McKinley on the honor roll of the university.

The overseers have been busy preparing Harvard men for the shock by quietly circulating stories to the effect that when Roosevelt attends the annual commemnement in June he desires to be plain "Roosevelt," and not the president of the United States. The policy of the president has been obnoxious to many of the overseers, who think that even if Roosevelt has gained the highest office any American can hope to attain, he is hardly the style of person to whom a dignified degree should be granted. Rumor has it that even if the president were offered a degree, he is likely to refuse it.

MARKET ADVANCES

Wheat Started Out Easier But Improved In Tone.

Due to Good Export Business and Strength In Corn.

Flax Trading Very Quiet and the Market Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 26.—The wheat market started out very quiet and at slightly lower prices this morning, but the loss was soon recovered and the market ruled steady up to the noon hour. The lower cables and good growing weather for the crops caused the opening weakness. A decrease of 384,000 bus in breadstuffs on passage, good export business on Saturday and the firmness of the corn market brought about the improvement in tone. The world's shipments were 5,-232,000 bus, against 9,920,000 bus last week, but a large amount was American stuff. The Liverpool market closed ¼-⅜d lower. Paris was 1c lower.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 2,948,000 bus, against a decrease of 1,725,000 bus, a week ago and 2,340,000 bus last year. The total is now 30,669,000 bus, as compared with 40,064,000 bus, a year ago. Primary receipts of wheat were 392,000 bus, last year 577,000 bus. Shipments 780,-000 bus, last year 1,113,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 254,000 bus.

Corn in the Chicago market were considerably stronger, July advancing 3-7⅛c. Oats closed without change. The visible supply of corn decreased 573,000 bus, as compared with a decrease of 756,000 bus, a week ago and 360,000 bus last year. The total is now 4,297,000 bus, as compared with 15,329,000 bus last year. Primary receipts of corn were 436,000 bus, last year 911,000 bus. Shipments 567,000 bus, last year 787,-000 bus. Clearances of corn were 3000 bus. The world's shipments were 4,075,-000 bus, against 3,725,000 bus last week. and 5,262,000 bus last year.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 252 cars, and at Chicago 22, a total of 274 cars, against 282 last week and 471 last year.

Trading on the Duluth board was very light. The market opened ⅛-¾c off at 71⅝c, sold at 71⅝c at 9:42, at 71⅝c at 11 and held steady at that price up to the close when it stiffened a little, closing on sales at 71⅞c. This was an advance of ⅛@⅜c. Chicago advanced he same and Minneapolis ¼c.

Cash sales were 12,000 bus, at July price for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2 northern, and 3½c under for No. 3.

Flax trading was very light. Cash seed closed without change, September declined ⅜c and October advanced ½c. Cash oats fell ¼c.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opened a Shade Lower On Dull Trade.

Chicago, May 26.—July wheat opened a shade to ¼@⅜c lower at 73¼@⅜ to 73⅛@¼c on somewhat lower cables and a dull trade. Receipts were less than the corresponding days last week and a year ago, but promised better. Selling was only of a scattered nature on good growing weather. There was a good tone in corn, which, together with a decrease of 384,000 bus in breadstuffs on passage, the exceptionally good export business of Saturday and the liberal share of American stuff in the large world's shipments, pushed prices of July up to a firm position at 43½c. Local receipts were 22 cars, 5 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 252 cars, making a total for the three points of 274 cars, against 282 last week and 471 a year ago. World's shipments were 9,672,000 bus, compared to 9,960,000 bus last week.

A decrease of 2,948,000 bus in the visible wheat supply and considerable talk about too much rain for the growing crops influenced buying and short covering until July wheat sold up to 73⅝c. The close was firm, July ⅛@⅜c higher, at 73⅝@¾c.

Higher cables and small receipts started July corn ½c higher at 62⅝c. Country offerings were meagre and the local crowd had little for sale. The weather in some regions also was not so good for the crops of late. July sold up to 62¾c and steadied near that figure. Receipts were 99 cars.

Decreased stocks and fair buying by the bul crowd sent July corn up to a strong close, ¾@⅞c up, at 63@⅛c.

Oats were higher for some options on the corn advance. Receipts were larger and a fair percentage was contract grade, but commission houses bought fairly on the expectation of a squeeze in the May delivery. Trade was of good character and was fairly large early, but fluctuations were narrow. July opened unchanged at 31⅝c, dipped to 31¼c and sold later at 31⅜@⅜c. Receipts were 219 cars.

Provisions were depressed early by liberal offerings and a large run of hogs at the yards with consequent lower prices. Brokers bought fairly for support and the market steadied at the decline. July pork opened 5c down at $17, sold up 2½c and weakened to $16.97½; July lard 2½@5c lower at $10.15, and July ribs 5c off at $9.57½.

Close: Wheat—May, 74c; July, 73⅝@¾c; September, 72⅝c; December, 74c. Corn—May, 62⅞c; July, 62@⅛c; September, 60⅝c; December, 46c; May (1903), 45⅜c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market here was very quiet and on the whole steady. The lifting of the veil of visible and the strength in corn were the supporting factors. Cables continue to show a dragging tendency and the weather everywhere is favorable for the growing crop. May wheat got to a premium over July in this market, but the demand seemed to be principally from the beat-sheets. Cash business so far as reported was rather small.

Corn—The tone of this market was strong. Any improvement so far in the demand from first hands is small. It is claimed by some that this is due to wet weather. However that may be, the fact remains that the situation in corn in this market is, so far as the position is concerned, an interesting one. There is apparently a concerted holding in strong hands of a much larger amount than the visible supply and is bought for July delivery. There is also a considerable further holding for September delivery.

Buda Pesth: The official Hungarian crop report just issued shows that winter wheat is backward and that complaints of blight have been received from many districts. Summer wheat is satisfactory.

Broomhall cables: Total world's shipwere, 9,936,000 bus, against 10,320,000 bus ments of breadstuffs during the past week the previous week and 9,646,000 bus a year ago. Of the above quantity, the United Kingdom took 4,560,000 bus, against 4,440,-000 bus the previous week and 3,280,000 bus a year ago. Corn shipments were 4,613,000 bus, against 3,645 bus, the previous week, and 4,488,000 bus a year ago.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, May 26.—The wheat market after opening lower owing to large world's shipments and disappointing cables from abroad, later rallied on the large decrease in the visible and in sympathy with the strength in corn. On the advance there was more or less realizing which caused slight reaction and the market closed quiet, July ¼c, September and December practically unchanged from Saturday. Liverpool deported their market ¼d to ½d lower, depressed with large supplies. Continental markets were also lower. Cash demand here was very quiet and the seaboard reported very little demand there for export. The weather both in this country and Europe continues favorable for the growing crops. As soon as peace in South Africa is declared the British government is likely to take the tax off of grain imports into the United Kingdom. This should not affect the general situation at all. Trade was rather light all day and mostly all of a local professional character. Outside interest in the market is practically nothing. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, covering two days, 30 cars.

There was a fairly active trade in corn today and the market ruled very nervous, but firm, offerings were scarce and under local buying July advanced 1c per bus and closed ⅞c higher than Saturday night. The other fuures were more or less neglected and the bears, owing to the manipulation of July confined their trades to the September option, which month closed only ⅝c higher than Saturday. Foreign markets were firm. Liverpool closed ½@¾d higher for the day. Country offerings were fairly good, cash demand rather quiet, although sales aggregating about 150,000 bus were reported to go East. The weather generally favorable for the crop. As we said before the large concentrated holdings of July make it a dangerous proposition to sell short and until receipts become decidedly larger prices can easily be advanced. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 100 cars.

Trade in oats was light today and the market held steady within a narrow runge and no special features. July and September closed practically unchanged from Saturday night. Country offerings were fairly light, cash demand was good. The weather generally was favorable for the growing crop. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 300 cars.

Provisions opened weak on enormous receipts of hogs and material decline at the yards. Later on strength in the grain market rallied some but closed easy with declines for the day. Loaders gave some support but the next futures were very weak all day. Ten thousand hogs over the estimate with large amount left unsold and a stroke at the yards does not look very inviting to investors. Cash trade is poor and our shipments are far under last year's. We think the bulls are on the defensive and the future prices not look bright for them. Quality and quantity of hogs are better than average years and we have not average demand. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 22,000 hogs.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Bulls Ran Up Canadian Pacific But It Declined Later.

Selling Movement Carried Down St. Paul Near the Close.

Business a Little More Active, But Not Very Heavy.

New York, May 26.—The stock barket opened irregular within narrow limits, the only notable movements were in specialties. The Fuller Construction stocks continued their recent unexplained advance with gains of over a point each. A sale of 2000 shares of Canadian Pacific was made at 138 to 138¾, compared with 133¾ on Saturday and the stock subsequently dropped to below 138. There were running sales of 3000 shares of American Car at an extreme advance of ½. Colorado Fuel was rather sharply depressed. The bulls took hold of Canadian Pacific and rushed it up to 140¾. Other stocks were declining meanwhile and eventually weakened Canadian Pacific which reacted to below 138. Colorado Fuel broke 2¾ and Amalgamated, Tennessee Coal, St. Paul, Atchison, New York Central and Union Pacific from 1 to 1¾. Business was a little more active and the selling quite general. The Fuller Construction stocks lost their gain and some other specialties were quite weak. The railroad list generally lost fractions with Chicago Lake Erie & Western preferred dropped 5.

The market became quieter and leading stocks rallied. Recoveries, however, were not equal except in Brooklyn Transit and Colorado Fuel, which sold about a point above the lowest. Louisville & Nashville, Kansas City Southern, and Wabash were heavy but Missouri Pacific and Kansas & Texas were rather firm. Some minor specialties were lower. Tobacco pfd. losing 4 and Westinghouse, 3 points. The mailing stocks were bid up 1 to 2 points and the pressed steel car stocks gained about a point. North American rose 2. Rutland pfd sold 2½ above the preceding sale. By midday the railroad list was showing weakness again under the lead of St. Paul which fell below 170. Prices were irregular at noon.

Canadian Pacific rose to 140¾ but the railroad list generally was practically lifeless. Illinois Central, Colorado & Southwestern second preferred and Fuller Construction fell a point under Saturday and Rock Island 3. There was a better tone to the market resulting from the continued advance of Canadian Pacific, which touched 141½. Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling lost 3½. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Maries preferred rose a point and the Wisconsin Central stocks hardened a fraction.

Canadian Pacific, after a slight reaction, rose again to 141¾, but reacted to 139¾, when the rest of the market receded to below the early low level. Special stocks to show strength were Pressed Steel Car, which rose 4¾, the preferred, 2¾; American Car, a point; Stuff, 4; Rutland preferred, 7½ in all, and a few minor industrials a point or more. Colorado Fuel rallied 1¾ and Tennessee Coal and New York Central a point, and Reading a point. Losses were extended to a point in stocks additional to the morning list. The closing was moderately active and irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgeley to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Continued railroad earnings increasing, very favorable crop weather, conclusion of the Boer war, an early adjustment of the anthracite difficulty and easy money are the arguments on which the bulls lay stress. It is premature, however, to figure on the summer crops; nor is a settlement of the strike in sight yet. Apart from these two unknown quantities everything is in favor of the bulls. The monetary situation is being put into shape to finance a fine bull campaign this summer. I do not expect the campaign to start until the insiders know that the strike is nearly over. Meanwhile, in my judgment, you had best play a scale system on the bull side of any good stocks, or else buy on reactions and lay away for a long pull of several months. Southern Pacific can be bought for a 50-point advance provided you have the patience to hold it for a year. The big men tell me that Union Pacific will sell at 150 this year. There is a big short interest in the stock now. I hear from highest sources that Brooklyn Rapid Transit will sell near par this summer. The copper situation is much improved. Erie, according to my information, is to be a part of Morgan's new ship combine and the same movement you witnessed during the past few months in Reading is likely to be repeated in Erie.

* * *

Bache to Paine, Webber & Co.—President Ripley of Atchison is quoted as saying: "After careful investigation I am confident the wheat crop will be at least 60 per cent of last year's. The corn crop will be very large. I am especially willing to stand by my recent prediction that the road will earn 10 per cent at least on common stock this year."

* * *

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.—There is a little bullish sentiment on prospects of better money conditions and probable settlement of the Boer war. The strike situation does not change whatever and it is now well to look for too much of a rise at this time. I can't advise buying anything until some good reaction has taken place. However, it is quite safe to buy on reactions after Tuesday next and take profits of 2 or 3 points when the opportunity offers. This is a traders' market and likely to continue such until after June 1.

* * *

Chicago to Paine, Webber & Co.: The Wisconsin Central is contemplating several improvements among which are the building of a line between Phillips, Wis., Duluth, about 100 miles and a cut-off from Greenwood to Stanley, thus reducing the distance between Chicago and St. Paul.

* * *

New York to B. E. Baker: The stockholders say: "An excess of confidence is as much to be guarded against as an excess of distrust. The market has acted well. Conditions are sound, support is not lacking, and the best informed people and the largest interests are bullish on stocks. There are likely to be setbacks for although the speculation has been taken off the anthracite miners' strike, the latter has not yet passed into history, and although the crops are growing well under favorable conditions, the art of manufacturing scares is not a lost one. Good stocks, however, are all good purchases on any recessions that may be shown, regarded solely for the view point of actual merit."

* * *

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: The market views expressed in financial circles tonight while suggestive of a material reaction with the opening of the week, continue bullish for the pull. It has been pretty well shown by experiences of traders during the past fortnight that prices advance easier than they decline and that when they do decline the big interests are willing to buy stocks that small holders and the bears care to sell. It is still a potent technical condition that owing to the general buying of stocks for control, both by individuals and corporations, the so-called floating supply has been so greatly reduced that the market quickly becomes oversold whenever any attempt is made to inaugurate a bear campaign. For these reasons, and because conditions in the main are considered favorable; good judges of the speculation feel that stocks, especially the grangers, should be bought on recessions.

* * *

Walker to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today opened fairly strong, but not very active and soon there was a good deal of pressure to sell and profittaking and prices sagged. The coal stocks were inclined to be weak and sold off, the feature being the feature of the market and advanced sharply on large trading. The market during the afternoon was dull and closed just about steady.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Houghton, Mich., to Paine, Webber & Co.—Copper shipments last week aggregated 1400 tons. Isle Royale's May production will be best in its history. The Michigan mine has encountered the branch vein by the cross cut from the eighth level A shaft.

* * *

New York to Edwards, Wood & Co.—John Stanton says: "There is nothing new to report from the lake district. There is a ready market for all the copper taken from our mines but there has been no increase in our output. As to the general situation, it is strong."

* * *

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Nothing to say on coppers. There is no feature but regular summer dullness. Traders bid up Mohawk at the opening but it has since sagged off.

* * *

Houghton to Paine, Webber & Co.—Preparations are under way to install a rock crusher at Winona No. 3 shaft. It is quite certain that the Winona will operate one head at the Atlantic mill when the Champion goes to its new mill.

* * *

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Coppers today were dull, but strong. Mohawk again showed good buying and the balance of the list while not active did not suffer from any selling pressure. Coppers in our opinion will sell higher.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 26.—The cotton market opened steady with prices 1 to 5 points lower, this being in response to disappointing Liverpool cables. Following the call there was a further sharp decline under liquidation and bear selling. July sold down to 8.02 and August to 8.02 from which there was a slight rally later. Trading was comparatively quiet with commission house buyers of the near and sellers of the far months most of the time.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, May 26.—Barrett & Zimmerman report that the market the past week was the quietest week of the season. HENDRICKS DRY GOODS CO.

AT WEST DULUTH

A strong protest is being made by a majority of the merchants along Central avenue, where the new sidewalk is being constructed, because the sidewalk grade is above the level of their doorsills. Last week it was mentioned that the grade of the new sidewalk would be higher than the doorsills of a number of the buildings on the west side of the street, but it is found that there is scarcely a wooden building on the east side of the avenue that will not have this difficulty. Various causes are assigned. It is claimed that the old sidewalk has settled on the inner side several inches, and that the wooden buildings, which were built on piling, have also settled. In a number of places the outer edge of the sidewalk is higher than the inner because the more substantial timbers at the curbing prevented the settling.

Where the new walk was being built this morning on the east side of the avenue, between Bristol and Osonold streets, it was from two to nearly six inches above the doorsills of the wooden structures. This is very inconvenient, and some remedy will have to be found for it, but just what it will be is still a question. The men building the sidewalk say that the grade cannot be changed, and the new walk must go down regardless of its effect on the business places.

One man said this morning that the only thing to do is to have the buildings raised to meet the required grade. While this can be easily done in the instance of the smaller stores, there are a number of larger buildings that would have to be raised, and it is doubtful if the owners can be induced to go to the expense, which will be no small item. Others of the merchants who are very glad to get a new sidewalk at all say it is bad policy to look a gift horse in the mouth, and are willing to let the matter go as it is.

Mr. Kreidler will begin in a few days to put a cement walk in front of his building, at the corner of Bristol and Central avenue.

DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Mrs. Rebecca Robinson, wife of Alexander Robinson, of 607 Fifty-ninth avenue west, died early Sunday morning after a lingering illness. She was 24 years of age and leaves, besides a husband, a little 2-year-old daughter. The decedent had resided in West Duluth a number of years, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Curry, who reside here. Five years ago she was united in marriage to Mr. Robinson. Dr. Robert Forbes, who performed the marriage ceremony, will perform the last sad rites, at Mrs. Robinson's request. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, from the family residence, and interment will be made at Oneota cemetery. The services will be under the auspices of the Ladies' Orange lodge of West Duluth.

CONFIRMATION SERVICES.

There was a large attendance at the St. James Catholic church yesterday at the confirmation services. Flaaten's orchestra played. The class numbered about 150, the greater part of them being boys and girls. The services were presided over by Bishop McGolrick, assisted by Rev. Father O'Dwyer, of the cathedral, and Rev. John Feeheley, of the St. James church. Bishop McGolrick's subject was "The Holy Ghost." Several solos were sung, Angeline Meloche acting as organist. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants.

FOND DU LAC ROAD.

About the only matter of especial interest to this part of the city is scheduled to come up at the council meeting this evening is the resolution for the appropriation of $2200 for the new road between Fond du Lac and New Duluth. As the city has already agreed to contriubte this amount providing an appropriation was made by the county board, which was done, the fact that the resolution went over a week was on account of the charter provision.

It is not expected that anything will be done in regard to the matter of the purchase of the West Duluth water company's plant this evening owing to the absence from the city of City Engineer Patton.

WANT THE TARIFF.

Jobbers Anxious About Revised Range Road Rates.

Duluth jobbers are beginning to feel restive concerning the new merchandise tariff that it was announced the three iron range roads would soon issue. It will be remembered that the state railroad and warehouse committee took the matter up after the roads had already decided to revise the tariffs. The jobbers think that plenty of time has been taken, and that the tariff should be forthcoming before the largest part of the mining season passes by. Itquiry proves it is expected the new sheets will soon be out.

"The new tariff will be issued in a very short time," said an official of one of the iron range roads this noon. "It has been a big job to go over all of the merchandise tariffs and make reductions equitable all the way around. Then again, there have been three parties to agree on the changes proposed, and necessarily three are harder to agree than one. The tariff has been thoroughly revised, the first revision it has ever received. The papers are now in the hands of the state railroad and warehouse commission for their consideration, and as soon as they have figured the thing out and we can get together, we shall put out the new tariffs. The matter has not lagged at all, but it is a pretty extensive job to go all through a tariff that has grown up a little at a time to equalize as well as reduce the rates and please everybody concerned."

Out All Night.

The dense fog that settled so quickly over St. Louis bay and river yesterday afternoon resulted in four well known West Superior young people losing their way while rowing, and they did not reach their homes until this morning. They had two boats, and were rowing about the bay, off the Wisconsin shore, when the fog settled down. They rowed for some time but lost their bearings, finally lashing the boats together and tieing them to a tree in the river. When the fog lifted they found themselves up the river, opposite New Duluth.

Lester Park.

Grand opening Decoration day, rain or shine. Two elegant dancing floors; two first-class orchestras. Afternoon and evening.

EASTERN CHANGES

Rumored That D. M. Philbin Will Come to Duluth July 1.

Traffic Manager Broughton to Have a New Title.

Duluth Jobbers Anxious For Announcement of Revised Range Tariff.

A rumor is current about Duluth that D. M. Philbin, who has charge of the operating department of the Eastern Minnesota railway, as vice president, will remove his offices to Duluth by July. Mr. Philbin was not at the division headquarters at West Superior today, and at the offices there it was said that nothing had been heard about the matter there. Mr. Philbin's friends here are rejoicing, however, over the prospect of his returning to Duluth to make his headquarters.

It is supposed that the change, if it is to be made, will be made in connection with those that are occurring as a result of the leasing of the Eastern Minnesota by the Great Northern. It is now announced that the Great Northern had leased the Eastern Minnesota for a period of ninety-nine years. The explanation is made that the change is for the purpose of simplifying the operation of the system, particularly in the auditing department. The Great Northern has long owned all the stock of the Eastern.

In connection with the lease, the old titles of the general officers of the Eastern will naturally go out of existence. It is supposed that Mr. Philbin will be made assistant general superintendent of the Great Northern system, with operating charge of the old Eastern Minnesota division.

It is announced by the Great Northern that the old officers will retain their present duties, with possibly a few additions and slight changes of title. The first of these occurs formally in the office of Traffic Manager Broughton, of the Eastern, who is promoted to be assistant general traffic manager of the Great Northern, with jurisdiction over the old Eastern division. Mr. Broughton is an exceptionally enthusiastic worker, as well as one of the best posted traffic men on head of the lakes conditions, and his many friends in Duluth are rejoicing over his good fortune.

J. G. Howard, the new assistant general superintendent of the Eastern division, was formerly assistant superintendent of the Northern division of the C. B. & Q., with headquarters in Minneapolis. He is said to be a fine operating man.

ATTENTION.

All members of Anna Stang Hive No. 61 are requested to meet at the home of Mrs. Curry, corner of Sixtieth avenue west and Cody street, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to attend the funeral of our late sister, Mrs. Robinson.

ALICE D. LEE, Cond'er.

NEW YORK CLUB.

Another Meeting to Be Held Next Week.

The members of the New York club, recently formed, will meet a week from Saturday in Kalamazoo block hall for the purpose of completing their organization. A committee appointed at a recent meeting has had several meetings, and has adopted a constitution and by-laws for the organization, which will be submitted at next week's meeting.

At that time, also, the club will no doubt decide on the date and place for holding its annual summer outing. It may be at Fond du Lac or Isle Royale. The plans of the originators of the club call for an annual summer outing, or picnic, and a banquet during the winter months each year.

The club was formed several weeks ago. Its object is to bring together all natives of the state of New York for social purposes and the reviving of memories of the state in which all were born. The membership at present is about seventy-five.

THE ACREAGE

Albert Harrington Thinks It Will Be About As Usual.

Albert Harrington, of Minneapolis, is in the city today. He thinks reports of shrinkage in wheat area in North Dakota because of wet weather are exaggerated.

"My opinion is that the wheat area will not differ materially from last year," said Mr. Harrington. "You can get all kinds of reports about the acreage that has not been seeded, but the worst news always travels the farthest, and frequently it is based on isolated instances. There is no question but that the farmers are behind in their spring work. They are a leisurely class as a whole, and last fall didn't get their plowing done. The wet weather this spring of course not only prevented them from catching up, but actually put them behind. Still, I don't believe the general result will be so seriously affected as recent reports have indicated.

"I can't make any suggestion regarding the increase of the movement of Canadian wheat this way. It would seem to me that the Canadian roads, however, are attempting an impossible job when they determine to dam up the great crop they raise up there in the little territory in which it is produced. They have a short season of navigation, the wheat can't be shipped all rail to the seaboard in sufficient volume to relieve the situation and they haven't the room, money or insurance to dump it in Port Arthur and Fort William. It must seek a winter outlet and market, and the only route is via Duluth and Minneapolis."

THE LUMBER RATE.

Advance In That to Southwest June 1.

It is formally announced ha he predictions of an advance in the all-rail lumber rate to the Southwest will be realized the first of next month. The announcement is made by the roads running between Duluth and Minneapolis.

As far as known at this time, both the local and proportional will be advanced to 7 cents a hundred June 1. The Duluth-Minneapolis proportional to such Southwestern points as Omaha has been 5 cents, while the local rate has been 6 cents. The advance in the through rate therefore is equivalent to 2 cents.

There is a growing movement of lumber from this market to Southwestern points, and the movement, it is believed, will increase much more rapidly in future.

THE DEATH LIST.

St. Paul, May 26.—An Eau Claire special to the Dispatch says: David M. Stone, an old resident, died suddenly this morning of heart failure.

A special to the dispatch from Baldwin, Wis., says: Mrs. R. H. Shaesby, a resident of this place for twenty years and a pioneer of St. Croix county, died last evening from injuries resulting from a fall several weeks ago. Deceased was 83 years old.

STILL WORKING.

Hazelton, Pa., May 26.—The Dusky Diamond colliery at Beaver Brook is still in operation despite the notification from the mineworkers that all mining operations should be suspended during the strike.

Clerks at several of the collieries hereabouts have been discharged because of their refusal to man fires and pumps next week in case of a strike on the part of the firemen and pumpmen.

SEASON TO OPEN

The Northern Pacific Announces First of Summer Fxcursions.

First Will Come June 13, Starting From Morris, Minn.

Second One a Week Later, Starting From Milner, N. D.

Preparations for the opening of the regular summer excursions into Duluth, by which the people of warmer climes may be brought to the cool breezes and invigorating atmosphere of Lake Superior are under way.

The Northern Pacific road will run two special excursions to Duluth next month. The rate that will be charged has not been announced as yet. General Passenger Agent Fee, however, has written for information concerning what attractions will be offered in this city for the amusement of the visitors, and it is presumed that as usual some program will be provided.

The first excursion will be given Friday, June 13. It will run from points between Morris, Minn., and Aitkin. The intermediate points include Sauk Center, Little Falls and Brainerd, and it is thought these prosperous towns should make large contributions to the ranks of Duluth's visitors at that time.

The second excursion will be given a week later, and will take people living between Milnor and Wahpeton, N. D. This will draw on the pleasure-seekers of such other towns as Breckinridge, Fergus Falls, Wadena and Staples.

IS VIGILANT.

Joseph Sheehy Causes More Arrests For Sunday Opening.

Three Hebrew clothing merchants were arrested this afternoon at the request of Joseph Sheehy, the former pugilist, who charges them with selling merchandise on Sunday.

Mr. Sheehy, it is understood, has evidence against about fifteen more of these merchants and says that Sunday violation in the Bowery district must cease.

The complaints he made today were against Joseph Postofsky, 503 West Michigan street; Samuel E. Gittelson and Anna Cook, of 400 West Superior street, and A. Averbrook, of 617 West Superior street.

Mr. Sheehy picked out woodsmen in whom he had confidence and sent them into the various stores to make purchases. Everything purchased is now in the hands of the city authorities to be used as evidence when the cases come up for trial.

When arraigned in court this afternoon Joseph Postofsky said that despite the fact that Sheehy had him arrested for Sunday violation, the Minnesota Employment agency of which Sheehy is the head, hired eight men yesterday. This Mr. Sheehy denies and the police substantiate his denial by saying that there is not an employment agency running in the city where the license has been revoked.

The date of the hearing of the cases against the three men arrested today has not been set.

* * *

John Carlson, a Bowery saloon keeper, is on trial in the municipal court this afternoon for selling whisky adulterated with fusel oil. The case will be prosecuted with expert testimony from the office of the state chemist. At a late hour the jury had been secured and trial begun.

William Dill had a peculiar experience on Saturday night. He was arrested for spitting on a street car. At police headquarters he put up $7 bail for appearance this morning. He was greatly worried over his arrest and got drunk. Within half an hour he was arrested again and put up $12 bail to get out. This morning he forfeited both bails by non-appearance. John Hokolo and Thomas Cullen also forfeited bail amounting to $7 each. They were arrested for spitting in a street car.

NAMED KENNEDY.

Another Chapter In Douglas County, Wis., Episode.

David Doble, chairman of the Douglas county board of supervisors, has appointed William Kennedy to act as county poor commissioner until the next meeting of the county board. This adds another chapter to the famous fight in the county board over the office. The old members of the board hung out for Mr. Kennedy's appointment, but the new members were as determined to oust him, and the result was a deadlock, during which about 174 ballots were taken. The county board finally adjourned without electing a poor commissioner.

Several days ago Mr. Kennedy resigned and the office has since been vacant. The different factions of the county board held conferences, and as it was found that they could not agree on Mr. Kennedy's successor, no meeting of the board was called. It is claimed that there will not be another meeting until it is known that a compromise can be effected.

It lay within the power of the chairman of the county board to appoint a commissioner to fill the vacancy until the next annual meeting in January, and, therefore, no particular significance is to be attached to Mr. Dobie's appointment of the old commissioner. He did so, it is claimed, because Mr. Kennedy is familiar with the requirements of the office and because the county is very much in need of that officer at the present time.

IN CONGRESS.

Washington, May 26.—Soon after the senate convened today Mr. Gallinger (N. H.) offered a resolution providing that the judiciary committee of the senate should investigate into the subject of lynchings in the United Sattes with a view of ascertaining whether there is any remedy for them.

The Philippines bill was then taken up and Mr. Patterson (Col.) made a speech in opposition to it.

The death of the British ambassador, Lord Pauncefote, was today referred to in the opening invocation of the chaplain of the house, Rev. Dr. Couden.

The conference reports on the agricultural appropriation bill and the urgent deficiency bill also were agreed to.

The controversy begun last week between Mr. Hull (Iowa) and Mr. Sulzer (N. Y.) over a private bill granting an honorable discharge to Michael Mullett was renewed and it required an aye and no vote before Mr. Sulzer passed his bill.

GAYNOR AND GREENE.

Quebec, May 26.—When the petitions of Col. Gaynor and Captain Greene for the issuing of writs of certoriri to have the proceedings in Montreal transferred to Quebec came up today in chambers Judge Andrews, on application of Mr. Stuart for the prosecution, ordered that notices of said petitions be given to Magistrate La Fontaine of Montreal. Argument thereon was continued until Thursday next.

DISAPPEARS.

St. Louis, May 26.—After writing to a brother in London, England, to cease sending him money, Dr. Edward L. Thurman disappeared Sunday, leaving his coat and hat on the river bank. The coat contained a check for $140, a gold watch and two letters. Relatives of the missing man are in doubt whether he committed suicide, was thrown into the river by robbers, or left the city after placing his coat and hat by the river to suggest drowning.

Lack of immediate success in his chosen profession had discouraged the young physician, and he had for several weeks past been seeking employment.

MAY BE CLEARED UP.

Chicago, May 26.—Mystery still surrounds the attempted murder of Daniel Hill, the board of trade operator and the partner of George S. Phillips, the corn king, in his home, 797 West Monroe street, last Saturday night. This afternoon Inspector Shea state that affairs were shaping themselves in the investigation and he hoped to have the mystery cleared up soon.

The inspector intimated that developments of an important nature were expected and hinted that the entire mystery would probably be cleared up in a short time.

Mr. Hill was reported resting easily and his complete recovery is expected.

M'CORMICK NAMED

For United States Ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

Washington, May 26.—The president today nominated Robert S. McCormick, of Illinois, to be ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

The president also sent the following nominations to the senate: Chandler Hale, Maine, secretary of embassy at Vienna; George B. Rives, New Jersey, second secretary of embassy at Vienna; Charles Richardson, Massachusetts, third secretary embassy at Berlin; William M. Morsey, marshal for Eastern district of Missouri; George A. McKenzie, receiver of public moneys, Stockton, Cal. Army—Artillery second lieutenants—Guy B. G. Hanna, Iowa.

As Announced Saturday Evening and Sunday Morning,

THE CARNEGIE OIL CO.

Which has brought in a second oil well on its Mat Dean farm, Flatlick oil district, Knox county, Kentucky.

Will Offer For a Few Days Only

Another block of shares of its stock, the money from the sale of which will go toward the drilling of more wells, erection of tanks, pumping derricks and pumping station, and purchase of pumping machinery.

At 10c Per Share.

Just think, with a little over 200,000 shares issued, with two oil wells and drilling for a third, and its shares selling at 10c per share. Compare this with some of the offers now being made of stock in companies capitalized all the way from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000, and stock selling from 10c to 25c per share and in new districts of the West that either are producing no oil at all or only a small amount of oil, and in districts where the conditions are new to the Carnegie, which has two wells, located in a district now acknowledged to be identical with the famous Sisterville, W. Va., oil district, and producing the highest grade illuminating oil, the same as Pennsylvania.

Nothing New

In the way of formation or character of the oil. Business men of experience are spending their own money to drill wells in the Knox county oil fields. The Carnegie is an association of small capital to divide the risk. Now that the risk has been eliminated by striking the oil Carnegie oil shares at

10c Per Share

Ought to be the best buy in the market. Several of the best business men of Duluth seem to think so. They are buying the stock for an investment.

Memorial Day Proclamation is Issued By Mayor

To the Citizens of Duluth:

As the years roll around, and the mists of prejudice and passion clear away, the great event which characterized the period of 1861-1865 looms up in all its magnificent proportions, and the splendid results command respect and admiration.

No country can be secure in its blessings of peace and happiness unless the incense of patriotism continually ascends from the ever lit altars of its homes, nor can a people be truly patriotic who easily forget those who give their lives to its service.

National and state legislation has enacted and custom has enforced the setting apart of a day during which we may recall the heroism and self-sacrifice of those who participated in the memorable struggle which preserved the Union, honor and applaud those who survive, and scatter flowers of grateful remembrance over the resting places of those who have laid down the burden and are happy.

Now, therefore, I, Trevanion W. Hugo, mayor, do earnestly request the citizens of Duluth to observe the 30th day of May as truly a Memorial day, by abstaining from all unnecessary work and frivolous amusements, decorating their houses, and uniting in appropriate ceremonies and exercises. It is ordered that the flags on all public buildings be raised to half mast from sunrise to sundown.

Given under my hand, and with the seal of the city of Duluth, this 25th day of May, in the year 1902.

TREVANION W. HUGO,
Mayor.

DISORDERLY

Students of the Northwestern University Arrested.

Chicago, May 26.—Sixteen of the most prominent students of the Northwestern university at Evanston were arrested today charged with disorderly conduct, assault and battery and resisting the police. They were released on bonds to appear before a magistrate tomorrow. The warrants were sworn out by officers of the alumni of the Sigma Alpha Upsilon. Some of the men were arrested while on their way to their classes.

The trouble started with the hazing Friday night of George Tilrose, a junior who had criticised the athletic ability of some of Northwestern's best men. He was regarded as a popular man, but when the crowd of indignant students, many of them masked, got hold of him, he was roughly handled. He resisted stoutly, but was easily overcome and rolled in a mud puddle.

The students arrested today were: Park W. Brown, Frank Morris, captain of the track team; S. S. Northrup, Charles E. Stahl, J. A. Sexauer, a member of the track team; A. A. Greenman, the university crack half miler; K. H. Davenport, James A. Work, F. E. Spencer, L. M. Paddock, Isaac E. Suringer, S. Born, a baseball catcher and track man; F. O. Young, Frank H. Churchill, Earl C. Anderson, a leader in the Y. M. C. A., and Paul Manley. The matter will be discussed by the faculty tomorrow. The students took thei arrest lightly, and declared that they would start a criminal club similar to the one at Yale.

LOS ANGELES

Chosen For Next Meeting Place of Presbyterian Assembly.

New York, May 26.—The Presbyterian general assembly at today's session chose Los Angeles, Cal., as the place of next meeting. The moderator, the Rev. Dr. Van Dyke, called the assembly to order at 9:35 o'clock. The attendance of commissioners at that time was good.

The general assembly acted adversely on an overture from the presbytery of Los Angeles, requesting that ministers coming from the Southern Presbyterian church be honorably retired with the same privileges as if they had served always with the church under the general assembly. The matter came before the assembly in a report from the committee on ministerial relief, which recommended adverse action.

The general assembly adjourned sine die.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

CROWDS AT CLEVELAND

Attending Republican State Convention.

Opening Address Given By Governor Nash.

Cleveland, May 27.—Every incoming train today was crowded with additional delegates and visitors to the Republican state convention, which will be called to order here late this afternoon in Central armory. Seats have been provided for 8000 persons in the hall, and it is believed every chair will be occupied when the convention is called to order.

The platform, which was the subject of a long conference of party leaders last night, has been finally agreed upon and it is ready for presentation to the convention.

The preliminary meetings consisted of conferences during the forenoon and meetings by congressional districts at 2 p. m., at which members of the committees and assistant officers of the convention were selected. A feature of the day was a reception by the ladies of Cleveland to the visiting ladies, with Mrs. M. A. Hanna heading one receiving line, and Mrs. T. L. Johnson, wife of the mayor, and other prominent ladies heading additional lines. This reception was to have been followed by sightseeing tours, but the cold rain has changed the program. One of the most important conferences was held between Senator Hanna and George B. Cox, of Cincinnati, and while it continued, a crowd was kept waiting outside Senator Hanna's office.

There is no change in the constructive work of the platform makers. The resolutions that Gen. Dick brought with him from Washington have been submitted to various conferences during the past three days. As this is the first Republican convention in the martyred president's state since the tragedy at Buffalo last September, there will be a tribute resolution, followed by an expression of confidence in President Roosevelt, and an endorsement of the Republicans in congress.

THE ERUPTION OF MONT PELEE AND THE WOMAN WHO PHOTOGRAPHED IT.

Mrs. H. Merrill, who has just returned to her home in New York, was a passenger on the steamer Korona, which reached St. Pierre the day after the eruption of Mont Pelee. She took several pictures of the devastated city, the wrecked shipping and the still active volcano.

PERILOUS JOURNEY

Prof. Hill Visits the Craters of Mount Pelee.

Scientist Risks Life to Examine Phenomena.

Fort de France, Monday, May 26.—Professor Robert T. Hill, United States government geologist and head of the expedition sent by the National Geographical society, has just come in from a daring and prolonged investigation of the volcanic activity in Martinique. Professor Hill chartered a steamer and carefully examined the coast as far north as Port de Macouba, at the extreme end of the island, making frequent landings. After landing at Le Precheur, five miles north of St. Pierre, he walked through an area of active volcanism to the latter place and made a minute examination of the various phenomena disclosed.

Professor Hill is the first and only man who has set foot in the area of craters, fissures and fumaroles, and because of his high position as a scientist his story is valuable. In addition to his work of investigation the professor rescued in his steamer many poor people of Le Precheur who had ventured back after deserting their homes and found themselves in awful danger. He reports as follows:

The zone of the catastrophe in Martinique forms an elongated oval containing on land about eight square miles of destruction. This oval is partly over the sea. The land part is bounded by lines running from Le Precheur to the peak of Mount Pelee, thence curving around to Carbet. There were three well-marked zones:

First, a center of annihilation, in which all life, vegetable and animal, was destroyed, the greater northern part of St. Pierre was in this zone; second, a zone of singeing, blistering flames, which also was fatal to all life, killing all men and animals, burning the leaves on the trees and scorching but not utterly destroying the trees themselves; third, a large outer, nondestructive zone of ashes wherein some vegetation was injured. The focus of annihilation was the new crater midway between the sea and the peak of Mount Pelee, where now exists a new area of active volcanism, with hundreds of fumaroles or miniature volcanoes. The new crater is now vomiting black hot mud, which is failing into the sea. Both craters, the old and new, are active. Mushroom-shaped steam explosions constantly ascend from the old crater, while heavy ash-laden clouds float horizontally from the new crater. The old ejects steam, smoke, mud, pumice and lapilli, but no molten lava.

The salient topography of the region is unaltered. The destruction of St. Pierre was due to the new crater. The explosion had great superficial force, acting in radical directions, as is evidenced by the dismounting and carrying for yards of the guns in the battery on the hill south of St. Pierre and the colonial statue of the Virgin in the same locality, and also by the condition of the ruined houses in St. Pierre. According to the testimony of some persons there was an accompanying flame. Others think the incandescent cinders and the force of their ejection were sufficient to cause the destruction. This must be investigated. I am now following the nature of this hill.

This is the first positive scientific statement based on observed facts. Professor Hill has now started on horseback for the volcano. He will study the whole affected area and will try to get to both craters. He will surely visit Morne Rouge and the slope of Mount Pelee. The undertaking is very hazardous, as explosions may occur at any moment, as one did May 20. Professor Hill knows the risk he takes, but says the only way to discover exactly what has happened is to go to the crater itself, or as near it as possible. He will be gone two days.

Fort de France is nearly deserted. A new source of fright is fear that a tidal wave may come. A wave eight feet high would certainly destroy Fort de France, and probably cause enormous loss of life.

The weather is lowering and rainy. The south winds carry the smoke and ashes from the volcano away from Fort de France.

HUMBERTS SEPARATED

But It Is Expected That the Members of the Famous Family Will Eventually Reach the United States.

New York, May 27.—In connection with the mysterious arrest reported to have been made in Jersey City of a person said to have been a valet in the Paris household of the Humbert's (who recently fled from Paris and since have been charged with swindling operations amounting to more than $12,000,000, the American and Journal says the New York detectives who made the arrest have succeeded in securing a statement from the prisoner. The latter's name has not been made public, however, and the highest police officials even deny that such an arrest has been made. The statement said to have been made by the prisoner, who is held as a suspicious person is reported to detail the flight of the family from Paris, their arrival at Monte Carlo, the squandering of thousands of dollars in gambling, the hurried scattering of the family and their flight singly presumably for this country and the Argentine Republic.

While four of the party went in different directions Humbert and his wife are alleged to have sailed in a private yacht for Montevideo.

This yacht is described as a handsome steam vessel costing many thousands of dollars and bought for the express purpose of leaving the shores of Europe when the final crash should come. The vessel is now supposed to be nearing the shores of Argentina, where they will be safe from extradition. The other members of the party are expected eventually to land in this country by different steamers.

O'BRIEN PREVARICATED

Capt. McDonald Successfully Refutes the Testimony of the Corporal Before Committee By Means of Official Statements.

Washington, May 27.—Capt. McDonald continued his statement before the Philippines committee today and presented an official statement to refute the testimony of Corporal O'Brien. Senator Rawlins said there were instances where no statement was necessary to refute O'Brien's testimony. Senator Dietrich retorted that if O'Brien's statement had been suppressed at the point where the minority wanted it enough would have leaked out to give designing politicians an opportunity to make use of it. Mr. Rawlins sharply resented this remark and said if he could not be protected in the committee he would remain away. Chairman Lodge responded that he did not intend to call high-minded senators designing politicians.

All reference to the incident was stricken from the record. Capt. McDonald was questioned concerning the taking of prisoners and also the burning of some towns. He said he gave orders to burn several towns which were in hostile country and sheltered ladrones and insurgents. Capt. McDonald stated that he intended to ask that O'Brien be prosecuted by the federal authorities for perjury.

POLISH MEMBERS ANGRY

Berlin, May 27.—The debate on the bill providing for strengthening the German element in the Polish provinces of Prussia, began in the lower house of the Prussian diet today. The imperial chancellor Count Von Buelow said the government was compelled for the sake of the security of the monarchy to erect a bulwark against agitation in favor of granting Poland constitutional rights. The Poles will be safeguarded but any effort to change the existing relations of the two nationalities would be suppressed. The government's object was to continue the policy inaugurated by Prince Bismarck in 1886. The present bill was only a commencement. Next winter further measures would be introduced to strengthen the German element in the eastern provinces, including an increase of salaries of the officials of the middle and lower ranks and those of the teachers in the elementary schools. The chancellor concluded with appealing to the house to support the government in its protection of German customs and manners.

Herr Fritzen, Centrist, protested against the expenditure of 225,000 marks, while questions of greater importance were shelved on the ground of bad financial conditions of the state. Herr Szumann, a Pole, bitterly denounced the government for not keeping faith with the Poles and at the conclusion of his speech, the Polish members left the house in a body.

Before committing suicide Dr. Tuhrman had written to his father in England asking him to send no more money.

REHEARSAL

Of the Coronation Procession Along the London Route.

London, May 27.—A rehearsal of the coronation procession, along the whole length of the route, from Buckingham palace to Westminster abbey and return, took place this morning. The attendants and the horses were practically the same as will take part in the parade of June 26. The vehicles were plain coaches and brakes, representative of the elaborate state equipages which will be used on coronation day, and grooms and outriders the notable personages who will ride in attendance on their majesties. The first nine carriages will be occupied by members of the British royal family. They will be followed by vehicles containing their suites. The great state coach, which will come last, was represented today by a big brake drawn by the eight cream-colored Hanoverians which figured in the procession at the time of the late Queen Victoria's jubilee and on the occasion of her funeral. The horses today were without the crimson morrocco harness, with heavy, gilt fittings and ornaments, which is being made for the coronation. The rehearsal included the picking up of passengers at Buckingham palace, their alighting at Westminster abbey, etc.

IS AGAIN IN ERUPTION

Mount Pelee Is Sending Huge, Inky Black Clouds Over Fort de France, Driving the People Into a Great Panic.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, Manday, May 26, 9 p. m.—Mount Pelee is again in eruption. Huge, inky black clouds are rolling over Fort de France in great masses, in which there are peculiar lightning flashes. The people are now flocking into the great square of the town. If the demonstration increases a panic is imminent.

A very heavy surf is beating on shore for the last two hours, and an enormous, grayish yellow cloud, at a great height, is dimly visible in the direction of Mount Pelee.

The night is intensely dark and the stars are only faintly visible.

Fort de France is in no danger from the volcano, but there is considerable apprehension of a panic in the night time, should the greyish cloud reach here and ashes and stones begin to fall.

There are no noises from the volcano at present.

WANT A TEN-HOUR DAY

Employes of South Stillwater Mills Go Out and Try and Induce Men at Other Points to Do Same.

Stillwater, Minn., May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The contemplated strike of the mill employes at South Stillwater was carried out yesterday morning as agreed and only one mill was operated throughout the day, namely the Eclipse Lumber company's mill, where half of the machinery was in motion.

The David Tozer and the Tozer & Nolan mills were shut down, and the men spent the day in this city discussing the situation. The striking employes are trying to carry the strike to Stillwater and other points on the St. Croix where mills are in operation, but thus far nothing has been accomplished. Groups of strikers congregated on the street corners yesterday and insisted that they would never return to work unless the mill men agreed to give them ten hours a day and the same pay now paid for eleven hours.

At a conference held yesterday afternoon between the striking mill employes at South Stillwater and the mill owners no agreement could be reached, and another conference will be held Wednesday. The mill owners notified the committee that they would start their mills this morning and are endeavoring to secure men to take the place of strikers who are not willing to return to work.

AGAINST BEET SUGAR

Western Railroads Are Accused of Helping the Sugar Trust to Kill Off the Beet Sugar Industry.

Chicago, May 27.—Some of the Western railroads are accused of helping the American Sugar Refining company, commonly called the "Sugar trust," in his efforts to kill the beet sugar industry in Nebraska and Colorado, says the Inter-Ocean.

The Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroads have joined the Mallory Steamship line in making a through rate of 33 cents per 100 pounds on sugar from New York, via Galveston, to Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha and Lincoln, Neb. On this rate the so-called sugar trust has just shipped into the Missouri river territory 200 carloads of sugar, aggregating 5,000,000 pounds. The result is that this sugar is put in that market at a lower figure than the beet sugar growers of Nebraska and Colorado can meet and realize any profit.

THE MANIA CONTINUES

Bohemian Youth Kills His Sweetheart In Chicago and Then Shoots Himself In the Head and Will Probably Die.

Chicago, May 27.—Emil Rossman, aged 19, last night, shot and killed his sweetheart, Sophia Batal, and then shot himself. It is believed he will die. The girl was but 17 years old. She and Rossman came to Chicago two months ago from Bohemia with an aunt of Rossman's. They were sweethearts in the old country, and the girl was brought along because Rossman had threatened to kill her and himself if any attempt was made to separate them. The opposition to the union was due to the youth of the pair. Sunday night both of them were missed, and yesterday the police were notified. It was not until early today that they were found lying side by side under a sidewalk on the West Side. The girl was dead with a bullet in her brain. Rossman was also shot in the head, but he still breathed faintly.

Other charges were that the quarters where the men slept were overcrowded and in an unsanitary condition.

JUSTICE NOT DELAYED

William Lane Hanged at Philadelphia For the Atrocious Murder of His Employer and Her Two Daughters.

Philadelphia, May 27.—William Harmon Lane, colored, was hanged at 10:08 o'clock this morning.

The crime for which Lane paid the death penalty was particularly atrocious. On the morning of April 1, he shot and killed Ella Jarden, by whom he was employed as a servant, and her two daughters, Madeline, aged 12, and Eloise, aged 7 years. Lane had stolen money from his employer and fearing the consequences of his thefts, he deliberately shot the woman and her younger daughter in an upper room of their home, and then called the elder child frmo the street where she had been playing and shot and killed her.

After the shooting Lane escaped to Camden, N. J., but was arrested a few hours later in the railroad station in that city. He confessed his crime and after a formal hearing was sentenced to death. Justice was not delayed in meting out punishment to the negro, and in less than two months after the commission of the crime he was executed.

PRISONER SLIPS OFFICERS

Chicago, May 27.—Handcuffed to two other prisoners and to a deputy United States marshal, Fred Littleton, an alleged counterfeiter, being taken to the federal prison at Milwaukee last evening, succeeded in removing his handcuffs in the Union passenger station and escaping. Several shots were fired at him, but he was not hit.

Littleton was considered a valuable prisoner and had been long sought by the secret service officers. When arrested by the Chicago police he had in his possession, it is said, many bogus 50-cent pieces.

CARLSON GETS OFF

Saloonkeeper, Charged With Selling Adulterated Whisky, Dismissed.

Wording of the Complaint Left a Vulnerable Loophole.

Amyl Alcohol Not a Compound of Fusel Oil.

The case against Charles Carlson, a Bowery saloonkeeper, charged with selling adulterated whisky, was dismissed in the municipal court this morning.

Senator Baldwin, attorney for Mr. Carlson, won a clean-cut decision on cross-examining the prosecution's expert chemist.

The complaint on which Mr. Carlson was arrested alleged that a pint of whisky purchased from him contained a quantity of alcohol which "was a compound of fusel oil."

This whisky was analyzed in the laboratory of the state dairy and food commission in St. Paul by Prof. Julius Hortvet, one of the most eminent chemists in the Northwest.

Prof. Hortvet went on the stand this morning to testify for the state as to the chemical analysis he had made. In the pint of whisky he found eighteen drops of fusel oil.

However, the section of the state law prohibiting the adulteration of liquor does not mention "fusel oil." It mentions cocculus indicus, chloride of sodium, methyl alcohol and amyl alcohol.

The only loop hole left for the prosecution, owing to the peculiar construction of this law, was to prove the existence of amyl alcohol.

This was done, Mr. Hortvet testifying that a large percentage of the fusel oil found in the whisky was in reality amyl alcohol.

"Is amyl alcohol a compound of fusel oil?" sharply asked Mr. Baldwin on cross examination.

"No, it is not," answered the chemist. "It is a component part of fusel oil."

"I move a dismissal of this case on the ground that the complaint states amyl alcohol is a compound of fusel oil, and the state's own witness testifies that it is not," said Mr. Baldwin.

Judge Edson granted the motion dismissing the case, and the jury for the balance of the current term of court.

The victory of the saloon men caused a great deal of talk in the court corridors and on the streets. It is generally understood that nearly every saloon man on the Bowery will be called upon to defend the purity of his stock sooner or later, for the state has samples of liquor purchased in nearly every saloon.

Associate City Attorney Holmes will probably draw up a new complaint against Mr. Carlson and have him re-arrested on the same charge as that dismissed this morning. However, the wording of the state law makes prosecution for fusel oil adulteration of whisky very difficult.

A Star In the West.

The Nordvesterns Handestidning," the local Swedish commercial paper, of which Oscar Lonegren, of the L. W. Leithhead Drug Co., is editor, has the following editorial in regard to the last entertainment by the Commercial club:

"While Duluth is not a Canaan, 'flowing with milk and honey,' it is well named the Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas—the star of the North Star state. Without peace commerce is vain, the ardor of industry restrained and happiness blasted. The cordial welcome extended to the 125 business men from the upper peninsula of Michigan by the Duluth Commercial club last week was a credit to this organization and the committees in charge. 'The ideal citizen,' whose time always is at the demand of the public, demonstrated what Duluth is able to do and will do for its visitors. Nobody shirked work or left anything undone. Everybody understood 'why' the guests were here. It was a business and social proposition, and no personal efforts were spared to make the visit enjoyable for all. The management of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road invited the Michigan business men to come and the young but active Commercial club did the rest. Everything went lovely, the visitors were not held responsible for the fog on Saturday, and the banquet in the evening, with its elaborate menu and entertaining speeches and music, was 'good for all demands.' It not only established stronger business relations between the copper country and Duluth, but showed a hospitality which we are assured will not soon be forgotten. The jobbers and other business men can congratulate themselves on the great success of the entertainment. Other visitors to follow will be as heartily welcomed to the head of the lakes. The toastmaiser, J. L. Washburn was in his best element and the speakers overflowing with wit and patriotism. The speech of E. L. Millar, the editor of the Trade News, was the finest and, from a business point of view, the most interesting. The jobbers have the goods and the good will to visitors, and your commercial editors are loaded with statistics, which presented in a style of Millar's, is worth thousands to any progressive city like our.

The Commercial club of Duluth will yet do wonders for the "Star of the West," and "Nordevsterns Handelstidning," which reaches the Scandinavian merchants in the Northwest, shall continue to do its share for the success of coming excursions."

DO NOT NEGLECT
The Little Ills of Today.

The Use of

Paine's Celery Compound

Will Eradicate from the Blood and System the Seeds of Disease.

As grains of sand make our lofty mountains, drops of water the mighty ocean, and as our massive buildings are made of one brick piled upon another, so do the little ills of life contribute to the building up of deadly diseases in the body.

Experienced medical men claim that fully three-fourths of our men and women enter the summer season with little ills and symptoms of disease, which must develop into serious and fatal troubles if not banished at once.

We hear our friends complaining daily of rheumatic tendencies, sharp and darting neuralgic pains, dyspepsia, pains in the side and back, nervousness and sleeplessness; and we see with our own eyes the effects of impure blood in facial blotches, eruptions and sores. The little ills and pains of today build up the alarming and fatal diseases that follow days and weeks of neglect.

Wise and intelligent people who have looked into the claims of Paine's Celery Compound and followed its remarkable cures of relatives, friends and neighbors, use it themselves with faith and confidence, to banish their symptoms of coming troubles, to cleanse the blood, to re-establish nerve force, energy and bodily strength, so that they will be in condition to withstand the enervating effects of the coming hot weather.

In every community where Paine's Celery Compound has been used at this season to banish disease, it is regarded as a godsend. Workers in offices, shops, factories, and weary and run-down wives and mothers in their homes, have thanked heaven for Dr. Phelps' marvelous prescription, because it made them well. Try a bottle or two, ye who are ailing and sick; it will give you what you most stand in need of—health and new life.

SEES CADETS.

Count de Rochambeau Congratulates Them On Their Skill.

West Point, N. Y., May 27.—Count de Rochambeau and party arrived over the West Shore road at 9 a. m. They were met by the academy board and headed by a detachment of cavalry, were driven in a pouring rain to the academy passing the cadets standing at present arms and the band playing national anthems. The party headed by the count walked to the parade ground and with the rain still falling in torrents, walked around the entire six companies and inspected them. The cadets then passed in review before the visitors.

An athletic exhibition was given in the gymnasium, at which Count de Rochambeau congratulated the cadets on their skill. An inspection of the various buildings and departments was made and a photograph of the party was taken on the chapel steps. Before leaving for New York, the count addressed the cadets, congratulating them on their fine appearance and soldierly bearing, and saying their country had reason to be proud of their services. The party left on the dispatch boat Dolphin, which came up yesterday.

CITY DID NOT DO IT

Jury Finds Weather Alone Responsible For Mary McComber's Loss.

Returns Verdict For Defendant In Suit Against City.

Other Workings of the Juries In the District Courts.

The jury in the case of Mary E. McComber against the city of Duluth, decided that the city was not responsible for the damage done to the plaintiff's property by a storm last year.

One of last year's storms, the severest but one in thirty years, destroyed Mrs. McComber's garden on Sixth street and Fifteenth avenue east. She claimed that it carried off the top soil, which was worth $7770, and spoiled that year's crops, and she alleged that she had been making $2000 a year from the place, so she sued for $9770, alleging that the city was responsible for the damage because of some arrangements it had made of the ditches that ought to have carried off the water.

The case went to the jury at 5:30 o'clock last night, and a verdict was reached at 10 o'clock. This morning it was returned into court, and proved to be for the city. The jury found, in answer to questions, that the storm was unusually severe, and of such a nature that it could not have been reasonably expected. It found that the crops that had grown prior to the storm were worth $250, but that the city was not responsible for their loss.

The plaintiff entered a motion for a new trial on the minutes of the court.

In the case of John Fraser against William Clark, the jury yesterday gave the plaintiff a verdict for $170. He sued for $3000.

Another jury gave a verdict in favor of Rachael Millerd against Feliz Hertzog and others under direction of the court. A building occupied by the defendants had slid over six inches on the plaintiff's property, and she sued to have the property restored. It is said that the building had been on the land for nearly fifteen years, and that a short time longer would have given the defendants a chance to secure title by adverse possession.

Judge Dibell's court today was hearing the case of the estate of George Poulain against the Duluth-Superior Traction company, to recover $5,000 damages for Poulain's death. He was run down by a street car at Seventh avenue west and Superior street Sept. 28, 1901, and almost instantly killed, while riding a bicycle.

Judge Cant and a jury this morning took up the case of the Clyde Iron works against Charles Stone. The plaintiff built a cement mixer for Stone, who had a contract for furnishing the cement blocks for the north pier of the Duluth ship canal. It is claimed that the machine was to be used and that the Clyde Iron works was to get 20 cents per cubic yard for all cement mixed with it. It was not used, but the plaintiffs sue to recover at the rate of 30 cents for all the cement mixed after the machine was delivered. The defendant claims the machine was not up to contract, and that it could not be used. Mitchell & Reynolds appear for the plaintiff, and Howard T. Abbott for the defendant.

St. Paul, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. Ohage will accept the reappointment by Mayor Smith as health officer. The formal appointment will probably be made by the mayor tomorrow morning. Business Men Think So

And showed their faith by buying liberally of the stock yesterday. You are buying into a business proposition, as your money is going toward making the property more valuable and putting the property on a dividend paying basis.

You Make No Mistake

When you turn down the wildly inflammatory statements of some of the over-capitalized companies that are now seeking to get your money and turn to a company which has the oil and has but little over 200,000 shares of its stock issued and selling at only

10c Per Share

You are buying something which has the oil, which is capitalized conservatively so that it can pay dividends and which will pay good dividends. Capt. J. D. Parker, who is looking after the property for the company, says in a letter: "You have a property which will surely pay dividends by going ahead with drilling more wells, such as you have already brought in."

We Are Going Ahead

AT WEST DULUTH

President George J. Mallory has called a special meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club for Friday evening of this week to discuss the question of a Fourth of July celebration for this end of the city. Sentiment of the members of the club seems to be divided on the advisability and feasibility of the project and it is the desire to know how the club as a whole will stand on the proposition. Fourth of July celebrations have been held in this part of the city that were complete successes, but any effort along this line means that there must be a united movement on the part of every West Duluth business man and a support of it by the West Duluth people themselves. It is desirable that the membership be well represented at the Friday night meeting.

WATER IS HIGH.

John Riley, William Edmonson and George Campbell, of Cloquet, drove down yesterday afternoon to West Duluth, and will return sometime today. They report the road to Cloquet in fine condition, except one portion about two miles in length. Mr. Riley says that of the five sawmills at Cloquet, all but one are running day and night. He says that while there was a lack of water to get the drives down stream a few days ago, there is now a surplus of water and about all the logs have come down. The river was very high at Cloquet yesterday, so much so that with another six inches rise the mills would have to close down.

Mr. Riley says that the lumber yards at Cloquet were never so depleted of stocks as they were when the sawing season started this spring. This was accountable to the steady demand for lumber during the winter and the heavy rail shipments. Cloquet business interests are said to be in a prosperous condition and everything is looking toward a good season.

WANT STREET OPENED.

West Duluth property owners have petitioned the city council for the opening of Gosnold street between Sixtieth and Sixty-first avenues west. A private thoroughfare has been used by teams. A sidewalk has also been constructed and the citizens wish to see a public street made clear through so that some improvements may be made.

GRAHAM-NELLIS.

The marriage of Miss Agnes Graham of West Superior, and Jean Nellis, of West Duluth, was solemnized this morning at the St. James Catholic church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John Fecheley. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few of the intimate friends of the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Nellis left for a wedding trip to the Twin Cities and will be at home in West Duluth after a week. Mr. Nellis is employed in the lath room of the St. Louis mill.

FORMERLY A RESIDENT.

Lynn Elston, a former well known business man of West Duluth, is spending a few days visiting relatives and old acquaintances in the city. Mr. Elston formerly had a shoe store next to the Hendricks Dry Goods company. He left West Duluth with his family about ten years ago and settled in an Ohio town, where he has been in business until recently. He has sold out his interests and is looking for another location. This is his first visit to his old home since he left and he says that while he has noted so many changes in the industrial growth of the city, he misses a large number of the old friends he had here. Mr. Elston is a guest of his brother, Charles W. Elston. Mrs. Elston is visiting her parents at Verndale, Minn.

NOTICE.

There will be special meeting of the Commercial club Friday evening, to consider advisability of a Fourth of July celebration in West Duluth.

G. J. MALLORY, President.

CRAWFORD-MORRIS.

Announcement has been made of the approaching wedding of Miss Susie Crawford, of New Duluth, and Charles Morris, of Winnipeg. The ceremony will take place at high noon at the residence of the bride's parents, next Monday. It will be performed by Rev. Mr. Knudson, of New Duluth, and will be witnessed by only the relatives and immediate friends. Miss Grace Crawford, a sister of the bride, arrived from Minneapolis this morning and will act as bridesmaid. Roy Huggins, of New Duluth, will be the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Morris will make their home in West Duluth, and will be at home after June 15.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Miss Anna Brayden, of the West Duluth postal station, has returned from a week's visit in the Twin Cities.

The construction work on the Wieland & Wade new building has been stopped as it is impossible to get the iron posts necessary before any more of the brick work can be done. The molders' strike is said to have caused the delay.

Rev. John Feeheley left this morning for Hibbing. He will return tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Merriam and daughter left this morning for visits at Iowa points.

James Murray, aged about 80 years, died this morning at the family residence, No. 24 Fifty-seventh avenue west. The decedent leaves a wife and several grown-up children. Most of the sons are employed on the range. Mr. Murray has resided in West Duluth for the past ten or twelve years. The remains will be shipped to Mapleton, Minn., for burial tomorrow afternoon.

John Sullivan and P. Murray have returned from a several days' fishing trip up the Missabe road. They brought back all their new camp equipment, but no fish. It is explained that they ate all the fish while on the trip, but the explanation is listened to in pained silence by their friends and associates.

Everett Peterson, the 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peterson, of 822 South Sixty-fourth avenue west, died evening. The funeral will be held from the family residence, Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Interment will take place at Oneota cemetery.

Mary Sundeen, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sundeen, of 505 North Fifty-fifth avenue west, died this morning. The funeral was held from the house this afternoon.

The question of Memorial day closing is being agitated among the West Duluth merchants.

C. J. Petruschke has let the contract for the improvements that were mentioned some time ago for his box factory. He will have an addition built, about 30 by 65 feet.

The West Duluth Athletic club met last evening and initiated several new members.

THE DEED FILED.

R. F. Fitzgerald's Purchase of Superior Street Property.

The deed to the property at 313 West Superior street, purchased some time ago by Robert F. Fitzgerald from George W. Sherwood, the deal being reported by The Herald at the time, was filed this morning in the office of the register of deeds. After the deal was made Mr. Sherwood refused to deliver the deed, and Mr. Fitzgerald brought suit to compel him to do so. The suit will now be dismissed. The property is the west half of lot 53 West Superior street, Duluth proper, First division, and it is the lot adjoining the store of F. D. Day & Co. on the east. The consideration is $20,000.

IS STILL PURSUING

Joseph Sheehy Causes Arrest of Moses Cook Once More.

Again Charged With Keeping His Saloon Open Sunday.

Clothing Man Arrested By Him Enters Plea of Guilty.

Joseph Sheehy continues the Bowery reform movement despite the fact that the council refuses to give him an employment license.

This morning he swore out another complaint against Moses Cook, who keeps a saloon at the corner of Michigan street and Fifth avenue west. Mr. Sheehy says that Cook tried to sidetrack the onward march of high moral endeavor by dispensing liquid surcease of sorrow on Sunday.

Last week Mr. Sheehy had Mr. Cook arrested on the same charge and served due notice on the saloon man that another arrest was forthcoming if he persisted in keeping open contrary to law.

The saloon man evidently did not heed the warning and the trouble came up on schedule time this morning when Mr. Sheehy appeared at the city hall and put up $5 of his own money to cover the statutory costs in case Cook should be acquitted.

S. E. Gittleson, of the Eagle Clothing store, who was arrested on complaint of Joseph Sheehy for keeping his clothing store open on Sunday, entered a plea of guilty when he appeared in court this morning and was fined $1 and costs. It is said that Moses Cook is sort of a silent partner in the Eagle Clothing company.

AT MESABA.

How Six People Keep Up Government at That Place.

There seemed to be doubt in the minds of some of the jurors in the case against John Wallace, of Mesaba, charged with selling whisky without a license, in district court, for at a late hour this afternoon the jury was still out. The case was given to the jury at 11 o'clock this morning, and a verdict was expected within a short time. The court waited until noon before taking up another case, thinking that the jurors could be used on the next case, but they did not appear.

Wallace ran a saloon for some time at the unique community of Mesaba, where six people keep up a village and township organization by doubling or tripling up on the offices. There are not nearly enough people to go around among the offices, and Wallace himself has been holding quite a number of official positions.

His testimony was that he started in the saloon business two years ago in August, that he took out two government licenses, the second of which will expire next August, and that he took out one village license, running from April, 1901, to April, 1902. Two witnesses swore that they bought a bottle of whisky of him on May 3, but Wallace denied this, and said he had sold no whisky since two weeks before the expiration of his village license.

When pinned down on cross-examination by Country Attorney McClintock and asked how it happened that he had a government license for two years and a village license for only one, Wallace became very much confused on dates. The bottle of red liquor that the state's witnesses swore they bought of him was introduced in evidence, and he said he never sold any whisky with a label like that.

Rather a funny thing happened when the defense was examining a witness as to Wallaces' reputation for truth and veracity. He said he knew his reputation in the community in which he lived, and that it was good.

"How many people are there in that community?" asked Mr. McClintock.

"Six," replied the witness.

The next case on call was that against John Murphy, accused of grand larceny in the second degree. This was to have been taken up this afternoon. Murphy is charged with stealing some clothes from a house in Hibbing, May 2.

FINED FOR ASSAULT.

Picket of Clerk's Union Is Attacked.

A picket of the Retail Clerks' union was assaulted on Superior street this morning.

E. D. Dickey, the man that did the heavy work, came very near being mobbed, and from this time on the union will probably give him special attention.

Dickey represents a clothing store which has been declared unfair by the union because it does not close early in the evening as do the leading stores in the down town district. One of the pickets sent out by the union to divert trade to the stores under the early closing agreement, is Patrick Roach. He was walking in front of the unfair store this morning distributing cards, when Dickey stepped up behind him and knocked him down.

It is claimed by a number of persons that Dickey struck him several times when he was down and the crowd that soon gathered was preparing to take the part of the fallen picket when Sergeant Sam Thompson caught Dickey and pulled him off.

He was hustled into court almost immediately after the assault and paid a fine and costs amounting to $7.50.

There was considerable excitement in union circles when the news of the assault got around. It seems that Dickey went after another picket last Thursday, but the two were separated before much damage resulted.

New Town to Open.

The local land office will, within the next few days, issue notices of the opening of a new town, 152-25, Itasca county. The entire tract includes about 23,000 acres, of which the state will get about 13,000 under the swamp land grant. The balance of the land is said to be mostly adapted for agricultural purposes. It is watered by the Big Fork river and lies in a section of Northern Minnesota that is being rapidly settled up. The date of the opening has not yet been fixed, but it will be some time during the latter part of July.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a botttle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it, or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmers' Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fiftycent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton, N. Y. When writing mention that you read this generous offer in The Duluth Evening Herald.

DIRECTORS.

Young Women's Christian Association Elects Its Board.

The Young Women's Christian association has elected the following board of directors: Mesdames J. D. Titcomb, W. W. Billson, F. C. Bowman, W. J. McCabe, W. C. Agnew, S. D. Allen, McCord, Gray and Grieser. Mrs. J. D. Titcomb was elected temporary chairman and Miss Ella Grieser treasurer.

The association expects some time in June to open a lunch room in connection with a rest room. It will have a physical director here by next fall so that all women and girls may have the privilege of a gymnasium and competent instruction. One of the first things that will be attended to will be the apointment of a depot matron, such as are employed in other cities by the organization.

Other phases of the work, such as the boarding house, domestic science department and other educational classes will be started as soon as practicable.

At a meeting of the board of directors it was decided that the one dollar memberships should admit to the lunch and rest rooms and all educational classes where there is no additional expense to the association. The $5 memberships will admit to the gymnasium and all other educational classes besides the lunch and rest rooms.

BEEF TRUST.

Hearing On Its Operation Continued at Albany.

Albany, N. Y., May 27.—The hearing on the operation of the alleged beef combination was continued today before former Justice Judson S. Landon as referee. The first witness was William N. Coffee, of Troy. He testified that he was formerly employed by the Western packing houses to represent them in Troy and to furnish them, weekly with a list of the retail meat dealers in his territory who failed to pay their bills for meat delivered each week. The object of this, he said, was to compel butchers who were slow in paying for goods delivered to pay cash for their meat until such time as they could settle their accounts. He said he had been notified last week that there was no longer any need for his services, as the working agreement between the packing houses was no longer in force.

It's So Easy

To take cold. It's so common to neglect the cold. That is one reason why there are so many people with "deep-seated," stubborn coughs, and so many more with "lung trouble."

The short, quick way to cure a cough is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The quicker this remedy is used the quicker the cure. But even when neglect has let disease fasten on the lungs, "Golden Medical Discovery" may be relied on to cure in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred.

The only motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little extra profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains. You lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I am feeling quite well," writes Miss Dorcas A. Lewis, of No. 1129 24th St., Washington, D. C. "My cough is very much better, and I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I cannot say too much in praise of the medicine. I had been quite a sufferer for a long time, and after reading Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser thought I would try his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I commenced taking it in May, 1899. Had not been sleeping well for a long time. Took one teaspoonful of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and slept nearly all night without coughing, so I continued taking it. I am in great sympathy with everybody who suffers with a cough. I had been a sufferer for more than ten years. I tried lots of different medicines and different doctors, but did not feel much better. I coughed until I commenced spitting blood, but now I feel much stronger and am entirely well. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best medicine I have ever taken. My home is in Williamsburg, Virginia."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a ladies' laxative. No other medicine equals them for gentleness and thoroughness.

DESERTED A CHILD

Police of Duluth and Superior Puzzled Over Singular Case.

Left Child at Commercial Hotel In Superior During Night.

They Were Evidently Prosperous Being Expensively Dressed.

The police of two cities are puzzled today over a singular case of child desertion.

A stylishly dressed couple, accompanied by a beautiful child of 3 years, registered at the Commercial hotel, West Superior, last evening.

The woman took the night train for St. Paul, and some time during the night the man mysteriously left the hotel leaving the child.

The authorities are greatly puzzled over the case and are making a diligent search for the man today.

The child's clothing indicates wealth and refinement, as did the general appearance of the man and woman that deserted it.

They registered as Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lawey. The woman wore very stunning gowns about the hotel during the short time she was there and seemed to have an abundance of jewelry.

She was about 25 years of age, tall and very slender and a pronounced brunette.

The man was apparently 38 years of age and dressed better than the ordinary run of guests at the Commercial hotel.

The child is exceptionally pretty and it is said does not resemble in the slightest way either of the two persons that deserted it.

A man answering the description was seen coming to Duluth and the police of this side of the bay have been in the lookout for him.

IS STEADY.

Demand For Men Continues Good Especially From Railroads.

The demand for men for the woods and for railroad work continues steady, and from fifty to seventy men are sent out of the city daily. The supply of labor seems very good at the present time, and there are plenty of men inquiring for work. The highest wages are being paid at the present time on railroad contract work, of which there is a large amount going on in the Northwest at the present time.

Halvorson & Richards have just closed two more contracts for spur tracks for the Eastern Minnesota road, on the range, and are making heavy bids in the labor market.

Railroad contractors are paying $2 per day, with free fare, as a rule, and board from $3.50 to $4 per week. The railroad companies are paying about $1.75 for extra gangs. Wages in the woods range from $28 to $30 per month. Teamsters' wages run from $30 to $35 per month. Railroad contract orders are being filled the most readily, and men are being sent on the range, to Wisconsin and Northern Michigan.

WHITEMAN.

Alonzo J. Once More Escapes Meshes of the Law.

New York, May 27.—Alonzo J. Whiteman, who was arrested here some time ago on a charge of forgery, was discharged from custody today. Whiteman was convicted and sentenced to two years and six months' imprisonment. The appellate division of the supreme court reversed the decision of the lower court and ordered a new trial. In its decision the appellate court said:

"The people have failed to introduce evidence tending to establish the guilt of the defendant beyond reasonable doubt. The facts and circumstances are suspicious, but they do not necessarily point to the guilt of the defendant and are not inconsistent with his innocence."

Today the district attorney recommended that the charge be withdrawn, which was done.

Whiteman was at one time prominent in Minnesota politics.

WITH CHILI

United States Has Finally Closed an Extradition Treaty.

Washington, May 27.—Secretary Hay today closed up one of the principal places of refuge for criminals committing crimes in the United States, when he exchanged the final ratifications with Walker Martinez, the Chilian minister here, of the new Chilian extradition treaty. The United States never has had such a treaty with Chili, and some of the most notable defaulters and embezzlers from the United States have found safety in that country. It has been difficult to secure a satisfactory treaty, and the negotiations which led up to the drafting of this arrangement lasted several years. In fact the treaty itself bears date of April, 1900, when it was first signed at Santiago by Minister Wilson and the Chilian minister for foreign affairs.

HEAVY DAMAGE BY FLOOD.

Pueblo, May 27.—The damage done in this city by the flood of the Fountain river last night is estimated at $300,000. The railroads are the principal sufferers.

ANOTHER ARREST

As a Result of Jury Investigation at St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 27.—A bench warrant was issued today for the arrest, on the charge of bribery and extortion, of Fred W. Ziegenheim, who served as private secretary to his father, former Mayor Henry Ziegenheim, during the last two years of his term. Judge Douglas of the criminal court issued the warrant at the instance of the grand jury which has been investigating practices which have prevailed in the mayor's office during the Ziegenheim administration. The use of the permit privilege, the remission of fines, the pardoning of workhouse prisoners and the methods in dealing with merchants who sought the privilege of placing signs over their places of business was particularly investigated.

IMPORTANT!

Read carefully and consider well what in time may prove the most valuable opportunity of your life.

THE ARIZONA-UTAH PARAFFINE OIL CO. Incorporated under the laws of the territory of Arizona, capital stock 1,500,000 shares at the par value of $1.00 per share, of this stock 492,000 shares have been set aside by said company for developement purposes only. The points of the Arizona law are:

First—It makes by statue the stock absolutely non-assessable and whatever price is paid for the stock constitutes the full paid value.

Second—Stockholders are not liable for the company debts. The company only being liable for its debts. The company owns 2800 acres of land in the heart of the Green River Oil Fields in Utah which has been carefully selected by Mr. J. A. C. Freund, the manager of the company, who is an expert on oil lands, and who has spent twelve years in all the important oil fields in the country.

The Utah oil fields have passed the experimental stage—three wells will be shipping oil as soon as a pipe line is constructed, estimates to furnish forty barrels each per day of the finest lubricating oil, worth from $6.00 to $8.00 per barrel.

The officers of the company are men of high standing and responsibility.

I have personally examined the lands of the company and from indications and oil seepages of a very strong character surrounding the same on all sides I am confident that oil is underlying the land. 150,000 shares of the treasury stock has been placed in my hands for sale at TEN CENTS PER SHARE, and I am now ready to receive subscriptions on same. Prospectus and order blanks will be mailed upon application. All remittances should be made payable to the Merchants Bank of Duluth. They have consented to act as trustee and all stock will be delivered through them.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR

Will Visit North Shore For His Health.

Bert Leston Taylor, of Chicago arrived here yesterday afternoon on his way from northern Wisconsin to the north shore. His health broke down, and the Chicago Tribune and Harper's Weekly, on the staff of both of which publications he has been for some time, granted him a vacation until August 1.

Mr. Taylor expects to utilize his vacation in the woods in the writing of a book on the north shore for Harper's. He was commissioned to do so some months ago, and the only possible interference will come from continued poor health.

Mr. Taylor left Duluth two and a half years ago, accepting a minor place on the Chicago Journal. His advancement there was very rapid, for his peculiar talents and well nigh flawless literary style, which in purity and fluency has few equals, and it was not long before he occupied the foremost place on that paper, succeeding Peter Finley Dunn, of Dooley fame, in that regard. His column of satirical paragraphs, jingle and sketches on the passing events of the day had meantime attracted the attention of literary and newspaper men all over the country, and several Chicago newspapers and literary weeklies sought to secure his services. The Chicago Tribune succeeded, and his "Line-o'-Type" column and "B. L. T." have become peculiarly Chicago and literary institutions.

Mr. Taylor's burlesque of Elbert Hubbard's "Philistine" was so delightful that publishers put it out in duplicating the "Philistine," as well as in an edition de luxe. Two numbers were printed in this way, and both obtained large circulation. He also collaborated in the writing of a musical comedy, "The Explorers." His lyrics were generally recognized to be the best that have been heard in musical comedy or light opera for years, so superior to the doggerel that is usually heard that there is no comparison in metrical quality or fluency.

Mr. Taylor will spend about a week in Duluth visiting friends before going down the north shore, where he will make his headquarters at Grand Marais this summer. Mrs. Taylor and daughter are spending the summer with her mother in Providence.

BARROWS ABOUT THE SAME.

Oberlin, Ohio, May 27.—President Barrows, of Oberlin college, who is suffering with pneumonia, passed a fairly comfortable night and this morning was able to take some nourishment. The disease has not attacked his left lung. The right lung is, however, completely involved. He is not quite so strong today as yesterday. The bulletin issued by the physicians early today stated that the patient's pulse was 124; temperature, 100 4-10; respiration, 36.

RINGLING.

The Great Circus Coming to Duluth on June 23.

Ringling Bros.' popular big circus is coming back to Duluth next month. The date has been definitely fixed for Monday, June 23. It is very unusual for this show to visit a city, however successful its engagements may be, two years in succession, and the Duluth public is therefore to be congratulated on getting the show again after so brief an interval. It must not be supposed, however, that the exhibition is the same as last year. Great as last season's performance was, it has been changed for later and more up-to-date novelties, and the thousands who saw the show last season will hardly recognize a face or an act in the new program.

During the past winter Ringling Bros.' European agents made a very thorough tour of the continental cities, and succeeded in engaging a large number of foreign acts of exceptional merit. Many of these acts are quite new to America—not only new so far as the performers are concerned, but also new and novel in an exhibitional way. The imported trained animal acts are especially numerous, and some of them have created a sensation in other cities where they have been seen. This is especially true of Capt. Webb's juggling seals and sea lions. This is said to be the greatest act of its kind in the world, and certainly the press has been most enthusiastic in its praise of the performance given by these singularly intelligent sea animals.

American acts have not been ignored, and some of the best riders, acrobats and aerialists are native to the United States. John O'Brien, whose big horse act attracted so much favorable comment in Duluth last season, has introduced another horse display, which is on a still greater scale of magnitude and beauty. It is called an equine ballet, and is notable for the perfection and training of the horses, the cleverness of the riders and the brilliancy of the costuming.

The menagerie shows many notable additions this year. There is a new trained elephant act, and the hippodrome is presented on an unequaled scale of completeness. A new street parade is an incidental feature that is expected to arouse enthusiasm.

LICENSE REFUSED

Joseph Sheehy Pays Penalty For Having Insulted Council.

Employment Agency Licenses Granted Under Certain Restrictions.

Sanitary Condition of Minnesota Point to Be Investigated.

The council last night:

Refused an employment agency license to Joseph Sheehy.

Reported in favor of stricter employment agency regulations.

Refused to allow any more overhead street signs.

Requested that only union labor work on city hall jobs.

Requested sanitary examination of Minnesota Point.

Reported back appropriation for Fond du Lac-New Duluth road.

Requested the improvement of Morse street dock on Park Point.

Received recommendation of sale for old pumping station property.

Received petition for extension of Gosnold street, West Duluth.

Scathingly arraigned for insulting the council a year ago, Joseph Sheehy was refused a license to conduct an employment agency.

Several weeks ago the council allowed him a license, but the mayor vetoed the resolution.

Last evening the license was again favorably reported on. In the lively debate following the report, Alderman McEwen expressed the opinion that Sheehy was not any worse than some other employment agents he knew of, but was not so diplomatic.

Alderman Moore said that in the face of the mayor's veto, Sheehy's general reputation, and the manner in which he insulted the council a year ago, he was scarcely a proper person to give a license to. Mr. Moore further stated that the Zenith City Telephone company had to take out the instrument in Sheehy's office owing to the language he used to the central girls.

Alderman Swenson recalled the scene in the council chamber a year ago when Mr. Sheehy used obscene language to the aldermen and was escorted from the chamber by the sergeant-at-arms, and said that such a person was not fit to conduct an employment business.

The vote resulted in 6 for the license and 8 against it. All other employment agency licenses were granted.

Aldermen Trevillion, Tischer and Kern, composing the committee that recently investigated charges of alleged fraudulent dealings on the part of employment agents, reported that there was insufficient evidence to pin the charges down to any one agency, but that there was a general method of beating woodsmen and the employment business should be under more strict regulations. The report also contained a provision against allowing employment agents to have openings from their offices into saloons.

• • •

Alderman Mannheim made a brief, but vigorous talk against allowing overhead street signs to extend across the sidewalks. The Third ward alderman characterized this as extremely dangerous to life and public safety, and secured the defeat of a resolution granting permission to erect such a sign.

• • •

Alderman Tischer again demonstrated himself the friend of organized labor by inserting a provision in the specifications for repapering the office of the board of fire commissioners, that the work shall be done by members of organized labor only.

The mayor's office was recently repapered by an employe of the fire department, who is not a member of the Painters' and Decorators' union. The work, however, was done during the absence of the mayor from the city, and he ordered the work to cease the moment he heard of it.

• • •

Alderman Neff secured the adoption of a resolution calling on the health commissioner to make a personal investigation of the sanitary conditions existing on Minnesota Point from the street car barns to Oatka beach.

This section of the point is rapidly filling up with summer cottages and it is feared that cess pools and wells may endanger the health of the campers.

If the health commissioner finds that there is cause for apprehension on account of unsanitary conditions, he is to present a plan for the bettering of conditions.

• • •

The resolution of Alderman Kern, appropriating $2200 for the Fond du Lac-New Duluth road in case the county should appropriate $1100 was put over for another week pending a report on the condition of the public works fund from which the appropriation would have to be made.

A good-sized delegation of New Duluth and Fond du Lac citizens attended the meeting in the interest of this resolution.

• • •

On the strength of a resolution introduced by Alderman Neff, the department of public works was instructed to make $50 worth of repairs to the Morse street dock on Park Point. At present the dock is in such condition that the ferry landings in stormy weather are frequently attended with danger.

• • •

The board of water and light commissioners recommended the sale of a strip of land 14 feet wide at the north end of the old pumping station property at the foot of Fifteenth avenue east. The Duluth & Iron Range offers $1000 for 2800 square feet.

• • •

A number of West Duluth property owners petitioned the council to condemn a strip of property through blocks 126 and 127, West Duluth, Fifth division, in order to connect the east and west ends of Gosnold street.

The petition was referred to Aldermen Barnes, Tessman and Moore.

LET HIM ALONE.

Norris & Rowe's Advice as to Escaped Buffalo.

A young buffalo with the Norris & Rowe show broke away last evening and made his escape to the woods, in all probability. Up to this afternoon he had eluded all efforts to capture him.

The animal was picked up by the show in Helena, Mont., and was not as yet a part of the exhibition, for it had not yet been tamed. The management is anxious that any person who may come across the animal make no attempt to capture it unless they are accustomed to handling vicious animals, for the beast is a rather dangerous customer to tackle. Anyone used to handling vicious young bulls can get along with him all right, but anyone who takes him for a meek sort of cow will have trouble on his hands.

PATENTS ISSUED.

Washington, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following patents have been issued to residents of Duluth: Gaston L. C. Borch, piano attachment; Frank L. Levy, cutter.

THE DAKOTAS.

Lyman County Cowboy Dragged to Death By Horse.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Armour—Louis Seese lost his life on the range in Lyman county. He was in the act of throwing a rope over the head of a horse and hitching one end around the horn of his saddle when the animal reared and the slip noose he had tied, instead of going over the horn, caught Seese by the wrist, and he was pulled to the ground. J. N. Leedom, realizing his partner's dangerous position, mounted his own horse and started in pursuit, but a distance of half a mile had been traversed before he succeeded in getting near enough to the frightened horse that was dragging Mr. Seese to cut the rope. The man was so badly injured he never gained consciousness and died in about two hours.

Lead—Thomas Haines has been bound over to the grand jury on the charge of attempted criminal assault.

Chamberlain—Allen Walking Shield, the notorious Rosebud Indian, was held to the United States grand jury charged with the murder of Mrs. Ghost Face Bear.

Belle Fourche—It is estimated there will be 1,000,000 pounds of wool stored in warehouses here this spring. There is to be a sale in a few days, and special trains will be run.

Fort Meade—An inspection of this post has been completed by Gen. W. A. Kobbe, commander of this department. It is expected three new stone barracks will be built this summer.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Some time ago Frank and Lena Lake attempted to move a building upon some lots adjoining the home of D. McInnis. The latter secured a temporary injunction preventing them. On the final arguments, Judge Pollock made the injunction permanent. The Lakes were enjoined on the ground they would become a nuisance. The decision is directly contrary to one made by the court in the case of the erection of a livery stable adjoining the Baptist parsonage.

IN MICHIGAN.

Four New Cases of Smallpox In Houghton County.

Houghton—Four new cases of smallpox have been discovered in Houghton county in the past few days and it is feared a large number of unvaccinated persons were exposed. The disease has been prevalent in the copper district to more or less extent for nearly two years, but fortunately has been in a very mild form. Various health boards in the county are urging vaccination and taking active steps to isolate all suspects and prevent spread of the disease.

Sault Ste. Marie—Another water power canal is to be dug by the Clergue syndicate here. It will be the third to use the water of Lake Superior for the Consolidated Lake Superior company, and will increase the company's power to about 130,000 horse-power. All the contracts for this canal will be let this summer and heavy concerns are now making estimates. The canal will require the removal of 400,000 cubic yards of earth and 600,000 cubic yards of stone, and will be several years in building.

Gladstone—C. V. R. Townsend, chairman of the Delta county Republican committee, has issued a call for a convention to be held in Escanaba June 6. It has been decided to combine the separate conventions and in this one convention to elect state, senatorial, congressional and representative delegates. Delta county Republicans will nominate the first state representative from Delta county.

Escanaba—The corner stone of the fine new church building about to be erected by St. Patrick's parish was laid yesterday afternoon by Bishop Eis, of Marquette. Rev. F. C. Ryan, of Milwaukee, preached the sermon; Rev. Messrs. Jolsten, of Norway; Hollinger, of Gladstone; Jacques, of Rapid River; Halfield, of Hancock, and Corcoran, of Schaffer, participated in the exercises. The church will with its furnishings, cost approximately $45,000, and will be about 60x148 feet in size. It is less than a year since the new organization was started by Rev. J. M. Langan.

HE WAS DRUNK.

Why Secretary Root Wants Capt. Smith Dismissed.

Washington, May 27.—Secretary Root is not lenient with army officers guilty of chronic alcoholism or of being drunk on duty.

Capt. H. E. Smith, on duty at Fort McHenry, Md., will be tried by court-martial under the special instructions of Secretary Root because he is alleged to be guilty of the offense mentioned.

Capt. Smith was ordered before a retiring board, and that board, although having evidence showing that Smith was guilty of chronic alcoholism and of being drunk on duty, recommended that he should be put on the retired list. Secretary Root was much incensed, and in ordering a court-martial, said:

"These are not the grounds for placing an officer on the retired list and supporting him the rest of his life in idleness at the expense of his country, but they are grounds for dismissing him from the service which he has disgraced; nor does it furnish any reason for keeping such an officer under observation and treatment for six months, or for any period. Immediate and severe discipline is called for, and nothing else."

Capt. H. E. Smith was born in Maine and appointed from Minnesota in 1891. He was graduated from West Point in 1895 and assigned to the cavalry branch of the service. His home is Waseca.

SCALDED IN BATH TUB.

Former Attendants at an Insane Asylum Indicted.

Jacksonville, Ill., May 27.—In the face of the refusal of Gov. Yates to order an investigation into the charges that the management of the Illinois Central hospital for the insane was responsible for the death of Earl C. Watkins, a 16-year-old patient, the grand jury of Morgan county has just returned an indictment against two of the former attendants in the institution charging them with involuntary manslaughter.

The boy died as the result of a scalding received in a bath tub while being attended by Charles Goodnow and J. T. Owen, employes of the asylum. Capiases have been issued for the arrest of both defendants, but thus far they have not been served. Owen is said to be in Jacksonville, while Goodnow is employed as coachman for the superintendent of the state asylum for the insane at Bartonville. Owen probably will be arrested today, and a deputy sheriff left for Bartonville last night to place Goodnow under arrest. Bail was fixed by the grand jury at $3,000 for each defendant.

While sentiment in Jacksonville is divided with respect to the necessity for an investigation into the affairs of the asylum, the action of the grand jury represents a defined feeling in the community in favor of a probing of the affairs of the institution.

Secretary Stevens has expressed hearty appreciation of the offer. A banquet in their honor is planned and a visit to the World's Fair grounds. WANTS A CITY DOCK.

Superior Thinks It Would Bring Passenger Business.

The Hundred Thousand club of West Superior has endorsed the idea of a city dock and is pushing the matter. The West Superiorites claim that all the lake passenger business is done from Duluth for the reason that there is not a suitable dock for the boats to land at over there. The location that is being talked of is at the foot of Fifth street. The cost, it is said, would not reach an exorbitant figure if the municipality asserts its right to condemn the property necessary for the dock.

At a meeting of the club to be held Wednesday evening a committee appointed to investigate the reason why so little of the local flour is used in West Superior will report. It is said that the West Superior millers claim their flour, made of the finest unmixed wheat, is put on the market at a wholesale price ranging about 15 cents a barrel more than the best so-called Minnesota brands, and that they cannot possibly compete with the Minnesota millers without lowering the standard of excellence of their flour, and that inasmuch as they have a market in the East for their entire production, they do not care to make the change.

Opens In Wisconsin.

The pike, bass, muskallonge and other game fish season opened in Wisconsin yesterday, and there is said to have been quite an exodus of fishermen on the St. Louis river and to the adjoining lakes. Few catches have been reported, however. The bass season will open in this state next Sunday, June 1.

FOR LA FOLLETTE.

West Superior Republicans Favoring Him to Organize.

The Republican leaders in West Superior, who favor the return of Governor La Follette to the office of chief executive of the state of Wisconsin, have arranged for a public meeting in the city hall there this evening to effect a permanent organization and open the campaign in West Superior and Douglas county. The governor's friends expect to do active work for him in the northern part of the state from now on until the June convention.

It is claimed in West Superior that Congressman Jenkins' candidacy did not receive the warmest of support in his home county, and that, while a delegation favorable to him was selected, another delegation might have been selected had Douglas county put up a delegation for Judge Roberts. Prominent Republicans of Chippewa county are said to be disappointed because Judge Roberts did not receive the support of his own county.

THE MAY RECORD

Shipments of Iron Ore This Month Will Be Large.

Will Aggregate Not Far From Seventeen Hundred Thousand Tons.

Iron Range Road Has Passed Million Mark For Season.

The Duluth iron ranges will make an excellent May record for shipments, in spite of the fact that the tug strike during the early part of the month bunched vessel tonnage at the lower lake ports very seriously. The movement from the docks of the Duluth & Iron Range, Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Great Northern for the month ending next Saturday promises now to reach an aggregate of from 1,600,000 to 1,700,000 tons. The Duluth & Iron Range has already passed the million ton mark for the season. It shipped 453,000 tons in April, and it is expected that it will be able with good luck the rest of the week to pass 600,000 tons. The Missabe is already up above 400,000, and will easily get above half a million for the month. The Eastern Minnesota, it is expected, will probably pass a half million tons.

The Missabe is making an exceptionally good record, considering that all the time it has been working on the replacing of the trestle approach to No. 1 dock. This has been in use for almost ten years, and the timber needs replacing. It was expected that no ore would be shipped over the Missabe docks until May 1, and accidents delayed the progress of trestle reconstruction. It is now believed that the Missabe will ship more ore this year than ever before. This is different than the general expectation last winter. Last summer, this road handled 3,437,355 tons, and it was thought for a time that this would be about the volume of this season's traffic. The greatest season's business heretofore was accomplished in 1900, when 3,388,985 tons were forwarded from the docks here. It would not be surprising if the Missabe docks sent forward over 4,000,000 tons this season, if present conditions continue.

Conditions for a heavier movement of ore are much more favorable than they were earlier in the strike. Vessels were having considerable trouble in moving about the harbors without tugs and masters were naturally cautious about navigating narrow channels as a matter of course. For a time until quite recently, the more moderate size vessels seemed to be the principal tonnage that was moving. Now there seems to be relatively a much larger supply of large tonnage.

Reports from the receiving docks on Lake Erie indicate that the movement of ore, in spite of reduction through lack of tonnage, has been a little too active for the ore-carrying roads below to handle. Docks are said to be prevented from handling all that is going to them because of a scarcity of cars for sending the ore along to furnaces.

Regarding the conditions in the ore sales market, it is said that recent sales have indicated strongly the prospects for ore consumption during the present year. The furnacemen have been unable until now to convince themselves that the tremendous activity in the demand for pig iron will last through another year. The experiences of the past have all been against the maintenance of such high tension in the pig iron trade. Expecting a slump in the production they have naturally been a little chary about overbuying iron ore, and the backwardness was noticeable when the ore market was opened late in March. The fact that ore bought freely early in April and have been buying since indicates that they believe the continued high pressure of pig iron production is assured. When this had about come to this conclusion another halt was put on ore buying by the belief that the lake stock piles would be heavier this year than ever before. This being the case they expected that there would not be a demand for as much ore as they might desire to melt, hence the postponed buying. Now it has been shown that not only are the ore stocks light, but that the possible output of the furnaces has been sold up for the year, consequently there is an added interest in ore buying. The fact that the Michipicoten ores are being brought into the markets down below in large quantities does not seem to deter the furnacemen from also taking large stocks from the older ranges, and the buying indicates an enormous consumption. It is believed that the aggregate shipment during the year on new estimates, will be considerably in excess of first predictions. This may be affected by the strike of the furnace workmen which is coming, but how seriously remains to be seen.

AMUSEMENTS.

KING DRAMATIC COMPANY.

The King Dramatic company opened an engagement of five days at the Lyceum last night before a packed house in "The Cherry Pickers," and it scored a decided success. It is one of the best repertoire companies on the road, and last night's performance was distinctly creditable and surprisingly good. The play is quite a strenuous affair, with lots of strong situations, more in fact than falls to the portion of most plays. The scene is laid in India, and trouble enough happens to keep everybody intensely interested throughout. The company is much above the average of repertoire aggregations. Lon Beesley was acceptable as Nazar, his strong, well-pitched voice aiding him not a little. Miss Lillian Mae Crawford was excellent as Nourmalie. Miss Emma De-Weale was exceptionally good as the Widow O'Donnell-Duleep, her rich brogue and clever comedy capturing the house. Miss Goldie Cleveland was good as Ruda. Louis Dean was fair as the villain of the play, though his make-up was somewhat too wicked and his work a trifle too conventional and stagy. The specialty work of the Sullys, father, mother, son and daughter, took the house by storm.

Tonight the bill will be "Cumberland '61."

Bridge Foundation.

The molds for the concrete foundations of the aerial bridge to be built over the Duluth ship canal have been placed, and the material is arriving for the foundation. It is expected that it will be only a short time until this work is completed. The steel towers on either side of the canal could be erected this summer, but it is understood that the work will be delayed until fall.

Receipts Are Large.

The Duluth land office is doing a large business at the present time. The receipts last week were $9000 and the receipts yesterday were $4000. The increased receipts are said to come from large sales of Indian lands that have been opened. The entries during the past week have been for 160 acres in most instances, and were made up of stone and timber claims at $2.50 per acre. The receipts of the office for yesterday were from ten stone and timber entries.

MAY NOT OPEN THEN

No Steps Being Taken Toward Opening Normal School.

As Far as Can Be Learned Nothing Has Been Ordered.

Board of Control Apparently Intends to Further Delay Opening.

The Duluth normal school has been completed for three months.

About ninety days are left before the date set for the opening of the school, Sept. 1, and so far as can be learned not a step has been taken toward preparing for the opening.

People are beginning to notice this, and they are asking whether the Duluth normal school is a will-o'-the-wisp that seems always just within the city's grasp, yet ever recedes and remains just as far away as ever.

After waiting some time, owing to meager appropriations for the school from the state legislature, people at last considered that when it was announced that it would open Sept. 1 they could expect it then. The absence of any preparation for the opening is causing some alarm, and it is feared that disappointment again awits Duluth.

In view of the popular interest in the matter and the inquiries that were heard, The Herald has looked into the matter to some extent. The building is as bare as it was when it was completed and turned over to the state board of control three months ago. Not a move has been made to fit it out for beginning operations, and so far as can be learned the board of control, in whose hands everything rests, has taken no steps whatever.

The building must be fitted out as far as the available funds will permit before Sept. 1, yet so far as can be ascertained the furniture has not even been ordered. The equipment of the laboratories, which form a very essential feature of the school, is in the same stage, no orders having been given.

In order to make the school a success it will be necessary to advertise its opening some time in advance, in order to get pupils. Before circulars can be issued, the date of opening, the advantages that will be offered pupils, and kindred information must be at hand. None of these things can be done until it is definitely ascertained that the board of control is going to have the school ready.

Another vital point is that unless the school is opened, and there is something to tell of its progress and needs, next winter's delegation to the legislature will be in a very poor position to approach the state law-making body with requests for further appropriations, which will be very much needed, if the school is operating, it will be an easy matter for the Duluth delegation to ask the legislature for the money needed to keep it going.

The Duluth normal school has been secured at the cost of long and continued efforts, and there will undoubtedly be grave disappointment if it is not opened on the date set. Another point is that the salaries of the president of the school and of a care-taker are now going on, and this expenditure is practically a loss while the school is not running.

The entire matter is in the hands of the state board of control, and it cannot be learned that that body has taken a step. The board has never even visited Duluth, though one member, Mr. Lee, has been here on another errand.

There is probably still time in which to do all that is necessary, but people are beginning to fear that unless a start is made soon the opening will be again delayed, for the task of ordering and installing a complete outfit of furniture and appliances takes considerable time.

PACKED TENT.

Norris & Rowe's Animal Show Plays to Its Capacity.

Norris & Rowe's animal shows played to the capacity of their big tent last evening on the grounds at Thirteenth avenue east and Superior street. The ticket sellers were forced to quit and refuse admission to any more people some time before the performance began. When the show began every available inch of space was occupied. Hay was strewn on the ground in front of the seats and the space there was soon filled with boys and men.

The only criticism of the show that can be made was that it was so long delayed past the advertised hour of opening, the grand entry not beginning until 8:45 when it was advertised for 8 o'clock. However, the people were still passing into the tent at the hour of opening.

The acts were all excellent and the animals exhibited a marvelous degree of training and intelligence. Especially noticeable was the pleasing manner in which the performance was conducted there being none of the harshness sometimes found in exhibitions in which trained animals play a part. The work of the dogs, horses and monkeys was brilliant. The elephants, three in number, did all manner of clever tricks.

Most marvelous of all is the performance of the seals. Five small seals jumped out of their cage, climbed up on pedestals, shook hands with their trainer and clapped their "hands" at him. One walked a tight rope, another sang a song and all caught wooden rings thrown from a distance. A billy goat varied the performance by walking a tight rope and riding on a pony's back like a circus equestrienne. A baboon as large as a 3-year-old child astonished the spectators by turning back handsprings on a galloping pony and by riding a bicycle. Numerous funny clowns and a comical "Zooza" band helped to keep the audience in good humor between the animal acts while the performance is brought to a most excellent close by Lilliputian hippodrome races.

Especially pleasing about the conduct of the show is the gentlemanly conduct of the attaches toward the people, there being none of that surliness and bad temper so frequently found among men who are habitually handling large crowds.

The performance was repeated this afternoon and tonight will be seen for the last time.

Interstate Cars Now Running Over Garfield Avenue Viaduct.

The interstate cars are now running regularly over the Garfield avenue viaduct and the tiresome delays so common this spring because of time lost in flagging at the railroad tracks, waiting for trains to pass and for other cars, at the switches, has been done away with. The opening of the viaduct to travel will make no difference in the schedule of the interstate car service. The cars will be run on the same time as before, but will have a lay over of several minutes at either end of the line.

The street railway officials say that there will be less trouble from now on of keeping the interstate cars on time. The only thing that now remains to disarrange the schedule is the delays at the interstate bridge, when the draw is open to admit of the passage of boats.

The new track that has been laid west from Eighth avenue west was completed yesterday and the space getween the tracks is being filled with crushed rock. The new track is a marked improvement.

The Duluth-Superior Traction company has torn up one of the single tracks of the narrow gauge road to South Superior and the ties have been placed for several hundred yards for the standard gauge track that is to be built to that suburb this summer.

Work has been temporarily delayed on the other side of the bay pending the completion of the track improvements on this side. It is claimed, also, that another cause of the delay of track laying in West Superior is the lack of steel. New rails are coming very slowly and the improvement work is sure to be more or less delayed all summer on that account.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Fire Monday night practically wiped out the business portion of Ravenna, Mich. A brisk wind spread the flames and before they were checked fifteen store buildings and contents were consumed. Loss, $100,000.

John L. Semple, the Camden lawyer, who has been on trail for a week past in the United States district court for alleged complicity in the manufacture of counterfeit twenty-dollar silver certificates, was found not guilty at Philadelphia. The jury was out two hours.

A rumor which could not be verified was circulated at detective headquarters in New York c.y that Capt. Titus' men had arrested in Jersey City the valet of one of the Humberts, the people charged with wholesale swindling in Paris. The man's name could not be learned. It is said the New York detective department received information that a valet of the Humberts had preceded them, presumably for the purpose of scouring the ground here for a hiding place.

Peace For South Africa.

There seems to be little doubt that the end of the long and costly war in South Africa has finally been reached. Although no official announcement has been made at this writing as to the conclusion of the peace negotiations between the British government and the Boer leaders, it is generally understood in well-informed quarters that they have been closed and that peace will be formally proclaimed within a few days at the latest. What the exact terms of the argument are cannot be stated definitely at this time. It is believed that both sides have made concessions, and that the anxiety of the British government to end the conflict before the beginning of the coronation ceremonies of King Edward has led it to yield on some points to which it has hitherto clung tenaciously. Of course the Boer republics have lost their independence. They will now become part and parcel of the British empire, but it is probable that they will not be reduced to the state of crown colonies. It is likely that they will be given a form of self-government similar to that of Cape Colony, and that the civil rights of the Boers will be preserved. The Boers made a gallant struggle against tremendous odds and their final surrender is not discreditable.

Marvelous Growth of Export Trade.

So easy and natural has been the expansion of the commerce of the United States, that the statistics issued by the treasury department are sometimes almost bewildering. Expansion of production has, of course, caused the expansion of foreign commerce, and to the great development of railroad construction in the last quarter of the nineteenth century is this largely due. Following the construction of the transcontinental line which was completed in 1869, came the extension of other lines through the great Mississippi valley and the South, and this resulted in the opening of the great agricultural, forest and mineral areas whose natural supplies have made this the greatest producing country of the world; while the multiplication of railways facilitated the assembling of these natural products for use in manufacturing. As a result, agricultural production has doubled, and in many cases more than doubled, and the value of arm products increased from less than two and a half billions of dollars in 1870 to about four and three-quarter billions in 1890. In products of manufacture the increase has been even more rapid. The production of coal, a prime necessity in manufacturing, grew from 33,000,000 tons in 1870 to 250,000,000 tons in 1901; pig iron from less than 2,000,000 tons to over 13,000,000, and steel from less than 70,000 tons to over 10,000,000 tons. Meantime, the railways have grown from 52,000 miles in 1870 to practically 200,000 miles at the present time, and rates for rail transportation have fallen to about one-third the rates of 1870. The result of all this is that the United States has become the greatest exporting nation in the world, having risen from fourth place in 1870 to first place in 1901. The value of our exports during that time has practically quadrupled, the figures having been, in 1870, $393,000,000; in 1901, $1,487,000. Meantime imports have scarcely doubled, the import figures being, in 1870, $436,000,000; in 1901, $823,000,000, the per capita of imports having fallen from $11.06 to $10.58, while those of exports increased from $9.77 to $18.81. These figures show a marvelous growth, one never equalled by any other country in the world and we may well feel proud of it.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

Although Sept. 1 is the date set for the opening of the state normal school at Duluth, no steps have yet been taken by the board of control or the state normal board to prepare for that event. The opening date is only ninety days distant, and it is certainly time for something to be done. The board of control seems to be the supreme body, according to the decision of the courts, and consequently the responsibility for non-action in this important matter must be shouldered upon it.

It was a mistake on the part of the legislature to put the educational institutions of the state in charge of the board of control. This fact has been repeatedly demonstrated during the past year, and there is no more striking instance of the blunder than the way things have been mismanaged in connection with the Duluth normal school.

How does the board of control expect the normal school here to have a successful opening, unless it is properly equipped and advertised a sufficient time in advance? Certainly ninety days will not be too long a time to advertise it. The salaries of the president and caretaker of the school are running on necessarily while the school has not been opened, and unless something be done soon they will continue under pay another year with the school closed.

Some steps should be taken to wake up the board of control and induce it to take action at once. The people of Duluth are anxious that the normal school here shall be a success.

MARKSMANSHIP PRIZES.

The fact that good marksmanship alone has enabled many a small force of men to repel the attacks of vastly superior numbers is becoming more and more realized. It has been repeatedly demonstrated during the Boer war and has attracted the attention of the military leaders of different countries. Appreciating the advantages of training in this line and as an incentive, the house committee on military affairs has reported favorably a bill appropriating $10,000 to establish national trophies and prizes for rifle competition among members of the National Guard or organized militia. The object of the bill is to especially encourage the rifle practice among the citizen soldiery, upon whom the country must depend in time of war. The pending measure, which provides a national trophy and other prizes to be competed for by the members of the regular military establishments and the military organizations, will stimulate rifle practice throughout the country.

The report refers to the efforts of other countries to encourage good marksmanship among their troops, and says: "This legislation is in the line of practice and proposed legislation of several countries, notably Switzerland and Great Britain, in which, as in the United States, the military education by conscription of the whole male population is not possible. It has developed by recent experience that the ability to hit a mark is a very large part of the value of the instructed soldier. When conscription is not possible, the encouragement of rifle firing as a military sport affords the government of a free country the opportunity to give to the male citizen fit for military service at least a part of the training which is necessary in war. How important this part is can be shown by numerous instances cited from history in the last century where good shots without discipline have been able to withstand the finest troops.

In conclusion the committee says: "This legislation is sought for with a view of inaugurating in this country an interest in target practice, which will eventually produce a system of voluntary firing similar or equivalent to that which now exists in Switzerland. The appropriation of $10,000 will enable competitions to be held, which will claim the attention of the country, and by awakening popular interest make the development of this military sport, which is really military instruction, more general. It will be entirely in accordance with the traditions of our country, which first showed what the rifle was capable of and which gained its independence largely by familiarity of our citizens with its use."

The measure is a good one and should be passed without trouble. As a matter of fact, the amount appropriated could consistently be made larger.

THE BEST SELLING BOOK.

Most marvelous has been the sale of Bibles in the last few years. The report of the agent of the American Bible society, at Manila, made public last week, shows a great increase in the distribution in the Philippines, while in China, where the sale was expected to fall off, the reverse has been the case, and 428,000 found the issue last year. The sale in the Philippines will undoubtedly be much greater this year, as the Bible is being translated into five Filipino dialects.

According to the Presbyterian Banner, twenty-five years ago Robert Ingersoll declared, in a public lecture, that the Bible was an exploded book, that its sales were bound to fall off rapidly, and that within ten years it would be little read. The ten years have passed and fifteen more, and yet the Bible is not only still being sold, but is being sold in enormously increased numbers. Within the last twenty-five years six great Bible houses have been established and the sales of the book have more than quadrupled. The authority for this statement is Mr. Frawde, the head of the American branch of the Oxford University press. A book that sells up to 100,000 and beyond in these days is heralded as a tremendous success. But how small do all these figures seem in comparison with the sales of the Bible! The American Bible society alone issued more than 1,500,000 Bibles last year, and in the same year the British Foreign Bible society turned out more than 5,000,000 Bibles. Other Bible companies show correspondingly large outputs. If the total number of Bibles in English alone, produced in a single year, were all added up, the number would evidently be upwards of 10,000,000. This is probably a greater sale than that of any other hundred books combined.

The British Bible society sells a complete Bible for sixpence, or 12½ cents, and a New Testament for a penny, or 2 cents. The American Bible society sells a Bible for 15 cents and a New Testament for 5 cents. From these low figures, that put the Bible within the reach of the poorest, prices run up to sumptuous copies that cost many dollars. The secret process of making the famous Oxford India paper, so thin and tough and opaque, which came into use about 1875, has revolutionized the manufacture of Bibles that are compact and handy volumes. The Oxford press turns out 20,000 of these Bibles a week. More than 40,000 sheets of gold are used in merely lettering the volumes, and the skins of at least 100,000 animals go into Oxford Bible covers each year. Not all of these Bibles published in England and America are in English, although these statistics do not include those published in other Christian countries. The British and Foreign Bible society prints the Bible in 400 languages, and the American Bible society also prints the Bible in many languages. These statistics are interesting in many ways, and most especially in showing that the people of all nations are at least willing to receive the word of God, whether they profit thereby or not.

One of the most promising of modern philanthropic movements is the municipal lodging house opened in Chicago which contains new single iron beds to accommodate 225 men. Lodgers are required to register, to give a concise account of themselves with a statement of occupation, where and when last employed, with references. They are given supper and breakfast of bread and coffee, but no dinner is served, and they are not allowed to remain at the lodging-house during the day. The men's statements are investigated as far as practicable, and the man who convinces the management that he is honestly endeavoring to secure employment may remain at the lodging-house four nights, after which he cannot be admitted again for a month. An employment bureau will be conducted at the lodging-house.

"Joe" Cannon and several colleagues were discussing the right kind of bait for bass when a rather assertive and loud-voiced member laid down this proposition: "The wise man is he who hesitates; only the fool is certain." Are you sure about that?" asked Mr. Cannon insinuatingly. "I am certain of it," was the dogmatic party's reply, and it was some time before he understood why everybody smiled audibly.

The public has little idea as to what the Martinique disaster is costing the newspapers and press associations. When it is known that cable messages from Fort de France cost $2.15 a word and urgent messages $6.45 for every word, some conception can be had of the cost of covering this calamity. But, in addition to this, there are the tugs, the special men and the photographers.

His Better Future

By Frank H. Sweet.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst).

They were in one of the Connecticut avenue cars on their way to the capitol, the younger a compactly-built, strong-faced boy, or young man, just now looking somewhat dissatisfied, and his companion a little past middle age, handsome, scholarly, but with an indefinable something about him which gave a close observer an impression of failure or weakness.

"So you think I would do better to go back?" the boy was saying.

"I do," quietly.

The boy threw back his head with a quick motion of impatient protest.

"But why?" he cried, impetuously: "I don't understand. Here I have been considering myself one of the luckiest young fellows in the country. All the boys in my village have regarded me with open envy ever since it was known that Senator Starke had promised me a nine hundred dollar appointment whenever I should come to Washington. Up there I got a dollar and a half a day and wore old clothes and was a nobby; here I can have a splendid salary and dress like a gentleman. Why—but I beg your pardon, Mr. Cory," lowering his voice as the car stopped at New York avenue, "I don't mean to be rude. You have been in Washington a long time and in office, and of course know more about such things than I do. I came to you first because you were originally from my village, and I thought maybe you could give me some points. Indeed, the man I worked for advised me to seek you out. And it's very nice of you to go with me to the Capitol, to present me to Senator Starke. But I'm sure you are misunderstand my position. Why, this appointment is to be permanent so long as I prove myself competent. Senator Starke wrote for his sister to tell me so."

"That is just the trouble," dryly. "If it were something merely temporary it wouldn't so much matter, but it is to be permanent—permanent," uttering the word musingly, and, as the astonished boy thought, half sadly.

"I feel a good deal as you do some twenty odd years ago, but a backward glance over a road is apt to change its appearances. Did you ever meet Senator Starke?"

"No, sir, I worked near where his sister lives, as I told you, and she—she seems to have got it into her head that I saved her life when the house burned, and she wrote to her brother about it, and about how I had been getting my education, and a whole lot of such stuff. And then he wrote for her to offer me this appointment. Why, Mr. Cory," his embarrassment suddenly vanishing at the recollection, "I was so astounded that I couldn't even thank her but had to run off into the woods where I could shout. If I had been offered a wagon load of money I couldn't have been half so amazed and pleased. Just think, a country clodhopper in overalls stepping right into a nine hundred dollar appointment in the finest city in the country! It makes me catch my breath even now to think of it. And yet"—

"I advise you most emphatically to go back to the farm, my boy. See, that is the pension bureau yonder," as the car swung round a corner, showing an immense structure off to the left. "And that building below is the city hall. Notice what a fine park surrounds it. During the summer, when the trees are in foliage, it is very pleasant there. But you are scarcely looking," smiling at the boy whose unenlightened eyes had almost instantly returned to his face. "You are still thinking about this appointment. Did you ever hear anything about my coming to Washington?"

"Yes, sir. The village people speak about it very often. Some of them went to school with you, and of course they are very proud to talk about those days. They say you was a man who made your own way, chopped and hauled wood to earn money for your schooling, studied nights and saved every cent for books. Almost before you were of age there was talk of sending you to the legislature, although you still wore old clothes and patched boots. Then you got an appointment and came straight to Washington. It couldn't have been more than five or six years old when I first heard your story and set out to see what I could do for myself."

The boy was leaning forward now, his face flushed, his eyes sparkling. In his expression was something almost akin to hero worship. The older man noticed it and sighed.

"I think I understand," he said; almost gently. "You have told me part and I have read a good deal more between the lines. Ever since you were five or six you have been planning a stronger future for yourself. You have worked and studied and denied yourself to this end. You say you were only making a dollar and a half a day; but you liked the work, and the live stock, and have familiarized yourself with all the details and interests of the farm. You were one of the strong boys who soon became progressive farmers with broad interests."

"But it would still be farming," interrupted the boy impetuously; "long days and hard work and little recreation. I don't believe many of the farmers up my way make $90 a year above the expense of running their farms."

"Perhaps not, but there are other things to be considered. It is a life of manifold duties, healthy and strong, and with broadening possibilities for the ambitious man. A desk clerk means narrowness in much that is desirable in life, and especially in ambition. Six, eight and even ten hours of almost continuous desk work does not leave much desire for study afterward. It is apt to dull even the most ardent of intellects by its unvarying monotony. But here we are at the Capitol. . . . We will go up to the state chamber gallery first, so you may listen to some of the debates. There is one man I especially want you to hear. We were boys together, with much the same tastes and ambitions, and I imagine about the same degree of ability. However, he had no friend to assist him to an appointment and went West. Have you been inside the Capitol yet?"

"No, sir."

"Ah, then it will be a treat. You should go over and study the building carefully when you have leisure. I am sorry I cannot spare the time to go with you myself, but I must be back to my desk by two. We will remain in the gallery a half hour, then go down to the lunch room and wait for Senator Starke's appearance. Unless there is something unusually important before the senate he will be there for his customary cup of coffee. This way; we will take the elevator."

Arriving at the gallery floor, Mr. Cory led the way to a door marked "Reserved Gallery," where he showed a card of admission to the doorkeeper.

A tall, white-haired senator was making a speech in favor of the canal bill, and the boy almost held his breath in his anxiety to hear every word. He had often dreamed of being in the presence of this august body of men who guided the destiny of the great country; and the actual realization of the dream filled him with a strange feeling of awe.

Presently the white-haired man sat down, and a wiry, tart senator from the other side arose. The boy felt a light touch upon his shoulder.

"That is the one," Mr. Cory said, "I want you to listen to what he says. He is one of the best speakers in the senate."

It was nearly an hour later when they descended to the main floor. The boy's face was still flushed.

"Well, what do you think of him?" asked Mr. Cory.

The boy drew in long breath.

"It was grand," he answered in a hushed voice, "grand! I hardly realize a man could know so much and say it so well."

"And yet that man was in school with me for years and usually below me in our classes," said Mr. Cory, thoughtfully. "The difference with us was that he kept on growing and I stopped. And he is still studying and growing, a sort of human dynamo." Mr. Cory looked at his watch and then began to button his coat.

"I am sorry I will be unable to present you to Senator Starke," he said, "but my time is up. However, I will take you to the lunch room and you can speak to him when he comes in. It will be all right."

But the boy's face had grown thoughtful. Suddenly his shoulders squared and his head became more erect.

"Thank you," he said slowly, "but I don't believe it will be worth while. I guess I'll go back to the farm."

BUYS FINE PROPERTY

Northern Pacific Closes Purchase of Duluth Transfer Railroad.

Immensely Valuable Addition to Already Large Facilities.

May Prove to Be an Excellent Thing For Shippers.

By a transaction last evening with the former bondholders but recent owners of the Duluth Transfer Railroad company, the Northern Pacific railway obtains for half a million dollars property conservatively valued at $1,500,000. The latter figure is considered its present value. The future value of the transfer belt line cannot be estimated at this time. The purchase from a strategic point of view is one of more importance than can be foreseen at this time, because relatively speaking at least, it will compel every road except the Omaha from this time on to have its switching and transferring along the Duluth water front done over the tracks of the Northern Pacific railway. Regarded from the position of the shipper the commodities handled over the transfer tracks, the purchase will, it is believed, result in a material reduction of transfer charges.

The property of the property of the Duluth Transfer Railroad company was consummated last evening by General Counsel C. W. Bunn of the Northern Pacific who came up from St. Paul to verify records. Mr. Bunn confirmed the transaction a few minutes after the papers were signed, and said the transfer would go on record today. The title to the transfer company would be consolidated with the terminals of the Northern Pacific and be operated the same as any other part of the system. The deal was formally ratified at a meeting of the Duluth Transfer Railroad company, which was attended by Gen. A. W. Dodge, the president, who came from Indianapolis for the purpose.

The advantage gained by the Northern Pacific is not new ones, the acquisition of property or facilities that duplicate its present terminal holdings here. It is true that two dock properties are acquired, one of which is the old Union property on the easterly side of Seventh avenue west, which has been leased for some years by the Northern Steamship company, cost $140,000 when it was bought about nine years ago. There is another dock property just east of the Mitchell & McCue mill about Fiftieth avenue west.

The fact that is most important to the Northern Pacific is that the purchase gives it entrance to all the water front property from about Thirty-fifth avenue west to Sixty-fifth avenue west. Parasically three miles of water front, and measured lineally much more, was shut out from the Northern Pacific unless it chose to build spurs of considerable length across costly property and trouble some highways. At Thirty-fifth avenue west the Northern Pacific right-of-way leaves the water front and does not touch it again until it strikes in above the blast furnace and beyond Grassy Point. It has some approximation into properties in this territory, but they are built at great cost and operated under great disadvantages.

The Transfer trunk line runs along the water front from about Sixth avenue west to beyond Seventieth avenue west. It is the only transfer line that reaches all the water front between Thirty-fifth avenue west and Sixty-fifth avenue west, which is skirted in such a way that short spurs only are necessary to be built. Originally the line was built over watered property on a trestle, but since then a solid grade has been thrown up much of the way, though the trestle is still used considerably for auxiliary or siding purposes.

Just in the rear of the Duluth Metal company's works and the old Iron Bay works the Northern Pacific acquires a three-cornered piece of property, with one pier running out to the dock line, that is 800 feet long. It is estimated that a West Duluth storage yard can be built here with fifteen tracks, capable of storing 2000 cars at one time. This space is not crossed or cut up in any way by highways. It is an unbroken space that is considered will make an ideal storage yard because there is no street traffic to interrupt switching operations or compel the building of a viaduct.

It is intimated that far from working a hardship on shippers or receivers of freight within the territory referred to, the absorption of the property is likely to result in a considerable saving in transfer charges. At present and in the past, for instance, freight coming down the Missabe & Northern or Duluth & Iron Range roads has had to pay the Northern Pacific a transfer charge of $1.50 a car for being passed along to the Transfer tracks and an additional similar charge to the Transfer road for being transferred to its destination and being "spotted." It is supposed that the Northern Pacific will reduce or wipe out this extra charge of the Transfer company. Carrying the deduction farther, it is presumed that the Northern Pacific will make no charge for switching cars brought in or shipped out over its own road, consigned to or from parties now reached by the Duluth Transfer company. Heretofore, in most instances, this charge was not absorbed, particularly if the haul was a short one. It is supposed that for competitive business the initial road absorbs the transfer charge, but the independence of the transfer company frequently prevented the application of this principle.

Equitable charges for service over the Transfer property are assured by an ordinance passed by the Duluth city council May 16, 1892, by which valuable rights were granted the Duluth Transfer Railway company along Railroad street and over other public highways. The railroad company agreed for its part to let all other roads that wished to do so use its property at a uniform charge equal to a pro rata share of 6 per cent interest on the valuation of the property plus a pro rata share of the cost of operation.

The Duluth Transfer Railroad company succeeded to the assets of the Duluth Transfer Railway company by mortgage foreclosure about a year ago. The recent owner was composed of the bondholders of the old company. The original stockholders were entirely wiped out.

The original company was formed about twelve years ago. Its purpose was to construct a belt, transfer and storage system, particularly with reference to the upper bay shore. At the time, the company took over about two and a half miles of tracks leading into the sawmills and industries at West Duluth, which had been built by the West Duluth Land company, in order to provide railway facilities for the properties served. This trackage, some of which has been torn up, has now been increased to twenty-two miles.

The original active men in the road were Albert Harrington, who was president of the company, and who at one time had advanced $140,000 to the company; O. H. Simonds, of this city, and the late J. A. Willard, a Mankato banker.

The property was bonded for $1,200,000, and all the money derived from the sale of the bonds was expended in extending the system and acquiring dock property. The chief part of the construction was done about 1892, 1893 and 1894, just in time to be completed as the great panic came on.

It was the fault of the builders that their plans miscarried. They builded fully as wisely as they knew, to pervert an old saying. But fate had in store experience in store for them, and had decreed that others than they should reap the benefits of their foresight. The acquisition of new industries not contemplated, but many of those already in operation in the West Duluth water front closed down. The sawmills alone constituted or were the basis of the greatest part of their business by far was by water. This was especially true in the days of the old company when practically no lumber went out by rail and no logs came in by rail.

It is a cause of wonderment to railway men and all that are familiar with the Duluth Railway situation that the Omaha, the South Shore or the Great Northern had not bought the transfer system. It is not so bewildering since the two Northern roads were merged that Mr. Hill did not buy, but it still remains an impenetrable mystery why the Omaha and South Shore did not do so. It is intimated that if Mr. Fitch's wishes had been fully carried out, the latter would today own the old St. Paul & Duluth and the Transfer as well.

STATE LAND.

The Situation In Which Minnesota Is Now Placed.

Washington, May 27.—George Flinn, land clerk in the state auditor's office, accompanied by Senator Clapp and Representative Stevens, called on Secretary Hitchcock to confer regarding the indemnity lands which the state wants in lieu of sections 16 and 36 on the Indian reservations of which it was deprived by the recent decision of the supreme court. It is within the discretionary power of the secretary to permit the state to make these selections and the matter is to be settled with Land Commissioner Hermann and Judge Vandeventer, assistant attorney general for the interior department, provided Secretary Hitchcock is willing.

Mr. Flinn made an interesting and comprehensive statement to Secretary Hitchcock regarding the situation in which Minnesota is placed as a result of the supreme court decision. There are 305,375 acres in sections 16 and 36 of the Minnesota Indian reservations just referred to, and until the supreme court acted, it was supposed the state would be entitled to them. Indemnity had been reserved for 43,837 acres before the action of the court and there remain 291,538 acres yet to be provided for by indemnity selections. There are in Minnesota today 3,964,885 acres of vacant government land of which 1,078,988 have not been surveyed. Nearly all of it is in the Duluth and Crookston districts. There are 940,000 acres of unsurveyed township in the state and this is increased to 1,040,000 if the "Northwest angle" is added. Adding also the acres surveyed, but not yet approved, the total reaches 1,960,000 acres. It is the desire of the state auditor's office to have a bill passed through congress this session providing for the immediate completion of the survey of public lands, which will enable the state at an early day to take its indemnity selections and recover from the ill effects of the supreme court decision.

If Secretary Hitchcock authorizes the indemnity selection as it is assumed he will do, and if congress will promptly authorize the completion of the surveys of public lands in the state, the effects of the supreme court decision will not be lasting or serious. Mr. Flinn will remain here several days, or until the matter has been carefully presented to all interested parties. The Minnesota delegation proposes to get behind the bill for the completion of the survey of lands and push it as rapidly as possible. It is believed that it can be passed.

MEMORABLE

Will Be the Funeral of the Late Lord Pauncefote.

Washington, May 26.—It is evident from the preparations so far made that the funeral of the late Lord Pauncefote will be conducted with great dignity, and will be made a memorable occasion. All of the available military and naval forces in Washington and vicinity will take part in the procession. The services at St. John's church will be conducted by Coadjutor Bishop Mackay-Smith, though Bishop Satterlee will attend. It is pretty well settled that the remains of the late Lord Pauncefote will be carried to England on an American warship, and either the Olympia, flagship of the North Atlantic squadron and Dewey's flagship at Manila, or the Brooklyn, Admiral Schley's flagship at Santiago, which is just returning from Cuba, will be selected for this duty. The date of departure will depend upon the convenience of the Pauncefote family, but it is certain that the casket cannot be landed on English soil before the conclusion of the coronation ceremonies.

DENIED ALL.

Capt. McDonald Replies to Testimony of Corporal O'Brien.

Washington, May 26.—Capt. McDonald, formerly of the Twenty-sixth volunteer infantry, one of the officers accused in Corp. O'Brien's testimony, was before the Philippines committee of the senate today. He denied all the allegations made by O'Brien and said O'Brien was on duty elsewhere at the times he claimed to have been present.

McDonald said that American officers had not violated a Spanish woman, nor other women to his knowledge. He modified the statement made by O'Brien, that he (McDonald) and and a number of other officers misbehaved themselves at a native dance. He showed that at the time alleged, Maj. Cook, one of the officers named, and himself, were on duty elsewhere.

The shooting of bearers of flags of truce and the burning of a woman and child by his command was another story by O'Brien that he denied. Capt. McDonald said O'Brien was a troublesome soldier from the first.

Refugees Are Being Cared For at Kingstown.

Washington, May 26.—Secretary Moody today received the following cablegram from Capt. Brice of the Dixie, dated St. Lucia, May 26:

"Dixie discharging remainder of stores at Kingstown, where most needed. Provisions now on hand for several months. Lumber for houses needed. Volcano active. No additional damage. Care of refugees, estimated at approximately 8000, well in hand by local authorities."

A telegram was also received announcing the departure of the Dixie from St. Lucia, bound for San Juan, Porto Rico.

TRIO OF GENERALS

Invited By Emperor William to Visit Germany.

Washington, May 26.—It is stated on authority that Gens. Corbin, Young and Wood have been formally invited by Emperor William to attend, as his personal guests, the German military manouvers next fall. The first overtures in that direction were made by Gen. Von Plessen at the instance of Prince Henry during his recent American visit, but they have since been extended in regular form and they will be accepted by the three generals.

CANNOT CONVICT HIM.

County Attorney Asks That Megaarden Cases Be Nolled.

Minneapolis, May 27.—County Attorney Boardman appeared before Judge Simpson yesterday afternoon and moved that all of the eleven cases against former Sheriff Phil T. Megaarden be nolled. He stated that the county had gone to a great expense to secure conviction of the former sheriff. Two trials of what was considered the strongest case against Mr. Megaarden had been held, but without result. Apparently it would be impossible to convict and he did not feel like forcing another trial at a greater expense than ever.

AMES' FAREWELL.

Minneapolis' Mayor Bids Adieu to Politics.

Minneapolis, May 27.—Mayor Ames issued his personal official farewell to politics and future public honors yesterday. He speaks his good-bye through means of a statement addressed to his "personal and political friends," which reads as follows:

"Having entered into a business enterprise as a physician—that of being chief physician at the famous Baden Springs—I have concluded not to be a candidate on the Republican or any other ticket for mayor at the ensuing election. I assure you if nominated and elected I shall refuse to qualify.

"Thanking you cordially for the honors accorded to me in the past and with best wishes to you all, I am, Very respectfully your obedient servant,

"A. A. AMES."

Loyal to his chief to the last, Thomas R. Brown, Jr., private secretary, takes the opportunity to announce that he is through with politics and that he will not be a candidate for any political office at the close of the present administration. Mr. Brown has been mentioned as a possible candidate for city clerk or sheriff.

DROUTH IS TERRIBLE

A Climax to Seven Dry Years In Australia.

State Government Providing Unemployed Men With Relief.

Sheep Dying By Millions; Even Rabbits Are Starving.

London, May 27.—Cabling from Sidney, N. S. W., the correspondent there of the Daily Mail gives an account of the terrible drouth from which, as a climax to seven dry years, Australia is now suffering. The correspondent says that the losses in stock in Australia since 1899 amount to £15,000,000 ($75,000,000). Unemployed men are drifting into the cities by the thousands, and there the state governments are providing them with relief.

The only districts that have escaped the drought are the northern river district of New South Wales and parts of the Riverina district.

The situation has been aggravated by the federal duties on fodder, which prevent its importation. Communication in the interior has been paralyzed by the waterways, which are unnavigable. The expense of fodder, the firm which had the contract has abandoned the hauling of the Queensland mail, the cost of this transportation having risen from £6,000 to £30,000 ($150,000 annually.

The sheep are dying by the million, continues the correspondent, and even the rabits are starving. Animals have stripped the bark from the trees for food. A common method of treating exhausted horses is to slit the animal's palate with a knife, the horse is revived by swallowing his own blood. Numbers of "sundowners" and "swag men" have been found dead by the wayside. The governments are doing everything possible to alleviate these conditions, but meterologists despair of an early change in the weather conditions.

FILINGS

Offered at St. Cloud on Sections In Indian Reservation.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 27.—Owing to a recent decision of the United States supreme court, affecting sections 16 and 36, in the Red Lake reservation, claimed by the state as school lands, filings were offered yesterday at the land office here upon school sections in the Chippewa and Leech Lake reservations. Some twenty quarter sections were filed upon, but the land office officials refused to accept the filings pending instructions from Washington. Judge McClenahan, of Brainerd, will file upon section 16, upon which squatters have formed a townsite at the village of Cass Lake. The filing will be under the townsite laws, Heber Hartley, the owner of Cass Lake village, has filed upon that portion of the island in Cass Lake which comes within section 16. An exciting race occurred between rival claimants for favored sections. Some days ago filings were offered on lands in the Mille Lacs reservation and State Auditor Dunn wrote an emphatic letter stating that the state had sold the sections to settlers and would defend their title through the courts. He takes the position that the Red Lake decision does not affect the other reservations. Long drawn out litigation is in sight.

FISTICUFFS.

A Few Short Bouts Between Eminent Pugilists.

Kansas City, May 27.—In a one-sided contest Tommy Ryan was given the decision over Jimmy Handler, of Newark, in this city last night, in the fourth round of what was scheduled as a ten-round bout.

Chicago, May 27.—Benny Yanger outpointed Austin Rice, of New London, Conn., in a six-round contest here last night. Rice put up a strong fight and won the applause of the crowd by his excellent work, but Yanger was too strong and too young for him.

St. Paul, May 27.—Otto Sieloff, of Chicago, last night knocked out Art Sims, of Akron, Ohio, in the eigth round of what was to have been a ten-round bout. Sieloff had all the better of it and punished Sims severely. Sieloff's manager says he will at once challenge Joe Gans for a match for the lightweight championship. Gans and Sieloff have met before, the colored lad getting the decision.

JEALOUS

Young Man Kills Girl, Wounds Rival and Himself.

Kansas City, Mo., May 27.—Frank Robinson, aged 20, yesterday shot and killed his sweetheart, Gertie Rawlins, aged 16 years; shot and fatally wounded his rival, Albert H. Ferguson, aged 19 years, and shot and fatally injured himself in an apartment house in this city. Shortly before the tragedy was committed Robinson wrote a note to his mother, in which he said that as Ferguson had supplanted him in the affections of the girl he loved he purposed to kill them both and kill himself. He proceeded to the room where Ferguson and the girl were and, upon being admitted, drew his revolver and began firing on the couple. The girl was shot near the heart. She rushed screaming into the street, where she fell dead. Ferguson was shot in the abdomen. Robinson shot himself in the left breast and his death is momentarily expected.

HOME ENDORSEMENT.

Hundreds of Duluth Citizens Can Tell You All About It.

Home endorsement, the public expression of Duluth people should be evidence beyond dispute for every Duluth reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors cheerfully given by them will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in far-away places. Read the following:

Mr. C. Hackman, of 2222 Michigan street, brakeman on the Northern Pacific railroad, says: "I was troubled for years with a heavy, dull, aching pain through the small of my back and an unnatural and irregular condition of the kidney secretions. My work is particularly trying on the back, and being frequently exposed to rough weather, and doing a good deal of climbing about the cars, kept my complaint aggravated. I felt all run down, and I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procured a box at W. A. Abbett's drug store, and used them. In a remarkably short time I was thoroughly relieved of the trouble. My wife was suffering from the affects of la grippe and had a great deal of suffering from her back. She used Doan's Kidney Pills and the results obtained were most satisfactory."

NATIVE TREACHERY.

Moro Cuts Off Arm of American Officer.

Manila, May 27.—While Second Lieut. Robert C. Humber of the Tenth infantry, and Sergt. Walling of the same regiment, were walking about six miles from Camp Vickers, in Mindanao, they perceived a single Moro carrying a flag of truce. When the native had approached close to the Americans he suddenly drew his creese and slashed Sergt. Walling, cutting his arm completely off. Lieut Humber attempted to shoot the Moro, but his revolver missed fire and the native escaped in the tall grass.

Gen. Davis, the commander of the American forces in Mindanao, has reiterated his orders that no American soldiers are to leave camp unless in a party of at least eight men who must be armed and prepared for any emergency.

FAILED.

Train Robbers Fail to Hold Up Burlington Express.

St. Joseph, Mo., May 27.—An attempt was made to hold up the Burlington express train, No. 26, last night at Roy's Branch, about one mile north of the city limits. The train left Omaha at 5 o'clock, and was due to arrive here at 9:15. Engineer Fred Mudgett was startled by the explosion of two torpedoes, but looking ahead saw nothing to indicate danger. He ran 200 yards past the point where the torpedoes exploded and, looking back, saw a red light shining near the track.

Conductor Samuel T. Tatem at once suspected the presence of train robbers and signaled the engineer to proceed, which he did cautiously.

The train arrived here ten minutes late. The police department was notified and a switch engine was at once pressed into service by Superintendent G. M. Hohl, who took a strong posse of policemen to the scene. The robbers had disappeared, taking with them the red lantern. Many hold-ups have occurred near the place of this attempt.

Note Went Astray Revealed a Secret Marriage.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 27.—A note that went astray gave away the secret marriage last November of George Koser, son of Rev. J. A. Koser, former pastor of the Trinity English Lutheran church of this city, and Miss Hazel Richardson, of Nebraska City, Neb.

Koser learned his wife would be in Kansas City last week and went there to meet her. He could not find her, so he sent a note to the home where his wife's mother was visiting. The mother, thinking the note an invitation, opened it, and was horrified to discover her daughter was married. There were tears and tears and then forgiveness.

INTEREST IS GREAT

In a Murder Trial Now Under Way at Memphis.

Arsenic, Ground Glass or What Caused Hooks' Death?

Defendant Is a Society Woman of Considerable Wealth.

Memphis, Tenn., May 27.—The trial of Mrs. Emma Ashcraft Hooks for the murder of her husband, Cerro Gordo Hooks, is fairly under way. The court-room is crowded daily, and among the spectators are many veiled women who listen attentively to all the testimony introduced.

Mrs. Hooks, the defendant, is a woman of considerable wealth, and prior to the tragedy occupied an enviable social position. There are many facts in connection with the case which make it of more than local interest.

In the preliminary trial the jury discovered that Mrs. Hooks had deposited with E. J. Carrington, a member of the city council, $50,0000 to Mr. Hook's credit; that they lived together happily for a while; that one morning, at the breakfast table, Mrs. Hooks asked her husband for $80 with which to repair her father's house; that he refused, and that words followed, and thereafter she occupied one part of the house and he the other part.

The evidence which will be introduced shows that she complained that she had ever married Mr. Hooks, and that she admitted to her neighbors that she had injured her social standing in marrying like she did. The evidence also shows that on Sept. 19, 1898, she bought an ounce and a half of arsenic from E. Monnier, a local druggist. She is also alleged to have returned the following day and bought three ounces more. Other witnesses which were introduced in the preliminary hearing testified that Mrs. Hooks had been seen poisoning dogs and other pets in her possession since and up to the time of her husband's death.

It was shown in the testimony that Hooks came to his death from arsenic poisoning, and that all doubt as to the embalming fluid is removed when the report indicates that evidences of arsenic were found in the vital organs which could not, in the opinion of the jury, be reached by the arsenic contained in embalming fluid. The grand jury's report also shows evidence of quantities of ground glass having been found in Hooks' stomach after the autopsy was performed, and that toward the last Hooks became suspicious of his wife and that his brother nursed him and administered all medicine.

These are the sensational statements on which the indictment of Mrs. Hooks was based, and whether they will be sustained by the criminal court is the general topic discussed in Memphis society circles at present.

Mrs. Hooks has been married twice. Her first husband and her grown son by her first husband died suddenly and mysteriously. At the time of the death of Harry H. Atkinson, son of her first husband, he carried insurance in the Equitable Life Assurance society of New York in favor of his mother to the amount of $20,000. The certificate of his death showed brain fever as the cause.

Her marriage to W. H. Atkinson, her first husband, took place in 1877 when she was about 23 years old. Their married life lasted something over twenty years, Mr. Atkinson dying October 27, 1898. They had two children who died in infancy and a third child, Harry, died just before reaching the age of his majority. Mr. Atkinson was a man of excellent business capacity, thoroughly energetic, and at the time of his demise had amassed a handsome estate, in addition to $50,000 life insurance. He left no will and his widow qualified as administratrix.

Those who were acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson during their married life speak of them as a congenial couple, and can recall nothing to show that the slightest incompatibility existed between them.

The death of Mr. Atkinson took place October 27, 1898, and, as stated, was a distinct surprise to his friends, as he was looked upon as one of vigorous health, being of superb physique and the picture of robust manhood. It is related that he slowly wasted from his normal weight of about 210 pounds to emaciation until finally his once magnificent strength was gone and death ensued. No official record was made of the cause of Mr. Atkinson's death, as his residence then was outside the city.

The marriage of Mrs. Atkinson to Cerro Gordo Hooks occurred on June 8, 1900. This gentleman had occupied various business relations since his arrival here from Mississippi about fifteen years before. From a conductor on a street car he rose to a very respectable association with city officials, and was a member of a leading social club at the time of his death. He was a man of steady habits and of extreme frugality. Mrs. Hooks met her husband by chance. Hooks was at that time employed in a local stationery store, in which he had bought a small partnership. Mrs. Hooks invited him to call and the marriage occurred after a few months' courtship. Before the marriage Mrs. Hooks gave Cerro Gordo Hooks a present of $50,000, partly in gold certificates and part in government bonds. Hooks had himself personally amassed $4,300, and as no child was born to them the widow was the sole devisee of an estate estimated at $55,000.

Hooks' first serious illness was first made known to those about him just a month before he died. He complained to a physician the same afternoon, declaring that he had suffered most intensely in the region of the stomach, an acute burning sensation being the main symptom, though he complained somewhat of nausea.

The medical profession, as well as the outside world, is watching the case with interest. Analytical chemists were employed in performing the autopsy on the body.

WHEAT IS STRONGER

Market Starts Out Steady and Gains In Strength.

Strength of Corn One of Main Sustaining Factors.

Fine Weather In Crop Growing Districts--- Flax Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 27.—The wheat market started out steady this morning and gained in strength although conditions were not especially bullish, the cash demand being slow and the weather in all wheat growing districts fine. The strength of corn was a great aid to wheat. The market continued within a very narrow range most of the morning and toward the close took a little brace. The Liverpool market closed 1/8@1/4d higher. Antwerp was unchanged and Berlin 3/8c higher.

Bradstreet reported a decrease of 2,800,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. Primary receipts of wheat were 245,000 bus, last year 226,000 bus. Shipments were 471,000 bus, last year 758,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 455,000 bus.

Corn was very strong, closing 1¾@1¾c higher in the Chicago market. Oats closed ¾c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 338,000 bus, last year 999,000 bus. Shipments 276,000 bus, last year 725,000 bus. The world's visible decreased 1,195,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 99 cars, and at Chicago, 54, a total of 126 cars, against 138 last week and 335 last year.

Trading in wheat was light and the market slightly stronger, it opened ⅛c off at 74¾c, sold at 75⅛-⅛c at 9:48, at 75⅛c at 10:32 and held steady there until about 1 o'clock, advancing after that to 75⅝c, and closed at 75¼c, an advance of ⅝c. Chicago advanced ⅝-⅝c and Minneapolis ⅜c.

Cash prices were steady at July price for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2, and 3½c under for No. 3. Cash sales were very light.

Flax trading was very light and the market steady. Cash seed advanced 1c, September was unchanged and October ⅛c lower. Cash oats advanced 1½c and the September option ¼c. Rye was up ½c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—Cash, No. 1 hard, 75¾c; No. 1 northern, 75¼c; No. 2 northern, 73¼c; No. 3 spring, 71¾c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 75¾c; No. 1 northern, 75¼c; May, 75¾c; July, 75¼c; September, 73c; Manitoba No. 1 northern, cash, 74¼c; May, 74¼c; No. 2 northern, 71¾c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Bearish Cast on Wheat But Prices Held Steady.

Chicago, May 27.—The situation bearing on wheat prices was of a bearish cast during the early market, but prices held the steady. The steadiness of corn was the explanation given. Support, however, was of the negative character—traders seemed indisposed to sell, although they might have found reason for so doing in unresponsive cables, a falling off in the cash demand and excellent weather in both the spring and winter wheat belts. July opened unchanged to a shade higher, at 75⅝c to 75¾c, and sold to 74⅞c on small purchases for the short account. A decline to 72⅝@73c followed. Local receipts were 27 cars, one of contract grade. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 99 cars, making a total for the three points of 126 cars against 138 last week and 315 a year ago.

As the day advanced bull manipulation in corn and a good cash premium in wheat influenced fair wheat buying and July closed firm, ⅝@1⅛c up at 74⅜c.

Corn ranged higher under the influence of strong late cables, but the trade was small and feeling nervous. July opened ⅜@¼c to ⅝c higher, at 63¼c to 63⅜@1½c, and advanced to 63⅝c before profit taking checked the rise and sent the market back to 63⅛c. Receipts were 167 cars.

Cold weather talk and fears of frost in the growing corn gave the bulls good material on which to build corn. The leading house gave very good support and frightened shorts were stampeded over the false rumor that this house was calling 10 per cent margins. July corn went to 64⅝c and closed strong, 1⅝@1¾c up at 64½c.

Fears of renewed activity in the "May deal" restricted trade in the oats market, but prices held steady in sympathy with corn. Crop advices were favorable. Receipts were 289 cars. July opened ¼c to a shade up, at 31½c to 31⅝@⅓c, and sold to 31⅝c.

Provisions were dull but steady in sympathy with a firm hog market. July pork opened unchanged to 2½c up, at $16.07½ to $16.00, and sold to $16.17½; July lard started a shade up at $10.12½, and advanced to $10.15, and July ribs, 2½@5c better, at $9.37½, selling to $9.62½@9.65.

Close: Wheat—May, 74½c; July, 74½c; September, 72⅜@⅝c; December, 74¾c. Corn—MaMy, 64c; July, 64¼c; September, 61½@⅝c; December, 46¾c; May (1903), 43⅝c. Oats—May, 44½c; July, 35¾c; new, 87⅝@¾c; September, 30@¼c; new 30⅞c; December, 29¾c; new, 31⅜c. Pork—May, $17.02½; July, $17.07½; September, $17.22½; January, $16.35. Lard—May, $10.10; July, $10.17½; September, $10.20; October, $10.17½. Ribs—May, $9.70; July, $9.62½; September, $9.45. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market was somewhat hesitating but on the whole moderately firm. Much of the strength, however, was in sympathy with the advance in corn. There was some further covering of May shorts which keeps that option at a premium and possibly some cash business although the amount so far reported is not large. The market is not active in any direction. The weather is favorable and Liverpool market is unencouraging in its action.

Corn—The market was active and strong and much of the strength came from the covering of shorts. There is little doubt that the aggregate short interest in this market in corn is large and the property is in the hands of strong people who are entitled to a good price. There are no indications of any disposition on the part of one holders to depress the market. But on the other hand we think they are inclined to gradually move it up. While the strength is purely speculative the situation seems to us unencouraging for a turn on the bear side. Receipts are not increasing very rapidly.

A. H. Farnum, Chicago: Wheat—Our market is running along on a cash basis without a great deal of speculation. The demand for wheat in all positions is sufficient to keep spot of market strong. While this is the case and wheat is the cheapest grain there is, purchases ought to pay a fair profit. We don't look for much change in prices today.

Corn—The cash demand for corn exceeds the receipts and our stock is being cut down daily. It decreased 1,055,000 bus last week and promises to decrease more this week. Receivers are unanimous in their claim that receipts will be much larger very soon. Every one knows that all the corn bought in the country so far has been hedged by sales in this market, so it won't have to be sold again when it arrives. If the market should show even a moderate decline today we advise purchase.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, May 27.—The wheat market during the greater part of the day ruled dull with very light trade, but toward the end of the session became firm on covering by shorts owing to strength in July corn. The market closed July ½c, September and December ½@¾c higher than last night. Foreign markets were generally steady. Liverpool closed ⅛d to ¼d higher for the day. Continental markets were quiet, and Paris closed lower owing to favorable weather. Cash demand here was rather quiet and the seaboard reportd nothing taken for export today. The weather throughout the spring and winter wheat belts was all that could be desired. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 20 cars.

The corn market ruled very strong all day with a large and active trade. The principal feature was the covering by shorts on fear of a squeeze in July, that month closing 1¾c, while September closed only ⅜c higher than last night. Foreign markets were firm. Liverpool closed ⅞d to ¾d higher for the day. Country offerings were much larger, infact, were liberal. Cash demand was quiet. The advance in the market checked business. Weather throughout the corn belt was all that could be desired for the growing crop. A good deal of short corn has been covered and it is generally thought the bull party were free sellers on the advance. As we said before, the market is manipulated and dangerous. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 90 cars.

Trade in outs was light today and there was no special feature to the market. A good many May shorts were reported to have sold at 44½c. July closed ½@⅝c higher than last night, while September and December closed practically unchanged. Country offerings were light, cash demand fairly good. Estimated receipts for tomorrow 145 cars.

Provisions opened strong on less hogs than expected and in the absence of selling orders the lenders bid the market up, but later in spite of strength in grain, ruled weak and about as dull as it could be. The revival of trade in grain takes away trade from us. May lard was on delivery today and declined to 55c under July, this shows how poor cash demand is. Shipments of meats yesterday, 1,750,000 lbs, against 4,000,000 last year and lard 500,000 lbs against 3,000,000 lbs last year. We see nothing in the situation to warrant present prices, but the market is so small leaders can work up prices, but cannot sell with and materially breaking the market. Estimated for tomorrow, 25,000 hogs.

CROP CONDITIONS

As Shown By Weather Bureau's Weekly Report.

Washington, May 27.—The weather bureau's weekly summary of crop conditions is as follows:

The week ending May 26 was one of highly favorable temperature conditions in all districts east of the Rockies, with abundant rainfall over the greater portion of the central valleys, lake region and Middle Atlantic states. Drouth conditions in the Ohio valley have been effectually relieved, except in Southern Illinois, and while partially broken over the greater part of the Middle and South Atlantic states, more rain was needed at the close of the week in those districts. Rain is much needed in Tennessee, over the northern portions of Mississippi and Alabama, and in Central and Southern Florida. Excessively heavy rains retarded work and caused some damage by washouts and overflows in the lake region, in the states of the Ohio and Lower Mississippi valleys.

On the Pacific coast the first part of the week was too cold in Washington and Oregon, but more favorable conditions prevailed during the latter part; in California, with the exception of drying winds, the week, though cooler than usual, was generally favorable. Heavy frosts occurred on May 19 and 20 in the Middle and Southern Rocky Mountain districts, causing considerable damage.

Heavy rains have interrupted corn planting over extensive areas in the Missouri, Upper Mississippi and Ohio valleys, and lake region, in portions of which districts much replanting will be necessary as a result of overflows and washed lands. The early planted has made good growth throughout the central valleys, but is suffering for cultivation in the Lower Missouri valley, in the Southern states the crop has made good progress and much of the early planted has been laid by.

An improvement in the condition of winter wheat is reported from Nebraska, Kansas, portions of Illinois and in Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin and the crop continues in fine condition in Missouri, except in a few southern counties. The reports from Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, the Middle South Atlantic and East Gulf states show that the crop is heading slow. Harvesting continues in Texas and will soon begin in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Southern Kansas. On the Pacific coast the outlook continues favorable, except in Southern California, the crop is, however, reported as unusually weedy in Oregon. In California winter wheat is ripening rapidly and harvest will soon begin in the San Joaquin valley. Early spring wheat has made vigorous growth, and the later sown is coming well. Seeding is practically finished.

In the Middle, South Atlantic, and East Gulf states and portions of the Ohio valley the outlook for oats is not promising, but more favorable conditions are reported from the Missouri and Upper Mississippi valleys and the lake region. Harvesting is in progress in the Central and West Gulf states.

DRAWN OUT

Was Discussion of Baptists to Consolidate Missionary Societies.

St. Paul, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The proposition to consolidate the various Baptist missionary societies brought on a lively and extended discussion today and made an afternoon session necessary. The direct proposition was to try the experiment of having a district secretary to represent the American Baptist Missionary union, the American Baptist Publication society and the American Baptist Home Mission society. Dr. C. A. Cook, of New Jersey, read the report of the committee in charge of district secretaries and collectors, taking strong grounds against the proposed merger of district secretaryships, but conceded that the proposition might be worth trying as an experiment. Dr. Crandall, of Chicago, moved that the resolution be made positive, desiring that the societies be asked to make the experiment in a single district, and upon this proposition the discussion followed. At 12:30 the end of the debate seemed not in sight, and an adjournment was taken until 2 p. m.

BILLS SIGNED.

Washington, May 27.—The president has signed the Indian appropriation bill and the omnibus claims bill.

TRADING IN STOCKS

Was Very Light On the New York Exchange.

Slight Opening Advances But the Tendency Was Downward.

Sugar And Canadian Pacific Broke But Recovered Partially.

New York, May 27.—A few stocks including Reading, showed slight opening advances but the tendency was downward. Canadian Pacific broke sharply 2¼ on quite heavy offerings. The changes otherwise were not notable on either side.

The market relapsed into its recent semi-stagnation and there was no decided drift of prices. Supporting orders rallied Canadian Pacific 2½ which caused a barely perceptible hardening of other railroads. Reading and the various metal stocks were feverish within a narrow range. American Snuff advanced 2½ and Twin City Rapid Transit a point, while Keokuk & Des Moines lost 2½. Prices turned downwards before 11 o'clock.

There was increased pressure against the general market following an unexpected 3-point break in Pressed Steel Car. The preferred lost 1¾. Sugar, Colorado & Southern first preferred and Minneapolis & St. Louis lost a point and numerous other stocks large fractions. The Wisconsin Central stocks were exceptionally firm and made large fractional gains. Towards noon there was a full recovery in Sugar and a rally in Canadian Pacific to above 129 which steadied the market. Bonds were irregular at noon.

The market was neglected and uninteresting. Sugar rose ⅝ over last night and then reacted. Reading, Rock Island, second preferred advanced 1⅜ and Pacific Mail, North American, Malting preferred and Woolen preferred lost 1 to 1½.

Quiet buying of the Wisconsin Central stocks gradually advanced them a point or more. Consolidated Gas and Ice also rose a point and Brooklyn Union Gas, after declining as much, rallied 2-3. Louisville & Nashville opened a point lower and other leading stocks were lifeless.

The only notable activity was in the locomotive stocks, the common rising nearly 2 and the preferred about a point. Consolidated Gas and Brooklyn Union Gas gained 2½ in all. Snuff, People's Gas, Rock Island, 2, and New Haven, 1½. International Power sold at 70, which is 10 points below the previous sale. Fuller Construction lost 1¼ with a rally of a point and Linseed about a point. The general level of prices was not appreciably changer. The closing was stagnant.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The one disturbing factor is the coal strike. Investors are confident of the ultimate outcome than the stock market has not been affected much so far. But before we get a real bull campaign the end of the strike will have to be in sight and good crops assured. At present crop prospects could not be better and we do think that the coal trouble is only a question of a few days or possibly weeks. But until these matters are cleared up I don't expect other than a mere trading market. The market has shown such wonderful resisting power under strikes, stringent money, fraudulent manipulation and crop failures that it is evident no serious decline will take place until the big men have distributed a large part of their holdings. If the market is low today, I would buy them for a quick turn.

• • •

New York to B. E. Baker: The Daily Stockholder says: "Dullness in the market does not mean disaster prevalent or pending in the situation. Hold on to good stocks and pick up some more on weak spots. Some railroads are getting all the business they can handle and are finding use for all the equipment they have secured. Money is easy and ought to be easy. The banks having considerably improved their position and the current trend in this direction. Gold exports are off for the time being. The outlook for peace in the Transvaal improves and is spoken of confidently as a very early possibility.

• • •

Morse to Paine, Webber & Co.: My friend Jones, cashier of the Chase National bank, has just returned from a trip through the West, travelled 1000 miles by railroad, most of the time with Jim Hill or Mitchell, of St. Paul. He says crop conditions were never better. There is an abundance of moisture and corn planting is proceeding under the best of conditions. The Burlington is doing the biggest business in its history.

• • •

S. B. Dickinson to W. H. Laidley & Co.—One of the interesting features of yesterday was in the maintained activity and strength of Canadian Pacific, over 125,000 shares being traded in, a quarter of the entire business for the day. Mystery still exists as to what element is at work giving the property its new prominence. The buyers of it seem ready to take the entire capital stock at advancing figures. We believe that when the facts become known it will be found that it will be on the line of close co-operation instead of competition as heretofore during in territory mutually by the great Canadian Pacific and the Northwestern properties of the United States.

• • •

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.—The feeling in stock circles tonight suggests a narrow traders' market for the present with purchases in order on weak spots, preferably in St. Paul, Illinois Central, Atchison, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific and Central Pacific. One of the drawbacks to the market is that there are no speculators now except professionals. The pools are active. The public is persistently keeping out. The complaint is general among commission houses that outside business is not revived by the marking up of individual stocks and that phase of the situation is beginning to induce conservatism on the part of concerns which for some weeks have been optimistically disposed. But these firms are not ready to espouse the bear side as yet for they believe the adverse factors in the situation such as the labor troubles are going to be short lived. The heaviness of steel stocks is exerting an unfavorable influence and is ascribed to two causes, liquidation by people who view with disfavor the plan for converting preferred stocks into bonds and to the growing belief that increasing competition will soon result in lessened profits for the big trust.

• • •

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.—The market is very dull, but strong. It is evident that it is in strong hands and no great fears entertained of any recession of importance for a few weeks. The outlook seems better in many respects and I look for a steady and strong market until the middle of the summer. The dividend on Sugar is due about June 5 or 6 and no movement of importance is in view. I am informed that insiders in coppers have not sold all their stocks and that it is a purchase on any recession below 69. The market will have a tendency to rally more than to decline for the next two or three weeks.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Exports of copper from Atlantic ports for the week ending May 24 were 4145 tons. The total since May 1 was 11,612 tons.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Coppers are very dull and there were very few sales today. Mohawk was bid up to 44 on buying by the Boston Consolidated and was the only feature. I do not look for any activity until after the holidays.

Bache, of New York, to Paine, Webber & Co.: The local metal market closed dull and weak for copper. Lake declined nearly ⅛c while the rest of the list has lost a little.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Copper wenkened fractionally in both New York and London today and the mining shares had an extremely dull day. It looked like a manipulated setback in the metal. We firmly believe the metal market situation is strong enough to warrant a big advance in coppers during the coming summer. There are orders in to buy the best of some of the best of the coppers slightly below the market price. It seems, however, that there are practically no stocks for sale. Mohawk advanced higher privately today on orders to buy it. We strongly favor purchases of the best of the coppers on any slight reaction.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 27.—Cotton opened easy in tone, with prices unchanged to 3 points lower from absence of support. The room was bearish under disappointing Liverpool cables and favorable crop reports. After the call, foreign buying of August and demand for July steadied the list. July rapidly advanced to 8.95 and August to 8.65. Trading was not active after the first half hour. Advices from Southern spot markets told of tame demand from domestic spinners and exporters, buyers being influenced by the splendid new crop outlook.

Cotton spot closed firm, 1-16c lower. Middling uplands, 9¼c; middling gulf, 9¾c; sales, 924 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady. May, 9.12; June, 8.04; July, 8.83; August, 8.83; September, 8.06; October, 7.92; November, 7.82; December, 7.82; January, 7.83; February, 7.83.

NEWS OF THE LAKES

No New Developments In Tug Strike Develop--- Men Meet.

Company Officials Act as Though They Had Surprise Ready.

Vienna Goes Ashore at North Point During Northeaster.

There was no new developments in the tug strike situation today. Grand President McCardle is still in the city, and he attended the meeting of the local lodge of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association yesterday afternoon. At its close he said that it had resulted in no news, but that another meeting would be held this afternoon. This afternoon the men gathered once more. They have been holding daily meetings ever since the strike was declared.

Some of the men are working, having taken other positions to wait until the strike is over. Most of them are unemployed, however, and they are just about to finish up the third week of idleness. This long lay became tiresome to them, together with the absence of a steady income, but they say that they are still firm and that they are not ready to give in.

Nothing developed at the tug office today, but it was stated that arrangements had not been completed for bringing out another tug. H. G. Inman, manager of the company, seemed particularly happy about something, and he admitted that he, as the representative of the company, was feeling pretty good over the situation.

"There may be something new by this time tomorrow," he said, with the air of one who has something up his sleeve.

The local lodge of L. T. P. A. has reduced its initiation fee from $50 to $5, the object being to get any licensed men who are not now members.

Chicago, May 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The tug Rita McDonald of the Great Lakes Towing company began service with a non-union crew today, being the first boat operated by the company since the strike was declared, some weeks ago. The City of Mackinac will go into service a week earlier than usual to relieve her sister boat on the Mackinac run.

REFUSED TO REPORT

Committee Opposed to Election of Senators By People.

A Motion to Discharge the Committee Went Over.

Action of Congressman McCleary Denounced By Mr. Ball.

Washington, May 27.—Soon after the senate convened today a bill was passed establishing a regular term of the United States court in the western district of Virginia to be held at Roanoke, Va.

Mr. Burrows, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, reported that the majority of the committee was opposed to the house resolution providing for the election of senators by the people, that a majority was in favor of the Depew amendment providing that the election of senators in all states shall be uniform and congress shall have power to enforce the amendment, and finally, the majority of the committee was opposed to the resolution as amended.

In answer to inquiries, Mr. Burrows said that the committee by a majority vote had refused to report the resolution as amended to the senate either favorably or adversely. He said the committee did not direct him to report the resolution to the senate either favorably or adversely.

Mr. Wellington (Md.) moved to discharge the committee from further consideration of the resolution.

This motion went over at the suggestion of Mr. Hoar.

A resolution offered by Mr. Hoar yesterday requesting the president to inform the senate whether there be any law which would prevent any Filipino not under arrest from coming to the United States and stating his views or desires as to his country to the president or to either branch of congress, was adopted.

The conference report on the army appropriation bill was called up. The question was on Mr. Hoar's motion that the senate ask for a full and free conference, insisting upon its amendments. Mr. Spooner insisted that the house would regard the adoption of the motion as an affront to its dignity.

After some discussion, Mr. Hoar withdrew his motion.

Mr. Proctor, in charge of the conference report, offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee of senators to meet with a like committee of the house to confer on the subject of conferences between the two houses, especially on the matter of instructions to conferees.

Mr. Gallinger (N. H.) indicated that the house had been offensive to the senate, but he was called to order by Mr. Pettus (Ala.), who held that what ha occurred in the other house was not a proper subject of comment.

Mr. Gallinger maintained that when the senate was charged with encouraging conditions leaning to extravagance it was a proper question of discussion. Mr. Pettus offered an amendment to Mr. Proctor's motion, providing that the matter to be considered by the joint committee should be particularly the message of the house on the army appropriation bill. This was accepted by Mr. Proctor, and as amended the resolution was adopted. The chair, Mr. Platt (Conn.), named Mr. Spooner, Mr. Proctor and Mr. Pettus as the committee on the part of the senate.

Consideration then was resumed of the Philippine government bill, Mr. Patterson continuing his speech in opposition to the administration's policy as to the islands.

THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 27.—At 11 o'clock the house resumed the legislative session of yesterday to complete the consideration of the bill to amend the District of Columbia code. It was passed a few minutes before noon and at the latter hour the house met to begin a new legislative day.

The consideration of the immigration bill, which was discontinued last Thursday, was resumed. Several verbal amendments were adopted. Mr. Clark (Mo.) moved to strike out the proviso in section 16, exonerating masters and owners of the vessel from responsibility for safekeeping of aliens during the time aliens were held in immigration inspection buildings for investigation of their right to admission. After a somewhat lengthy debate the amendment was lost, 29 to 49.

Speaking to a pro forma amendment, Mr. Hall (Texas), at this point severely criticised the conduct of the committee on library, which he said had shown favoritism on the occasion of the unveiling of the Roumanian statue last Saturday by reserving certain seats for certain members of the house after assuring other members that there were to be no reserved seats. He mentioned that the chairman of the committee, Mr. McCleary (Minn.), by name, and denounced the action of the committee as a gross and flagrant indignity upon the membership of the house. Mr. McCleary, who was present, made no reply.

On motion of Mr. Clark an amendment was adopted to strike out the words "knowingly or negligently," which qualify the inhibition against the landing by masters of vessels of aliens at any place not designated by immigration officers. The time within which an alien who becomes a public charge shall be deported was reduced from five to two years.

Mr. Perkins (N. Y.) moved to strike out the provision authorizing the commissioner general of immigration to appoint and fix the salaries of immigrant inspectors but later the amendment was withdrawn. Mr. Bowersock (Kan.) offered an amendment to make it unlawful to sell intoxicating liquors in any immigrant station. Mr. Shattuc made a point of order against the amendment but it was overruled, whereupon he offered the following substitute for Bowersock's amendment.

Provided, that beer may be sold in any immigrant station owned or used by the United States or in the grounds appertaining thereto under the direction or with the approval of the secretary of the treasury and that the sale, purchase and handling of said beer shall be in every respect under the control of the secretary of the treasury.

SPECIAL SERVICE

Held at British Embassy For Lord Paunceforte.

Washington, May 27.—A special service was held at the British embassy today over the remains of Lord Pauncefote. It was very brief, and only members of the late ambassador's family and the embassy staff were present; Bishop Satterlee and Coadjutor Bishop Mackay-Smith officiated and read the prayer for persons under affliction and other appropriate passages, provided in the Episcopal service.

INJURED.

W. H. Nesbitt Thrown From Buggy By a Frightened Horse.

W. H. Nesbitt, an old and highly respected resident of Duluth, was injured this afternoon by being thrown from his buggy at Fifteenth avenue east and Fourth street.

A passing car startled the horse which he was driving and upset the rig. Mr. Nesbitt was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to his home at 124 Tenth avenue east. He received several scalp wounds and may have sustained a broken rib or two, but the injuries were not considered of a serious nature at first examination.

IS SHIPPING.

Aetna Mine of Steel Corporation Begins Shipments.

The Aetna mine, a new property owned by the steel corporation, began shipping last week. The Aetna is a small property, which as the Lowmore used to be the property of G. A. St. Clair. It adjoins the Mountain Iron mine, and is said to be on the same ore body, with ore of about the same grade. It is under the superintendency of M. S. Hawkins. The mine is shipping over the Missabe road.

The new lessees of the McCumber forty on the Vermilion range have ordered in a diamond drill to begin operations at once. Another drill may be added later. It is said that the explorers are pretty confident from what they have found of discovering good indications.

WAS TOO GREEDY.

Matteson Did Not Know When He Had Enough.

St. Paul, May 27.—A Helena, Mont., special to the Dispatch says: Herbert H. Matteson, defaulting cashier of the First National bank of Great Falls, who pleaded guilty to the first of ninety counts of the indictment found against him by the federal grand jury, was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Matteson's embezzlements amounted to about $200,000, which he claimed to have lost speculating on Amalgamated stock. Last June he paid back to the bank all he had taken and was $60,000 to the good. Not satisfied then, he plunged again, hoping to make a million.

ALL IS QUIET

Around Colliery Where the Engineers and Pumpmen Quit.

Hazelton, Pa., May 27.—Everything is quiet this morning at the Cranberry colliery of A. Pardee & Co., where the engineers, firemen and pumpmen quiet yesterday. Several clerks employed at the Silver Brook colliery who refused to act as firemen and pump runners were discharged.

This week most of the strikers in the Hazelton district will receive their wages for the first half of May. This will be the last distribution of wages until the suspension is ended.

It is stated that a consignment of rifles was sent to some of the collieries on the south side late last night.

DEAD OF CHOLERA.

Up to the present in Manila, there have been twenty-five cases of cholera and twenty deaths among the Americans and thirteen cases and ten deaths among the European population. The cholera totals to date are as follows: Manila, 1165 cases and 935 deaths; provinces, 5051 cases and 2878 deaths.

BURNS DEAD.

Well Known Officer at Time of Lexow Investigation.

New York, May 27.—James H. Burns, for fifteen years a ward detective on the New York police force, is dead at his home in New Rochelle, leaving an estate said to be worth $300,000.

Burns was detailed at the Eldridge street station, but, after the Lexow investigation, was placed on trial and dismissed from the force. He was also indicted, but when the trial was called his bond of $5000 was forfeited. He remained for some time in Europe and then returned to this city, where he demanded a trial. The witnesses had disappeared and the case finally was dismissed.

MINES SOLD.

Were Held By the Detroit Savings Bank.

Detroit, May 27.—Judge Donovan today gave the Union Trust company, as receiver for the wrecked City Savings bank, permission to sell the Mammoth, Confidence, Defender, Oak Brush and Fraction mines with the ores and all their personal property for $250. They are situated in Salt Lake county, Utah, and were turned over to the bank by its former vice president, Frank C. Andrews. The petition states that their value is uncertain and that it would take many thousands of dollars to develop them. An offer of $2500 has been made and the receiver thought it a good bargain.

TIME EXTENDED.

Copenhagen, May 27.—King Christian, after a long conference today with the premier, Dr. Deuntsor, finally accepted the proposal of the United States to extend for a year the time limit for the ratification of the Danish West Indian treaty. This action was taken in spite of the heavy pressure upon the part of the opposition press and members of the royal family.

YET ANOTHER.

Circus Performer Kills His Wife and Then Himself.

Denver, May 27.—At the Victoria hotel here today, Cass Dawerson, 30 years old, shot his wife in the back, killing her instantly, and committed suicide by shooting. They were circus performers and of late have been giving street shows. Dawerson was arrested last night for disorderly conduct. His wife paid his fine this morning and he accompanied her to the hotel. Just before the shooting he was heard to say they would be both better off dead.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Conferees of Two Houses Finally Reach Agreement.

Washington, May 27.—The conferees of the two houses of congress on the river and harbor bill today, reported a final agreement on that bill. The exact figures showing the aggregate results of their work have not been determined, but it can be stated that of $9,500,000 appropriation added by the senate only about $4,500,000 was retained, the provisions calling for the remaining $5,000,000 being disagreed to by the house conferees. As the bill will be reported it makes a total appropriation of about $65,000,000 in direct appropriations and for work authorized.

MUD STREAMS

At Georgetown, St. Vincent, Are Flooded By Heavy Rains.

Kingston, Island of St. Vincent, Monday, May 26.—On Saturday night the dense clouds forming a canopy over the greater part of the island, lowered, and a severe thunder storm, accompanied by a heavy rainfall, broke over St. Vincent and continued until today, causing the mud streams in the Windward district of Georgetown to be flooded. The water pipes were damaged, several houses were washed away and two lives were lost. The rainfall was so heavy that it disturbed the bodies of the buried victims of the volcanic disaster, and corpses with putrid flesh hanging to the bones were exposed to view.

During the rain storm the Soufriere volcano appeared to give forth dense clouds of vapor and steam, rising to a considerable height and spreading over the neighborhood. Roaring sounds from the mountain also caused apprehension of another eruption. Severe lightning lasted all night Saturday and on Sunday. Eight inches of rain fell at Kingstown between Saturday and Monday, the heaviest downfall since the hurricane.

RESULT

Of British Cabinet Deliberations to Be Telegraphed Boers.

London, May 27.—The British cabinet was in session for two hours today discussing the communications received from Pretoria since the meeting of the ministers on Friday last. It is understood that the inner committee of the cabinet will telegraph the result of the deliberations to Pretoria this afternoon. The Boer delegates at the Transvaal capital will then probably return to Vereeniging and report to the burghers who are still assembled there.

A. J. Balfour, the government leader, made no statement in the commons today regarding the peace negotiations, but he announced a postponement of the discussion of the budget, fixed for this week, remarking that it would be very inconvenient to debate the budget "while there were other things in the balance."

He subsequently explained that it would be impossible in discussing the budget, to prevent references to the peace negotiations.

VERY STORMY

New York, May 27.—The North German Lloyd steamer Kron Prinz Wilhelm, which arrived today from Bremen, lost two seamen overboard on the trip and four others had a narrow escape from a similar fate. Stormy weather was encountered during the latter part of the trip and last Friday six sailors while on the upper deck trying to close two doors were caught in an enormous sea, which swept over the deck. Two of them were carried overboard and drowned. The other four managed to slip into a gangway and so escaped. The alarm was given and two life buoys were cast adrift. The vessel steamed about the buoys for an hour and a half, before giving up the search for the men. They were heavily clad and it is thought they sank immediately.

W. K. Vanderbilt was among the passengers on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm.

SURVIVORS LANDED.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

NATIONAL FUNERAL

Accorded Remains of Late British Ambassador.

Lord Pauncefote Was Held In Highest Esteem.

Washington, May 28.—The remains of the late Lord Pauncefote, British ambassador to Washington, today were accorded a national funeral, in token of the high esteem set by the American people on the personal worth of the deceased, and as acknowledgment of the friendly feeling which is cherished towards Great Britain. Every department of the national government was represented, and the numerous diplomatic body, of which for so many years the late Lord Pauncefote was dean, was present in the person of ambassadors, ministers and charges. In addition to these the resident society of the capital was fully represented. The presence of 1000 men in arms was the visible sign of military participation in the funeral. The church, of which the deceased was a member, did honor to his memory by bringing to Washington to conduct the services the coadjutor bishop of Philadelphia, the Rev. Mackay Smith, under whom he had sat. Since Lord Pauncefote's death, last Saturday morning, his remains had been lying in state in the large salon of the embassy building. The British ensign stood at half-mast over the main doorway, and a sweeping bow of black crepe told of the presence of death within the house.

Soon after 10 o'clock this morning the sound of marching feet, and the slow notes of funeral music, gave notice of the approach of the funeral escort. This was composed of the second squadron of the Second cavalry and the Cavalry band, the latter mounted on white horses; the Fourth field battery, the third battalion of United States engineers and band, and a battalion of United States marines and band, Maj. William M. Black commanded the engineers, Capt. V. M. Foote the battery, and Capt. L. M. Brett the cavalrymen. The soldiers were aligned on either side of Conneticut avenue, and pall bearers entered the embassy building. The pall-bearers were Herr Von Holleben, the German ambassador; M. Jules Cambon, the French ambassador; Comte Cassini, the Russian ambassador; Senor Don De Aspiroz, the Mexican ambassador; Secretary Hay, Speaker Henderson and Senator Orville M. Platt, the acting president pro tem of the senate.

With little delay the casket was lifted upon the shoulders of four brawny sailors and as many soldiers, and borne through the arching porte cochere to the hearse.

At a slow pace the procession started down Connecticut avenue towards St. John's church, the soldiers and marines falling in the line of march as the column moved along.

The body of the church had been completely filled before the procession arrived.

President Roosevelt had the place of honor at the right of the central pew. With him sat Mr. Raikes, the British charge, and for this special occasion the personal representative of King Edward VII. On his left sat Capt. Bell, representing the Dominion of Canada, by special designation. To the left of the presidential pew and in line with it were Lady Pauncefote and her three daughters, the Honorable Sybyl, Audrey and Maude. The ambassadors were placed in the pew to the left of those ladies. The corresponding pew on the right of the president was occupied by Maj. Gen. Young and staff, charge of the military portion of the funeral service. The staff of the British embassy sat directly in the rear of the Pauncefote ladies, and in their rear the diplomatic corps filled a considerable portion of the body of the church. The cabinet was accommodated in two pews, directly behind the president's pew, and the supreme court was given similar accommodation in pews in alignment with these. The senate committee on foreign relations, headed by Senator Cullom, and the house committee on foreign affairs, under the lead of Representative Hitt, were behind the cabinet in right middle pews, and adjoining them sat Lieut. Gen. Miles and Admiral Dewey with their staffs, the assistant secretaries of departments and the commissioners of the District of Columbia. The space in the rear of these officials was occupied by officers of the army and navy.

The services at St. John's church were similar to the memorial service held at that church in honor to the late Queen Victoria. The large choir of forty men and boys took part in the service at Lady Pauncefote's request, and the three hymns sung in the service were of her selection. With this solemn ceremony over, the choir sang "I Heard a Voice from Heaven" and afterward the hymn "Now the Laborer's Task is O'er." The closing prayers were then said, and after the benediction was pronounced the choristers took up the strains of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and marched in slow cadence down the cancel steps and out of the door to the left. Meanwhile the bodybearers had lifted the casket again and carried it slowly out of the door to the right, followed by the two bishops.

At the sound of a bugle the head of the funeral escort swung up the street, leading the march to Rock Creek cemetery. At the express wish of the family, the escort from the church to the cemetery was limited to a single squadron of United States cavalry, which passed at first slowly and then more rapidly between the lines of troops at "present arms." Not even the honorary pall-bearers were called on to accompany the remains further than the church, for it was held that here the religious services had terminated. So with the mourners in their carriage and the officiating clergymen and a few of the embassy staff, the remains were taken directly to Rock Creek cemetery, where they were placed in the receiving vault, there to remain until such time as they should be conveyed on a United States warship across the broad Atlantic to the ancestral home of the late Lord Pauncefote of Preston.

FAVORED THE STRIKE

Frank Sargent of the National Labor Arbitration Committee and Immigration Commissioner Suggested Strike to the Miners.

St. Louis, May 28.—Frank P. Sargent, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, member of the national labor arbitration committee, of which Senator Hanna is chairman, and recently appointed commissioner of immigration, stated today, the Post-Dispatch says, that a general sympathy strike of all the soft coal miners in the United States would probably be ordered.

"The anthracite miners," continued Mr. Sargent, "asked very little and were willing to make concessions, but the attitude of the operators from the start was such that I did not hesitate to suggest the strike to John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers. I do not see at this time any hope of a compromise.

"The coal barons believe they are masters of the situation, while the working men are equally confident of their strength and their chances of success.

"There are 180,000 men idle as a result of the strike.

"There are between 425,000 and 450,000 soft coal miners throughout the country, and not one union, in my judgment, would hesitate a moment to respond favorably to a call for a general strike. That there will positively be such a strike I cannot say. My opinion is based solely on conferences I have held with President Mitchell."

POLICE CHARGE STRIKERS

Chicago, May 28.—An attempt by strikers to curtail the meat supply of down-town hotels and restaurants was frustrated early today by the police. Responding to a riot call, a patrol wagon filled with police dashed over the bridge leading to the Northwestern station and charged a crowd of striking teamsters who had surrounded four drivers for Swift & Co. and threatened them with bodily injury. The crowd was dispersed and in a short time the police were in full control. There were no arrests.

UP, UP, GOES PRICE OF COAL

New York, May 28.—Another advance of 50 cents per ton was made in the price of soft coal by retailers throughout the city today, making the price $5. This is an advance of about $1.60 per ton since the anthracite coal strike was begun. There was no change in the price of anthracite, the figure, $7.50, fixed by the circular issued on Monday, still prevailing.

USED A RAZOR.

Glenwood, Minn., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ole Folberg, aged about 40 years, a well-to-do farmer of White Bear Lake township, committed suicide yesterday by cutting his throat with a razor. For some time he had appeared despondent, but otherwise no cause is known for his rash deed. He leaves a widow and five children.

THE OHIO PLATFORM

Claims That Only Anti-Trust Laws Passed By Congress Are Republican.

Speech By Gen. Grosvenor, the Permanent Chairman, Loudly Applauded.

Cleveland, May 28.—The Republican state convention re-assembled this morning. After prayer by Rev. M. O. Simons, pastor of the Unity church in this city, Governor Nash, as the temporary chairman, called for reports. The reports of the committees on credentials, rules and order of business were submitted and adopted. The report making Gen. Charles H. Grosvenor permanent chairman and continuing the rest of the temporary organization was then adopted.

GEN. GROSVENOR'S SPEECH.

When Gov. Nash presented Gen. Grosvenor, the latter received quite an ovation. He spoke as follows:

"The Philippines are ours. They are ours by the conquest of Dewey and the army; they are ours by the terms of the treaty with Spain; they are ours by every principle of law, national and international, and the American people will never consent to the introduction into political power of a party that would play the old political game of 'scuttle' and run away from responsibility even as great as it is.

"In the fear of God and in the name of American civilization, we will control and govern and benefit those islands, and we will repeat in the Philippines, on a larger scale, what we have accomplished so brilliantly in the island of Porto Rico. The American flag has never been pulled down from any territory that it ever claimed jurisdiction of; it never will be pulled down while the Republican president is in the White House. Let political dastards howl. The American people will hold the honor of our flag and our army and navy sacred and inviolate.

"The Republican party stands today irrevocably committed to the doctrines of a protective tariff. The doctrine of the party, as we understand it, is simply this; it will maintain its position of establishing and maintaining such duties upon foreign imports, which come in direct competition with the products of our own labor, as will protect our own products from the competition of the cheaper labor in the other countries of the world. This is the sum total of the real doctrine of protection to American industry. It does not aim to build up monopolies in the United States, either in the products of manufactured goods, or in the production of the fruits of the soil. But it aims to make good by tariff taxes and tariff schedules, the difference in labor between the foreign article and the home manufacturer, and having accomplished that, the purpose of a protective tariff has been accomplished. There is no combination that the party, so far as I know, any purpose or intention to abandon this policy or to deviate from it in administration, but in this connection it is fair to state that the Republican party has never favored the maintenance of such rates of duty as would operate to the producers of the country to extort extravagant prices for the necessaries of life, and as from time to time the suggestion forces itself upon the judgment of mankind that there are schedules of the tariff, or items in the schedules of the tariff, that have by the evolution of business become the bulwark of unjust combination, and extravagant and extortionate prices, it would be the duty of the statesmanship to modify and revise such schedule and modify such rate of duty in the interest of justice to the consumer as well as to maintain adequate protection to the producer. In other words, the Republican party does not worship the schedules of the tariff like a fetich that is above consideration and criticism, and which must not be interfered with under any conditions whatever. The conditions of trade and production necessarily change, and a tariff schedule which today is adequate for the purposes indicated may be inadequate at a future time, and an item in a schedule that was proper at the time of its enactment may become oppressive or at least unnecessary as evolution goes forward.

"If there is to be tariff revision in the future, it would seem that the lessons of history ought to induce the people of the country to see to it that their protection, not its enemies, should handle the machinery of revision.

"Reciprocity must not be used to destroy home industries. Reciprocity must not be made use of to lessen the wages of the American laborers or to curtail the scope of their employment. But reciprocity may be used to open the markets of other countries to the productions of our country and thereby and in that way make it possible to give more wages and more hours of labor to the American workman. And especially is it vitally important that our great manufacturing industries and our great possibilities or agricultural production, shall, through the medium of just reciprocity, open the door of foreign trade to the American producer. Keeping constantly in mind the fundamental principles of protection itself, reciprocity, the handmaid of protection, can be made of the highest value to the American people.

GEN. GROSVENOR.

"Our Democratic friends are keenly alive to a subject which is one of the most interesting of all the phenomena of the day, the rapid and enormous development of combinations of capital and labor, which are usually denominated trusts. No Democrat, by power or out of power, so far as I know, in any national way, has interfered with the operation of trusts.

"Today there is every appearance of a conflict to death between the government of the United States upon the one hand and certain recognized injurious trusts on the other hand, and the Republican administration, through the courts of the country and by the instrumentality of the law has invoked under which our splendid prosperity has come; and the mere shadow of impending free trade would destroy confidence, unsettle business, alarm industrial interests and diminish the demand for labor.

No question now pressing for attention can be of greater importance than that which concerns the relation of capital and labor, and we pledge ourselves to the protection of these two servnts of civilization. We welcome the investment of capital within our state, to the end that labor may be steadily and profitably employed in adding to the wealth and prosperity of our people. We believe with Lincoln that "Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital and deserves much the higher consideration."

We recognize the necessity of co-operation in order to meet new conditions in the industrial world, and to compete successfully for the world's markets; but all combinations that stifle competition, control prices, limit production, or unduly increase profits or values, and especially when they raise the prices of the necessities of life, are opposed to public policy and should be repressed with a strong hand.

The Republican party is the only one that has dealt courageously and honestly with the trust question. It enacted, as early as 1890, a law framed by that distinguished statesman, John Sherman, to prohibit and punish combinations in restraint of trade, in the control of wages, or the advancement of prices.

This act, framed by a Republican statesman, passed by a Republican congress, and signed by a Republican president, has proved helpful in preventing abuses by such combinations, where such abuses were found to exist, and is now being vigorously applied by a Republican administration in the prosecution of unlawful combinations. Subsequent to the enactment of this law the Democratic party obtained control of both branches of congress and the presidency. It constantly asserted hostility to trusts, but failed to place upon the statute books a single line of legislation which would aid in their control.

We congratulate the new republic of Cuba upon the final fruition of the hopes and struggles of her people for freedom and independence.

Additions to our territory since 1897 have been fully justified, both by improved conditions in the islands themselves and the improved commercial relations between them and the United States. These islands will not be exploited for the gain of adventurers, but will be developed for the mutual benefit of their inhabitants and honest investors and will in time make the United States a complete commercial entity, capable of producing within its own area practically all the articles required for the daily life and comfort of man.

We congratulate the president and the army on the satisfactory progress made in the Philippines in suppressing the insurrection and establishing order, and we unqualifiedly indorse the policy of our government in those islands.

The American army has taken up a work of establishing order and maintaining authority in the distant Philippines, and, while we deplore and severely condemn any instances of cruelty which may have occurred, we remember that our soldiers are fighting a barbarous and treacherous foe, who have often inflicted most inhuman and revolting atrocities upon their prisoners. It is the nation's army, drawn from every section of the country, knowing no politics or creed, but fighting the nation's battles under the nation's flag, and we resent with indignation recent Democratic efforts to drag its honor in the dust and to cast reproach on its fair name.

NO ROOM TO LIVE

But Nine Small Parks Are Recommended.

Chicago, May 28.—For sections of the West Side were there is "no room to live" the special parks commission of the city council has recommended nine sites for small parks.

Blocks of old frame and brick buildings will disappear and in neighborhoods where now a blade of grass cannot be found, parks of four, five or ten acres will be established. In the districts where these parks are to go thousands of people are living in alleys and basements.

In ten blocks in this locality 2000 people have been found living in alleys. In the same district 3127 people were found living in basements and the mortality record runs up to 37 in a thousand, nearly three times the average of the city.

"LIAR AND CUR"

Epithets Used In the Victoria B. C. Legislature.

Victoria, B. C., May 28.—The provincial legislature was still in session at midnight and will probably continue all night. Last night, Tattlow, of Vancouver, accused Premier Dunsmuir with trying to steal $2,000,000 in connection with the Canada Northern railway scheme. The premier in return called Tatlow a liar and cur. There was an uproar.

WAS FISHING.

Osceola, Wis., Man Drowned In the River.

Osceola, Wis., May 28.—August F. Klott, who has been employed by the Apple River Power company for the past two years, was drowned in the river at that place yesterday afternoon while fishing. He leaves a widow and three children. The body has been found.

FEAR LOSS OF CONTROL

Shareholders of the Hamburg-American Line Make Stringent Restrictions to Prevent Line Passing Into Foreign Hands.

Hamburg, May 28.—At a general meeting today the shareholders of the Hamburg-American line unanimously adopted a motion submitted by the directors with the view of assuring them control of the company shall not pass from the hands of Germans to those of a foreign corporation. It provides that directors and board of supervision must be German subjects and live in Germany and that an order to change this provision or transfer the seat of business of the company to a foreign country, or dissolve the company, or do anything involving the loss of or the restriction of independence of the company in favor of foreign undertaking it will be necessary for a resolution to that effect, to be adopted by shareholders representing four-fifths of the capital of the company at a general meeting and that a confirmation of the resolution by the same majority, be adopted at a second general meeting.

DRILLING THE TRUSTED MEN

Hazelton, Pa., May 28.—In anticipation of an effective strike of the only class of men remaining at work, the coal companies in this district are daily drilling their trusted hands who have been selected to take the places of the strikers. Coxe Bros. & Co. have polled their engineers, firemen and pumprunners on the strike issue, but with what result cannot be learned. In anticipation of a strike, fences are being erected about the Harwood colliery of Pardee & Co. and the Jeddo, Ebervale, Highland and Oakdale mines of G. B. Markle & Co.

BRYAN FOUND NOT GUILTY

St. Paul, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The case of Fred Bryan, charged with manslaughter in the first degree in connection with the death of Harry Morgan, went to the jury yesterday afternoon. The jury returned at 10 o'clock last night with a verdict of not guilty, and Bryan was discharged.

SAVED BY A MIRACLE

Morne Rouge Nearly Swept From Existence.

Panic-Stricken People Fled Over the Hills.

New York, May 28.—Mount Pelee, from which there was another violent eruption on Monday, was quiet again Tuesday night, according to a Herald dispatch from Fort de France. But, the dispatch adds, the inhabitants of the island are in a terrified state.

The volcano is puzzling all the scientists, some of whom say the mountain has thus far made only a beginning.

Morne Rouge was saved from destruction last night only by a miracle, says a priest who was there.

Two correspondents, believing the volcano had for a time at least subsided, planned an expedition to the mountain for the purpose of securing photographs. Several natives were employed as guides.

After a wearying march, which took most of Monday, Morne Rouge was reached about 7:30 o'clock in the evening. The correspondents were welcomed by a kindly disposed priest, who gave such information as was in his possession. He insisted upon a pause being made for refreshments, and in his humble home food was prepared. It was this generous courtesy of the priest that saved the expedition from destruction. The original plan was that the visit should be made to the crater as soon as possible and a quick return be made to Fort de France to avoid all danger. While the evening meal was being prepared the priest pointed out the work of the ruin that had been accomplished. He said he had refused to leave his post, though he was not at all certain Morne Rouge would not be swept from existence as was St. Pierre. It was while he was talking that the explosion came.

From their homes the inhabitants of the village ran in a panic. Some did not wait to see what was happening, but hurried down the mountains in the direction of Fort de France. Scores went into the church and fell upon their knees, but by far the greater number ran without daring to look behind. The display of lightning was terrific and awe-inspiring.

When the start was made on the return trip to Fort de France, the guides and servants were gone. The correspondents had to find their way across the hills as best they could. Behind Mount Pelee continued to belch fire, ashes, smoke and mud. The detonations were of sufficient strength to make the ground tremble. It seemed to the weary travelers as if the mountain tops swayed above their heads.

To add to the horror of the situation they encountered every now and then a fer de lance, deadliest of all snakes. Scattered specimens of these snakes, of which thousands have been killed by the eruptions, were seen amid the glare from the volcano, and the flashes of lightning, gliding over the rocks and hurrying away as if they, too, had learned that their mountain home was no longer a safe place.

On all sides were natives praying and cursing in turn. Many, exhausted, fell by the way and were unable to continue. From Morne Rouge to Fort de France, by the devious path that was traveled, was almost forty miles. That distance was covered before dawn Tuesday morning.

Later arrivals reported that Morne Rouge had not been destroyed, as the force of the explosion was exerted in the direction of the sea. Robert T. Hill, of the United States geological survey, who left here for Mount Pelee Monday afternoon, has not yet returned, nor has he been heard from. He planned to try the crater from Morne Rouge.

George Kennan, the noted explorer, has been absent in the north several days and has not been heard from.

Paris, May 28.—The governor of Martinique, M. L'Huerre, cabled from Fort de France, under date of today, May 28, confirming the Associated Press dispatch announcing that a fresh eruption of Mount Pelee occured during the evening of Monday, May 26, causing a great panic at Fort de France. The cinders and scoria, however, the governor added, did not touch the town, falling entirely on the north of the island. Calm is now restored at Fort de France.

The governor abandoned his proposed visit to the devastated places on the island owing to the torrential rainfall and rough sea. Several craters, the governor further reported, were vomiting thick smoke.

Another eruption of Mount Pelee occurred as the French cruiser Tage passed St. Pierre recently, resulting in a sudden flow of mud from the bed of the river Blanche.

The governor concludes that his latest visit to St. Perre confirms the previous reports that the southern portion of that town was apparently destroyed by an inexplicable phenomenon resembling a frightful hurricane, which swept from north to south. The fall of scoria formed a layer a foot deep. The northern part of the town is buried under a bed of mud. It is impossible to adequately describe the desolation at St. Pierre.

ELEPHANT KILLS A MAN

"Tops" In the Forepaugh & Sells Show Became Angered at Joseph Blunt and Quickly Killed Him.

New York, May 28.—"Tops," a female elephant of the Forepaugh & Sells circus, killed a man today at the show ground of the circus in Brooklyn. He was Joseph Blunt, of Fort Wayne, Ind. He went to the elephants' enclosure, where the animals were waiting for their breakfast, and each stuck out his trunk to "shake hands" as Blunt passed down in front of them, it being the custom of the trainers to salute each elephant with a gentle tap. Blunt had a beer glass in his hand, and when he approached "Tops" he thrust it at her. The act seemed to offend her, and she seized him with her trunk, and after hurling him violently to the ground, knelt on him and crushed him to death. Keepers came to the rescue too late. They drove "Tops" back and removed the body.

Ft. Wayne, Ind., May 28.—Jesse L. Blount, the man slain by an elephant in Brooklyn today, was formerly a railroad brakeman residing here. He has a sister living here.

TO ABSORB B., C. R. & N.

Announced That the Rock Island Will Take Over the Road, Making Minneapolis the Northern Terminal of the System.

Minneapolis, May 28.—The Journal announces today from an authoritative source that the Rock Island has decided to absorb the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern, in which it already owns a controlling interest, and make the 1287 miles of road operated by the Cedar Rapids an integral part of the Rock Island system. Minneapolis will then become the Northern terminus of the Rock Island, and all the present plans of the Cedar Rapids road touching its new Twin City terminals, and strengthening its position in Northwestern traffic, will be carried out by the parent system. It is probable that the official list of the Cedar Rapids will undergo radical changes as the policy of centralization in the Chicago offices is to be put into effect. The move is attributed to the new influence of the Moores in Rock Island affairs.

LOST LIFE AND BANK BILLS

Chicago, May 28.—Crazed by burning oil which had fallen on her dress from a gasoline stove on which she was preparing supper last night, Miss Josephine Pikka ran into her bedroom and seized $200 in bills which lay secretaed between the mattresses. Her screams attracted John Novak who extinguished the flames only after she had been fatally burned. The bills, which represented the savings of herself and brother for several years, were burned. The girl died two hours later.

WELL MAN BLOWN TO ATOMS

St. Paul, May 28.—A Graceville, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: Henry W. Mayers, a tubular well man, while putting in a well on M. C. Keating's farm east of town, had occasion to use dynamite. While preparing the charge it exploded in some unknown way, blowing Mr. Mayer to pieces and almost killing his assistant, who lies at the point of death in the hospital. Mr. Mayer moved here from Wisconsin some years ago and has been engaged in well digging for years.

AFFIRMED.

Court of Appeals Sustains Lower Court In Admiralty Case.

A mandate was filed with the clerk the United States district court today from the United States court of appeals, in which the decree of the United States district court dismissing the libel of the Lake Michigan & Lake Superior Transportation company against the tugs Buffalo, Industry, Mystic, the Union Towing and Wrecking company and Darwin E. Stevens.

The accident for which the libel suit was brought occurred Sept. 7, 1899. The libellant claimed that the steamer Peerless, partly laden with lumber and iron, going from the West Superior Lumber company's dock to the Duncan & Brewer mill in tow of the tug Industry, was struck by the lumber barge Stewart, in tow of the tug Buffalo and sunk. The accident was claimed to be due to mistake in signals, during which the tug Mystic, towing a raft, backed across the bow of the Industry, in the draw of the Northern Pacific railway bridge. It was also claimed that the tug Buffalo made no attempt to stop the barge Stewart. The libellant asked for damages amounting to $21,000.

The case was tried in United States district court in May, 1900, and resulted in a decision for the respondents, which decision is now affirmed by the court of appeals.

EVIDENCE LACKING

Personal Injury Case Fails Through Lack of Testimony.

Witnesses In Poulain Case Do Not Come to the Scratch.

John Wallace Acquitted By Jury of Running Blind Pig.

The case of the estate of George Poulain, deceased, against the Duluth-Superior Traction company was dismissed by the plaintiff this morning in district court after most of the plaintiff's testimony had been introduced.

Poulain was killed Sept. 28, 1901, a street car running into him while he was riding a bicycle at Seventh avenue west and Superior street. The plaintiff claimed that the car was running from 30 to 35 miles an hour when it struck Poulain, and it was the failure of the witnesses to substantiate this point that brought about the dismissal of the case.

The witnesses that were called all failed to show that the car was running at the rate claimed. Some of them made it pretty rapid on direct examination, but when they were cross-examined they were not nearly so certain about it, and the effect of their testimony on this point was not strong. When the witnesses went shy in this manner the plaintiff's attorney dismissed the case. Greene & Wood were the company's attorneys.

The personal injury suit of John Hedberg against the Duluth-Superior Traction company was dismissed this morning before it went to trial.

Judge Dibell and a jury next took up the case of Frank Crasweller, as administrator of the estate of Thomas Hood, against the Ohio Coal company, another personal injury suit. Hood was working for the coal company May 15, 1900, bracing timbers on the coal dock, when a timber gave way and threw him twenty feet to the ground below, killing him. It is claimed that the company was negligent in not having better protection and in having incompetent foremen. The suit is to recover $5000.

The company alleges contributary negligence on the part of Hood and his fellow-employes, claims the work upon which Hood was engaged was hazardous and that he knew it was, and alleges that as none of Hood's relatives live in this country, there is nobody in whose behalf suit may be properly brought.

J. W. Reynolds is the attorney for the estate and Theodore Hollister appears for the company.

The case of the Clyde Iron works against Charles Stone, to recover $1,800 for rent of a cement mixer, was still on trial today, and it seemed likely to take up the remainder of the day in Judge Cant's court.

WALLACE IS ACQUITTED.

Jury Finds He Ran No Blind Pig at Mesaba.

The case against John Murphy, charged with grand larceny in the second degree, was given to the jury in district court late this afternoon. Murphy is accused of stealing a suit of clothes in Hibbing May 2. He hawked the clothes about the streets trying to sell them to a number of men, and finally disposed of them.

The jury in the case against John Wallace, charged with running a blind pig at Mesaba, created considerable surprise in the district court yesterday afternoon by returning a verdict of not guilty. Two men sent up by the county testified to having bought a pint of whisky from Wallace May 3, but the jury, after remaning out about six hours, acquitted him.

There is another indictment against Wallace for the same offense, in which he is charged with selling another pint of whisky to another man, and that was to be taken up this afternoon after the Murphy case had been given to the jury.

This will be the last case of the criminal calendar with one exception, in which a plea of guilty is expected.

AT WEST DULUTH

The Duluth Safety Car Stake company, which is comprised of West Duluth citizens who took up the McLaughlin patent stake for logging cars, has started in a business that at the very start has exceeded the company's expectations. But a few weeks ago the preliminary circulars announcing the placing of the stake on the market were sent out, and the company is now receiving orders from every part of the country. During the past week orders have been received from lumber sections in Georgia and Alabama.

FOURTH OF JULY.

West Duluth business men are disposed to be amused at the idea that the Fourth of July is in any great peril whether they do or do not favor a celebration in this portion of the city. One business man ventured the assertion this morning that he expected that the day would be celebrated just the same elsewhere, even if West Duluth did not enthuse so much as it has on past occasions. The idea prevalent is not antagonistic to a celebration, but some of the business men have questioned the advisability of trying to get up a celebration here when there may be better attractions in some other part of the city to draw away the people.

STORES TO CLOSE.

It is claimed that an agreement has not yet been reached among all the merchants for closing the stores in this part of the city on Decoration day. The members of the Barbers' union will observe the day and the shops will be closed all day Friday. They will be open, however, until 11 o'clock Thursday evening.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

J. A. Goff, the evangelist, will this evening begin a series of meetings in West Duluth that will be continued every evening for the next two weeks, except Saturday evening. The subject this evening will be "Israel's Journey from Egypt to Canaan." The sermon will be illustrated by a chart. The meetings are free and will be held in the hall opposite the Palmer block on Grand avenue.

A CONSOLIDATION.

Another business change was noted in West Duluth this morning. The Hendricks Dry Goods company and A. J. Borgstrom & Co., shoe dealers, have consolidated, and will be known hereafter under the firm name of Hendricks Dry Goods company. The firm has a good location at the corner of Central avenue and Bristol street, and will draw the large patronage formerly enjoyed by both firms.

Vicious Dog Killed.

A little 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Stitt, of 20 West Third street, was severely bitten by a Scotch collie dog, near his home this morning.

The dog was on the sidewalk and the child, in passing, reached out its hand to pat it on the head. The animal snapped the little hand, sinking its teeth clear through.

Detective Charles Mork from police headquarters killed the dog shortly afterward. The child was reported in normal condition this afternoon, though a close watch is being kept for first symptoms of poisoning.

Objects to Transfers.

Alfred Kjellin has begun suit in district court against Andrew and Emma Anderson and S. H. Eckman to set aside some transfers of property from Anderson to his wife, through Eckman, on the ground of fraud.

Kjellin claims to own a judgment for $135.15 against Anderson, secured April 30. Anderson owned the east half of lot 62, block 55, Duluth Proper, Third division, and on May 5 Anderson and his wife transferred the property to Eckman, who, on the same date, transferred it to Mrs. Anderson.

Kjellin claims these transfers were without consideration and void, and that they were fraudulently made to evade his judgment. Therefore he asks the court to set them aside and give his claim a chance at the property. N. H. Wilson is the attorney.

Will Visit the West.

Within a few days Francis A. Cokefair, chief engineer of the Highland Canal & Power company, and E. C. Bacot, electrical engineer for the company, will leave for a month's tour in the West. They will be accompanied by Mr. McGill, of Minneapolis, western representative of the Westinghouse Electrical company, and will visit all of the high head water power plants of the West. Their visit will cover Colorado, California, Washington and other states, and they will naturally gain much information that will be of value to them in the project in which they are engaged here.

A Different Carlson.

It was erroneously stated in The Herald Monday that John Carlson was the saloonkeeper under arrest for selling adulterated whisky. Charles R. Carlson was the man. Some have gained the impression that John H. Carlson, of 521 West Superior street, also in the Bowery district, is the man, but this is incorrect. He has not been arrested.

Offices Will Close.

The city offices of all roads will be closed all day Friday. The boys have decided to take a full holiday. A bunch of them are figuring on going to Chicago to celebrate the holiday. Some have backed out, however, on the ground that that town isn't large enough to allow ample elbow room for the full scope of their possibilities. They may decide to go to West Superior instead.

FOUGHT AND WON

Jobbers Win a Long, Hard Battle For Justice.

Will Get Differential Under New York on Southern Pacific.

Hardware Line Is Chief One In This Vicinity Interested.

Local jobbers have been advised that the Sonuthern Pacific road has finally deferred to the demands of the jobbers of the eCntral West for a differential under the New York-South Pacific coast freight rate basis. This means that these jobbers, including the wholesale interest of Duluth, have won the hardest and longest fight for justice that they have made with the railroads.

The information comes in the form of a letter from the traffic manager of a large St. Louis house, which asks the transportation man of a local house to prepare a list of the articles that his house desires placed on a lower basis than New York.

The letter goes on to say that a high official of the Southern Pacific has asked for this information with the assurance tha tit has decided to concede the position of the Middle West jobbers. Each house in the district affected will submit a schedule of changes desired at a meeting of traffic managers, to be held in Chicago very shortly for the purpose of agreeing on a general schedule to be presented to the traffic department of the Southern Pacific.

The hardware line is the chief one involved in Duluth. The territory in that line which is affected embraces twenty-five or thirty large houses in such cities as St. Louis, Chicago, Duluth, the Twin Cities, Kansas City, St. Joe, Council Bluffs, Sioux City, Louisville, New Orleans, Birmingham and Memphis. Of course a great many other lines, and many other centers, will be affected.

The concession that the middle West jobbers have contended for, and which the Southern Pacific now proposes to grant, is the application of the graded system of freight rates to points on its system in Southern Pacific coast territory, instead of the postage stamp system. In other words, the Southern Pacific intends to recognize the long-and-short-haul principle in fixing rates.

Only a year ago the jobbers in the same territory succeeded in inducing the north const roads to give them a 25 cent differential per hundredweight under the New York rate to north coast points. Since then they have been working on the Southern Pacific, which was really the root of the evil, as a result of the Huntington theory that the New York-coast route via the gulf should have as low a rate as the middle-West-Pacific route all rail.

If the Southern Pacific makes the same concession it will be a step in the direction of ultimate equitable adjustment of freight rates from this and similar territory to all Pacific coast points.

Paid His Fine.

George Levy, an auctioneer, employed at 400 West Superior street, was arrested this afternoon for not having a license. He explained to the court that he was simply an employe of Moses Cook, and a plea of not guilty was entered for him.

DEATH LIST.

Dayton, Ohio, May 28.—Hon. Paul J. Sorg, former congressman and multimillionaire tobacco manufacturer, died at 5 o'clock this morning, at his home in Middletown, after an illness of several years' duration. He was 62 years old and leaves a widow, one son and a daughter. The deceased had a very humble beginning in life, receiving his education in the night schools of Cincinnati. He served two terms in congress from this district, succeeding the late Hon. George Houck.

New Orleaons, May 28.—The Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer died at 12:50 this afternoon. Dr. Palmer was over 80 years old and was probably the best known preacher in the Presbyterian church in the South. He was prominent in the Confederacy during the civil war. His death was the result of injuries sustained by being struck by a street car in this city several weeks ago.

LOG SALVAGE.

Conference With Reference to Letting Contract Being Held.

There was a conference of the officers of the Duluth Log Salvage association this afternoon at the Spalding hotel, relative to the letting of the contract for the season's sawing of the association's logs, but nothing definite has yet been done. The contract for salving the logs for the present season has not been awarded.

Last year the association salved 6,000,000 feet of logs which were sawed at the Peyton, Kimball & Barber mill in West Superior. Capt. Jones Smith had the contract last season for salving the logs.

The officers of the Log Salvage association this year are: President, W. H. Gilbert; secretary, J. I. Van Vliet; treasurer, E. H. Eddy. Last season G. A. Porter was secretary and treasurer of the association.

NOT CUT OUT.

Harbor Appropriation Does Not Affect Work On New Piers.

The cut in the appropriation for the Duluth-Superior harbor from $275,000, as originally provided, to $200,000, will cause a reduction in the amount of work done in the harbor, but will not affect the construction of the piers at the Superior entry. In the bill appropriating $275,000 it was provided that at least $100,000 should be expended in the construction of piers at the Superior entry. Although $75,000 will be cut from the appropriation, the provision still stands, so that half of the total sum will go to that work.

The provision for the purchase of a dredge for use in this harbor was also cut out. It was reported some time ago that it would be.

An appropriation of $45,000 for War Road harbor and War Road river is also provided in the bill. This is on the Lake of the Woods.

CHANGE IN TIME.

Great Northern New Schedule For Ranges.

The Great Northern railroad will, on Sunday, make effective a new time table, the provisions of which will establish passenger train service between Duluth and points on its new line, which have not heretofore had those facilities. These towns are Ellis, Buhl, Chisholm and Virginia.

This will cause a change in the time of leaving Duluth. The regular afternoon train for the range will depart at 2:20, instead of 3 p. m. It will arrive at Hibbing at 7:10 in the evening, and at Virginia, which will be the present terminus of the service, about 8 p. m. Southbound, the train will leave Virginia at 7 a. m. and Hibbing at 7:55, and arrive at Duluth at 12:30.

For the present the new main line, known as the Swan river cut-off, which was completed recently, will be used exclusively for ore traffic, and the passenger trains will run over the old Wright-Davis branch as in the past. This makes the run almost thirty miles longer than the new line, but owing to the newness of the country along the cut-off there is little passenger traffic there, while along the old line numerous prosperous towns have to be taken care of.

The stations that have been established along the new line between Swan River and Ellis are Saxe, Madden, Para, Dunblane, Ceylon and Baden.

THEY DID NOT COME.

Excursion of Baptists From St. Paul Abandoned.

Railroad men and hotel men watched all the forenoon for the hundreds of Baptists who were scheduled to arrive from St. Paul in order to look over Duluth and the Mesaba range. Nobody found any signs of the advertised invasion having eventuated, and nobody seemed to know anything about it, until somebody thought to consult the Mesaabe road offices. There it was found that a telegram was received yesterday announcing simply that the intended visitors would not come, and therefore that they would not be able to avail themselves of the company's offer to furnish a special train to the range.

TALKS OUT.

Doctor Talks About Food.

It is often the case that docors themselves drift into bad habits of food and drink, although they know better, but doctors are human, you know, like the rest of us, but when they get into trouble they generally know better how to get out of it, and the "food route" is a common one among them.

Dr. H. Barber, of Laurel, Ind., concluded that coffee and badly selected food was the cause of his stomach trouble and his loss of weight from 184 pounds to 153 pounds, with nerves impaired and general nervous breakdown.

He did not give coffee up at once, but began the use of Grape-Nuts, and says: "Within a month I could see a wonderful change had taken place, due to the use of the new food. I decided to give up coffee and use Postum in its place. So regularly for a time I have been on a breakfast made up of Grape-Nuts, a little graham bread and Postum Food Coffee. My weight has increased to 174 pounds, my stomach trouble has entirely gone and my mind is clear and vigorous as ever. Wishing you every success, I beg to assure you of my warm appreciation of Grape-Nuts and Postum."

PICKED UP.

Four Boys Were Rescued By the Steamer Chicora.

Toronto, May 28.—Harry Stewart, Bert Stewart, George Johnson and Eddie McBride, young boys from Port Credt, were picked up yesterday on Lake Ontario by the steamer Chicora. They had been afloat in a small boat since last Monday.

When the Chicora first sighted the boat it was thought to be empty, but with the glass it was seen that the boys were huddled in the bottom, unconscious. A heavy sea was running and it was with difficulty a boat was lowered from the steamer and the drifting boat with the half frozen boys was taken on board. They were brought to Toronto by the Chicora last night. It is believed that they will recover.

EXAGGERATED

Was Reported Loss of Life at Quezaltenango.

New Orleans, May 28.—Rev. and Mrs. Juan P. Penzoti arrived yesterday on the steamer Breakwater from Puerto Barrios. They are among the few Americans who were in Quezaltenango, Guatemala, when that city was destroyed by the recent earthquake and narrowly escaped with their lives, both being seriously injured. They were dug out of the ruins, and as soon as they were able to travel, started north.

Mrs. Penzoti says that the loss of life in the earthquake has been greatly exaggerated. It would have been much larger but for the time at which the accident occurred. As shown by the clocks, which all stopped, the earthquake occurred at 8:20 p. m. It lasted forty-five minutes, growing steadily worse every second until the houses were finally four feet out of the perpendicular. Then, contrary to previous experience in earthquakes, the inner walls and roofs fell, the other walls remaining erect. A large proportion of the poulation were in the streets or rushed into the streets at the first signal of the earthquake, and thus escaped. Those who remained inside were buried in the debris.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Louisville, May 28.—Robert Simpson, a laborer, 32 years old, shot and probably fatally wounded his wife, Stella Simpson, 19 years old, and then committed suicide at his home on Twenty-second street and Griffith avenue last night. The crime was not discovered until today.

CUT HIS THROAT.

Louisville, May 28.—Archie James, a negro, 65 years old, and John Fleck, a negro, engaged in a quarrel on Second street between Market and Jefferson this morning at 11 o'clock, and Fleck cut James' throat from ear to ear, killing him instantly. Fleck was arrested by two policemen, and while the officers were waiting for a patrol wagon to arrive, a crowd of negroes attempted to get the prisoner in order to lynch him. They rushed the policemen, who drew their revolvers and succeeded in dispersing the mob without any harm being done.

A SHORTAGE.

Michigan Street Men Already Talk of One In Strawberries.

There is grave danger, according to Michigan street commission men, that there will be a serious shortage of preserved berries next winter.

They say that the strawberry crop is very short, and that the movement just now is very much smaller than they ever remember to have seen it at this time of the year. They say that Arkansas and Missouri only raised half crops of strawberries, the blame going back to last year's drouth, and that little better is expected from the Wisconsin crop.

If there is much of a falling off in the output of berries from Wisconsin, the time when strawberries are plentiful enough and cheap enough to preserve will not come. Wisconsin berries are due in about ten days or two weeks, and when they begin to come it will be seen whether or not they are going to be numerous enough to supply the demand for preserving purposes.

"Strawberries ordinarily come in at the rate of one, two or three cars a day about this time," said a commission man yesterday afternoon. "Now they are coming at the rate of a couple of cars a week, and we think we are doing well when they come that rapidly. I think that housewives who are planning on preserving strawberries will have to preserve something else this year, for it is very doubtful whether they will become cheap enough for that purpose."

Commission men say that they dislike very much to see a sluggish movement of berries, because for several months they are the life of the market. When they come in at the rate of several cars a day and sell off rapidly as they come they make things lively on Michigan street, and when instead of coming several cars a day they come in at the rate of several cars a week, it makes things look duller than they ought to.

This is a very interesting matter to housekeepers, for every year, when the proper time arrives, thousands of them buy strawberries by the case and sugar in large lots for preserving purposes. They have been waiting for that time to come, and it is not very far away, if it is to come at all. If it does not come, there will be serious disappointment in many homes.

DEVELOPMENT COMPANIES.

Duluth Men to Explore North Carolina Properties.

William O'Brien, Andrew Gowan, Edward Lammers and Albert Lammers, C. F. Leland and others have returned from their trip South in a private car. The object of their trip was to inspect a gold property they recently purchased. The property is situated on the southern boundary of North Carolina. It really consists of two properties, and together they cover an area of over a mile square.

What work has been done on the property thus far has been of an experimental character, and an expert has just been sent down to look it over and summarize the results that have been attained.

A. Lammers said this morning that the prospect seemed good from what data was at hand, but he would not care to speak more definitely until the report of the expert had been received.

Two companies have just been organized to explore the properties. One is the Stillwater Gold Mining and Milling company, with $500,000 capital, and the other is the Lone Hill Gold Mining and Milling company, with $250,000 capital.

MINNESOTA CROPS.

Storms In Several Parts of the State.

The crop report for Minnesota for the week ending Monday, is as follows:

"The mid-day temperatures were high all the week till the 24th. There were rains somewhere in the state daily except the 22nd; these were nearly all of a thunderstorm character, and not very heavy except in comparatively small areas, where there were heavy rains, high winds, and in places considerable hail. There was such a storm on the 19th in northern central portions; another on the 20th in Douglas, Pope and Swift counties, with one death caused by the falling of a house, and the blowing down of windmills, buildings, etc., and on the 21st there was an unusually sever storm in the extreme southeast, with very heavy rains lasting from six to eight hours, which filled streams and small rivers with rushing torrents, and these carried away bridges and washed out rail and wagon roads, with serious delay to traffic; rolling fields were badly gullied, with much injury to growing grains and recently planted corn and potatoes, and low lands were flooded; thousands of dollars worth of glass was broken by very large hail stones.

"The frequent showers in the Red River valley early in the week delayed the drying of the soil, and seeding, but in the middle and latter parts of the week there were less rain, and considerable wheat was sown after the 22nd, but the low lands continue very wet. It is said that all the wheat that is safe to sow this season has been put in, and that all the unseeded land dry enough before June 15, will be seeded to barley and flax. The wheat that is seeded is growing finely.

"In all of the rest of the state, wheat, oats and barley are growing rapidly, and they seem strong and healthy. Corn and potato planting and flax seeding are well advanced, except on the heavy soils and in low places, and the earliest are coming up well. Grass in pastures and hay fields is growing rapidly, and a good hay crop is anticipated.

WALLER IS FREE.

Chaffee's Disapproval Does Not Affect the Major.

Washington, May 28.—Gen. Chaffee's disapproval of the court-martial paroceedings of Maj. Waller does not have any actual effect upon that officer. A commanding general or reviewing officer from the secretary of war or the president frequently disapproves of any action of a court-martial, but no reviewing officer has the right to increase the sentence of an officer of the army or navy, and when a man is once tried he cannot again be put in jeopardy for the same offense. A commanding general or reviewing officer may mitigate a sentence or he may disapprove the action of a court-martial which has inflicted a sentence and thereby relieve the officer of punishment, but he cannot punish where the court-martial fails to do so. The military court acquitted Maj. Waller, and he is therefore free from all prosecution under these charges and specifications. Gen. Chaffee's disapproval of the proceedings is, therefore, i nthe nature of a criticism upon the court and does not affect the rights and privileges of Maj. Waller at all.

WILL BE CLOSER

Two Northern Lines Are Likely to Have Intimate Duluth Relations.

Northern Pacific May Handle Great Northern's Duluth Business.

In Superior the Order Will Be the Reverse.

Closer relations between the two great transcontinental systems in Duluth are looked for before long. This greater intimacy will, it is said, take much the same character as the relations now existing between the Northern Pacific and the Milwaukee roads, as far as the handling of freight on the terminals of Duluth and Superior is concerned.

The great change, it is reported, will affect principally local freight. It seems to be the belief of railroad men locally that it will not be long before the Northern Pacific will handle all local freight for the Great Northern in Duluth, and that the Great Northern will do the same for the Northern Pacific in West Superior. This impression is based somewhat on the fact that the Northern Pacific had plans made for the building of a large new freight warehouse at West Superior. It was generally known that it was to be built. Then, all at once, the plans were laid away on a shelf, and since then nothing more has been heard officially about the matter.

As far as the Great Northern is concerned in Duluth, it is pointed out that, aside from traffic in transit, it is in poor shape to handle freight here. It has nothing except a small local warehouse, and no site for trackage for one. Its present trackage ground along the side of Michigan street is entirely too limited, it is said, to warrant the building of a new warehouse. This does not refer to freight in transit.

The Northern Pacific, on the contrary, owns the space on Fifth avenue west extending up to Michigan street on one side and down to the Omaha tracks on the other side. Its broad space for trackage extends as far west as First avenue east. It has one of the largest local freight warehouses in the country outside of the Twin Cities, and this can easily be supplemented with another of similiar or larger proportions, which could be built nearer Michigan street, with plenty of trackage on all sides. Both houses could be two stories, in order to provide adequate room for freight that might be left in storage for some time, though this would be more essential for the in-freight house than for that devoted to out-freight.

It is said that the Northern Pacific already contemplates the enlargement of its new local warehouse or the building of an additional one, and it is intimated that the matter has already been taken up of providing for the warehousing of Great Northern local freight.

"Everybody that is familiar with the local terminal situation," said a railroad man who is not connected with either of the northern lines, 'knows that the Northern Pacific has such a complete control of the local situation as to make it much more costly for the Great Northern to handle its own local freight. Moreover, it would be more convenient for the people doing business with the Great Northern if it should arrange with the Northern Pacific to handle its local traffic. This does not mean that the business would be consolidated at all. Uptown the two roads would be as distinct as the Milwaukee and the Northern Pacific are today, and no doubt more so. It would simply become a business proposition. Can the Northern Pacific handle the Great Northern's local freight for less money than the Great Northern can itself. You couldn't blame the Great Northern for accepting a proposition that would save it money, if it did not prejudice it in any way, and as the control of the two roads now stands, it ought to be able to protect itself amply.

"The result of such an arrangement would be that the Northern Pacific would devote its local freight facilities to the trafic of all lines except the Omaha and Iron Range. If the Great Northern comes in, it will leave only those two outside the fold, for the Northern Pacific now handles all the freight for the Wisconsin Central, South Shore and Missabe roads. It has anideal system of trackage, and the shipper and consignee are better served than as if each of the three roads referred to got a little trackage and an out-of-the-way site for freight houses. The Northern Pacific would then become to the local freight situation much the same as it is to the passenger business. It now provides passenger terminal facilities for all roads except the Omaha. The Iron Range is in a position to be independent if it chooses, because it has a fine depot at Endion, but the convenience of travelers is better sought by using the Union depot. I don't believe the freight agreement between the two roads will go farther, however, than local freight, because Mr. Hill already has a fine dock site, formerly owned by A. M. Miller, on Fifth avenue slip, which I think he intends to improve."

FORMAL OPENING

Oatka Beach Auditorium to Open For Season Decoration Day.

Fine Concert to Be Given By Third Regiment Band.

Plans For Season Provide For Handsome Entertainment.

The formal opening of Oatka beach auditorium will take place Decoration day, and a fine musical program has been arranged for the afternoon.

The auditorium will be managed this year by its owner, the Interstate Traction company, and arrangements have already been made for a series of greater attractions this season than last. Among the features will be a free band concert every Sunday afternoon by the Third Regiment band, under Director Phaten, and a free concert every Sunday evening by the "Lisbon Orchestra." The latter musical organization is a new one to Duluth. The orchestra comes from Manhattan beach, New York, and is composed of five people, two ladies and three men, who have played together for the past ten years. Miss E. K. Rawson is director.

Promenade concerts and dances will be given by the Lisbon orchestra Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings in June, and every evening, except Sunday evening, during July and August.

The management of the auditorium is disposed to run it on a liberal plan this season, and instructions have been given for those in charge of the auditorium to extend every courtesy to the public.

The park that was opened by the company last season will again be maintained this season, and tables and benches will be scattered about for the free use of all picnic parties.

The management has given notice that especial care will be taken to prevent the sale of any intoxicating liquors on the point this season, and ample police protection is promised. Rowdyism of any kind will not be permitted.

The rush for summer homes on Park Point this season has been beyond all precedent. The season opened much earlier than in previous years. There has been a great deal of building going on since the opening of the season. Many of the cottages are finished, and some are still in the process of construction. Substantial repairs have also been made to many of the older cottages. One of the striking features about the new cottages that are being built is the improved character of their structure. They are much more substantial than has been customary. Shingle roofs have replaced those of tarred paper. The cottages are being constructed of the better grades of lumber, are very attactive and finished off on the inside so that they may be occupied during the winter as well as during the summer. Handsome summer residences are being built by W. B. Phelps, former county attorney; H. C. Marshall, of Marshall-Wells company, and numerous other Duluthians.

The Park point street railway now makes close connections with the ferry and the Duluth-Superior Traction company's cars. The summer schedule, a twenty-minute service, has gone into effect, the cars operating from 6 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. So close are the connections that persons leaving the corner of Lake avenue and Superior street will be placed at the auditorium in thirty-three minutes. The round trip can be made in exactly one hour and ten minutes. This rapid service, with the numerous changes, will be one of the features of the service this summer. The service on the street railway on Park point is said to be giving excellent satisfaction at the present time. The company has bought two more cars, one open motor car and one trailer. On warm days the open motor car will be the only one of the kind operating in the city. It can be run on Park point when the weather will not permit of its use in any other part of the city.

The ferry steamer Estelle went into commission again this week. All the objections raised to the steamer last season have been done away with by the extensive repairs that have been made to the boat this spring. The Estelle has been in dry dock, where she had a new hull constructed, her machinery overhauled and received a fresh coat of paint. Capt. Kidd, the marine architect, has pronounced the Estelle to be in first-class condition.

The scow, which was run into and sunk a few weeks ago, has been rebuilt, stronger than before.

On the point considerable money has been outlayed in straightening and ballasting the car tracks, and the road bed is in good condition for the summer traffic.

The first car leaves O-at-ka beach at 6:20 in the morning, going north and leaves the canal at 6:40 o'clock.

The management will turn the auditorium over to the Clerks' union Thursday evening of next week.

Following is the program for the free concert at the auditorium Decoration day afternoon:

NOT SO MUCH.

Less Lumber to Move Than Is Generally Supposed.

A local lumber shipper says that the impression that vesselmen are trying to give out that there is a lot of dry lumber to move out of Duluth and neighboring ports is erroneous. He declares that there is less lumber to move from here now than there has been in any previous season considering the fleet of vessels now engaged in lumber carrying.

"More lumber left Duluth during the winter by rail than ever before," he said. "Twenty million feet were taken out by vessel in April, which amounts to that much gain over any preceding season. A good deal of lumber has gone out in May. "When you stop to consider that many vessels that until this season were never in the lumber carrying trade are now making a specialty of this class of business, you begin to realize that while there is less lumber to go out by water, there are more vessels to carry it.

"The Nicaragua, for instance, never carried but one cargo of lumber before. She is now engaged in the trade steadily. Take the Bermuda and the Pridgeon of the Davidson fleet. Vessels of that type have never taken lumber before. A few of their capacity make a great deal of difference in the course of a season."

ORATORICAL CONTEST.

Sophomore and Freshmen Teams Will Meet.

This evening at the High School assembly hall the oratorical contest between the sophomore and freshmen classes will be held.

There are teams of four—two boys and two girls in each team—representing the two classes. They have been preparing for the event for some time with the result that some excellent work has been done and a great amount of enthusiasm stirred up over the affair.

Some months ago a similar contest took place betwee the two upper classes—in that case the orations were original, but tonight the speeches given will be the old classics that have stirred the minds of men for generations. Among the numbers are Patrick Henry's great speech and Keller's dramatic recitation, "Regulus to the Carthaginians."

The event will prove very interesting to those interested in the high school. It will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. No admission will be charged.

Injured at Viaduct.

While driving home from West Superior Monday evening, Charles Prosser, the Superior street hay and grain merchant, drove into a hole in the street at the south end of the Garfield avenue viaduct that had been left open during the track-laying at that point. The opening was at the right side of the approach, which was not in use at the time, the left side only being used. Mr. Prosser was thrown out and received a severe shaking up and numerous bruises. Dr. Lyman was called and his injuries were attended to. The horse was also badly scratched up and the carriage was demolished.

Are Afraid of It.

The local stockholders of the Chippewa copper mine in Douglas county are said to be suspicious of the intention of the Easterners interested in the mine who have called a meeting of the stockholders for June 2, at Kittehy, Me. The printed announcement says that a reorganization scheme will be considered and it is feared that a game of "freeze-out" will be played with the local stockholders.

Will Spend Some of It.

Angus McDonald, a former resident of West Superior, has returned from a six years' sojourn in Alaska, during which time he acquired a fortune of $100,000 in the gold fields. He was in partnership with Joseph Housel, also of Superior. The latter is said to be similarly fortunate. The two men have been as far north as Behring straits. They have several undeveloped claims near Dawson City, to which Mr. McDonald is going back after a visit to England to witness the coronation of King Edward.

Living In Terror In Martinique.

Dispatches from Fort de France report that Mount Pelee continues in violent erruption and that the people of the island are in a terrified state. Since the terrible eruption that destroyed St. Pierre the leaders of science have joined in a general symposium to tell the world all about volcanoes, their nature and origin, but nobody seems able to tell how long before their fury may reasonably be expected to abate. The fact is that nobody knows what may be expected in the volcanic regions in the West Indies. The volcano in Martinique is puzzling all the scientists, and some of them are credited with expressing the opinion that Mount Pelee has thus far made only a beginning. If this be true, it may yet destroy the whole island of Martinique. The terror and anxiety of the unfortunate people who reside in the afflicted island is deplorable. They are trembling between the danger of fire and asphyxia. The air is so oppressive that one feels, it is said, that his nose is about to be set on fire. Respiration is a labor and there is constant fear of suffocation. Flames shoot skyward in sheets and at times light up the whole island. At Fort de France ashes and thick fog cover everything. Occasionally a wave of mud relieves the situation. Alarm fills the minds of the islanders and many of them believe that an explosion even more serious than that of May 8 must occur before the earth is sufficiently relieved of the gases that press for escape and the volcano subsides permanently.

The Growth of Shipbuilding.

There was a time when the figures just issued by the census bureau concerning the shipbuilding industry of the United States would have greatly annoyed the promoters of the ship subsidy bill before congress. It does not bother them so much now, for all but a few of its staunchest advocates fully realize that the bill is a dead letter for this session at least. Shipbuilding in the United States has grown very rapidly and the growth during the past ten years exceeds that of any preceding decade, and the tonnage constructed during the census year ending May 31, 1900, was greater than during any preceding year in the history of the United States, with the possible exception of 1854 and 1855. Although in other countries iron and steel long ago largely superseded wood, the chief material used in the construction of ships, the census statistics show that it was not until the last decade that metal shipbuilding attained proportions greater than wooden in the private shipyards of the United States. The report, which is by Alexander it. Smith, of New York, shows a capital of $77,302,701 invested in the 1116 establishments reporting for the industry. This sum represents the value of land, buildings, machinery, tools and implements, and the live capital utilized, but does not include the capital stock of any of the corporations. The value of the products is returned at $74,578,158, to produce which involved an outlay of $2,008,537 for salaries of officials, clerks, etc.; $24,839,163 for wages; $3,685,861 for miscellaneous expenses, including rent, taxes, etc., and $33,486,772 for materials used, mill supplies, freight and fuel. It is not to be assumed, however, that the differences between the aggregate of these sums and the value of the products is, in any sense, indicative of the profits in the manufacture of the products during the census year. The census schedule takes no cognizance of the cost of selling, or of interest on capital invested, or of the mercantile losses incurred in the business, or of deprecation in plant. This statement is necessary in order to avoid erroneous conclusions from the figures presented. It would require men with strong nerves to advocate a subsidy in the face of such figures.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

Nearly two weeks ago The Herald suggested that some steps should be taken to have a first-class celebration of the Fourth of July in Duluth this year. The celebration planned for last year on an elaborate scale was partially spoiled by bad weather, but it does not follow that the weather will be unfavorable this year. On the contrary, the chances are that we will have a fine day for the coming Fourth.

It was suggested that Mayor Hugo should appoint a committee or take other suitable action to start the preparations for a celebration that would attract people from all the neighboring towns, but up to date nothing has been done, and as the time is short in which to make the necessary preparations there is danger that there will be no special program arranged. But little more than a month remains in which to make arrangements; indeed, the advertising of the program in the surrounding country should begin within two weeks at the latest. No doubt the railroads will do their part by making special rates.

Duluth cannot afford to let the natal day of the republic pass without a first-class celebration. Will Mayor Hugo please start the ball rolling without delay?

THE WORK BEFORE CONGRESS.

The leaders in congress begin to realize that they will have to hurry if they desire to secure legislation on the most important measures before them and adjourn at a reasonably early season. The house leaders have practically decided upon a program which they hope will expedite matters and secure the passage of the measure which they consider as absolutely essential. The measures selected for consideration are not many in number, and the widest latitude for debate will be allowed on several of them. This latter concession has been made by the leaders by reason of the practical certainty that the senate will not be able to complete the consideration of bills slated for action until, perhaps, the middle of July, certainly not until some time after the first of that month. The anarchy bill will come up at once and be followed by the Hill subsidiary coinage measure, providing for the retirement of the silver dollar and the increase in the amount of subsidiary coins. The Corliss bill, providing for the construction by the government of a Pacific cable, will be given one day.

After having been opposed by the house leaders for most of the session, it is now possible that the irrigation bill will be passed. The committee on rules has agreed to allow three days for the consideration of the measure, and the advocates of the bill assert that they have a clear majority of the house in favor of it. The bill has been amended since it was passed by the senate and, in its present form, is acceptable to all of the interests concerned. It is predicted that the opposition to it will be slight, since it has been established that the measure has friends enough to pass it through the house. The house program also calls for the passage, or at least the consideration, of the bill creating a department of commerce, which has not yet been reported by the committee. No provision has been made for the consideration of the ship subsidy bill, the bankruptcy bill, the measure enlarging the powers of the interstate commerce commission, or of several of the matters that have been urged as important.

The measure indicated will be about all of an important character to be considered anew by the house. There will be no end of debate, however, on legislation that is expected from the senate. The senate is expected to pass an isthmian canal bill. The Hepburn bill was passed by the house by a large majority. The sentiment of the house is very strongly in favor of the measure, and any radical amendment of it by the senate will be strongly opposed. But the long debate in the house, according to the present program, will come over the Philippine bill, which it is expected the senate will pass this week or next. It is the purpose of the house leaders to allow this measure to be discussed as long as the members want to talk about it, or until it will be necessary to dispose of it before adjournment. It will be used as a time killer, pending the conclusion of the business of the session by the senate.

It is hard to depict what will be done with the Cuban bill. It will depend largely on how it comes from the senate. It is possible that there will be a protracted debate. While these are the plans for the remainder of the session, they may be interrupted, although, being prepared with the advice and assistance of the speaker, they are likely to be carried out.

THE BEEF TRUST.

The beef packers may have unwittingly placed themselves in a trap by their recent bids for furnishing supplies to the Indian agencies in different parts of the country, in response to advertisements for the same by the government. The government purchases about 2,500,000 pounds of beef annually for supplies at Indian agencies scattered throughout the country. The bids call for beef carcasses, free from shanks and other waste matter, delivered on board the cars at the different agencies. In bidding for the government contract the firms alleged to be in the combine offered almost identical bids. These ranged from $7 to $8.25 per 100 pounds, the average being considerably below $8. While these prices were offered for the government contract, the retail butchers of the country are paying $11 per 100 pounds for the same quality of beef, delivered under similar conditions.

It is stated that the officials of the interior department and the department of justice have been studying the bids and he conditions under which they were offered, and they are unable to find any sufficient reason for the marked difference in the price. It is plonted out that the packing firms in supplying beef to the Indian agencies are compelled to incur an expense that is greater than that incident to the delivery to retail butchers in the larger cities. The quantity sold under the government contract is large, it is true, and the big contracts always compel close margins. But there are other conditions that would naturally serve to increase the price of meat at Indian agencies over the price to retail dealers in cities like St. Louis. The item of freight is a heavy one, and an additional expense is entailed by the use of refrigerator cars to the agencies scattered throughout the country.

The difference in the price of beef to the government and to retail dealers was still more forcibly emphasized, in the award of the Indian contracts, by the bids offered by packing houses that are not in the combine. A number of these firms bid for the contract of supplying some of the agencies. In every instance the bids of the independent concerns were much lower than those made by the firms in the combine. The bids of the independent firms were $6 to $6.50 per 100 pounds, and the average about $6.25, or nearly $2 per 100 lower than the prices asked by the firms in the combine. The independent firms secured the contracts in nearly every case in which they entered into competition with the combine. According to the figures on file at the Indian office, the difference between the lowest price offered by independent firms for Indian contracts and the price charged by the big packing firms to retail dealers is $5 per 100 pounds, or 5 cents a pound. The combine price to retailers is 11 cents a pound. The bid of the independent firms for the government contract was 6 cents a pound.

These figures furnish an interesting development in the charges against the beef combine. They go still further and show by documentary evidence that prices are charged in excess of those warranted by the cost of supplies. These facts should be used against the combine in the suit now on, and in all probability they will be. It grows more evident every day that there is something rotten in the beef trust besides some of its beef.

The agreement of the Brussels conference to abolish premiums on sugars has greatly disturbed the beet sugar men of Europe. An organization has been effected for the purpose of decreasing the production of beet sugar, this being represented as the only way in which the beet sugar producers can survive the abolishment of bounties. Growers are being urged to restrict the area of beet planting, and the factories are being importuned to refuse additional offers of beets. Consul General Mason at Berlin says that, notwithstanding this, the overproduction continues. Since Aug. 1, 1901, the beginning of the present season's campaign, there had been worked up in German factories down to the end of March, 1902, 15,999,000 metric tons of beets, against 13,253,000 tons during the same period of the previous campaign.

St. Louis has started actively at work to get the national conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties in 1904. No one can blame St. Louis for this, but any national committeeman from any state outside of Missouri who votes that way should be disciplined by his party. The climate of St. Louis in the hot months is unfit for national conventions.

A Blessing In Disguise

By H. M. Hoke.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst).

Uncle Daniel had been a rover nearly all his life, but when he grew too old to gad about he had to settle down somewhere and he accepted father's invitation to come to our house. We were delighted at first with the arrangement, for our village was none too lively, and a man who had been everywhere promised diversion in the way of stories picked up at first and second-hand.

But what a disappointment the old gentleman was! The most artful questioning brought out little worth listening to. He liked nothing better than to prose along upon some commonplace incident of the days before he went traveling, or about sometning he had seen in our streets, which in the telling was lake carrying coals to Newcastle. We had had great hopes of hearing about places and abbeys and cathedrals and castles and hairbreadth escapes in out-of-the-way places told in a manner that would make the magazines seem tame. But, alas, all we heard was an easy-going old gentleman, with a somewhat quivering voice, droning along about some fishing exploit of his youth or a time-worn prank at school.

It would not have been quite so annoying if he had inflicted his uninteresting could keep on with our work, but just as certain as we had company Uncle Daniel tales on us homefolks, for we could pretend to listen while we slyly read, or he would start at a meal soon after grace and string out a story of his boyhood until we thought he would never reach the point, if there was one to the narrative.

One evening when our pastor with his wife and a visitor of their own from New York were with us for tea Uncle Daniel began on a story about a man he knew in his early days who had reserved a certain sum of money that he meant some day to give to a youth whom he liked very much. Oh, dear boy, how he strung it out, until we could see Dr. James trying not to fidget, though this was offset to some extent by our silent amusement over the New York man trying to pretend he was interested. But on and on went Uncle Daniel, in his measured tone, with occasional gropings for the right word, recounting the different occasions this man analyzed to determine whether it was proper for him to put the youth in charge of the fund. At last John, my oldest brother, broke right in and asked Dr. James if he thought the Ecumenical council, then sitting in London, would talk all spring or would adjourn soon.

It was bold, almost rude of him—though that was the kind of boy he was—but after the pastor had responded, with a smile twitching around his mouth, that the council would probably sit as long as it had business worth talking about, Uncle Daniel started in where he was interrupted, and went on until the New Yorker started a general discussion that left Uncle Daniel's friend still trying to find the logical moment to give the youth the money.

The old-time friend of Uncle Daniel was named Jake Brower, so that whenever we heard the old gentleman clear his throat to begin, I knew a man once, when I was not as old as I am now by a great sight, hanfied Jake Brower," we knew exactly what to expect, and, if no stranger was present, some of us usually thought of an expedient to keep Jake still in possession of his fund; but when we had visitors—at which times Uncle Daniel was particularly fond of telling about Jake Brower—we were taxed to our utmost.

The worst of the situation was that Uncle Daniel, in traveling, had scattered his money all around the world, without getting much in return, apparently, so that, looking at the matter as we would, he was more or less of a burden, when the Lord had sent us quite a number of mouths to feed and our resources did not always supply what they craved.

How well I remember our concern as the day approached when we were to have our family reunion, it being our year to entertain. No one but relatives would be there, of course, but some of them lived at a distance, so that we did not see them often, and they could not spend more than the day with us. Scarcely, then we would want to be lively and laugh—or perhaps sorrow a little—over the old days, we did not wish to be inflicted with Jake Brower's youth. Father and John and I had planned all manner of ruses to keep Uncle Daniel off his story. For a time it was settled that father should call frankly and hope to tell it that day, but somehow his courage failed and other suggestions proved to be worthless or too likely to hurt the old gentleman's feelings. The result was that when we were all gathered around the table there came, in spite of us, the lull we had all declared we must guard against, when instantly we heard Uncle Daniel, in his dry, even, somewhat cracked old voice, begin:

"When I was a young fellow, with not near so many gray hairs as I have now I knew a man named Jake Brower, and he had quite a sum of money that he had decided to give to a certain youth that he liked very much and wanted to help. Now, Jake's trouble wasn't that he could not part with the money, but that he couldn't make up his mind what was best for him to trust the lad with it, and"—

And so and so on, the same string of particulars we had heard time and again. John tried to head him off, father tried to stop him and I did my best, but as soon as he got half a chance Uncle Daniel brought out Jake Brower again, until our patience was almost exhausted. He simply would not stop for anything that day, so that he got further along in the story than he ever had before.

"At last, one morning," he drawled along, "Jake made up his mind that the time had come when the youth should have the money. So he goes to the bank to get it. He had kept it there in an old tin box, safe and sound, and—well, now, I just happened to think that it might be entertaining for you all to see that old tin box of Jake Brower's. He gave it to me after he was through with it, and I have it upstairs in my trunk. I'll just step up and I know it will add to my story. I'll be down in a minute."

He got up from the table and went out slowly. Well, the tale had been carried so far that we had become hysterical with laughter, and the poor old soul had not more than reached his room before we gave way to it. Through it all I think not one of us meant it exactly for ridicule, but we did laugh, and it is puzzling yet how we managed to straighten up and be natural when the door opened and Uncle Daniel came in with a tin box, much scarred and dented, and an innocently expectant smile on his face. He made a luscious figure, but we all kept straight as he set the box on his chair at the table, unlocked it and threw back the lid.

"Now, folks," the story started again on its dreary way. "Jake Brower was a very methodical man, and he had the contents of the box in shipshape order. He had the one-dollar bills tied up in one package, the twos in another, the fives in another, the tens in another, the twenties in another, and so on, just as I have these packages, for I learned a lesson in tidiness and system from Jake Brower that I never forgot. On the package that had the 'ones' written, on the one that had the twos, 'twos;' on the one that had the fives, 'fives,' and on the one that had the tens, 'tens,' and so on. Perhaps you'd all like to see just how he had them marked, for I've kept up Jake Brower's system all through my life. There, Brother William," he suddenly said, looking at father in his half-affectionate way, "you'll see by this package how he marked them."

He handed it over to father, and he no sooner saw the writing that was on it than he looked puzzled, but in the meantime Uncle Daniel had handed the packages all around, asking each to notice how Jake Brower carried things out to the smallest detail. And at last he came to me with one neatly tied with pink ribbon, and said, as he laid a hand on my shoulder—

And there, on the package, the dear old man had written—

"To my dear little niece Patsy, who has been so kind and thoughtful at all times of her prosy and tiresome old uncle, I hereby bestow five thousand dollars, which she will find herein."

And before I knew it he had reached down and kissed me, and there we all sat with his generous gifts in our hands, doing anything but laughing at the old man and his story of Jake Brower.

James Massie, Canadian inspector of grain, returned this morning from a trip to Port Arthur. He came overland, via the Canadian Pacific line, and had some opportunity to observe crop conditions in Eastern Manitoba. He says conditions could not be much better than they are in that section for the coming autumn's wheat harvest. The weather has been more of what was needed than in the Red River valley.

THE DAKOTAS.

Volin Woman Badly Scared By an Insane Man.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—Mrs. Thomas Jensen, of Volin, experienced a severe scare from which she has not yet recovered. While Mr. Jensen was in the field a young fellow came to the house and asked Mrs. Jensen for a knife, which he said a neighbor wished to borrow. Mrs. Jensen reluctantly gave it to him, whereupon he left, taking an entirely different direction from that in which the neighbor whom he had named lived. This increased Mrs. Jensen's suspicions, fearing he had secreted himself near the house. She started for the field where her husband was, when the fellow gave chase and only stopped when he saw Mr. Jensen hastening to the rescue. The young man was captured about two miles from the scene of his attempted crime and showed fight until guns were pulled. He was taken to Volin, where it was determined he was insane.

Miller—Mrs. Nancy Miller, widow of Henry Miller, who founded this town twenty years ago, died suddenly of heart failure Tuesday. Her husband died a few years ago. They came here from Blairstown, Iowa.

Deadwood—There will no longer be any danger of accident in Deadwood by reason of runaway cars on the Burlington. The company has installed a safety switch at Pluma, a mile and a half above Deadwood and runaways will be thrown off the main line on a spur. There have been two runaways of late, the cars getting away at Pluma and coming down through Deadwood at a frightful rate of speed.

Clark—On Sunday, June 8, the new Methodist Episcopal church in this place will be dedicated. Bishop Joyce, of Minneapolis, will deliver the principal address. Methodist churches in neighboring towns will suspend services on that day and come to Clark.

Lead—The application of Miss Tillie Nelson for a new trial for her breach of promise suit against Alexander Quarforth was denied. Miss Nelson brought the suit last fall and was given a verdict for $2000. Quarforth was granted a second trial and the jury found for him on all the issues. The plaintiff is now seeking to get the matter into court again. Quarforth is a blacksmith in the Homestake employ. He and the young lady formerly resided at Denver. The complaint alleges they were engaged for nine years.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—At the Bismarck land office 250 homestead entries were put on the records of the office in one day. This is double the number ever before entered in one day, and is believed to break the record for one day's business at any office in the country.

Fargo—The United States court began its session today. The first part of the term will be devoted to civil cases and the petit jury will be summoned at once. The grand jury will meet about June 10. It is expected the term will be a long one. Judge Amidon will preside.

Fargo is to have a Fourth of July celebration. A mass meeting has been held and committees were appointed. Mayor Sweet is chairman of the general committee and C. H. Anheier secretary. The mayor is also marshal of the day. Several plans have been suggested but the keynote of the whole affair is to interest the children of the city and have a big parade of young folks and to inject as much patriotism as possible into the day. There is a movement on foot to secure some of the militia companies to assist.

Lisbon—Crazed by the sudden death of her husband two weeks after her marriage, Nora Rust, of Owega, near Lisbon, was committed to the hospital for the insane at Jamestown Monday by Judge Gram of the county court. Her husband, Thomas Edward Rust, came from Crawford county, Wisconsin, intending to return with his bride, a young woman of apparently robust health, but ere the honeymoon was over the bride had become a widow.

IN MICHIGAN.

Ironwood—Dr. J. R. Moore has been appointed chief surgeon of the Oliver Iron Mining company's staff, to succeed Dr. James K. Niven, deceased. Dr. Moore has been physician for the Aurora mine, in this city.

An enormous crowd of people from along the Gogebic range witnessed the Austrian-Hungarian celebration in this city. The parade was composed of the civic societies, military company, bands and the city officials, and was reviewed by Dr. Schwegel, Austrian-Hungarian consul general to the United States.

Sault Ste. Marie—This city, it is declared, possesses the finest high school museum in the United States. The collection numbers thousands of specimens, many exceedingly rare and valuable. The museum was established in 1893 by W. P. McIvill, who gave his entire collection of eggs and shells, numbering 1000 altogether, and loaned his bird collection, one of the finest private collections in the country. Since then the museum has grown rapidly, and though the entire third floor of the high school building is given over to it, the quarters are proving too small and the museum will probably be transferred to the Carnegie library building, soon to be erected. There is a collection of small quadrupeds, mounted, and 200 mounted birds, from the small Southern humming bird to the largest specimen of the American eagle and swan.

Houghton—There resides in Mass City, not far from here, a man named Richard Whitman, who is one of the pioneer settlers of that section of the country, and who has accumulated a snug fortune. He has not been out of the town in forty years, has never seen a street car and simply knows of the world what he has seen or heard in that village. Mr. Whitman located in Mass City in the '68, and worked in the old Mass mine on tribute. He was fortunate and invested in considerable real estate, so that today he can be caleld wealthy, but he has no desire to see any more of the world. He is happy and contented within the environments of that quiet, secluded village, has all of his acquaintances around him, and he spends his time summers at work in his garden. Mr. Whitman never saw a locomotive until the Copper Range road ran its first train into the village.

WASSAVED FROM FIRE

The Brave Rescue of Mrs. Riners, a Helpless Invalid.

Heroic Conduct of Glory O'Shane, a Pretty Texas Girl.

Woman Would Have Perished But For Glory's Promptness.

Marble Falls, Tex., May 28—Everybody in the vicinity of Marble Falls, Tex., and all strangers who visit the town, eagerly seek to make the acquaintance of Glory O'Shane, a pretty young woman who recently distinguished herself by her heroic conduct in rescuing an aged and helpless old woman from death in raging flames when a dry cedar brake was burning. The fire broke out suddenly about 2 o'clock in the great cedar forest, which covers the mountains of the Colorado, a short distance north of the little town of Marble Falls. A dense volume of black smoke had hardly attracted the attention of the citizens of the neighborhood before the telephones sounded the alarm, and there were urgent calls for assistance. It was well known that a great number of laborers who were engaged in cutting timber were camped in the brake with their families. Some of them were living under temporary cedar structures covered with bark, while others were dwelling in tents. The wind was blowing a gale at the time, and all familiar with the destructive power of forest fires were greatly alarmed. Cedar groves are thick in that region, and the country is only traversed by narrow trails and a tangle of barely perceptible roads made by the wagoners. A great wide highway passes along one side of the forest. On the roadside there are a few farm houses and open fields. The rapidly spreading fire, fanned by the wind, might reach the dwellings of the farmers, but the fields offered a refuge for the people and their stock.

When the alarm was given and it became evident that the fire was beyond all control, those whose lives were in danger thought of the public road and the adjacent open ground. Unfortunately the calamity happened on Saturday evening, while many of the timber men were in town making settlements and purchasing supplies. The women in cabins and tents realized their danger the moment they saw the smoke. Not a drop of rain had fallen for several months, and they knew that the cedar thickest would burn as if saturated with oil. The scene that followed the alarm beggars description. But a few moments passed before the red flames seemed to reach to the skies. Long, lurid sheets of fire swept above the tops of the trees, while angry tongues of flames twisted through the branches of the giants of the forest, quickly changing them into a sea of fire.

Above the shrieks and the wails for help could be heard a roar that made the earth tremble as if by a cyclone or convulsed by an earthquake. Mothers with children in their arms and others clinging to their skirts fled towards the fields. Men crazed with terror tried to hitch frightened horses to wagons. The maddened beasts would break away, and many of them plunged into the fire. Wolves and jaguars ran into the tents cowering like kittens. Children fled the wrong way, and men from whom better conduct was to be expected, rolled upon the earth wringing their hands in hopeless terror.

The frightened people were flying toward the fields with the rapidly approaching fire close upon them, when some one happened to think of Mrs. Riners, an aged invalid, who was known to be in one of the cabins. Glory O'Shane knew that the old woman was alone in her cabin, her son Paul having gone into town with other timbermen early in the day.

"We must help her," the girl shouted to the terrified people who were fleeing from the flames.

Several men paused to look back at the burning forest, shook their heads, then continued running, advising the girl to do the same. But her heroic spirit prevailed.

Before any one could interfere the brave girl had turned around and was running towards the sea of fire. Paul Riners, the only son of the old woman in peril, was at Marble Falls. The instant he saw the black cloud of smoke rising above the cedar forest he mounted his horse, and, being fully aware of the danger to the women and children in the camps, he rode under whip and spur to rescue his mother. He led the crowd of citizens who were crowding the road to the fire, but he was a mile or more away when Glory O'Shane was running towards the cabin where his invalid mother was staggering about in helpless terror.

When Glory came near the cabin the first glance made her shudder with horror. The house appeared to be enveloped in flames. A puff of wind raised the cloud of smoke and she saw the old lady clinging to the side of the door, a faithful hound tugging at her dress. The girl could see a white horse plunging about under a tree in the yard. She had only paused an instant for breath, and would doubtless have turned back if she had not seen the poor, helpless woman staggering in the doorway. It seemed madness to go farther, for the roof of the cabin was on fire and the trees were aflame on both sides of the trail. The girl saw that she would have to pass under the limbs already aflame and falling. The swiftly moving sea of flame was enveloping the spot where she stood. It was more than probable that her retreat had already been cut off.

These thoughts and many others flashed through her mind with lightning-like rapidity, and she was undecided whether to turn back and run for her life or rush forward to the assistance of the half-dead old woman. While she was debating this question she saw the aged invalid sink to the floor unconscious, and above the roar of the fire a wail of distress reached her. This determined her course. Feeling that there was a chance to reach the unconscious woman, she sprang forward and ran with all her strength along the narrow trail under a cloud of flames and smoke. Blazing limbs fell on her head and shoulders, tongues of flame scorched her cheeks, and the smoke almost suffocated her, but she reached the open space in front of the cabin in safety.

The frightened horse greeted her with a friendly neigh, and this suggested an idea which the quick-witted and heroic girl was swift to employ. Knowing old Rebo well, she ran to his side and quickly untied the rope that held him fast to the tree. She was overjoyed to find that the sensible animal realized the danger and that he welcomed her as a deliverer. Though the scene was enough to have terrorized most any beast, the noble horse rose to the emergency.

The roof of the cabin from a burning mass fell to the floor the moment Glory O'Shane reached the side of the helpless woman. She had reached an open space in front of her door. Glory, as stout as a boy of her age and equally as active, lifted the prostrate body in her arms and threw it across the back of the horse.

Glory cast a momentary glance at the roaring sea of fire that was now sweeping over the forest on both sides of the trail that led to the field. She stood in a little opening surrounded by smoke and flames. There was but one way to escape. Springing upon old Rebo's bare back she threw one arm about the helpless woman, and as she bent over on the noble old mustang's neck she slapped his shoulder and closed her eyes. Rebo needed no urging. He knew the route, and Glory believes that he well understood every word she uttered. A half dozen plunges brought Rebo into danger. There was fire on either side and a cloud red and glowing with sparks above. Paul Riners met the moving wall of fire about the time old Rebo started on his famous race. There he halted in hopeless agony. "I have lost both mother and sweetheart," he groaned. At that moment a white horse, with mane and tail aflame, bearing two women on his bare back, dashed out of the seething cyclone of fire, flying towards the open field. Glory was received with shouts of joy. No one had dared to hope that she would escape. "There is but one thing for me to say or do," said Paul Riners, after embracing his mother. "Come, Glory, and put your foot on my head. You have read 'Robinson Crusoe.'"

It's folly to suffer from that horrible plague of the night, itching piles. Doan's Ointment cures quickly and permanently. At any drug store, 50 cents.

SIDEWALK GAVE WAY

One Man Killed, Many Injured In New York.

Was Temporary Structure Over a Building Excavation.

Was Crowded By People Viewing Passage of Procession.

New York, May 28.—Elvin L. Coolidge, circulation manager of the New York Commercial, was almost instantly killed and about 100 others injured last evening by the breaking down of a temporary sidewalk at Fifth avenue and Eighteenth street. Some of those injured may die.

Those who fell were a part of the crowd who gathered to watch the parade of militia in honor of the visit of the French Rochambeau commission to this city.

Two hundred persons were on the sidewalk when it gave way. They were precipitated twenty feet into an excavation for a new building and fell on piles of building material.

Considering the nature of the accident and the number of persons in it, the hospital surgeons express surprise at the few who received serious hurts.

Many were able to go directly home after having their injuries treated by the ambulance surgeons. Those taken to the hospitals and who sustained the worst injuries are: Essing, George, patrolman; scalp wound and shock. Kelley, James J., sergeant attached to Inspector Thompson's staff, scalp wound and shock and possible internal injuries. McManus, M. J., patrolman, three ribs broken and contussion; Vernon, Charles, contussions of body and internal injuries.

E. Coolidge, who was killed, received a fracture of the skull. He was born at Natick, Mass., and was educated at the Westford academy, Westford, Mass. After leaving the academy he entered the newspaper business in Boston and served on the staff of the Boston Journal. He was for a time on the Globe of that city and then came to New York. He was connected with several city papers during his stay in this city. He leaves a widow and four children.

The accident occurred just as the head of the parade had passed the corner. The French visitors had gone past and knew nothing of the accident until some time later. Troop C had just ridden by and the Twenty-second regiment was passing when the crash came. The officers in command at once gave orders to break ranks, and fifty militiamen were detailed to the work of rescue. Hurry calls were sent for police reserves and ambulances, and in a very short time those who fell were assisted out of the excavation and the work of binding wounds and conveying those most injured to hospitals was in full swing.

The authorities are busy endeavoring to discover who was to blame for the accident. Coroner Scholer says the sidewalk had not been built of material strong enough to stand such a great weight as burdened it last evening. He said the real cause of the accident was the giving way of an upright timber, 12 by 12 in dimensions that extended from the bottom of the excavation to the cross beams on which the sidewalk rested. About ten feet of this timber, he said, was rotten and very weak.

Early in the afternoon the police became suspicious of the strength of the sidewalk and a detail for hours kept the crowd from collecting on it. But as the time for the parade to pass came near the crowd became unmanageable, and in spite of the force on the part of the police crowded onto the forbidden sidewalk and there stayed until the breaking of the support landed them in the excavation.

After viewing the body of Mr. Coolidge and issuing the necessary permit for its removal, the coroner ordered the arrest of Contractor Cowan, and of J. G. Miller, the sub-contractor. Mr. Cowan, however, had heard of the accident and went to police headquarters, where he saw the coroner. Cowan explained that he was not responsible for the accident and promised to appear at the inquest in case he was wanted. He was then allowed to go. Detectives were sent to arrest Miller. James Lawton, foreman of the work at the building, was arrested by the police and later allowed to go under bail of $500, a charge of homicide having been placed against him. The contractor, sub-contractor and foreman insist they warned the police to keep the crowd off the sidewalk, as it was not built to stand so great a strain.

BUMPER CROP

In the Northwest Is Predicted By President Earling.

Chicago, May 27.—A "bumper" grain crop for the four great states of the Northwest, which are traversed by the lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad is the prophecy of A. J. Earling, president of the company.

Mr. Earling, together with several of the executive officials of the company, has just completed an inspection tour of the entire Milwaukee system. The trip was taken largely with a view of ascertaining the grain conditions, and the president and his party have come back enthusiastic over the prospect.

"Never before in my connection with the St. Paul road," said Mr. Earling, "have I seen the Northwest so big with promise of abundant grain crops. I speak, of course, for those portions of the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and South Dakota which are traversed by our lines, and I understand that similar conditions prevails over the entire Northwest.

"In South Dakota the acreage is somewhat larger than in former years while in the other states it is about the same. Unless something unforseen happens between now and harvest time I believe crop records will be broken in the territory which I have named. The Milwaukee is even now making preparations to take care of a record crop, and of course we hope that nothing will intervene to change the condition."

Based upon the present crop conditions, the Milwaukee officials are looking forward to a material increase in the earnings of the company, and are correspondingly well pleased. Everywhere over the system, it was stated, the farmers were in good humor and were talking of big crops and increased prosperity.

PETER WHITE

May Be Democratic Nominee For Governor of Michigan.

Marquette, Mich., May 28—Hon. Peter White, whose name has been suggested by several prominent party leaders in Lower Michigan in connection with the Democratic nomination for governor, has learned the fact with considerable surprise.

"I have paid little attention to politics, especially in late years," he said, "and that my name has been mentioned—as you say—even though informally, is something rather surprising. I have no political aspirations, and while naturally feeling honored, I must state that I am not a candidate."

However, while Mr. White was not prepared to state, even though not a candidate, whether he would accept the nomination should it be tendered him, the interviewer formed the impression that a proffer of the kind would at least receive consideration.

ASKS FOR CHANGES

Mayor Wants City's Civil Service Rules Revised Somewhat.

Would Not Be Limited to Single Name In Appointing.

Political Opponents Claim It Means Politics In Selections.

Mayor Hugo desires an important change in the classified civil service.

Political opponents of the mayor say the proposed change will make the service an unclassified fizzle.

Briefly, the mayor asks the civil service commissioners to permit others than the person making highest marks in competitive examination to be certified for promotion.

Mr. Hugo appeared before three members of the commission last evening and outlined the change in the civil service rules which he desired. The mayor has the power of appointment and dismissal in regard to the fire and police departments, with certain civil service limitations.

Under the present rules the civil service board gives him the name of the man standing highest in competitive examination for promotion. This is the only man eligible to appointment.

It is now desired that the rules be so changed that the mayor may have a number of men to select from—in fact, three names are specified as the number that ought to be allowed him.

However fair and impartial may be the mayor's object in this change, it has, nevertheless, opened up an avenue of attack by his political opponents.

In the recent competitive examinations for promotion in the police department two Democrats stood highest for detective and sergeant respectively. It is claimed that the change in regulations proposed at this time means that the two Democrats wil have to give way to two Republicans.

Even these political opponents, however, admit that the mayor's argument for the change is not wholly illogical. The mayor is required by the charter to take the responsibility for the efficient conduct of the police department. If the civil service commission gives the mayor no choice in appointments, the department may get out of his direct control.

The Democrats offset this by saying that if anything goes wrong in the department the mayor has the right of removal for cause.

The complaint is made that too much consideration is given by the civil service commission to physical fitness of men seeking promotion. For that matter, it is argued, a detective or a police sergeant does not need mathematical qualifications half as much as he needs physical qualifications. Practical knowledge of police department business irrespective of period of service seems to be the essential qualification, with physical fitness second.

Members of the present detective force recognize this to such an extent that they are talking of building a 30-lap cinder track around the room of the police headquarters building in order to improve their wind and sprinting ability.

The civil service board will consider the mayor's suggestions and report on them in the near future.

FAIL TO WIN.

Junior Girls Ignominiously Defeated at Basket Ball.

Even the daintiest of costumes failed to secure the victory for the junior girls in the game of basket ball which they played with the maidens of the class of '04 at the Armory yesterday afternoon. The sophomores won by a score of 9 to 1.

At the end of the first half the score was 1 to 0 in favor of the juniors. Then a substitute was placed in the line-up, and the orange and black team met a severe reverse.

The onslaught of the young men who had declared that they would see the game or break it up, did not come off as scheduled. Naturally the young ladies were deeply grieved because their gallants did not batter down the building for the purpose of seeing them play, so they sent one of their number down stairs to invite the group of young men who were sadly standing on the sidewalk warbling that little ditty entitled "Ain't It a Shame to Leave Your Honey Out in the Rain?" to come up and enjoy the spectacle.

The young men came, and from that moment the junior girls, being young ladies, could not forget their dignity and play basket ball. The younger sophomores were not affected so seriously, and they won in a walk.

The junior young ladies tried to hide their tears in flamboyant declarations that they didn't care, and that they were going to win next time, any way.

But nevertheless it was noticed that the tiger—the emblem of the juniors—slunk away through the fog, hanging his head with shame.

The line-up of the teams was:

FRENCH IN NEW YORK

The Rochambeau Party Warmly Welcomed By Mayor Low.

Reviewed a Long Procession of the Citizen Soldiery.

Distinguished Guests Will Be Entertained In Many Ways.

New York, May 28.—Count de Rochambeau and the others of the party of French delegates, after passing most of the day yesterday in journeying to West Point and reviewing the cadets there, arrived in this city shortly before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. They came down the Hudson on the United States dispatch boat Dolphin. As the Dolphin steamed up to the Battery three salutes were fired, two of thirteen guns each for Vice Admiral Fournier, and Assistant Secretary of State Pierce, and one of seventeen guns for Ambassador Cambon.

Mayor Low's secretary, with Maj. Greer, of Gen. Roe's staff, and Alderman Willett, chairman of the aldermanic reception committee was waiting at the barge office. Lined up on the deck were a hundred bluejackets from the Gaulois with their band and double that number of United States sea sailors from the Kearsarge and Alabama. All carried rifles and bayonets. A large crowd stood in a pouring rain and witnessed the debarkation, cheering the visitors as they proceeded to carriages and escorted by the military and a platoon of mounted police, were driven to the city hall. From the sidewalks on Broadway the party was welcomed with cheers and acclamations of thousands while the big buildings which line the thoroughfare furnished a share of the applause from hundreds stationed at the windows. Countess de Rochambeau absented herself from the procession.

Arriving at the city hall, the Frenchmen were formally welcomed to the city by Mayor Low and President Fornes of the board of aldermen. Besides the Frenchmen there were the presidential delegates, Col. T. A. Binham, Commander Raymond P. Rogers, and their aides. Among those in the mayor's room were Ambassador Porter, former Secretary of the Interior Cornelius N. Bliss, former Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck, Philip Rhinelander, Commissioners Volks, Wilcox, Leuerle, Hawkes, Comptroller Grout and a number of other city officials.

The mayor's secretary ushered the visitors into the mayor's private office and thence to the governor's room. The formal presentations were made there. Ambassador Porter was standing directly beside the mayor, and when Ambassador Cambon, Gen. Brugere and Admiral Fournier caught sight of him they at once grasped his hand and talked together for some moments. When all had been presented Mayor Low said, addressing M. Cambon:

"Mr. Ambassador, I take great pleasure in presenting to you prominent citizens of this city—ex-mayors, officers of the city government and others, and Gen. Porter—who have kindly consented to serve upon the honorary committee to bid you welcome. The aldermanic committee will shortly wait upon us and invite you to the council chamber, where I will welcome you in the name of the city."

While waiting for the aldermen to arrive the mayor called the attention of the Frenchmen to the writing table of Washington by saying: "This is the writing table that Washington used when he was first president of the United States."

The visitors looked at it with great interest. As the aldermanic committee came in the visitors were presented to the members of it, and all immediately adjourned to the council room. The Frenchmen were presented to President Fornes who welcomed them in an address, tendering the most cordial of welcomes to the legislative hall of the city of New York.

The visitors were then shown to seats and Mayor Low began the welcoming address. He said:

"Mr. Ambassador and gentlemen of the Rochambeau mission who so worthily represent the republic of France: The mayor of the city of New York guarantees on his official business in the presence of the portrait of Lafayette, who represents to us Americans the generous ardor of the French people in the cause of political liberty. The representatives of New York are glad to have the opportunity today, in greeting your distinguished delegation, to acknowledge the services to this city of the French nation through the co-operation of the regular army and navy with the forces of the American colonies. The decisive battle resulting from this co-operation was fought at Yorktown, upon the soil of Virginia, but it ushered in the historic scene at Fraunces's Tavern in this city, where Washington bade farewell to the officers who had been his comrades in arms at the end of the revolutionary war. This fortunate result was directly due to the co-operation of France; but even the service of the volunteer Lafayette and of Rochambeau and De Grasse of the French army and navy, do not comprise all that we owe to the generous nation whom you represent. You freely supplied the American force with the sinews of war; and your help in another form has made the French name of 'Le Bon Homme Richard' as familiar in our ears as Yorktown itself.

"These things we of the city of New York hold in grateful remembrance, but we do not forget that France itself has interpreted their permanent significance by the statue that the French people have placed in our beautiful harbor of 'Liberty Enlightening the World.' This is the deep and internal purpose of liberty—that it should throw light upon the path that civilization itself must follow with the progress of the sun.

"We of America do not owe more to France in the domain of political liberty than we owe to her in the fine example she sets of freedom in the domain of art. Science today, in all lands, is happily free; but the whole world goes to the French schools of the beautiful arts, because, under the free sky of liberty, in the realm of art, the art of France has become the teacher of the nations. For all these reasons and many others that might be told, I have the honor to welcome you, in the name of the city of New York, to our beloved city."

The clerk of the board then read the resolutions adopted by the aldermen April 29 in which they requested the mayor to extend the courtesies of the city to the French visitors. Following this Ambassador Cambon replied to the mayor's address, saying:

"Mr. Chairman, Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen, Representatives of the City of New York: I thank you very much for the kind, generous and splendid reception which you have given to my countrymen, the members of the French mission. The president of the French republic has sent you the most distinguished representatives of the French army and navy, of French science and of French commerce, and also of our art, because we know that France is represented among you not only by the army and navy, but also by the commerce, the arts and the sciences. We would be very glad if we could live always with you in America. We are very glad to have the honor to know you, and the other distinguished persons whom we have met here in America. You know the more we are in America, the better we like it. (Applause.)

"I am sure that my countrymen, when they get back to France, will say to their countrymen in France that the Americans are the finest people they know. This ceremony of unveiling the statue of Rochambeau is a remembrance of the two nations and of the friendship which always existed between Washington, Lafayette and Rochambeau and those ceremonies, also will act as a remembrance to the sons of France and America, that the sons of Rochambeau and Washington, the citizens of the United States and France are, as Rochambeau and Washington were, the finest and best friends in everything, in every way and for all time."

The ceremony concluded with the address of Ambassador Cambon. Carriages were then taken and the visitors and government and city officials were driven to the reviewing stand where they were to witness the parade of the New York National Guard and the American and French sailors from the warships.

The reviewing stand had been erected in Madison Square park, on the Fifth avenue side. It was prettily decorated and surrounding it were detachments of the veteran artillery corps of 1812. An immense throng had gatnered in the park as the detachments of sailors from the French warship Gaulois and the vessels composing the American squadron marched up Fifth avenue and took positions facing the platform. Next came the members of the Rochambeau mission, Ambassador Cambon and his suite, the French naval and army officials, the representatives of the French consulate here, Mayor Low, Comptroller Grout, the borough presidents, members of the board of aldermen and other city officials. After Count Rochambeau Vice Admiral Fournier, Gens. Brugere and De Chalendar and Ambassador Cambon had taken positions on each side of Mayor Low under the enopy at the front of the stand. Maj. Gen. Roe and his staff rode past at the head of the parade of citizen soldiery. The brigade officers followed next with Squadrons A and C close behind. The different regiments in the first brigade, led by the Twenty-second, followed one after another, in rapid marching order. Then came the Second brigade and the naval militia. The parade was an hour and a half in passing the stand and, 8500 men took part in it.

Count Rochambeau expressed himself as highly pleased with the display by the citizen soldiers.

"I have suffered with a kidney trouble for three years, and after trying many medicines and employing physicians to no avail, had about despaired of recovery, as the disease was weakening my heart. Your GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR was recommended and I bought a bottle, having no idea it would benefit me, as I had tried so many so-called 'proprietary medicines.' But my friend told me it was not a patent medicine but a doctor's prescription, and urged me with such determination that I made up my mind to give it a trial. Four weeks' use of this wonderful remedy entirely cured me. I am now riding twenty-five or thirty miles a day by team, when before, owing to severe pains in my back, I was unable to ride ten miles, and thought I would be obliged to give up entirely. Your Renovator has cured me of what I supposed was a hopeless case, and I shall praise it the rest of my life." (Signed) T. F. BEAULAC, Hartford, Conn.

KING DRAMATIC COMPANY.

Last evening at the Lyceum the King Dramatic company presented "Cumberland '61." The audience was not a large one but the performance gave satisfaction. The company is undoubtedly the best popular priced repertoire attraction that Duluth has had.

Tonight "The Power of the Press" will be given.

NAT GOODWIN.

That favorite comedian, N. C. Goodwin, and his beautiful wife, Miss Maxine Elliott, come to the Lyceum Saturday night in Henry V. Esmond's "When We Were Twenty-One." Friendship and love are its theme, and its inspiration is the Thackeray-Beranger sentiment about "brave days of twenty-one, when one could drink all of life's quintessence in an hour.

In the company are Nell O'Brien, J. R. Crauford, Fred Tyler, Frederick Tilden, Harold Hartsell, Charles Webster, Jack Yates, Fank G. Bacley, Edwad Jones, L. E. Woodthorpe, the Misses Florence Havericigh, Gertrude hGeen, Suzanne Perry and Alice Ingraham. Mr. Goodwin brings to us the complete stage production, both scenically and decoratively that added so much to the presentation at the Knickerbocker theater in New York. As Mr. Goodwin and Miss Elliott extend their present tour south as far as New Orleans thence to the Pacific coast and the Northwest British possessions they play only six cities in this section, and these for one night only, their tour embracing fifty-seven cities in twenty weeks.

BOGUS ASSESSOR

Got Into Chicago Houses and Stole Valuables.

Chicago, May 28.—Having robbed more than 200 Chicago homes while posing as an "assessor," Fred L. Bowker, former evangelist, and said to be on ex-convict, was arrested in South Chicago by Lieut. Schlau and Detective Mills of the North Halsted street police station. More than a score of persons living in Lake View visited the station and possitively identified the prisoner as the man who had been at their homes, and, while pretending to act in the capacity of a tax assessor, had stolen valuables. The prisoner has recently conducted a collection agency. The man is also an ex-constable, and, it is said, has served three terms in the Joliet penitentiary for larceny and burglary.

CHILD WAS RESTORED

To Its Mother By a Mob of Infuriated Kentuckians.

The Child Was Taken From an Indiana Detective.

Thrilling Escape of the Woman With Her Babe.

Hawesville, Ky., May 28.—A sensation was sprung here over 3-year-old Irene Martin, an Evansville (Ind.) girl, who was kidnaped, it is charged, from a home in that city by the mother, Mrs. Josephine Martin. George Martin, the father, and his wife are separated, it is alleged, and the Vanderburg court decided that neither should have the child to rear. The court sent the girl to an orphans' home. On Friday the mother drove to the place to see the baby. She at once seized it and drove like mad to the woods, it is said. She arrived here with the child and went to the home of M. C. Gibson, where she had at one time been employed as a servant.

Detective E. C. Rosencranz arrived here and after a conference with the officials, went for the woman. He is said to have told her if she did not give him the baby he would take them both by law and send her to the penitentiary. She dressed the child and gave it to the officer, who went to the train.

Mrs. Martin followed, and by tears and appeals aroused about 100 excited citizens, who rushed with her to the station. There the detective was hit several times and handled in a rough manner. He made an effort to get a weapon, but was stopped. The mob rescued the baby, and the mother grabbed it and ran through the streets. It was another case of Eliza in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," but there was no ice on which to escape. Mrs. Martin attracted the entire populace by her spirit.

Detective Rosencranz is still here and says that he will prosecute the members of the mob and also obtain the mother and child by requisition and send one to prison and the other to the orphans' home, according to the decree of court.

If the Evansville man begins to prosecute his assailants, lively times are sure to follow this week. Politics have already been injected into the case, some declaring that Governor Taylor could not be got from Indiana, and that Indiana could not get the baby from Kentucky. The woman is now at the home of Section Foreman Connaff, which is under guard, and an attempt on the part of anybody to harm her or to take the child from her would surely result in serious trouble.

It is somewhat remarkable that, there never having been a woman lawyer in this district, four should be admitted to practice in two weeks. Miss Morton and Miss Smith are among the prettiest young women of Hartford, and are exceedingly lovable and popular.

GIRL BURGLAR

Bound Over to West Virginia Jury.

Farmington, W. Va., May 28.—One of the most pathetic cases in the criminal annals of West Virginia came to light when Miss Mabel Prunty, a girl of 15, was found guilty of burglary here and held to the grand jury with an alleged confederate, Samuel Miller, of Ohio, who claims to be the husband of the girl.

It is alleged that the two entered the store of Ambrose Hess, at Bingamon, near here, and stole property worth $50, part of which was found upon them when captured by the police at Jarvisville. When apprised of the charge upon which they had been arrested the lass broke down and cried bitterly, wailing that Miller had betrayed her.

Miller was unable to give bond. He claims to own valuable oil property in Ohio and has written for assistance.

HUNT FOR LOST BOOK

Forgotten Novel In Demand and Mystery Back of Search.

Copies Strangely Disappeared From Libraries at Cincinnati.

Did Gen. Lew Wallace Have Case of Unconscious Cerebration?

Cincinnati, May 28.—Who wants "Malmiztic the Toltec?"

One answer to this query is easy. Every old book collector in Cincinnati. But who is behind the collectors and furnishing the funds which leads them to put such vim in their search?

"Malmiztic the Toltec" is the title of a book written in this city in 1851 by a Cincinnatian named Fosdick, at that time a prominent figure in the literary life of the Queen City. It deals with the mythical adventures of a scion of the ancient race of Toltecs, the scene of the story being laid in Mexico at the time of the Spanish invasion.

Good judges say that the tale was one of surpassing interest, not excelled by any of the more modern tales which have been written of the same period in early American history. In spite of this fact, however, only a limited edition was published, not exceeding 1000 or 1500 copies, and a story which in these more modern days would have brought its fortunate author fame and fortune in a month was quickly forgotten, save for Fosdick's personal friends.

Recently, and for no apparent reason, public interest in the story was revived. A visit to the libraries of the city reveals the fact that their copies of this work have disappeared; in the case of the Mercantile library very suddenly and mysteriously. The custodians of the public library do not seem to know just what happened to the copy once in that collection, nor when it turned up missing. They do remember, however, that about two years or more ago a copy was in the library.

The old bookstore men each say they have been commissioned for the past year, and in some cases, for two years, to pick up every copy of the book offered to them. One or two of them say that the public and private librarians of the city are their patrons. Others intimate plainly that it is none of the inquirer's business who wants the book. But in this connection a fact developed which may or may not be significant. Although it is morally certain that there are plenty of copies of this work in the numerous private collections of the city, not one of the book collectors say that they are authorized to advertise for it. One man says that he is specifically instructed not to advertise, and others let that fact be inferred. This is strange, in view of the further fact that they are willing to pay any premium in reason for copies. A suspicious person might think that whoever wants the book is anxious that public attention be not directed too forcibly toward it. On the other hand, this caution might be merely to keep the more plausible hypothesis, in view of the vigorous, though quiet search being made for the book.

There is another queer thing in connection with the missing volume. Good judges of literature say that the history of the ancient Toltec's adventures bears the most marvelous resemblance to a more modern bit of fiction, written around the same theme by a very prominent man of letters, none other than Gen. Lew Wallace. His story was called "The Fair God," and dealt with the same period, which is not remarkable, but is also said to have had practically the same set of characters, under different names, of course, who passed through a series of adventures which differ but slightly from those of "Malmiztic" and his friends. The resemblance, in fact, is so striking that it attracted the attention of one of the original firm of Wilstach & Baldwin, of Cincinnati, who published the Fosdick book, and who has frequently commented on it to his friends. Now, copy of the earlier work being obtainable, no comparison has yet been made, and the similarity has only been noticed by the older literateurs of Cincinnati, who read the story as a product of the fertile brain of their friend Fosdick. Whether the similarity is actual or merely fancied, cannot be definitely stated.

No one has ventured to charge Gen. Wallace with plagiarism. That is a charge not lightly made, especially when the author in the case has the thoroughly grounded literary reputation of Gen. Wallace. The theory of those older readers of "The Fair God's" adventures is that in his youth, Gen. Wallace read Fosdick's story of "Malmiztic the Toltec," and that it very naturally made a deep impression upon him, as the tale is said to have been a very powerful one. Later in life, after having earned a reputation in other walks Gen. Wallace adopted literature as an amusement, rather than as a profession. He was well posted on Mexico, and especially Mexico at the time of the Spanish invasion. Deciding to write a story dealing with that period, what more natural than that he should unconsciously model it after the tale which had attracted his attention as a young man, and in so doing credit his characters; also, unconsciously, with the same sentiments which inspired those of Fosdick's novel, and eventually lead them through the same series of adventures? In a word, those who have noticed the similarity between the two works and have devoted any thought to it, believe that it was a case of unconscious cerebration on the part of Gen. Wallace. It may, of course, be merely a coincidence, for Wallace may not have read the book.

COUNTESS WARWICK

Is Snubbed By Queen Alexandra at Court Levee.

London, May 28.—Everyone is still talking of the wondrous effect created by the countess of Warwick at the last court. In her white dress and rose-colored velvet train, she easily carried off the palm for regal beauty and stateliness. She wore a Marie Antoinette curl down the neck, which several other women tried, but found unbecoming. She presented her daughter, Lady Majorie Greville, who is handsome, but inherits her father's somewhat thikset figure.

King Edward received the beautiful countess with marked graciousness, while the queen merely gave a stereotyped bow and looked to the next comer.

It was a critical moment—the meeting of these two women—and all eyes were strained to see how they would conduct themselves under the ordeal. Neither displayed the slightest nervousness, but it was noted that the countess' demeanor had an added touch of haughtiness as she approached Queen Alexandra, and swept past the presence with an air somewhat suggesting conscious triumph in the years since they had met face to face.

The queen, on the other hand, received Mrs. George Kepple with an especially agreeable smile, and the king beamed all over his face at the same time. When the king and queen walked through the gallery, where the guests were drawn up, both stopped and spoke for quite a long time with Mrs. Keppel, who looked very handsome and debonnair in a magnificent white dress and blazing coronet.

Here again the king spoke to the countess of Warwick, but the queen passed on without a word or a glance in her direction.

D'ESSAUER

On Trial at Chicago For Embezzlement of $25,000.

Chicago, May 28.—After a delay of more than a year, George d'Essauer, charged with embezzling $25,000, is on trial before Judge Brentano.

During his long confinement in the county jail d'Essauer, erstwhile broker, clubman, society leader and favored suitor of Helen Bertram, prima donna of the Bostonians, had been hoping against hope that some of his wealthy friends and relatives would come to his rescue, and make up the amount that he is alleged to have embezzled. With this hope he has had his case postponed a number of times. The state has heretofore acquiesced to the delays, as the Van Northwith brothers, who are important witnesses for the prosecution, live in Wisconsin, and until recently steadily refused to come here to testify.

Besides dissipating a fortune that, it is said, did not belong to him, d'Essauer has broken the heart of his beautiful young wife by the attentions he paid to Helen Bertram. Soon after arriving in Chicago, in 1895, he married Miss Lizzie Harvey, a well-known society girl. His wife brought him a dowry of $100,000, which he soon dissipated in keeping up their elegant establishment at 52 Astor street.

He had been married but a little over two years when he met Helen Bertram, became enamored of her, and deserted his bride to follow her about the world. His attentions to Miss Bertram and the gay life he was leading on his journey with her soon reached the ears of his wife.

Then came an inquiry into his business affairs, and it was not until then that his alleged crooked work was discovered, and his arrest in New Orleans followed. Besides the charge of embezzling $49,650 worth of notes, which he is said to have disposed of for $25,000, he is also accused of obtaining $50,000 from Dr. Warren Baker by forgery. It is claimed that he forged $50,000 worth of bonds of the Gas Light and Coke company, of Evanston, which he sold to Dr. Baker.

Throughout the examination of the veniremen and the cross-examining of three witnesses, who testified yesterday afternoon, d'Essauer wore a bored expression, and several times made futile efforts to suppress a yawn.

STOPPED BY POLICE.

Sale of Admission Tickets to 'Frisco Theater.

San Francisco, Cal., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The police stopped the sale of admission tickets Monday night at the Columbia theater, where Kathryn Kidder commenced her engagement in "The Country Girl." The interference of the authorities was due to the fact that the theater was already crowded to suffocation with the largest audience it has ever held. Miss Kidder received a tremendous ovation on her first appearance. At the end of each act curtain calls were frequent, and the star was compelled to make a speech at the end of the third act. It was the general opinion that Miss Kidder's impersonation of Peggy, the comical heroine of "The Country Girl," is her best effort since her famous portrayal of "Madame Sans Gene." At the conclusion of her engagement in San Francisco she will make a tour of the leading cities of the Pacific coast and Northwest. Her season will terminate in July. Next season she will appear in a new play by the eminent French dramatist, Sardou.

MALARIA

An Invisible Enemy to Health

Malaria is an invisible atmospheric poison. The air becomes infected with the gases and microbes arising from the marshes and low lands, damp cellars, sewer pipes, badly ventilated houses and decaying vegetable matter, and we unconsciously inhale them into the lungs when they are taken up by the blood and circulated throughout the system.

Malaria gives no warning of its coming; no immediate effects are perceptible, and no violent symptoms appear until the unfortunate sufferer is completely at the mercy of this hidden foe. This invisible enemy may be following us night and day, but often the first intimation we have of its presence is a chilly, creepy sensation running over the body, sometimes followed by a slight fever, and an always tired, drowsy and depressed feeling. The blood soon becomes deeply poisoned, thinned and weakened by the teeming millions of microbes and germs, and an irregular, slow circulation is the result. This condition of the blood gives rise to innumerable and serious troubles. Torpid liver, enlargement of the spleen, loss of appetite and feeble digestion, a pallid or yellow skin, boils, carbuncles, abscesses, indolent ulcers, and pustular and scabby skin eruptions of various kinds, and frequently the health becomes so impaired, and such a lifeless condition ensues that the person loses interest in his surroundings and faith in all human remedies. Malaria, if allowed to remain in the system, lays the foundation for other diseases that very often prove fatal or permanently wreck the health.

Malaria can only be worked out of the system through the blood. Some remedy that can destroy the germs and microbes and neutralize the bad effects of the poison, offers the only hope of a cure, and the only medicine that can accomplish this is S. S. S., which not only purges the blood of all morbid, unhealthy matter, but keeps it pure and healthy. It searches out and destroys every trace of Malarial poison, neutralizes the powerful gases that cause Malaria with all its terrible consequences, and keeps the blood in such a vigorous condition that poisonous matters of no kind are allowed to accumulate, but are promptly expelled from the system.

SSS

Spring is the best time to get Malaria out of the system. A course of S. S. S. now will not only relieve you of Malaria and its attendant evils, but it will put your blood and system in such condition as to effectually prevent the return of the disease. In S. S. S. is combined both purifying and tonic properties that keep the blood clear of all morbid, unhealthy matter and disease germs, and at the same time acts as an invigorating tonic.

Nothing is comparable to S. S. S. as a Spring Medicine, as it reinforces and builds up the system when debilitated or overcome by the depressing effects of the changing seasons, and being absolutely free of all minerals, is perfectly adapted to the most delicate constitution.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE, AND THE CURE COMPLETE.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 26th, 1902.

For several years I suffered with Chills and Fever, caused by Malaria in my system, and each summer for several years I would relapse. Finally my physician prescribed S. S. S. In all, I took three bottles, and they entirely cured me, and I have never been troubled since. I am sure no other medicine could have given me so complete and immediate relief, and I cannot speak too highly of S. S. S. My partner in business is now taking S. S. S. for an eruption of the skin and general run down condition of his system, and although he has taken but one bottle already, commences to feel better.

OLD ARCHITECTURE

Saved Mother and Baby From Horrible Death.

Frankfort, Ky., May 28.—Lightning struck the residence on Wapping street occupied by Assistant Secretary of State Harry Landy. One chimney was demolished and a big hole was torn in the roof, but the heavy rain extinguished the flames started by the lightning.

But for the old-fashioned double ceiling in the house a mass of brick and stone in the chimney would have crashed into the room where Mrs. Landy and the baby were sleeping. Mr. Landy was absent in Paducah, and Mrs. Landy and Mrs. Susie Woodson Conway, who lives in the same house, spent several hours in terror, as the telephone wires were not working and no assistance could be summoned.

ENGINE DERAILED.

Serious Accident on West Pennsylvania Road.

Blairsville, Pa., May 28.—One of the worst wrecks in the history of the West Pennsylvania railroad occurred at a point called Porter's Curve, last evening. The killed:

JAMES COUCH, engineer, of Springdale.

J. E. JAMES, scalded to death.

Injured: Grant Gibson, conductor; badly injured about the body.

The engine was entirely wrecked, and four cars loaded with valuable freight, together with a cabin car, were a total wreck. The track was torn up for a distance of several hundred yards. The wreck was caused by the engine being derailed on the curve by a flange on one of the wheels breaking.

Burns, cuts and other wounds often become troublesome sores. Even where delay has aggravated such injuries DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve effects a cure. Cures all skin diseases. Piles yield to it at once. Max Wirth.

WHY IS ELECTRIC LIGHT BEST?

Because it is healthy, clean, pure and brilliant.

HEALTHY—
It has no odor. Professor Thompson states that one cubic foot of gas consumes as much oxygen as four adults.

CLEAN—
It causes no discoloration of furnishings and decorations in homes.

SAFE—
As electric bell work, no danger of suffocation.

CHEAP—
By using a little care in turning off lights when not in use it is cheaper than any other illuminant.

A SLUMP IN WHEAT

The Market Very Weak, Losing More Than a Cent.

Cables Were Lower and the Crop Prospects Good.

Flax Trading Light With Prices Weak and Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 28.—The wheat market was weak and dull this morning. It opened at a decline, rallied slightly, but soon slumped off again, and before the close had lost more than a cent from yesterday's close. The Liverpool market failed to respond to yesterday's rise in the American markets, the crop reports were good, and the weather ... temporary rally was due to a report that one-third of the acreage in Kansas had been abandoned. Receipts were light. Some export business was done on the decline, New York reporting 40 loads taken. The Liverpool market closed ½@¾d lower. Parts was 5¢ higher to 1¢ lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 231,000 bus, last year 360,000 bus. Shipments 265,000 bus, last year 453,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 350,000 bus.

Corn was very weak in the Chicago market the July option closing 1½@⅝c. Oats fell off ½@⅝c. Primary receipts of corn were 310,000 bus, last year 358,000 bus. Shipments 193,000 bus, last year 480,000 bus. Clearances were 180 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 139 cars, and at Chicago, 16, a total of 155 cars, against 105 last week and 237 last year.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth floor was inactive. The market opened 1c off at 75c, sold down to 74⅝c at 10:23, rallied to 74⅞c at 10:29 and a minute later settled back again to 74⅜c. After continuing at that point for a short time it slumped to 74c and closed there, a decline of 1¼c. Chicago fell 1¼@⅝c and Minneapolis 1¼c.

Cash sales were practically nothing and prices were unchanged ut July price for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2 and 3½c under for No. 3.

The flax market was very quiet and weaker. Cash seed declined 2c, the September option 1c and October ¾c. Seed to arrive is now quoted at $1.00, which is 15c below cash seed. September oats fell ½c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—Cash, No. 1 hard, 76c; No. 1 northern, 74c; No. 2 northern, 72c; No. 3 spring, 70½c; to arrive No. 1 hard, 77c; No. 1 northern 74c; May, 73¾c; No. 2 northern, 70½c. Oats, cash, 44½c; September, 39⅝c; rye, 56½c; flax, cash, $1.75; to arrive, $1.60; May, $1.75; September, $1.48; October, $1.44.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 11; last year, 35. Receipts—Wheat, 6331; oats, 4360; flax, 2364.

Shipments—Wheat, 17,851; flax, 23,900.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

The Grain Trade Had a Dull Opening.

Chicago, May 28.—The grain trade was dull today at the opening because Liverpool showed indifference to yesterday's bullish local markets. In addition to lower wheat cables, good crop reports and favorable weather for growing, save in a few sections where frosts were reported, set the crowd to selling. The early trade was of fair volume, with commission houses on both sides of the market. In the absence of a good support in corn, wheat fell off somewhat, July opening ¼c to ⅜c lower at 73¾c to 73⅝c and selling down to 73½c. A report of the Kansas state official figures stating that one-third of the acreage of that state had been abandoned started some small buying and prices rallied to 73⅝c for July. Receipts were still small and local cash business here yesterday was good, but the export demand was dead. Local receipts were 16 cars, 6 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 139 cars, making a total for the three points of 146 against 105 last week and 215 a year ago.

A heavy selling pressure in corn turned the wheat crowd very bearish and on the good crop prospects stuff was sold liberally. July slumped badly to 72⅝@⅞c and closed weak, 1¼@1⅝c lower, at 72¾@7⅞c.

Corn, which easily took the lead yesterday, dropped back to a weak and nervous market at the opening. Foreign markets showed absolutely no response to the upshoot here yesterday and as a consequence considerable early liquidation weakened the market materially. There was little early support, although receipts were still small. Good crop reports gave the bears some argument but there was great fear of the all powerful situation credited to the leading bull house and its New York clique. The country sold liberally last night at fair prices and much of the weakness today was attributed to selling here against those purchases. July started ½@⅝c down at 64c to 63¾c and slid off to 63½c. Covering at that point steadied the market and prices reacted slightly. Receipts were 105 cars.

Late advices from the best corn country stated that the farmers were eager to accept the increased Chicago bid. Last night's acceptances totalled over 1,000,000 bus. On this the crowd led by big bull holders sold heavily and July slumped to a weak close, 1½@⅝c down, at 62⅝@63c.

Oats weakened a little under the influence of the corn break. There was, however, very little trade and no disposition to sell was manifest. Traders now concede that the leading bull operator in May options will be able to take in all his paper profits and possibly to advance prices a little. July opened a shade to ⅛c lower at 35⅝c to 37½@⅝c and eased off to 37¾c. Receipts were small at 136 cars. Provisions again improved a little on the firm stock yards hog market. The run of hogs was about normal but prices advanced. There was a small support for products and the tone held firm. July pork opened 5c up at $17.12½; July lard unchanged to $10.17½ and sold at $10.20, and July ribs 2½c up at $9.65 and sold up a shade.

FLAX IS COMING

More Is on the Way to Duluth From Chicago.

Supposition That It Will Be Mixed With Duluth Seed.

Can Hardly Get Here In Time For May Delivery.

Another car of Chicago flax was received here yesterday, and it is said that fifteen cars have been loaded out of that market and consigned to Duluth. It is supposed that the intention of the shippers is to mix it with Duluth flax and in this way get Duluth price for a seed that is light and deficient in oil.

Inasmuch as tomorrow is the last delivery day on contracts made for May delivery, it is said that if the rest of the fifteen cars are coming here there will have to be some hustling done in order to get in the elevators and put through the mixing process in time to deliver on May sales.

The report is current on the board of trade that the 40,000 or 50,000 bushels that were received here from Chicago a month or so ago have been put through a varied experience since arriving in Duluth. It is now that much of the flax which was raised in the Southwest was so foul with dirt and other seeds, and the dockage for the same was so excessive, that it did not grade contract.

It is said now that the Southwestern flax has been mixed and remixed with Duluth seed in all sorts of proportions, until a blend that seems to strike the owners as one that will go contract in this market has been obtained.

Buyers who are long on May flax are said to be watching matters very closely, and if there is any possible ground for that action it would not be surprising if some of the flax that it is proposed to deliver today or tomorrow would be held up for re-inspection.

Northwestern seed produces about eighteen or nineteen pounds of oil to the bushel of flax. The current crop of Southwestern seed is said to produce about 10 per cent less oil than this, owing to excessive dryness.

As a result of this condition, the Chicago market, which is almost entirely supplied from the Southwest, sold down 8 to 10 cents below Duluth. The seed crushers showed a tendency to shun that market, and their rush to buy Northwestern flax here caused a corresponding stiffening here. The spread occasioned in this way permitted flax to be shipped here from Chicago by rail, with the idea of applying it on contract sales in this market.

ACREAGE IN CANADA.

Increase Reported For Every Kind of Grain.

W. L. Parrish, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been investigating the crop conditions and preparing some figures showing the grain acreages this year in the Canadian Northwest.

Mr. Parrish is secretary of the Northwestern Grain Dealers' association with headquarters in the Winnipeg Grain exchange. His preliminary report shows a large increase in flax and bears out the statement of Minneapolis men who went through Manitoba recently and reported that there would be a great gain in the acreage planted to flax. From 110 points reporting, an acreage is shown of 145 for flax on the basis of 100 last year.

The wheat acreage compared with last year is 103, oats 106 and barley 105. Of 103 points reporting conditions, 71 were good; 10 fair, 12 late and 10 unfavorable. The Red River valley in Manitoba shows considerable decrease in wheat acreage and a few other points as well on account of too much rain, yet from the 83 principal points in Manitoba, the showing is for an acreage of 98.78, on the basis of 100 last year, and 21 points in the Northwest Territory outside of Manitoba show a wheat acreage of 113.29 compared with last year.

The wheat land is practically all seeded and the weather to date has been favorable for a rapid growth.

For comparison, a summary of last year's acreage is given, which shows that in Manitoba there were 2,01,385 acres of wheat, 689,951 acres oats, 191,459 acres barley and 20,778 acres flax. In the Northwest Territories outside of Manitoba, there were last year 366,864 acres wheat, 229,933 acres oats and 20,044 acres barley.

Several telegrams were received on Minneapolis change yesterday from Manitoba points, one from a Minneapolis grain man now in Winnipeg. The tenor of all was the same. Conditions it is said were never better north of that line, are better than at this date last year, and for the early indications the Canadian Northwest is in for another year of big crops.

EXCITEMENT AT SPARTA

Over a Smallpox Case—Attempted Safe Blowing.

Sparta, Minn., May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Great excitement prevailed here for a time Tuesday when it was discovered that George Truman, a bartender, had a well developed case of smallpox. He had been at Eveleth and a number of cases were found at that place and quarantined. Truman left Eveleth and came to Sparta and secured a position as bartender in one of the saloons here and lived at a house of ill fame near Sparta. The health department took immediate steps and quarantined the two places, and caused all inmates to be vaccinated.

A man named Rossiter from Eveleth was given a fine of $9 or twenty days in the county jail for creating a disturbance on the streets here Monday night.

Sparta will celebrate July 4. Great inducements will be offered neighboring towns to join and pull off games and races in the vicinity of Ely lake, which is considered the most beautiful lake north of Duluth.

An attempt was made to blow open the United States Express company's safe at McKinley at noon Tuesday. While Agent Wetherby was at lunch some unknown persons broke open the depot and drilled the safe. They evidently did not have time to complete their work, as they left before Mr. Wetherby returned. They damaged the safe so badly it could not be opened.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Some Heavy Buying Early But Total Volume Was Small.

Prices Shaded at the Start But Subsequently Rallied.

Downward Drift Towards the Close Which Was Heavy.

New York, May 28.—Opening dealings in stocks were of insignificant volume. Prices were shaded in all but a few cases. Soo fell a point; New York Air Brake jumped 3½. Changes as a rule were of a very small fraction. Canadian Pacific was forced down 1⅜ and Rock Island 1½ before the entire list turned upward under the lead of Reading and Pressed Steel. Prices generally rose fractionally above yesterday's close, and there was some heavy buying in spots. Pressed Steel more than recovered its 3 point loss of yesterday and Reading advanced 1¼ to 63. Delaware & Hudson gained 1¼ exdividend, St. Joe & Grand Island first preferred and Louisville & Nashville a point; Buffalo, R. & P. 2, Continental Tobacco preferred 1⅞ and American Snuff 2¼. Evansville & Terre Haute declined 2½ points. Pressed Steel Car reacted 1⅜ and prices elsewhere receded a fraction before the expiration of the first hour.

The reaction had only a slight effect on the prominent stocks and a subsequent demand brought prices up again to the best. St. Paul was advanced to 171, Reading crossed 63 with strengthening effect on the other coalers and Sugar and the local municipal stocks were in demand. Railway Steel Spring rose 1⅝ and Pressed Steel Car rallied a point. Trading became quieter towards noon, but prices continued to work upwards. Bonds were steady at noon.

The demand for Hocking Valley carried it up about 3 and the preferred over a point. Norfolk & Western and Republic Steel preferred also rose a point. Elsewhere the market was dull and dropping. Evansville & Terre Haute extended its loss to 3¾. New York Air Brake reached 3. Great Northern preferred declined 1½ and Anaconda a point.

Bear traders attacked Canadian Pacific again and it fell 1¾ to the lowest of the day. The general market inclined lower in sympathy, but there was no decided pressure elsewhere. The Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville stocks showed momentary activity, the common rising 1⅝ and the preferred 1. Canadian Pacific recovered to near 138 later but other stocks remained sluggish.

There was a slight downward drift of prices again. Chicago Terminal preferred and New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred rose a point each. Texas & Pacific Land Trust dropped 3¾ and rallied 1¾. Reactions in the active list ran to a point in a few instances. Hocking Valley rose at the last 3½ over last night. The close was lifeless and heavy.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: John Stanton says: "Before the break in the price of copper from 17 cents a pound, a surplus had undoubtedly accumulated, but it is certain that this surplus has since been largely reduced. The production of copper in the country during the present year has not been any larger than during the same period of 1901. The consumption of copper on the other hand has increased over 25 per cent and when the full statistics for May are available an increase of probably 35 per cent will be shown. Exports have also increased over 100 per cent, the figures in round numbers being 100,000,000 pounds as against only 40,000,000 pounds exported during the same period of 1901. When the price of copper was held around 18c consumers only purchased moderately and the amount from hand to mouth. Now they are buying liberally in large amounts. The price holds firm around 12½c and the indications are that it will reach higher figures.

"The only cloud which is on the copper market is the threatened strike of the bituminous coal miners. The strike of the anthracite miners will not seriously affect the copper business. Any strike of the bituminous miners, however, will seriously affect the copper output. I am rushing as much soft coal to the Lake Superior district at the present moment as I can possibly lay my hands on so as to be in a strong position as possible should a strike in the bituminous fields actually occur. The present price of 12½c is the nominal one fixed by the laws of supply and demand."

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: One closely associated with the management in his ownership of Amalgamated says: "I do not know why, but I know it is a fact that leading directors in the Amalgamated Copper company were considerable buyers of copper around 66. My understanding is that controlling interests are unwilling to own Amalgamated Copper on a basis of $100,000,000 for the whole property.

Relative to the remarks of H. H. Rogers, of the Amalgamated Copper company, that the recent suit in Butte was only another asset in Mr. Heinze's fifty-seven varieties, Vice President Maginnis of the United Copper company says: "Mr. Rogers is evidently more familiar with the fifty-seven varieties of Heinze's pickles in New York than he is with litigation in which he and his company are engaged in Montana, for they have an interest in more than 120 lawsuits there. These lawsuits are not for the sake of litigation, but are a proper defense of individual and property rights. We are fighting the battle of the individual and Mr. Rogers is fighting the battle against all individual rights."

* * *

Houghton to Paine, Webber & Co.: From May 3 to May 17, the Champion mine has produced 25,000 tons of rock, and secured 750 tons of mineral, not including mass and barrel work. This probably has never before been equalled from an unprofitable vein. Shipments are made from B, C and D shafts. D and E shafts are in rich ground, the latter being 350 feet deep. Preparations for stopeing are under way in C and D, while connections will be made at the fourth level between D and E. The site for F shaft has not been definitely located as the mine has 18,000 feet of openings and new ground is being opened at the rate of 1000 feet monthly. Twenty-seven drills are in operation.

* * *

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: It is learned today that the reaction in copper was brought about by an offering of one lot of 500,000 pounds. This is proof conclusive that the market is being made to appear weak for a purpose. Anyone having 500,000 pounds of copper that he really wished to sell, would never think of offering all of it at once. An effort was made to sell Tamarack and Osceola down today, and it is stated by what is supposed to be an official acknowledgment that both companies would pass their dividends. Under attack the stocks showed remarkable strength and the bear attack was a flat failure. We believe the best of the coppers should be bought on any reactions.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 28.—Cotton opened quiet and firm with prices 1 to 3 points higher on favorable English cables. The first wave of buying carried July to 897 and August to 867 around which figures the market hovered during the most of the first hour. Receipts were light and estimates pointed to a further reduction tomorrow.

THE STILLWATER STRIKE.

No Attempt to Be Made to Break It.

St. Paul, May 28.—A Stillwater, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: No efort will be made to break the mill and river strike in the immediate future. The eight mills in this vicinity are not turning a wheel. The Hudson, Wis., mill is running night and day on eleven-hour shifts with the understanding that the scale will be adjusted in accordance with the decision at the mills here. The mill owners claim that no formal demand has been made up on them by persons with authority to act for the strikers. They did not regard the committee of Monday as empowered to treat with them. The strikers are busy forming a union. Small crews were at work today keeping the river from clogging with logs at the booms so as to impede navigation, to keep the pontoon bridge open and unloading trains of logs that arrived last night. The men began work at 7 o'clock without an understanding as to the wage scale. The city is orderly and many of the workmen were about their homes this morning.

KELLY GAVE BONDS

To Cover Any Indictment Returned Against Him.

St. Louis, May 28.—Charles F. Kelly, a member and formerly speaker of the house of delegates, for whom a bench warrant was issued by Judge Douglas at the instance of the grand jury yesterday, appeared at the Four courts today and gave bond in the sum of $2000. Mr. Kelly stated that the bond was to cover and indictment which might be returned against him. The warrant charges misconduct in office.

SECURED $1000.

Robbers Make Haul at Trenton, Mich., Postoffice.

Detroit, May 28.—The postoffice at Trenton, a village 16 miles down the river from here, was robbed of over $1000 in cash and stamps last night. The safe was opened by wrecking the combination. The robbers left no clue.

NO LEASES THIS YEAR.

Washington, May 28.—The proposition to lease the public lands for grazing purposes, which has been investigated at some length by the house committee on public lands, today went over indefinitely and will not be considered again at this session.

Next Week or Next Month

Is what you have said many times in the past and the result was very bad for your interests.

You Cannot Wait

In this case if you want to buy

Carnegie Oil Shares At 10c per Share

They Will Advance

within the next few days. The directors held a meeting yesterday and decided that soon after the first of June the price of this stock would be advanced to—

12½c per Share

It ought to have gone to 20c or 25c per share on the showing made in the No. 2 well, proving beyond doubt the great value of the Dean Farm, which is now discussed as a sure dividend oil producer, and would have advanced, only this company needed to sell sufficient stock to place itself surely in position to buy tanks, pumping outfits and drill more wells to put the Carnegie on a sure paying basis.

That Point Being In Sight

They have decided to advance the price soon after the 1st of June to 12½c per share. If you want any of the stock you had better buy before then.

It Will Go to Even Higher Prices

Don't say "I am sorry I didn't buy at 5c per share and then at 7½c per share" and after it advances to higher figures, "I wish I had bought at 10c per share." Such action never made men rich. Remember that even mortgages which bring only 4 to 6 per cent are not always safe investments. There is greater hazards in stocks but greater profits. You cannot double your money in one year or two years by buying government bonds, but you can make money by buying Carnegie oil shares. It has the oil, but needs money to drill more wells and equip the property. You can take advantage of this situation and make money.

LAKE MARINE.

President McCarle Called to Assist the Cleveland Strikers.

Grand President McCarle, of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association, was called to Cleveland yesterday afternoon by the striking tugmen, and he left over the Omaha road at 5 o'clock for that place. The summons was supposed to come from the president of the Cleveland lodge. The report that the dispatch might have some bearing on the prospective settlement of the strike is not believed among the tugmen. It is said that he was called to assist the strikers, who have been summoned to appear before the local inspectors to show cause why their licenses should not be taken away. They want him to assist them in their defense. One of the striking tugmen said today that after hearing President McCarle explain the Cleveland situation the men here are satisfied that the demand is just. They were not quite clear on that point before, but they now say that the Cleveland tugmen were very much overworked last year, and that they are simply struggling to avoid a repetition of it this year. There were no developments in the local situation today.

SMALL GRAIN BUSINESS.

Chicago, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Grain rates showed no sign of increased demand from shippers and business was limited to small lots, ready for immediate shipment.

MAY REDUCE RATES.

Cleveland, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—A lumber dealer who is also the owner of vessels said today, relative to the efforts of the Lumber Carriers' association to maintain rates: "The lake freight situation in lumber as in other lines is not strong just now, and unless members of the Lumber Carriers' association hold together better than they have done in the past, the present effort to reduce freights will probably be successful. But, if successful, it will react on shippers later on, especially if the great demand for lumber holds through the season of navigation. The volume of business now being done is enormous."

MARTIN AND BARGE AGROUND.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer S. K. Martin and barge Spademan grounded in the east side of Point au Pines. The tug Merrick is working on them.

SHENANDOAH AGROUND.

Port Huron, May 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Shenandoah and schooner Granada bound up loaded with coal, ran aground last night in Lake Huron, about half a mile below the lightship, to the eastward of the ranges. The tug Castle is trying to release them, but it is thought they must be lightered before they can be floated.

IS QUIET.

So Local Millers Report the Domestic Flour Market.

The domestic flour market is reported by local millers as quiet. Production last week was a little lighter, but not materially changed from the average that has been maintained since spring opened. Rail shipments were 135,000 barrels, which was a slight falling off.

The movement from interior mills since the 2½ cents differential on export flour went into effect soon after the first of the month has been larger than it was in April, when either there was no differential or uncertainty as to whether a bid that involved the amount of the differential was a safe one to make caused much uncertainty in the trade that there was at times hesitancy over contracting.

Wheat receipts are running along about the same as they have been for a month or six weeks. There have been no developments to indicate another explanation for the smaller movement than was expected except the one that was printed in The Herald some weeks ago—a smaller yield than had been estimated, the feeding of a great deal of wheat to stock on account of the low price of ordinary feed, and the fact that in quite a number of instances farmers are holding their wheat for better prices. The latter condition is said to be always true of good times, but is more especially true just now.

ANOTHER WARNING

Sidewalk Obstructionists Get Final Notice to Vacate.

Larger Number of Those First Notified Did Nothing.

Arrests Will Be Made If the Order Is Not Heeded.

Unnecessary sidewalk obstructions must be removed!

This afternoon a second warning to that effect was served on a majority of Superior street merchants.

The first notice was sent out through the mails but the notice this afternoon was served by a police officer.

The second notification was the result of a long conference between the mayor and members of the board of public works. The board reported that several of the merchants complied with the original request with dispatch and apparent good will.

On the other hand a majority of those notified to remove obstructions have so far failed to comply—hence the second and final notice served in a manner that indicates the intention of the city officers to enforce it.

On the part of those back of the sidewalk clearing movement there is not the slightest intention of causing unnecessary trouble. Neither is there discrimination against any class of merchants. The orders are that every sidewalk obstruction that is unnecessary, shall be removed forthwith, even if it does take most of the advertising signs off the street.

In issuing the order the city officers are complying with numerous requests of all classes of people. Workingmen and capitalists have both complained on account of the crowded conditions of the walks through the business district.

Club women have complained on account of the unsightly aspect given the street by some of the merchants in advertising their stocks. Old shoes and even underwear has been seen hanging out in front of small second hand stores on Duluth's leading retail thoroughfare. The complaint of the citizens is general and it is now the avowed purpose of the city officers to enforce the order with the police if necessary.

Speaking of the new order one of the men that attended the conference this morning remarked that he supposed a few arrests would be about the only thing that would bring certain of the smaller stores to time, and that all arrangements had been made to take any step necessary to enforce the order.

A TRANSFER.

Ohio Coal Company Passes to a Wisconsin Corporation.

The Ohio Coal company has bought out the Ohio Coal company, it appears from deeds and papers filed yesterday afternoon in the office of the register of deeds.

The difference is that the seller is a Minnesota corporation owned by Twin City men, and the buyer is a Wisconsin corporation owned by Milwaukee men.

A deed running from the old Ohio Coal company to the new one, and covering the docks and other property of the concern in Duluth, was filed yesterday afternoon in the office of the register of deeds. The expressed consideration in the instrument is only $1. The consideration is $231,000, however. The property transferred is lots 9, 10 and 11, block 5, Duluth proper, Second division, and the se¼ of the sw¼ of section 2, 54-14.

The Milwaukee men interested in the new corporation are David C. Owen, Charles F. Hunt and Guy D. Goff.

The new company filed a mortgage for $200,000 yesterday afternoon, covering the property in block F, and running to the Minneapolis Trust company.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company yesterday afternoon filed two large mortgages in the office of the register of deeds. One is for $150,000,000, bears 3 per cent interest, and runs to the Farmers' Loan and Trust company as trustee. The other is for $120,000,000, bears 4 per cent interest, and runs to the Mercantile Trust company as trustee. The smaller mortgage is the first lien, and is due in 1957. The larger mortgage is not due until 2247.

TAKE POSSESSION.

Northern Pacific Now Operating the Terminal Line.

The Northern Pacific road took formal possession of the Duluth Transfer railroad system and property at midnight last night, and the property is now being operated by the new owner. Superintendent Vanderslice is now in St. Paul, and it is said that his visit is in connection with the policy of the company regarding the addition to its terminal system here. For the present, it is expected that there will be few changes in the system in use under the old ownership as far as the public is concerned.

It is presumed that the Northern Pacific will pursue the same liberal policy of allowing the use of its unoccupied terminal property by small industries with the new property that has been followed in the past.

ALL PASSED.

Every Candidate For Police Force Proves Eligible.

Every man that passed the recent examination for position on police department will either be appointed to the force or put on the list of three eligibles.

Eleven candidates passed the examinations and Mayor Hugo is today looking up references on the men with a view to appointing eight direct to the service. The other three will go on the eligible list, which probably means that they will go on the force within the next year.

The appointment of the mounted police was announced today. The four men for the mounted service are: Herman Toewe, Olaf Torwick, Edward Barber and Fred Woods.

WORSE YET.

Moses Cook's Arrest Is Under More Severe State Law.

Moses Cook, arrested yesterday on complaint of Joseph Sheehy, is apparently against a more serious proposition than at first imagined.

Mr. Sheehy had his own attorney draw up the complaint, instead of going to the city attorney's office for it. In consequence the complaint was drawn up under the state law, instead of the city ordinance. The city ordinance provides a punishment of a fine or imprisonment, while under the state law keeping a saloon open on Sunday is a grand jury offense and subject to both fine and imprisonment in case of conviction.

Mr. Cook's examination has been set for June 6, and it is claimed Sheehy has sufficient evidence to bind him over to the grand jury, though those that have scrutinized the complaint on which Mr. Cook was arrested say that he may escape the grand jury indictment on technical errors in the complaint.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Filbridge, West Cornwell, Conn.

A Small Wreck.

There was a small train wreck on the Missabe ore dock approach this morning. Engine No. 2 was backing down from Proctorknott with a caboose ahead. Near the switch, on the approach over Michigan street, the caboose struck the corner of engine No. 6, which was on another track, and backing off dock No. 4. Engine No. 56 was derailed and the caboose was knocked at right angles with the track, receiving some damage. A wrecking car was sent for and the line was cleared by 10:30 o'clock.

NAUTICAL MR. BRUSH.

How He Gave Passengers an Example During Storm.

Assistant General Passenger and Freight Agent Brush of the White Line Transportation company, ever since he went into the lake line business, has sought to impress his friends in the railroad business with his familiarity with Neptune and all his satellites. He has told the railroad bunch more technical details about steamboat operation than the aforesaid friends believe exist, but he has always made good on the story, and that was the chief object.

Mr. Brush thought that he ought to go on the boat last Friday night just to quiet the alarm of the passengers who might be apprehensive about the gale or seasick as the result of the storm that was causing many vessels in port to stay in the harbor. Naturally, he was solicitous about the comfort of his passengers, and he thought he ought to set a good example of nerve and cheerfulness.

The Iroquois rides a sea like a queen, but Thursday night's storm was one of those affairs on which any queen would be less at home than at other times. The story of Brush's achievement is just brought back by some of the passengers on the last trip. He made a good start with his nerve and cheerfulness gag, but it didn't have staying quantics. Before the Iroquois was well out of the canal, it is declared that the headquarters of the general passenger department had been speedily transferred to a comfortabel berth. Twice it made an effort to get out into the open, but the floor of the stateroom always seemed to rise up and smite the chief of the department, and ceiling had a provoking way of coming down and crushing him. Mr. Brush admits also that something he had eaten before going aboard had not agreed with him.

It was Port Arthur before the star chamber sessions in the passenger department concluded. An awful bluff was put up, but a few passengers were cruel enough to make remarks about the absence of the passenger agent.

AGAINST SHIP SUBSIDIES.

Republican County Convention at Menomonie Resolves.

Menomonie, Wis., May 28.—The Republican county convention met here yesterday to elect fifteen delegates to the congressional convention of the district, to be held at Chippewa Falls, next Thursday. There was no opposition to the present congressman, J. J. Jenkins. The convention passed resolutions favoring the passage by congress of the Nelson-Corliss bill to strengthen the interstate commerce law and another favoring placing on the free list all products not in need of protection, and all controlled by trusts and monopolies. A third resolution expressed the convention's opposition to ship subsidies. The convention strongly endorsed the candidacy of Hon. R. J. Flint for state secretary.

Cancer and Consumption Cured.

(From New York World, May 11.

"Hundreds of people are being successfully treated daily in New York by the new Actinic Light Ray cure for cancer, consumption, skin disease, and malignant growths.

Absolute cures are being effected.

The most eminent men in the profession testify to the efficacy of the new and wonderful treatment.

Reports of this mode of treatment and its cures, with discussions, occupy most of the time at present of the meetings of medical societies and conventions of physicians.

Sufferers from cancer and consumption experience relief from the first moment they are exposed to the light.

They are at once freed from pain, and, after a few exposures, improvement is so marked that it can be observed by the naked eye.

The new method appeals to all because of its simplicity, painlessness and many other reasons."

An elaborate outfit for giving the Actinic or Violet Ray treatment has been installed in Duluth.

Already a number of people have been treated, with good results.
